Death will be last in the work of perdition, and therefore every enemy will have preceded death in the sweeping decision of God's counsels, that shall leave no living being or thing to work or threaten mischief forever. Blessed day of finally completed redemption of earth, when the works of God will be shadowed by no pestilence of revolt through all the frame of creation.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TEN TOES.

BRO. GRANT:—As Bro. Clow, of Janesville, Wis., has struck a reasonable blow at the long toes of the image, I wish to offer a few remarks in addition. The old Roman church was married to her first husband, the Greeks, A. D. 519. Here began the 1260 years of her abominable persecution of the saints. In 532, she commenced trying to get the reins out of her husband's hands into her own, which she did not accomplish until March 538, when the Ostrogoths were driven out of Rome, and she took her seat there. See Thurman and Miller. Both agree it was about 538. Bro. Miller shortened the 1335 days thirty years from that date, which brought him to 1843; and added that, if it did not come then, 1873 would be the only date next reliable for the end of the 1335 years. 538 was the place to start the little horn, or the abomination that maketh desolate. That had eyes and mouth given unto it (unto what? unto the little horn, certainly.) This is the time the old lady got the reins into her own hands.

Seeing her first husband running down, she began to court Charlemagne, of the Franks, and was married to them in 754. This was her second husband; she still keeping the reins, and drinking the blood of the saints. Germany began to be popular under Otho (or Otto,) and another courtship began. She was married to her third husband A. D. 962. The reins of both church and state were in her hands, and she was still drinking the blood of the saints, and committing fornication with the kings of the earth. The Neapolitans began to rise in power; and, as formerly, the old prostitute commenced her seductions, and was married to the king of Naples, in 1265. This was her fourth husband, which she used in the same way, and for the same purpose as her former ones; i. e., to support her and give her blood to drink. She soon saw Spain rising into power, and in 1550 mounted the throne of church and state by a mock marriage, and lived in adultery with her fifth husband one hundred and fifty years, when she left him, and in 1700 married with Austria, her sixth husband, who could give her blood to drink no longer than God's time, which ended in 1798.

The next ruling power came up in 1804, and Napoleon was the beast that carried her, but gave her no blood to drink. See Rev. 17: 10. His head was wounded, and up comes the eighth head, and he must carry the woman into perdition. I think the present Napoleon is the very beast, or man, back to the ten horns of the Roman beast. Horns are stiff, unyielding things. So were the ten horns on that beast; also the little horn, which was more stout than its fellow horns which were before it. But these have all passed away with their power. The two legs of iron ran down to the feet. I think the feet commence in the prophecy where the iron or Pope lost his power to kill with the sword; in 1798.

It is easy to find just ten smaller powers, or kings, that have arisen since the larger powers passed away, that have some of the Roman iron in them, and some of the potter's clay, or Protestant disposition. That gives a correct character to the feet and toes. The ten kingdoms of Italy were complete in 1859, as acknowledged by a learned Catholic, and are as follows: (1) Sardinia, (2) Lombardy, (3) Illyria, (4) Venetia, (5) Parma, (6) Tuscany, (7) Modena, (8) San Marino, (9) States of the church, (10) Naples. These all hate the harlot. Now see Rev. 17. Not as strong as iron, because Protestant principles are mixed with the iron, but will not cleave to it, as God has said. I think we are now in the very state when the image has its ten toes full of loose joints, only held together by cords, or ligaments, not solid bone like the legs, and must very soon be hit by the Stone. It is not reasonable to make the toes longer than the legs. I think the loose jointed part of the feet and toes began at 1798, and will be easily divided into fragments when the smiting of the stone takes place, which will be by or before 1875; probably in 1873, as that seems to be a very important focal point, if not the very one.

Yours, looking for the kingdom before the generation is out,

H. MUNGER.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

46. The taking of oaths sanctioned. "If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond, he shall not break his word; he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth." Num. 30: 2. "Now, therefore, swear unto me by God. . . . And Abraham said, I will swear. . . Therefore, he called the place Beersheba, (the well of the oath); because there they sware both of them." Gen. 21: 23–31. "And Jacob sware by the fear of his father Isaac." Gen. 21: 35. "Because he (God) could swear by no greater, he sware by himself." Heb. 6: 13.

The taking of oaths forbidden. "But I say unto you, swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; neither by the earth, for it is his footstool." Matt. 5: 14.

Oaths were allowed under the old dispensation, and forbidden under the new. Had the skeptic been aware of the fact that Christ was the end of the law and honest enough to acknowledge it, it would have saved us much useless labor.

47. Marriage approved. "And the Lord God said, it is not good that the man should be alone; I will make a helpmeet for him." Gen. 2: 18. "And God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth." Gen. 1: 28. "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife." Matt. 19: 5. "Marriage is honorable in all." Heb. 13: 4.

Marriage disapproved. "It is good for man not to touch a woman." 1 Cor. 7: 1. "For I (Paul) would that all men were even as I myself. . . . It is good for them if they abide even as I." 1 Cor. 7: 7, 8.

The compiler of the work before us here quotes Paul to nullify the marriage covenant, but he has, as usual, misrepresented the text and vilified its author. 1 Cor. 7: 1, so far from disapproving of marriage, is actually addressed to married people, as the whole connection shows. The seventh and eighth verses are addressed to widows and widowers, "I say, therefore, to the unmarried and widows, it is good for them if they abide even as I." The word "unmarried" in the above text is agamoi and applies to those who have lost their companions, "It is good for them if they abide even as I." That is, it was good for them to remain in a widowed state, for, according to the best historical evidence we can get, Paul was at this time a widower. The prevalent idea that Paul was a bachelor has no foundation, either in epistles or in history. Eusebius, Clement, and other authentic historians, speak of him as a married man.

48. Freedom of divorce permitted. "When a man hath taken a wife and married her, and it came to pass that she found no favor in his eyes, . . . then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house." Deut. 24: 1. "When thou goest out to war against thine enemies, and the Lord thy God hath delivered them into thy hands, and thou hast taken them captive, and seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, then thou shalt take her home to thy house; . . . and after that thou shalt go in unto her and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife. . . . "And if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money; thou shalt not make merchandize of her." Deut. 21: 10, 11, 14.

Divorce restricted. "But I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery."—Matt. 5: 32.

The reader will see at once that the texts quoted in Deuteronomy, refer to the Mosaic dispensation, and that in Matthew is the law of Christ. Our learned historian (?) has made this blunder so often, that we are weary of correcting him. Had he omitted that class of contradictions, "falsely so called," his propositions would have been few indeed.

49. Adultery forbidden. "Thou shalt not commit adultery." Ex. 20: 14. "Whoremongers and adulterers, God will judge."—Heb. 13: 4.

Adultery allowed. "But all the women-children that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves." Num. 31: 18. "And the Lord said unto Hosea, Go, take thee a wife of whoredoms. . . . Then said the Lord to me [Hosea], Go yet, love a woman, beloved of her friend, yet an adultress. . . So I bought her; . . . and said unto her, Thou shalt abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man; so will I also be to thee." Hos. 1: 2; 1: 1–3.

Num. 31: 18, is here quoted to prove that Moses authorized the Israelites to make concubines of the whole number of female children. But the whole tenor of the law, and especially the statute recorded in Deut. 21: 10–14, proves most decisively to the contrary. They were merely permitted to possess them as female slaves, educating them in their families, and employing them as domestics, for the laws concerning fornication, concubinage and marriage, forbade an Israelite from even marrying a captive, without delays and previous formalities. If the reader will study the whole connection of Hosea 1, he will see that under the figure of a wife proving false to her marriage vows, and bearing children likely to follow her example, the prophet represents the shameful idolatry of Israel which provoked God to cast them off. The whole passage conveys information by action, instead of words. That is, it is an allegorical representation of the ingratitude and unfaithfulness of the nation. The Lord had provided for and protected Israel. He had cared for them as a thoughtful husband cares for his wife, and they owed the fidelity of a wife to a tender husband. Instead of this, however, they had long addicted themselves to spiritual fornication or idolatry. (See Cottage Bible.)

"The Bible Triumphant," by Mrs. H. V. Reed.

For the World's Crisis.

KEEPING THE HEART.

BRO. GRANT:—I have lately read a very excellent article, written by one who takes the title of "Plain John," and I send the same, somwhat abridged, to you for publication in the Crisis.

S. S. C.

"While reading the words, 'keep thy heart with all diligence,' one paused to ask, 'Keep thy heart! what does that mean?' Perhaps what I write now will help you to understand it.

1. Meditate often. Close your eyes to the world, and turn your thoughts in upon yourself. Search your heart by asking, 'What do I most desire? the things of the world, or the things of Christ?' Is my heart supremely set upon pleasing God, and being approved by him? Have I a good conscience, void of offence toward God and man?

2. Pray much. This is all important. Meditation shows you what you want, but prayer takes you to the fountain from which you are to be supplied. You must pray always, keeping your heart in the frame of one steadily 'looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.' 'Uphold me by thy free Spirit!' must be the cry your heart is ever pouring out to him who alone can keep you from falling, and present you faultless at his appearing.

3. Watch vigilantly. At one point the enemy lifts up the heart with pride, at another he casts it down in despair. 'Oh! bring my soul out of prison!' has been the cry of many a vanquished heart. Happy for you if you are wise to detect, and quick to escape out of his snare. Happy for you if, when in any degree overtaken, you do not forget to fly at once to your true and Almighty Helper.

4 Deny yourself. By self-indulgence you weaken your moral powers, and give sin an advantage over you. Unless all your members and faculties are kept subject to the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, you are not safe. Whether we eat or drink, or whatever we do, it must be to the glory of God.

5. Maintain good works. Without these faith is dead, being alone. Love to God cannot exist apart from love to man. If we love not our brother whom we can see, how can we love God whom we cannot see? The sum of the law is to love both God and man. And we cannot rightly love one, without loving the other also.

6. Last, but not least, study the word of God. Here we may learn what is required of us. This is our mirror, in which we must learn what manner of persons we are, that we may amend what is wrong, and improve what is rightly begun. One who studies the Bible much, with a prayerful and humble mind, will not be apt to go astray. It is not what the church will let you do, but what Christ approves, that must guide you. The best means of keeping near to God, is the closet. Here the battle is won or lost. Is the battle ever lost to him who rests upon the grace of God in constant prayer? Nay, verily; but it is lost, surely lost, when the closet is neglected, or only resorted to in prayerfulness, or empty form. Always the battle is won when with a sense of our poverty and need we hunger and thirst after righteousness, and by prayer draw water out of the wells of salvation. Consider the final result of victory, and let this be the incentive to keep your heart with all diligence."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 18, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given. Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too. Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ S. ROBY—Money received.

☞ D. COGSWELL—The appointment came too late.

☞ M. INGLE—We have the Poem.

☞ SOME ONE sends us $1.00 for tracts from Bloomfield, Iowa, but does not sign their name. Who was it?

☞ SR. A. M. TRIPP'S P. O. address is Searsport, Me.

☞ BRO. J. A. CLEAVELAND'S P. O. address is now at Marshfield, Vt.

☞ B. P. MANNING'S P. O. address is Goffstown, N. H.

☞ LEWIS F. COLE'S P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

During the year we have received some thirteen hundred new subscribers. The friends of the Crisis have done nobly; but can not each reader get another subscriber? Have we done all we can to increase its circulation? If every preacher, who is a friend to the Crisis, and is anxious to spread the truths it contains, would make a little effort to bring it before the people where he preaches, we thing its circulation might be easily doubled in a few months. Last spring we heard one preacher say he intended to get one hundred new subscribers this year. We met him a few days ago, and heard him say he had obtained nearly half of the number.

When we consider that the paper may become a positive blessing to its readers, we should feel justified in trying to persuade them to take it. They need it in their families. They should not be without it in these last days. Let us all make new efforts to increase its circulation; for by so doing we may lead many more to be ready for the great day of the Lord. Will not every preacher, who is interested in this work, present this subject next Sabbath, and try to stir up our brethren to greater efforts in this direction? A little extra effort might accomplish glorious results.

TRACTS.

We fear our Brn. and Srs. are not sufficiently awake to the importance of scattering tracts. They are capable of doing an immense amount of good. It is the cheapest way to scatter the truth, and a very successful one. There is a great call for them, and the demand is continually increasing. Every minister, especially those who go into new places, should be supplied with these silent and effective preachers. And then there are a large number of lay members who are anxious to obtain them to circulate among their friends and neighbors. Shall they be supplied? Are there not many who are willing to lend some money to the Lord for this purpose? Will it not do more good in tracts than in its present position? We hear of many who have been led to see the light by reading tracts. They ought to be flying in all directions. Some have done nobly in giving aid to this important work; but thousands of dollars should be expended at once in this noble enterprise. Let us sow with a liberal hand. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." Many are in perishing need of the tracts. Shall they have them? Send in the donations, from the widow's mite up to the hundreds of dollars from those who have the heart and means. Come, let us do something worthy of the value of the truth and its Author.

HOW CAN I DO GOOD?

In view of the importance of the great truths, for the belief of which we have been called infidels, we think those who see them, and especially those who preach them, should make every possible effort to spread them. By doing so, we are doing our fellow beings a favor. We come across many, and hear of many more, who have been led to the light by reading the Crisis. Some friend first sent it to them; and after reading a few numbers they were deeply interested, and became permanent subscribers, and are now rejoicing in their light and truth. We think it would pay well in the end, if many more, who have the means, would send the Crisis to their friends. In this way, many might be led to prepare themselves for the coming of the Son of man.

Dear reader, have you not some friend who may be greatly benefitted by reading "our paper?" Make a little sacrifice, and send it to him, and follow it by prayer, that it may lead him to give up all for Jesus. A few days since, we were conversing with one who sent the Crisis to her sister, who at first would scarcely deign to look at it; but finally became most deeply interested, and subscribed for it herself, and is now rejoicing with us in the same glorious hope. This is one way to do good. Try it.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

The National Campmeeting should have a special place in our daily prayers, that it may be the means of giving a new zeal and earnestness to all who may attend, and that every preacher may go forth from that great gathering, to do more than ever, if possible, to save men from destruction. Let this be the burden of our prayers, Lord, fit us to work in thy vineyard; to do thy will in all things, and to keep "unspotted from the world." Let us all consecrate ourselves anew to the Lord before we go to the meeting; so that when we get there we shall be ready to enter at once into the work of trying to save others. Again we entreat every professed follower of Jesus, who is interested in the National campmeeting, to make it a subject of special prayer, that it may accomplish more good than any other meeting ever held by those looking for the coming of Jesus. The dear Savior is able and willing to make it the best, if we will co-operate with him. Let us forsake all that will tend to prevent such a glorious result.

CERTIFICATES FOR DELEGATES.

It is necessary that the delegates from the churches* to the Annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the National Campmeeting, in Springfield, should bring certificates showing that they were duly appointed. The following form will answer:

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed by the church in ——— as a delegate to the annual meeting of the A. C. A., to be held on the National Campground, in Springfield, Mass., Aug. 31st, 1869.

[To be signed by the Elders, Clerk, or deacons of the church, or Chairman of the meeting called to appoint the delegates.]

This matter of choosing delegates should be attended to at once, in order that those appointed may have time to make suitable arrangements to be present. Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members over the first twenty-five. Let every church be fully represented.

* A church is understood to be any number of christians who meet together for the worship of the Lord.

APPOINTMENTS.—As our paper will go to press earlier campmeeting week, it will be necessary for all to send their appointments so that we can get them by Saturday of next week.

PERSONAL.

We met Bro. Thurman at the tent-meeting in Camden, N. J., and was glad to find him well, and calmly trusting in Jesus. He remarked that he saw additional evidence for believing that the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14, and the six thousand years from the creation of Adam, will run out in 1875, in harmony with his chronological arrangement, as given in the "Sealed Book Opened." He thinks he can never be so confident again on a definite point of time, as he was in expecting Jesus last year; but his faith is strong that he will come soon.

BETHEL TENT-MEETING.

Monday evening, Aug. 9th, we left Boston to attend the Bethel Tent meeting at Camden, N. J., where Brn. Hook and H. K. Flagg have been holding meetings with good success. We had a pleasant ride on the sound from New London to New York about six A. M., and left for Philadelphia at seven. On our way to the "city of brotherly love," we passed many nice fields of corn and garden vegetables in New Jersey. The soil of that state is like a garden, and produces nice fruits. There is a large amount of peaches in the New York market. The price is low.

While in New York we were forcibly struck with the fact that the city is too large for its own good and comfort. Like some huge building, it is being crushed with its own weight. Its government is corrupt, and wickedness tramples upon law and justice. We can see no chance for improvement till the King of kings comes. The city is very much like ancient Sodom. Corruption, debauchery, licentiousness, and crimes of all descriptions abound to an alarming degree. We were glad to get away from its sights and sounds.

Philadelphia is more roomy, more quiet—like a Quaker meeting. It is not lacking in wickedness, but it is not yet as apparent as in New York. The city wears a neater look than any other large city we have visited. This is occasioned in part, by the white marble door-steps, window-sills, and white panel blinds, all of which are kept very clean. The general look of the city is inviting. It has many fine buildings and pleasant parks. We think those who like city life would be well pleased with Philadelphia. The characteristic Quaker dress, consisting of broad-brimmed hats, plain bonnets and modest apparel, has nearly disappeared. The strong current of the world has carried away the Quaker simplicity, and with it much of its high-toned integrity and honesty; so that the true descendants of Wm. Penn may well sigh for the return of former days; as do the old Methodists for the days of their fathers, when men were true to the principles of christianity. Times have changed greatly in forty years; but are now changing more rapidly than ever. The current is strong and deep, and is hurrying the multitudes to perdition.

We found the tent-meeting, in the care of Bro. Hook, doing well. It is located on a pleasant spot, in Camden, N. J., just across the Delaware river from the foot of Vine street, in Philadelphia. Last evening (Tuesday, Aug. 10th) was our first visit to the meeting. A large audience was present, and the best of order prevailed. We found real life in the meeting. The church in Philadelphia has been greatly refreshed and strengthended by the meetings in the tent. Between twenty and thirty have been baptized, and Bro. Hook is to baptize again this evening. The truth is spreading, and those who have embraced and confessed it, are rejoicing greatly. This is true of several members of the evangelical churches. They seem quite like young converts, so great is the happy change, since they saw the simplicity of the Scriptures. Like many others we have known, they wonder why they did not see it before. These facts ought to stimulate us all to make greater efforts to help spread the truth, that we may be instrumental in causing others to rejoice in the same blessed hope, that we prize so highly, and thus glorify Him who is soon coming to set up his everlasting kingdom.

FARE REDUCED.

The Rutland, Burlington, and Vt. Valley R. Roads have reduced the fare for those attending the Springfield Campmeeting. This line, as we understand it, extends from Burlington to Brattleboro; hence the friends will purchase a regular ticket to the latter place, then buy a regular ticket on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. from Brattleboro to Greenfield; and the Secretary on the camp-ground will furnish all such with a free return pass over these roads. At Greenfield a Campmeeting Ticket for Springfield must be purchased at the Ticket Office. A'GT.

Campmeeting Information.

BRO. GRANT:—I saw the Vice President of the New York and Hartford Steamboat Co., and he told me they would carry passengers from New York to Springfield by calling for a campmeeting ticket, and give a return ticket for $4.00. The boat leaves Peck Slip at four o'clock P. M. I hope, on seeing the President, to get a further reduction.

JOS. T. HOWLAND.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

THE MARKETS.—We have been urged to give a weekly report of the markets, as many of our readers are farmers, who send their cattle and produce to the Boston and other markets; and they need a paper that contains a correct report of these things. They do not feel able to take two papers, and hence wish to find in the Crisis what they so much desire. We would say to such, that we have engaged a competent and trusty man to visit the Brighton, Cambridge, and Quincy Markets, and give the latest report of the prices of stock and provisions, and mention other items of interest to farmers. See third page.

FRENCH WAR CLOUDS.

Last year we had strong expectations that before this time Napoleon would make an effort to extend his boundaries to the Rhine. During the summer he has been re-arranging governmental matters, which have occupied his attention somewhat till the present time. He has shown much shrewdness in the political steps he has taken, and it would seem the time must be near for him to make some grand military movement, by means of which he may enter more fully than ever into the hearts of the people, and make another important addition to his power and empire. While he has been talking "peace," he has been very actively preparing for war. It is seldom, we think, that he means just what he says, when he speaks on political matters. He has made but few promises he has not broken. His cunning, craft, success and power are truly wonderful.

It is evident that some important movement is at hand. People may sneer at Napoleon as they please; he will not be disposed of so easily as some may imagine. His work is not yet done. The following cable dispatch from Paris, dated Aug. 9th, shows what may be expected:—

"A recent circular from the Minister of War, Marshal Niel, instructs the commanders of military divisions to proceed with the greatest activity in instructing the corps of all branches of the service. In this circular Marshal Niel acknowledges that it imposes heavy sacrifices on the country to place an effective force of 400,000 men. He consequently recommends the commanders to turn every moment to account in drilling the troops and "seriously preparing them for all the operations of war." He holds that all the corps should be so complete as to be able to place all available men in the field, and that no soldier is to be accorded leave of absence without absolute necessity.

Warlike preparations have not, says the Gaulois, been arrested for an instant along the entire extent of the frontier on the Rhine. The troops stationed on the frontier have not been reduced by a company, and at Strasburg the magazines continue to receive all sorts of military supplies. The report, published by the Gaulois, that troops had been called from Algeria has been officially contradicted."

A WORLD'S CONGRESS.

It appears that some important political movements are on foot among the nations of Europe. They are quite uneasy under the present condition of things; and seem determined to have a radical change. They are like the boiling of the crater of a volcano just before it bursts forth in all its horrid fury. "Strikes" among all classes of mechanics are becoming common, and serious affairs to their employers. Things can not long continue as they are. All efforts to improve the world are about as useless as to attempt to stop the flow of the Niagara. The "rush" of the nations must come. The winds must be loosed, and the political tempest most follow. All attempts to quiet the boiling cauldron of strife, contention, wickedness and war, will prove a failure. The masses are rushing with terrible speed in the broad road to destruction, and living as careless of coming events as were the Sodomites the day before Lot took his final departure from their city, and the fire and brimstone burnt them up in their wickedness. Those who remain in their quiet country homes, and only mingle in the society of a few choice friends, have but a faint idea of the amount of wickedness that is now committed in the cities and larger villages. Truly there is no fear of God before their eyes. It is no wonder that those who have any love for humanity should be trying to devise means to improve the world. In order to accomplish this object, it is proposed to have a "World's Congress" in Europe, commencing Sept. 14th, as the following will show:—

"The Central Committee of the International league, recently met at Geneva under the Presidency of M. Jules Barni. It was decided to hold the next Congress at Lausanne on the 14th. The following are the questions which will form the principal subjects for discussion: 1. To determine the basis of a federal organization in Europe. 2. The solution which the Eastern question (including that of Poland) should receive. 3. The means of removing all social or economical antagonism between citizens in each country. 4. Revision of the organization of the League and the re-establishment of its journal, The United States of Europe. A local committee was formed, under the direction of Mr. Eytel, to make preparations at Lausanne for the approaching Congress. The circular convoking the Congress is signed, in the name of the Central Committee, by Jules Barni, for France; Armand Goeg, Germany; Jolissant, Switzerland; Cesar Steffani, Italy, and Bossok Hauke, for Poland. It is announced that Senor Castellar of the Spanish Cortes will share in the deliberations of this Congress."

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

For the information of those asking for tent ground in the first circuit, I would say the lots were all taken up last year, but there is plenty of good ground a little back where there is less confusion and dust, and not even ten rods to go to hear preaching; and those able to attend campmeeting can walk that distance.

2. I have made arrangements for lumber at a low figure for such as wish to erect board tents; who will do well to commence them in season, say Tuesday or Wednesday before the meeting commences. Our railroad tickets come to life Wednesday, Aug. 25th, on the reduced fare, and run until Tuesday, Sept. 7th, inclusive. This will give you a long time. You will inquire for Collins' teams at the depot, to convey you to the ground as last year. Fare, ten cts. each; ten cts. for a trunk, but nothing for a traveling bag or valise carried in your hand. Be careful and have your baggage plainly marked, even if you are coming with it all. Baggage coming before, or separate, had better be directed to me.

3. I wish, if there are any of the large tents going to be absent this year, you would notify me as soon as convenient. All will have their last year's spot, if they will come. Each tent's company can help make a good meeting, and not have it appear like a picnic. You all come to serve God, and the committee will serve your needs while doing it. Prayer meetings in each tent will always convict others; visiting never will. If you are coming to show off your apparel and jewelry, do, for the Lord's sake, stay at home, and not help make the meeting look like a picnic, and then go home and say so. We had enough of this last year. We want a good deal more of the power of God in the tents and around the stand than last year, and each individual is responsible for having a good meeting. Last year there was some necessary confusion in building and locating tents that will not occur this year. Nine out of ten this year can pitch their tents and go right to work two days earlier than last year. There never was a more favorable place and chance to have a good, profitable meeting than in Springfield. It does not take one half of the brethren to keep order as formerly. We are protected from rowdyism, and nothing to do but to worship God; except the committee, whose duty it is to keep order, and be your servants; and they feel the best when the work of God by devotion is going on in every tent.

4. Some wish to know if they can get board on the ground a few days before the meeting begins. We would say, we have some work to do on the ground, and shall begin about one week before the meeting, and shall board our own help, and can board you reasonably while you are erecting your houses. Some wish to come and work a few days before the meeting. We may employ a few, but nothing to what we did last year. I have a good man engaged to put up a board tent, and will put up for any who want, as cheap as it can be done, and furnish lumber. Such had better write soon.

Let us all say we will have a good meeting.

"IN THE LAST DAYS."

BRO. GRANT:—We see that great sights and fearful signs are now visible, both in the heavens above and the earth beneath, spoken of in the Scriptures, to take place just before the "great and notable day of the Lord" comes. The following shows Christ's words to be fulfilled. Men's hearts failing them for fear for looking after those things coming on the earth. Luke 21: 25-26.

HIRAM MUNGER.

THE SUN AND THE EARTH.—A MAGNETIC STORM BREWING.

On September 1, 1859, shortly before noon, two astronomers—Messrs Hodgson and Carrington—one at Oxford, the other in London, were at the same instant scrutinizing a large group of sun spots. On a sudden two intensely bright patches of light appeared in front of the cluster. So brilliant were they that the observers thought the darkening screens attached to their telescopes must have become fractured. But this was found not to be the case. The bright spots indicated some process going on upon the sun's surface—a process of such activity that within five minutes the spots traveled over a space of nearly thirty-four thousand miles. Now, at the Kew observatory there are self-registering magnetic instruments which indicate the processes of change by which the subtle influences of terrestrial magnetism wax and wane.

At one time the line traced by the pointer will be marked by scarcely perceptible undulations, indicating the almost quiescent state of the great terrestrial magnet. At another, well marked waves along the line exhibit the pulsations of the magnetic system, influenced in a manner as yet unintellible to the physicist. And then there is a third form of disturbance, the sharp, sudden jerks of the pointer exhibiting the occurrence of those mysterious phenomena termed "magnetic storms." When the records of the Kew observatory came to be looked over, it was found that at the very instant in which the brilliant spots of light had appeared to Messrs Hodgson and Carrington, the self-registering instruments had been subjected to the third and most significant form of disturbance—a magnetic storm began, in fact, as the light broke out on the sun's surface.

But this was not the only evidence of the sympathy with which the earth responded to the solar action. It was subsequently found that soon after the spots of light had appeared, the whole frame of the earth had thrilled under a mysterious influence. At the West Indies, in South America, in Australia, wherever magnetic observations are systematically made, the observers had the same story to tell. In the telegraph stations at Washington and Philadelphia the signalmen received strong electric shocks. In Norway telegraphic machinery was set on fire. The pen of Bain's telegraph was followed by a flame. And wherever telegraphic wires were in action, well-marked indications of disturbance presented themselves. Even this, however, was not all. The great magnetic storm was not a mere instantaneous electric throe. Hours passed before the disturbed earth resumed its ordinary state. And thus it happened that in nearly all parts of the earth night fell while the storm was yet in progress. During the night magnificent auroras spread their waving streamers over the sky, both in the northern and the southern hemisphere. As the disturbed needle vibrated the colored streamers waved responsively, and it was only when the magnetic storm was subsiding that the auroral lights faded from the heavens.

Now it is evident that these phenomena show the most intimate relation between these peculiar disturbances in the sun and the magnetic currents of our own earth. When one of these changes takes place upward of ninety millions of miles away, the electric condition of our planet is changed in some mysterious way, of which our instruments, and even the condition of our sky, bear record. The pens of all our telegraphic wires may some day trace in flame a handwriting more ominous of human destiny than was the handwriting which during Belshazzar's feast traced a warning on the wall of the fall of the Babylonian dynasty.

Moreover, note this, that these changes in the condition of the sun take place at intervals of about eleven years. The variable star which swings round it, as well as supplying us with light and heat and (apparently) magnetism, clouds over every eleven years these spots so that it seems most likely that every eleven years certain magnetic conditions recur which have not occurred in the interval. If so, perhaps, the magnetic excitement of 1859 will recur, and it may be in much greater force next year—in 1870. And if it does, how are we to say what may or may not recur with it?

A CHAPTER OF MY EXPERIENCE.

In 1832, I was living in Roxbury, Mass., and attended the Baptist church, there being none other except Universalist and Unitarian. For some three weeks I was under deep conviction for my sins, which I kept wholly to myself, till, finding no relief, I made known my feelings to the Baptist minister, Mr. Leverett, who seemed to take much interest in my case, and talked and prayed with me.

But still finding no relief, I thought I must go home to South Wilbraham, feeling sure my convictions were in answer to the prayers of father, mother, and a praying sister especially.

So, taking the stage at ten o'clock P. M. at Boston for Worcester, I rode an hour or so, till I began to question the propriety of going home, feeling that I had done all I possibly could do to obtain the favor of God (for that was about all the light I had then), and that my going home would add nothing to what had already been done. I sank back into one corner of the stage in utter despair.

But just then God met me. Blessed be his holy name! I had been a doubting Thomas, but from that day to this I have never doubted that God then and there forgave all my sins. At the same instant of relief God gave me a vision of the New Jerusalem coming down from him out of heaven. It appeared about where we would look for the sun an hour high in the morning soon after the autumn equinox. It was nearly enveloped in a halo of glory, but not so much so but that the first thought was, "It is the New Jerusalem."

Such to me it was then; such to me it has been ever since. And just then what I saw in vision shall soon look for in glorious reality. This did not occur under what, ten years later, might have been termed a "Millerite" excitement, but under the profoundest silence, so far as I know, on that subject.

Thirty-seven years are nearly or quite passed since then, twenty-seven of which I have been waiting for the reality, much of the time fondly hoping it to be near, and that I might live to witness it. But at times for the last three years, and especially for the last four months, I have suffered so much, that I have many times preferred, if it were God's good pleasure, to lie down and sleep till Jesus comes.

And now, while I have some relief from suffering, I occasionally have that desire. There is nothing I feel the need of so much as patience to wait till Jesus comes, or death gives me rest. So if any feel the spirit of prayer for me, pray that I may have patience to endure to the end.

"Hide me, oh, my Savior, hide,
Till the storm of life be past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O, receive me home at last."

LETTER FROM SR. P. M. EATON.

Christian Brothers and Sisters:—It is with a thrill of springing love and joy that I address the loved and loving ones whom we may call "our own," yet when confined to the dear ones of our own circle personally, the love and joy which we mutually receive and impart is, though so strong, yet limited; and sometimes it seems almost selfish to keep in so small a space as our own personal circle of acquaintance the "light" of knowledge and faith and love and hope which it has pleased our Lord to give us.... If it is pleasant to have the privilege of writing to personal friends and acquaintances, and to interchange thoughts which make life's pulsations beat stronger than before, and which, as a substitute for personal association, seem to bring the absent near each other; if this is truly pleasant,—and every one who has ever written or received friendship's offering, a letter, will respond, "It is good,"—then it is good to a greater number when, through the columns of a christian and truly social paper, we receive and impart such blessings of thought and inspiration, of study and instruction, of deep feeling or soaring song, as the Spirit of life, everlasting life, doth breathe forth through our souls.

It is commanded, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Far away from the centres of social association, in many a retired spot, we might find, were we to seek to know them, the aged, or the sick; lonely they often are, although friends may minister to them; yet how little we know how much we might bless them, even by so small a bounty as a few words that well up from the soul's deep waters.

These thoughts have been suggested by a letter recently received by the writer from a stranger lady, a sister whose face I never saw, or name heard, until she wrote to say a few words to encourage me to try to write again for the Crisis, telling me that a letter which I had written, published in the Crisis last winter, had comforted her in her sickness; and wished another letter.

It is so sweet to feel assured that we are able to light up with warmth and sunshine the afflicted. How often do I in fulness of soul thank our Father in heaven for his love, in the happiness of those to whom his own breath hath given inspiration, his own offspring, the sons and daughters of this fair and blooming garden-world. It is then that my heart doth sing and rejoice, and with adoration the soul turns to praise the Author and Giver of all.

Again, the shadows fall on us, or on others around us, and we can only weep bitter tears.

In all this we have peace, for it is the great command, "Weep with those that weep; rejoice with those that do rejoice," ever hoping, remembering the great hope which is our soul's anchor,—"the times of the restitution of all things,"—when there shall be no more pain, neither sorrow, nor sighing, neither shall there be any more death. Glorious hope!

Dear aged father, reclining tremblingly on your staff, weak now, once fearless and strong, let peace fill the still, warm heart. Hope on. Eternal youth is yours. Aged mother, bent and feeble, cast your care on the strong One; give to him the offering of your life's earlier years; he will not forget. And oh, ye in the bright meridian years of life's noon-time, lift up your eyes and behold the ripened fields, white to the harvest. Listen to the voice that once called from Judea, and now calls from your holy Word of truth,—once flesh among men,—"Come ye into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right ye shall receive." "Work while it is day." "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do with thy might;" for there is no labor in the grave whither we go. To the strong is committed the care of the weak. The fathers and mothers whose strength is spent, whose labors have enriched the world in storehouse and comforts; the little children, the day-stars of a coming time, fail not to bless them, every father, mother, or friend of the world. Gently care for the sick and weary ones, and when the last setting sun of our life shall beam on our weak and worn out forms, may we say with peace in our souls, "Into thy hands, O God, I commit my spirit;" and in the bright morning wake to suffer pain no more. Your sister, P. M. EATON.

Correspondence.

From Bro. V. Scott.

BRO. GRANT:—I see the Advent Christian missionaries are ministers; have been preaching in almost every State around us but ours, or at least this, the southern part of it. I have been waiting and looking these many years for some one to come to our part of the country. I have had the greatest desire for many years, and have yet, to attend one of your meetings, and get better acquainted with you as a body of people; but the distance being so great, I have never had my desire gratified; all I have done or can do is to read the many notices of your glorious meetings and conferences in the "Crisis." It certainly would afford me the greatest pleasure to enjoy one. I therefore take this opportunity to second Bro. G. W. Green's call for a conference in Southern Indiana. Although I have been a minister in the Christian church for twenty years, I have been a firm believer in the second coming and kingdom of Christ for the same length of time, and the Advent Christian church has my sympathies and well wishes; and I give it as my best judgment that more good can be done now in this part of the country by your church than in the last twenty years. There seems to be a great demand by the people to hear the word of life, for the churches to a great extent seem to be slumbering. Will you therefore immediately make an arrangement with some of your best posted preachers, to come and organize a conference. Please to correspond with Dr. Fields, of Jeffersonville, Ind.; with G. W. Green, of Memphis, Ind., with R. H. Scott, of this place, or with myself, and let us know when you can come. I would suggest Hamburgh, Clark Co., or Slate Runn, Floyd Co., Ind., as the most suitable place for holding a conference, and the last of August or September as the most suitable time.

There is a great field open here, and I think much good would be done if the laborers were put into the field. Yours in hope of eternal life, VARDEMON SCOTT.

Scottsville, Ind., July 25th, 1869.

SR. L. B. WEAVER writes:—"I am weary, for there is distress all around, and trials on every hand. The days of my exile are passing away. I am glad of it, for when we are once safe in the better land, no weary hours will be known. How many weary hearts are sighing and longing for rest, and the days seem long as they pass them in weary watching for the Lord to come. When Jesus comes, the weary will find a home of fadeless beauty and eternal delight. Who does not long for the time to come when we shall change these vile bodies for one like Christ's own glorious body, and wear the fadeless crown, the pure, white robe of righteousness, and bathe our weary souls in seas of heavenly rest. I long to be there. I must be there. When I think of all the beauties and glories, and all that is laid up in store for the dear ones, I feel impatient to have Jesus come. I want to get some of that rich fruit that grows upon the tree of life. How sweet and good it will be. How I long to reach forth my hand and pluck it. I must be there to join that redeemed company who have come up out of great tribulation, and where the weary will forever be at rest."

SR. C. M. DE WOLFE, Rochelle, Ill., July 17th, writes: "Mr. Wilson came. He would have had more sympathizers with his faith, if he had staid away. He talked perfectly awful. He called God a liar, and denounced all christians, calling us Sadducees. Bro. Hoag, one of the preachers who attended our meetings, said Spiritualism had gasped its last breath in this town; and many, very many, have wished you would come back. Mr. Taylor said he would pay for the hall if you would come.

The last night that Mr. Wilson spoke, some were so disgusted that they left the house. Many were disgusted with him; even those of his own faith and order were ashamed of him. Some said he was an awful wicked man, and ought to be rode out of town. Some young men said they never heard such blasphemy as came from his lips.

Last Sunday, we commenced prayer-meetings at our house, and had a good meeting."

Excitement in Poland.

A Nun locked up in a Cell for twenty-one years.

We published a statement a day or two ago relative to an attack by a mob on the Carmelite Convent at Cracow in Austrian Poland, on account of the cruel treatment of one of the nuns, who has just been released after confinement in a cell for twenty-one years. The circumstances attending the case appear to have excited great public horror and indignation, and are thus stated by a Vienna correspondent of the London Times:

"While passing in the neighborhood of Cracow on Friday last, I heard that the whole town was in a ferment, owing to the following shocking story that was just coming to light, and to which further particulars are now added; the papers have since been full of it.

A few days ago, an anonymous letter, apparently written by a woman's hand, reached the Court of Correction, stating that in the Carmelite Convent a nun named Barbara Abryk had been kept for years walled up in a dark cell. Accordingly the Vice President of the Court placed the information in the hands of an officer, who went to the Bishop and requested an admission to the convent. The Bishop represented that it was sure to be all an invention, but that since the Court pressed it he would allow it, and thereupon handed over the officer to a priest.

The officer came to the door with the commission, knocked, and was answered by a portress, to whom he said he had come there to see and speak to the nun Barbara. The portress drew her breath with astonishment, fell back a step or two, and said it was impossible: but while she was turning herself about to go away, the officer put his hands on her and forbade her, in the name of the law, to stir from the spot. The party then entered and was shown through a long corridor to the room of Sister Barbara. It was a cell 8ft. by 6ft. in size, next the sink; the window had been walled up and a narrow chink furnished the only aperture through which, now and then, a ray of light fell upon that gloomy prison. I go on in the words of a Vienna paper:

'In a dark, stinking hole, on a heap of straw, sat, or rather cowed, a naked, wild-grown, half-witted woman, who, at the usual appearance of light and human beings, dropped her hands and implored piteously, "I am hungry: pity me, give me meat; I will be obedient." This dungeon, with its little straw and much filth, and a dish of mouldy potatoes, without fire, bed, table, or even chair, which no sunstreak cheered or fire-blaze ever warmed, had the inhuman "Sisters" chosen as the dwelling place for their should-be companion; there had they imprisoned her year after year since 1848. For twenty-one years did those dreadful Sisters pass that cell, and to none of them had it ever entered to take compassion on their poor victim. And now, half human, half beast, with her body covered with dirt, with her legs, shrunk and withered, with her head squalid, diseased, year upon year long unwashed, a terrible being revealed herself, such as Dante himself, with all his powers, could not have depicted or imagined. So kneeled there that woful victim in the convent of the Carmelites.' The officer immediately ordered a chemise to be given the wretched creature, and himself went to fetch the Bishop. At the sight of the poor sufferer the Bishop was deeply moved, called the nuns together, and reproaching them violently for their inhuman treatment, said, "Is this your sisterly love? Is this the way you think to come to heaven? Furies, not women." And when they would have excused themselves, "Silence, miserable ones! you who disgrace religion, away from my sight." He suspended them, and then the Confessor and the Lady Superior talked of breaking up the nunnery, and sent Babara to be clothed and fed. While she was being led away, she asked, anxiously: "Won't they take me back again to my grave?" and inquired why she was shut up there. "I have broken my vows, but these, these," darting wildly round, and glaring furiously on the Sisters, "are no angels." Then, springing at the Confessor she shrieked, "You beast!"

On examination the Lady Superior said she had shut up Barbara on the doctor's recommendation in 1848. The present doctor, who has held the position seven years, stated that he had never even seen Barbara once.

In the evening the poor creature became wilder, and it was settled to move her next day to the mad-house. On Friday therefore, the 23d, the Commission came again to take her away. On seeing the sunlight and grass of the convent garden she convulsed with extreme joy, and when one of the Sisters who accompanied her to the gate ran out, when the others turned back, embraced and kissed her, she was so touched with the strange sympathy that she implored the author of it to come away with her, and incessantly called for her afterwards on the road. The fresh air was too much for her, and during the journey she fainted.

In her new home Sister Barbara was provided with everything comfortable; but at first she kept frequently rising from her bed to lie on the bare floor, as she had been used. Since being properly washed and dressed, the wildness has quieted down, and the doctors have hopes of eventually restoring her to her senses."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, Aug. 11. The Times, in an article on the abolition of the Irish Church establishment, says: "Whatever its practical result may be, the measure is the boldest and greatest act of modern legislation. One consequence of the measure has been the withdrawal by the authorities of Trinity College of their opposition to the proposal for admitting Catholics and Non-conformists to fellowship. The Irish Bishops have shown good sense in agreeing that the laity as well as the clergy shall concur in the election of prelates in the new church. The extreme Protestantants have subsided and the Catholics accept their triumph with gratitude and moderation."

VIENNA, Aug. 11. The Presse says a Commission has been appointed by the Government to draw up a bill providing that a surveillance be instituted over the convents, and that they be brought under the action of the law concerning associations, the provisions of which are to be so amended and enlarged as to embrace monastic institutions in their operations.

Baron Von Beust, in a speech opposing the demand of the Austrian delegation for a reduction in the personnel and expenditures of the Embassy at Rome, declares that the Protestant States were now taking up the same attitude which the Catholic States had assumed with regard to the Papal Government. The Austrian Government had resolved to allow nothing derogatory to its dignity. Its reply to the last Papal allocution was decided in tone, though couched in diplomatic terms, and a better understanding begins to prevail at Rome.

MADRID, 11. A party of five hundred Carlists has appeared on the frontier of Catalonia.

Gen. Prim has gone to Paris. Before his departure he left orders, which have just been promulgated, that all rebels captured with arms in their hands be shot on the spot.

The provisions stipulated by martial law, passed April 17, 1821, which require the assembling of a Council of War to try insurgents, are not being now observed in Spain. The troops shoot all individuals suspected of Carlism without any trial. Nine persons have been summarily shot in the vicinity of Barcelona, which created a very bad impression among the people. It is reported that Gen. Prim intends offering the crown of Spain to King Louis of Portugal, in which case Spain and Portugal, would be governed in a similar manner as Austria and Hungary, and the King would divide his residence between the two capitals. A Carlist chief, Cofreilla Estartus, has crossed the French frontier and passed into Catalnia, where he has joined a band of four hundred strong.

Aug. 13. Estartus, at the head of five hundred Carlists, has entered Spain from France, at Puigcerda.

The entry of other bands at various points is expected. There is considerable excitement at Malaga owing to the Republican movement there.

Twelve priests have been arrested at Burgos charged with taking part in the Carlist insurrection.

PARIS, Aug. 11. Public opinion is everywhere unanimous that the difficulties between Egypt and Turkey will have no serious consequences. All the Powers counsel moderation, and an adjustment is no longer doubtful, PARIS, Aug. 11. The Patrie announces that through the good offices of France and England, Ismael Pasha has decided to concede to the demands of the Sublime Porte.

Aug. 13. La France newspaper says Queen Isabella has expressed a determination to resign in favor of her son.

LONDON, Aug. 12. The Times publishes a letter from Madrid, whereof the following is an extract: "Spain cannot be in a worse state. A change must come unless the rulers are prepared for revolution. The Treasury is empty—it is impossible to collect taxes—and there is popular discontent everywhere.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 11. The Porte prohibits the execution of orders for armament given by the Viceroy of Egypt while in Europe, including one for sixteen thousand breech-loaders in Berlin and another for a spip-of-war at Trieste.

DUBLIN, Aug. 11. At Tubbernath, in the county of Sligo, a party of twenty-five men attacked a dwelling and carried off some fire-arms. Six of the marauders have been arrested, and two or three have been identified as persons who were formerly imprisoned for Fenianism.

ALEXANDRIA, Aug. 12. The Viceroy has received a letter from the Sultan. It is reported that its contents are not of so serious a character as was anticipated. Ismael Pasha will have no difficulty in making a satisfactory reply.

The lowness of the river Nile excites general attention. The water is lower than it has been within one hundred and fifty years.

DOMESTIC.

THE ECLIPSE AS SEEN FROM IOWA.—A correspondent writing from Marshalltown, Iowa, Aug. 8th, gives the following account of the recent eclipse as it appeared from that place. He says:

"The eclipse began at 4 o'clock, but no change was observed in the temperature or appearance of the heavens until 4.20, when the light of the sun was seen to be waning. At 4.30 I turned to observe the shadows of different objects, and it was with difficulty that they could be defined. The shape and appearance of the sun at this time was very much like that of a new moon with this exception, that the horns were not as pointed as in a new moon. From 4.30 to 4.50, the scene was most exciting. Every moment some change could be perceived either in the atmosphere or the heavens. Looking off at the east, a dark, lurid cloud seemed to be rising, while in the north inky blackness had invaded the sky. At 4.44, a streak of light could be seen tracing the opposite side of the moon from that which first entered the eclipse. Just at this moment I turned to the north and saw a great wave of blackness rolling toward me. At the same time a general shout from all sides directed my attention to the sun, and there was the moon 'rolling on' over the sun, not having the appearance, as we generally see it (a silvery disk,) but a vast black globe rolling on in mid-air. At this time several stars could be seen.

Words cannot describe the sensation I felt for the next minute, for in less time than it takes me to write it I found myself enveloped in darkness. There the moon was, hung in mid-air, surrounded by a beautiful corona of light. Everywhere it was dark except in the southern horizon; there a dull, lurid light might be seen.

During the total obscuration a flock of birds hurridly flew over our heads, crying in most piteous tones. The hens had gone already to roost.

A dog, which had been lying at my feet while the eclipse was coming on, at the moment when it was total leaped up and began to rush wildly around the garden.

As the sun began to appear again I heard the cocks crowing and the birds chirping as if it was morning.

A LUMINOUS BODY AT MID-DAY.—The Lancaster Express of Aug. 10th says:—"A most singular phenomenon occurred at mid-day on Saturday last, near the village of Adamstown, this county. About two hundred yards north of the village is an open lot, and at twelve o'clock, while the villagers were taking dinner, a luminous body was seen to settle near the centre of this lot. It is represented by four or five different parties, who witnessed it from several points, to have assumed a square shape, and shooting up into a column about three or four feet in height, and about two feet in thickness.

The sun was shining brightly at the time, and under its rays the object glittered like a column of burnished silver. The presence, after reaching its full effulgence, gradually faded away, and in ten minutes time it had entirely disappeared. Those who saw it were unable to tell what it was. It seemed to inspire terror rather than admiration. After it had disappeared, a number of persons visited the spot, but not a trace of any thing unusual could be found.

Similar objects have been seen in the neighborhood on several occasions during the night time, but none before in the day time, or so bright as this. The land in the immediate vicinity is dry, there being no swamp about, otherwise the phenomenon might be accounted for."

DR. PUSEY AND THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.—The forthcoming Ecumenical Council is very naturally making a considerable stir in the ecclesiastical mind. Dr. Cumming, as we all know, intends to take part in it if he can overcome the preliminary difficulties—first, of getting in; and secondly, of speaking in Latin after he has obtained admission. Dr. Pusey has taken a step, not so bold, perhaps no more effective, but one which will probably command considerable respect among thoughtful Roman Catholics. He has written a book, full of recondite ecclesiastical lore, and too learned and technical for review, but of which the practical upshot is, that Dr. Pusey really believes that there is yet a chance for a reunion between the Roman Catholic Church and the Reformed Churches. He himself approximates so nearly to the Roman Catholic Church that to his own mind the idea probably seems to be hardly visionary. But we believe that Dr. Pusey is greatly in advance even of the great body of High Churchmen in this country.—London Star.

THE HARVEST IN WISCONSIN.—The Milwaukee Wisconsin says crop reports in that section of the State are generally encouraging. The greater part of the rye has been harvested, while the wheat crop is being cut as fast as possible. The berry is almost uniformly plump, and by far the greater part will be grade No. 1. Considerable grain has been lodged by heavy rains, but a portion is recovering and will be easily gathered. The yield is 18 to 25 bushels to the acre, and but little rust or blight is visible. The whole crop would be harvested in a few days. Oats show a splendid yield. Corn is backward and a small crop is expected.

THE DROUTH. The Lawrence American says vegetation is suffering severely from the drouth. The ground is parched and in some places almost baked, and the dust is intolerable. The streams are very low, and the factories suffer much inconvenience. The Arlington has been compelled to shut down for a portion of the time and wait for its pond to fill up with a sufficient supply of water from the Spicket river. Trout have been left high and dry in the brooks, there not being water enough to float them.

THE CROPS IN CANADA.—The Toronto Telegraph has had reports from all sections of Canada relative to the condition of the growing crops, and sums up its collation of results by saying that never before has the yield in grain, roots, fruits and hay in the dominion been equalled in amount. It is so largely in excess of a common year that from ten to fifteen per cent. could be lost in the article of wheat by rust, midge and lodgment, and the granaries be still filled beyond all ordinary expectation.

Passing Events.

☞ Letters from Constantinople mention a project of the Porte to establish in the Ottoman capital an extensive Polish settlement, which will be recruited from the Poles employed in the army and on the railroads. It will be regarded as an open demonstration by Turkey against Russia. It is also stated that great fears are felt in regard to the future. The Porte continues its armaments with extraordinary activity. A large number of horses and cattle have been purchased, and the fortresses on the northern frontier are re-enforced.

☞ A frightful series of catastrophes occurred July 28th, at Enghien, near Paris. A man employed to clean the conduit pipes of one of the sulphur wells, fell into the water, and eight persons, who went down one after the other to save the first, were all stifled by the sulphuric hydrogenic gas. Four perished, and the other five were ultimately rescued in a state of great exhaustion.

☞ A London Catholic paper, which is supposed to be "inspired" by official information, states that seven or eight Anglican clergymen propose to attend the Ecumenical Council for the purpose of obtaining a definite opinion in reference to the validity of their orders, and, further, to endeavor to form a union between the Catholic church and a portion of the Anglican community.

☞ One of the Swiss communes has conferred the right of citizenship upon Mazzini. As the Republican leader has accepted the offer, the government of Berne—by whom the privilege must be confirmed—will find itself considerably embarrassed, having abridged his liberty of residence in the country.

☞ The Rev. Dr. Osgood gives his impressions of Spurgeon in this language: "He does a large and good business in souls. His gifts are as much of the bowels as of the brains, and he seems to be as full of sympathetic juices, in which his great audience float like a great navy in an ample harbor."

☞ An effort is being made in one of the churches in Cherokee county, Ga., to exclude from the church all female members who wear hoops, paniers, Grecian bends, small hats, or use cosmetics, paint or other appliances to make an external show "for man's illusion given."

☞ Farmers in Berkshire county have begun harvesting oats, the straw of which is excellent, running up to nearly six feet in some fields. The grain is well filled.

☞ Paris correspondents are again circulating reports that the Emperor Napoleon is in bad health. It is said that an old malady, which nearly proved fatal several years ago, has returned.

☞ A German astronomer thinks we are going to have another moon, nearer to us than our present luminary.

☞ The Exposition National in Cordova, Argentine Republic, is to take place in the early part of next year.

☞ A walnut tree eight feet across, petrified into soap stone, was lately discovered one hundred and seventy-five feet deep in an Illinois coal mine.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 28th, and continuing till Sept. 6th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Sept. 5th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester, at the usual stations. On the New Haven and Hartford R. R., fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Hartford, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. R. R., fare is reduced one third from So. Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 25th to Sept. 7th, must be called for at the ticket offices; and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Mass. and Vt. R. Road, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Brattleboro, Vernon, Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. that they may come from.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R. Campmeeting Tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the Depot in Providence, good from August 26th to Sept. 7th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.50 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 o'clock P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the early morning train; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the Rail Road to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, and 8½ A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

Advent Christian Association.

The next Annual Meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Tuesday, Aug. 31st, at nine o'clock A. M. As business of unusual importance is to come before this meeting, it is hoped that every church will be represented by delegates, and that preachers make an effort to be present at the opening meeting.

Every church co-operating with the A. C. A. is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members. Each delegate must bring credentials from the church to which he belongs.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N.H., commencing Sunday, Sept. 5th, to hold through the week and over the following Lord's day. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 80 cents per day; breakfast and supper, 30 cents each; dinner, 50 cents; horse-keeping (hay and grain) 75 cents per day. The boarding department is under the charge of the committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad and steamboat companies, as follows: Boston and Maine R. R., trains leave Boston for the meeting 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M.,—half fare. Purchase regular tickets at Boston and all intermediate stations for Alton Bay, and friends coming expressly to attend the meeting will be entitled to a free return pass, to be furnished them at Alton Bay.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R.; trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Littleton for the Wiers at 9 A. M.,—half fare. Those coming from Concord, Littleton, and Plymouth, can go through to the camp-ground the same day, by waiting at the Wiers. The fare on the steamboats one way.

Connecticut and Passumpsic River R. R.; trains leave Derby at 7 A. M. for Wells River, Plymouth, Wiers, and Alton Bay,—half fare. Passengers will purchase regular tickets, and receive free return checks on the camp-ground, signed by the Secretary of the meeting. If any of our friends wish, they can come for the same a week before the meeting.

Eastern R. R., half fare. Purchase regular tickets at the several stations, and receive free return passes on the camp ground, signed by T. H. Ford.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R.; trains leave Portland at 6.15 A. M., 8.40 A. M., and 2.55 P. M., for Dover and Alton. Fare about two thirds.

Fare reduced on the Concord and Portsmouth, and Nashua railroads, one half.

If our friends in Mass. or Maine, interested in the meeting, can get the fare reduced on any other railroads, we hope they will; and as we have been so successful in getting the fare reduced to the meeting, we hope our friends will avail themselves of it, and also of a good meeting. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

D. CHURCHILL,
J. G. SMITH,
T. W. PIPER,
J. LANGLEY,
J. SHORRY,
J. JENNESS,
T. H. FORD,
COMMITTEE.

Notice.

Our friends who have tents to build at Alton Bay, are requested to be sure and have them built before the meeting commences. We have engaged Bro. Wm. Chamberlin to carry the baggage from the depot to the camp-ground. For the Committee, J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

I have made arrangements with the Portland and Kennebec Railroad Company for a reduction of fare to the Alton Bay Campmeeting, one half fare. L. A. CHURCH.

Notice.

There will be a Quarterly Conference in South Livermore, Maine, commencing Aug. 26th, one o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and unite with us in the work of the Lord. Call on C. Dennen, C. H. Boothby, Wm. Hobbs, Silas Timberbake, and others.

ELD. JESSE GAY.
ELD. A. ABBOTT.
H. B. SEVEY.

Tent Meeting.

Because of the great interest manifested in our tent meeting at New Milford, Ct., we shall continue the same. The tent will be moved to Henry Freeman's land, near the Quaker meeting-house. We buried five happy souls yesterday, and raised them again to a newness of life. Bless the good Lord.

A. D. FLAGG.

Campmeeting in Maine.

At a meeting in Holden, last Sunday, the brethren decided to have a campmeeting in the vicinity of Bangor, to commence about Sept. 13th. Particulars hereafter. For the Brethren,

GEO. W. BROWN.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—My address is Marshfield, Vt., instead of South Royalton, as I have lately moved to this place. Please direct as above.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Campmeeting at Pittsfield, Me.

The campmeeting at Pittsfield, Maine, to commence Aug. 23d, will be held on the same ground of last year, about two miles southwest from the village. Those coming by cars will stop at Pittsfield depot. We want the brethren to bring their own tents, bedding, and provisions, as far as practicable, and be prepared to help the preachers and the poor to a good home, and have an old-fashioned campmeeting. Old-fashioned, we say, like as we used to have when "What think ye of Christ?" was the test, with a united love for his appearing, and an entire preparation for the event; when our Father's house was not a place of merchandise, but a place of prayer, prevailing prayer with God. Is his ear heavy that he cannot hear, or his arm shortened that he cannot save? Nay, verily; but bickering and strife and evil work have too far separated us from the love of God in Christ.

And now to every member of the living Vine, in all the region round about, who can, we extend a hearty invitation to come up to camp once more in the name and power of God, leaving far behind side issues, and questions that gender strife; take Christ with the cross upon the heart, with the golden rule in the hand, and let us prove the Lord with tithes and offerings, and see if he will not once more pour us out a blessing. Servants of the household, come with the word of faith, the bread and water of life.

To avoid confusion, we wish it distinctly understood, that the appointment for a campmeeting in Maine, in the vicinity of Bangor, is another meeting, to be held by those believing in the non-reliving of the wicked dead. The Great Shepherd will care for all the sheep and lambs and bring them at last into the one precious fold. Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

By order of the committee chosen at the Pittsfield meeting last fall,

F. A. BAKER.
I. K. LOMBARD.
I. DAMMAN.

Fare Reduced to Pittsfield, Me., Campmeeting.

The fare will be reduced as far as Kendall's Mills over the Portland and Kennebec R. R. The tickets will be for fare one way. Those going to campmeeting will inquire for Campmeeting Tickets to Kendall's Mills, then they will change cars, taking the Maine Central R. R. for Pittsfield.

A. H. WALKER.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Thursday, Sept. 2nd, nine o'clock A. M. Members of and delegates to the A. C. A. are members of this Society. A full attendance of the members is requested.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

The Union Female Missionary Association will hold its annual meeting on Springfield campground, Tuesday, August 31st, 1869, at one o'clock P. M. All the preaching Sisters and members of the Association are requested to be present, as some matters with reference to the best interest of the Association are to be considered. Come with hearts interested in the work of the Lord, and pray much that we may have the Spirit of Jesus to direct us in the transaction of business, that this meeting may be profitable to all. Reports from the different female missionaries will be given at this meeting. M. MCKINSTRY, Secretary.

Grove Meeting at Westfield, Pa.

There will be a grove meeting at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa. (near the village), commencing Friday, Aug. 27th, to continue over the Sabbath following. C. F. Sweet, D. Cogswell, and others, are expected to preach the word. All are invited to attend. For the brethren, J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

The Second Advent Christian Church of Rochester, N. Y., will hold meetings in their new hall, New York State Arsenal, corner of Monroe and Jackson streets, as follows: Sundays, prayer and conference meeting at 10 A. M. Sunday school at 12½ P. M. Preaching at 2 and 7½ P. M. The weekly prayer meetings: Tuesday and Friday evenings, of each week. The regular monthly church and covenant meeting will be held the Friday evening (7½ o'clock) before the first Sunday in each month. JAS. E. WELLS, Cor. and Rec. Sec.

Notice.

I desire to visit the east this season, if the Lord will, and to attend the Springfield campmeeting. I would like to visit churches on the way, and preach for our mutual benefit. Any brethren wishing me to call on them, can direct to me at New Rutland, Ills. I wish to start about the first of August. F. BURR.

Brighton Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Aug. 12th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

Last week	2,340	3,531	815

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.00@13.25; first quality, $12.00@12.50; second quality, $11.00@11.50; third quality, $8.00@10.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, 50@65 to 75@100; Yearlings, $18 to 28; two years old, $30 to 42; three years old, $46 to 65; Western Fat Swine, live, $10½ to 11 cts. per lb; Dressed, 12½ to 13 cts. per lb; Store Hogs, Wholesale, 11 to 13 cts. per lb; Retail, 11 to 14 cts. per lb. Columbia Co., N. Y., Spring Pigs, 15 to 17 cts. per lb.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.25, 2.75, 3.00, 3.50, 3.75 each; Extra, $4.00, 5.50, or from 4 to 6½ cts. per lb; Spring Lambs, $3.00 to 5.00; Veal Calves, $3.00 to 15.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow and Skins.

Brighton Hides, 9½ to 10 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7@7½ cts. per lb; Country Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 0 to 0 cts. per lb; Lamb Skins, 50 to 62 cts. each; Sheared Lamb Skins, 17 to 25 cts. each; Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS.

CATTLE.—Cattle from the West continue to arrive freely. Arrivals during the week from Albany, 2,080 head. Upon examination we find a good many inferior cattle. Rates at Albany range ¼ ct. per lb. higher, on account of a light supply, and our dealers would have been perfectly willing to make a corresponding advance here, but were unable to move prices from last week's rates. Trade during the early afternoon was quiet, but partially revived before night. Considerable many cattle were sold on commission.

SHEEP.—Receipts, 3,410, mostly western, handled by Brighton butchers, on commission.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Aug. 17th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $12.25@12.75; first quality, $11.75@12.00; second quality, $10.@11; third quality, $7.50@9.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $65, $75 to $100; Yearlings, $18 to $28; Two years old, $30 to $42; Three years old, $46 to $65.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.25, $2.50, $3@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75, 4.50, or from 4 to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3 to $4.50; Veal Calves, $3@$15.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Lamb Skins, 50 to 60 cts. each. Sheared Lamb Skins, 17@25 each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—The supply of Live Stock at this market is gradually increasing, and the market has presented more thrift on account of the larger supply; but as expected prices have not ranged as high. Good oxen were sold at $12.50 per cwt. A few head at $12.75 per cwt. We find a marked difference of nearly ½ ct. per lb. off perceptible on lower grades.

Sheep. We find a goodly number of sheep and lambs. Sum total, 9,509, about 3,500 more than last week. Some of these were sent for by butchers last Friday, as the supply was somewhat short in Boston. There is no doubt but that the supply this week will be equal to the demand. Very fine lambs were sold at $3.50 per head. Many lots were turned over to the butchers at the prices that dealers paid at home including car bills. Taking all the different lots, of which some were sold at only a slight discount, while others at a sacrifice, we judge there is an average discount of 50 cts. per head lower.

Notice.

"As ye would that others should do unto you, so do you even unto them."

The little church at Week's Mills, China, Me., are trying to build a meeting-house, and they need help to finish it from those who observe the above rule. It will require about $200 to complete it. Now let all who are interested in the cause of Christ, and are able, do something for this enterprise. All monies may be sent to Alton C. Doe, Week's Mills, China, Me. Small and large gifts will be very acceptable, and they should be forwarded immediately. In behalf of the church,

ALLEN DAMON.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 10 cts.
2. AN EXPOSITION OF THE SEVEN SEALS. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.
3. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrible, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.
4. A TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.
5. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by "taking it away," suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.
6. THE LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.
7. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.
8. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. Also a great number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders; that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.
9. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.
10. RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

PROOF OF SONSHIP.—Heb. 12 : 7.

Though shattered, broken down,
In conscious feebleness,
I know the Lord, who bids it so,
Will cause his love to deeper flow
In streams of blessedness.

Though laid aside awhile,
A weak and feeble thing,
Such comfort have I in his love,
Such joyous thoughts of heaven above,
My spirit can but sing.

The vessel's full of pain,
And nature well nigh sinks;
But love and sympathy are rife,
And from the sweet, pure fount of life
My grateful spirit drinks.

And thither I resort,
When racked with anguish sore,
Thence sweeter consolation flows,
And greater grace the Lord bestows
Than e'er bestowed before.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT IS MAN?

INTRODUCTION.

"Man, know thyself," is an exhortation that should be repeated in the present day, for there is a sickly sentimentality prevailing in the land, that dares, virtually, by epithets of intimidation and malevolence, to forbid the inquiry that leads to such an end. It is high time that the veto of all Christian and candid men be put on this secrecy, enthrallment, and forbiddance, in respect to so sublime and relational a subject; for can it be expected that a question so generally interesting, and universally important, affecting as it does all men, will be answered by one, two, a dozen, or even a hundred individuals, to the satisfaction of the whole human race? Can it be a matter for wonder if a theme so intimately allied to all rational creatures, is not left to the sole interpretation, or based on the personal decision, of a comparative few? Is it not, rather, a wonder that men are generally so insensible to the demand of the question; and are content to credulously believe anything that may be advanced on the subject that has a specious and plausible appearance?

Is it right, I ask, for any man, or association, to put up a few memorials, rail them off, and then, pointing to them, pronounce a different result, or a new investigation, both sacrilegious and presumptive? Is it becoming for one human being to consider the investigation he has made in this study, to his own satisfaction, infallibility; and any and every other, that shall differ from his, fleshly wisdom? Is it right for the whole world to dictate to the conscience of a man that he must follow in its footmarks, or go wrong? Should men be asked to become the slaves of other men's minds, the servitors of other men's thoughts, the believers of other men's opinions, when the men themselves can give no proof, and in fact make no assertion of inspiration or infallibility?

Why should men put a padlock on this subject, and feel aggrieved when other men will dare look and see if what they have been told is true? Why should any man "patentee" his creed, and then with the voice of the multitude, whose sound is as many waters, call it truth, and everything else false? Men and brethren, it appears to me there is something contraband in all this; something that they fear will be exposed; something that will be brought to light that they have never seen, or consciously ignored. But I say, with a happy stanza, both to what is in myself and in this covered up, sealed, and guarded problem, as worked out by orthodoxy—

"Perish policy and cunning;
Perish all that fears the light;
Whether losing, whether winning,
Trust in God and do the right."

It is granted that the incitement to an acquaintanceship with one's self is ancient; but what is old is not always impracticable, foolish, or despicable. "Man, know thyself," is a binding injunction on a wise man; for how can a man be wise and not know himself? Here is the depth of ignorance—the ignorance of one's own nature, abilities, and destination. The old, therefore, as I have said, is not in this case the useless, or deserving only the curl of the lip; it is a hoary and venerable exhortation to renewed search in this special line of investigation.

How many have listened to its voice, and have gone to the different sources of knowledge, and from thence picked some unit of thought to store in their repertories. How many have been stimulated to such an inquiry by hearing the sound of its invitation. But those who have been the most hasty have not always been the most successful, as the history of this great question and the result of the search up to this date sufficiently prove. It is not always that the most impetuous are the victors; for many, starting on a false notion, thinking themselves the victors, have fallen into the meshes laid for them by the strategy of their enemies. Scripture also tells us "the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong." Before a man moves he must weigh well his actions; or he may, as the unwary beast of prey, fall into a hidden pit.

The reason that so many have failed of the true knowledge of themselves is, that they have prosecuted the inquiry in a wrong way. They have accepted certain dogmas without hesitation or challenge; and as the way of error never opens into the way of truth, they have gone further and further from the right, well pleased with the fruits of their labors. May such now, whilst we direct attention to this topic, retrace their steps, and go carefully over the ground with us, feeling for every step, and looking up for the star of truth to lead on.

We are now for realities, and cogitate on the plain problem—"What is man?" Let us be most simple, for sublimity and reality always are simple. And the first question that occurs to me in starting is, Where shall we go to know what man is? The answer is, Where all is certainty; there and there only may we find what we desire. Now inasmuch as the heathen philosophers deal in mere probabilities; inasmuch as with them it is all conjecture, we will not go there. We are able to reason. Speculation is the province of all. But to theorize on a subject and trust to one's own imaginings, is as unsafe as to trust to the fickle wind not to blow. Yea, to consult unenlightened man, not excluding ourselves, is to hearken to the witching and lying voices of hearts deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, the half of which can not be known. I am not one for trusting to an arch-deceiver, or a desperately wicked informer. Give me something, I say, more noble, more trustworthy, more demonstrative. Give me better than this: give me truth to teach me, and the Lord to instruct me; and, oh! to the praise of the grace of the Lord be it said, we have what we desire, in love given to us, to make us not only intellectually wise on this point, but wise on a theme and revelations as much above this great subject as heaven is above the earth; that is, "wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus." I trust my readers know something about this; at least I write this paper for those who do.

Well, then, supposing we should not go to the muddy ponds of lees and sediment, even human hearts; where can we go? In the first place, let us get entirely quit of everything that is of the flesh; let us know that fallen nature is but feces, in all its loathsome unsightliness and stench; and let us turn away from trusting to that for wisdom. The clear spring water is not to be gotten in man; we must needs go to the Fountain to be refreshed and truly invigorated. That fountain is God alone. But how can we go to God? Can we scale the heights of heaven? Can we find and ascend the ladder Jacob saw? Experience tells us as men we can not; and even if we could mount up on high, "Who by searching could find out God unto perfection?" How, then, can we know the right on this point?

Shall we therefore despair because of inability to climb those blue arcades? Oh, no! we cannot; for although we cannot take so long a journey, we may know God, and learn of him on this vastly important theme. We are thinking of God now; and, truly, it is all grace with him. He has seen our need, and our helplessness, and has, so to speak, come down to us in Jesus, and in the Book drawn out in living characters is his mind written, so that we may go and drink, and drink, and still drink, till we are filled with the knowledge of his will; till the teaching of the Almighty has given us understanding; till we have quenched our thirst and satisfied our souls from the pure and pellucid water of life, that assuages the thirst unto everlasting life.

O! for this heaven-sent boon let every heart be thankful, let every tongue pronounce its sweetest song; let the believer in rapturous love adore. Unspeakable gift! behold in it God's love to man, to me, to you. Do not slight it. Read it, love it, foster it, and sanctifying, make it keep you to the day of Jesus Christ. Believer, bind the gospel to your heart.

The Book is a collection of old manuscripts." "Old manuscripts!" I hear one say? "Of what use are old manuscripts? Was not the world then in darkness, and can the darkness enlighten the day? Would it not be far better to come to advanced religion and scientific experiments?" Stop, man, you speak not wisely. God is the All-wise. I shall not stay to combat this; for I expect the reader will take this as fact; if not, this article is not for him. Let such go and consider the heavens, the work of God's hands, and then come back and say if they were the work of a fool, or if advanced science and knowledge possess wisdom enough to equal (leave out excel) that piece of workmanship; let them know that it is an old piece of work, and let advanced science accomplish such a work, and think if the new is greater and more beautiful, and we will allow it to be wise. I say God is the All-wise; and to think of the All-wise getting wiser is the immensity of folly. God was all-wise in the past eternity, discerning and knowing all things that would take place in the future; and, in addition, he was the Creator of man; and who so likely to know what a thing is composed of, as the maker of it? Well, then, the next thought is, Is the Bible the speech of God to man? If such be the case, then it is not credulity, it is true wisdom, to listen to it. I submit that it is the speech of one, from its agreement and unity; and, because it contains such deep, supernatural eloquence, its origin is above man, even God.

Infidels will not accord this unity, however, so readily to the Book; they will draw self-contradictions in abundance, as they style them; but, alas! they know not, they have not eyes to see apparent clashes as but one scene in expanse. They will own "men are not always what they seem to be"; but the Book has no indulgence, and indeed it craves none. One thing more occurs to my mind proving the Bible the speech of God, and that is the prophecies. Hundreds of years before things happened they were spoken of by the prophets as taught of God; and God calls attention to this fact as a proof of his superiority over the lifeless gods of heathendom. Let me ask, then, Could any one who was not all-wise tell things that would happen hundreds and thousands of years in the future in minute detail, that should find their counterparts in the fulfillment of the predictions? Fools there are, we are aware, who say in their hearts, There is no God, and who think of the wonderful things spoken of in the Book as fiction—a pleasant string of fables. We have not time to dive into the refutation of this here; but we advise such to read "Leslie's short and easy Method with the Deists," published by the Religious Tract Society, and, perhaps, if not too hardened in the fatal sin of unbelief, they will view the signs that have confirmed Christianity and attested its origin as more than fiction, even fiction captivating, and pleasantly drawn.

Well, then, we must learn from the old manuscripts what man is. And here we have the very secret of the infidel's rebellion. He is by nature, as we all are, proud; and it takes the boast out of a man to know that he has to learn all, or know nothing. He does not like to bow—so wise is he (?)—to the wisdom of another; it is beneath him to be a scholar, a know-nothing before God. We, however, who know God, on the contrary are thankful for humble minds; are willing to abnegate self, and glad to have a teacher so illustrious and merciful. "The Lord liveth, and blessed be our Rock." He is our teacher, and may we listen to and learn of him forever.

Now once again for the old manuscripts; for there is no wisdom that can replace what is there. Though they be old, there are truths written there that will blaze throughout eternity. And being the words of the All-wise, they are the nucleus of all true knowledge. The truths in these old manuscripts are ever new and bright. Here there is what we want. It is not probabilities, speculations, perhapses, likelihoods; but it is truth, dogmatic, settled, reliable, carrying conviction to the mind, and settling the perturbed understanding. Consider that mountain whose base is so firmly socketed in the earth that it would appear as though it never could be moved: truth is much firmer than that. This word of God shall see it melted as fused metal; yea, shall melt it; and then stand, and the long age shall never see it lacking force or failing of fulfillment.

This is our teacher. And with such a Father as God, such a Master as Christ, such a lesson-book as his word, such pupil-teachers as the prophets and those who testified of Christ, we can be perfectly satisfied; and rely the whole weight of our faith, yea, our whole selves upon this word, as the veracity of all veracities, the essence of all truth, the foundation of all wisdom, the home of all sunbeams. Yes, we believe it "a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation" in all its announcements, and receive it heartily as such.

Giving, then, such unlimited credence to the Book, esteeming it as such a body of fact, all we have to do in searching out the truth on this subject is to listen to its speech, receive its declarations as they develop themselves to our understandings, and stand fast in the knowledge which the wisdom of God shall impart unto us.

A certain preparedness of soul is also needed in examining them. We must not go to them biassed towards any particular doctrine; for if we thus search we have antedated the instruction of the Book, and go there to really no purpose,—for the substantiation of some fleshly thoughts which have arisen in our hearts. Such, however, is not the case with a secular scholar, nor with one who earnestly desires to possess the thoughts and come to the conclusions of God on this point.

A child, in going to a seminary for instruction, first goes as one who knows nothing, to be initiated into the world of knowledge; and what would be thought of one who should go to a master mentioning his thoughts, and refusing the instructions of his teacher unless they agreed with his own incapable judgment? It would be reprehensible in a high degree. So for a sinner, who by birth is dark and ignorant, and by education biassed towards erroneous thoughts and unholy deeds, to go to God to get anything of himself substantiated is a great mistake, and one of the errors against which true believers in the great Savior and Master, Jesus, should guard.

In order, then, that I may know the truth, I must begin as one who has to be taught everything. I must go through the elementary course. I must learn the character of revelation, then syllabilize, and finally go into the higher branches of reading and knowledge. I must not bring my fleshly mind to interpret God's mind; for it is so much lower, so much inferior to the comprehensive mind of the all-wise Jehovah. O what folly, if I do. My mind comprehending, interpreting Jehovah's! look at the grand absurdity of the thing. My mind is but as a thimble; it can hold some things; but God's mind is the ocean of infinite extent, holding everything; and to think of the ocean being dipped up in a thimble, is too preposterously foolish for a man of Bedlam to assert. What position, then, must I take in this inquiry? It is mine, if I seek the glory of God and my own good, to sit on the pupil's bench, to hear the Master's words, to imbibe what he shall teach me; and rejoice that I am permitted by boundless grace to hear the word of Him who is so lofty and so much above the sinful worm he blesses.

And as I listen to that word, I shall gradually lose my fleshly mind, and the mind of Christ will be formed in me. I shall expand, and grow wise, and discern, and be of quick perception in the things of God, the more I am in subjection to him, and entirely devoted to learning and doing his will. I shall know God more extensively. I shall be able to see what is of the same nature; and so can we alone "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Lord, give us so to grow. Bring us to this right mind; that we may sit at thy feet and learn of thee. Cast down every proud thought; smite every rising Dagon in us now, as we are in thy presence. Amen.

— Faith is the blessed tree which produces the noble and the divine fruits of wisdom, virtue and true felicity. But it is of so fine and delicate a nature, that it will not grow and thrive in the cold and barren soil of man's heart, without his incessant care and industry.

— Soul freedom, or the right to worship God as we please, is an inherent disposition in every heart; but we are not always willing to concede this right to others.

— None are so much hardened as those who hear the word and are not converted under it; they are beaten into adamant by Satan himself on the anvil of hell.

SPIRITUALITY.

For a number of years, we as a people have had very much to say about other denominations being dead or lacking spirituality. Many have been very loud in their denunciations of others, and now others see them in a similar condition. "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." This is not confined to sect or party. Look which way you will, and you see a great lack of spirituality, and a conformity to the world. While we have been finding fault with other sects, we are trying to imitate them in many things. Now I think we have all we can do to keep the weeds out of our own garden. While we have been trying to weed other gardens, the weeds have been growing thriftily in our own.

Of all people that ever lived on earth, we ought to be "alive to God and dead to the world." We profess to have more light than other people, and to expect soon to stand before our coming King. Do we live as though we believed it? Many are mere stumbling-blocks, and others are stumbling over them into perdition. There is envy, and strife, and bickering, and jealousy, where there ought to be nothing but love. The time has come when we ought to "proclaim a FAST," and we ought to humble ourselves in the dust before the Lord. We must do it, or the Lord will spue us out of his mouth and raise up others to give the solemn warning.

The Lord is coming! There is no mistake about it, and only the "pure in heart" will be ready to welcome him. The world is slumbering on the verge of the judgment. Mighty Lord, help us to realize it. Can we have the love of God in our hearts, and not feel for the perishing and the lost? Awake! ye slumbering ones. Get your eyes again on the "mark" and press towards it. Rally around the "ensign," and do not again be turned off the right track. We must be good. We must manifest the love of Jesus if we are his disciples. All the theory in the world will do us no good without it. We must keep ourselves "unspotted from the world." We must "keep ourselves in the love of God and in the patient waiting for Christ," if we would be saved when he comes. Will we do it? Let us arise in the name of the Lord, and labor, and pray for a real old-fashioned reformation.

BE BUSY.

"Study to be quiet, and to do your own business."—1 THESS. 4: 11.

This little text of Scripture is one that is very much overlooked at the present time; if it was not, we should see very much better times than we do. It is a very true saying, "If a man has no business of his own, the devil will find something for him to do." I think the world never was fuller than it is now of mischief-makers, tattlers, brawlers, backbiters, liars, swearers, tale-bearers, and, besides all these, busybodies in other men's matters.

I heard of a man once who got two thousand dollars very easily. His friend wished to know how he got his money? He said he got one thousand by minding his own business, the other thousand by letting others alone. I think we should all do well to go and do likewise. It should be the constant study of every one to know what the Lord would have him do, and to do it. If this was so, nations would be at peace with each other, and it would be so in all society.

All these things spoken of above are among the works of the flesh, and God declares that they that "do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." No one among us should be found doing any of these things. If we cannot find something good to say or do, let us "be quiet," and do our own business, and work with our hands, as we are commanded. We are too near the end to be found in others' business. I thank the good Lord we have got almost through to the kingdom. "But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you; for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another." Love is needed much in these last days of trial. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

THE SABBATH.

"Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law?" saith Jesus.—John 7: 19. So thought I, when listening to a discourse on the Sabbath. The position taken was this: "God made the day holy, and commanded us to keep it holy." But how keep it holy, unless we keep it according to the commandment? Who ventures to improve upon the manner of keeping it holy, and thereby setting aside the commandments of God? The same God that said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," tells us just how to keep it holy. "Thou shalt not do any work" therein; not even thy servants, or cattle. "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath day."—Ex. 35: 3. See that maid servant or wife kindling up the fire and serving without rest; that tent-master serving all the day, when the command forbids any servile or service work! The horse, too. Is it not still true that while you cleave to Moses' law, "none of you keepeth the law"?

BREAKERS.

The watchmen on the old ship of Zion tell us there are signs of land right ahead. We believe we are nearing the port. But as we approach the coast the dangers increase.

The breakers toll with death around us. Bars of quicksands increase in numbers. False channels are pointed out. False lights are hung out on every hand, and strong currents are running in every direction. Christian mariner! we are in the perils of the last days. If we strike on those breakers we shall be dashed to pieces. If we run upon those bars of quicksand, they will gather around us and we shall be stranded. If we get into the wrong channel, we shall be hurried on to swift destruction. If we shape our course by false lights, we are sure to run ashore. But these currents are more dangerous than all the rest, they are so deceiving; while we think we are making good headway, they are bearing us on to sunken reefs of death.

Now what is necessary to be done, in order to reach the port in safety? Obey orders. What are the orders? Get the old chart out. Open it right before you. Take the helm yourself, and commence sounding with prayer. Never strike your colors. Be sure that your course is shaped by the chart. Press on all the sail you can carry. Listen not to those who have changed from the right course and are sailing in smoother water; "from such turn away." Do not forget to keep a good lookout, and when the fierce storm of God's indignation shall burst on a sleeping world, we shall anchor triumphantly in the haven of eternal rest.

A PRAYER FOR AN ERRING FATHER.

Heavenly Father, grant thy grace
To one who fain would seek thy face;
Oh! teach his heart to understand
That thou wilt guide him by thy hand,

Through all temptations, trials, strife,
Which fill this first and mortal life;
From all the evils that exclude
The hope of future life with God.

May he fully trust in thee;
And by thy guidance ever see
The hand of God, our King above,
Extended, chast'ning, but with love.

Thou who knowest all can save
This loved one from a hopeless grave;
Oh! may he lean upon his Lord,
And wholly trust his precious word.

Guide him, oh, our Father, guide,
To that home beyond the tide;
Where the purer life begins,
With thee its everlasting King.

I know that thou wilt hear this prayer,
Offered for one who need'st thy care;
Oh! warn my father 'gainst the path,
That leads to thy impending wrath.

SPIRITUALISM.

BRO. GRANT:—The Spiritualists seemed to be overjoyed at the failure to cast out the demon, but they should understand that all such rejoicing is vain. It was not claimed that christians possess all the power that Christ and the apostles possessed to cast out demons, to heal the sick, and perform many other miracles of apostolic age; while the Spiritualists do. They claim emphatically all the power of Christ and his chosen ambassadors. And do they ever fail in their efforts to heal the sick and perform miracles? Yes, they do, for I have witnessed their failures in not less than twenty-five cases; one of which I will mention.

A Mr. Bancil, a medium, and teacher of Modern Spiritualism, residing in Hillsdale Co., Mich., stated to a full house, in my presence, that he was a healing medium, and if there were any in the congregation, sick or out of health, who would come out of the congregation to the stand, he would lay his hands on them and heal them. Silence reigned for a moment, when I arose and said, "Mr. Palmer, come out here and be healed." Mr. Palmer immediately arose, leaving his crutch behind, and came out limping into the front of the audience. One of Mr. P.'s limbs was contracted, so that it was four inches shorter than the other, made so by rheumatism. Mr. Bancil approached him, put his hand upon his right hip, and commenced a gyratory movement of his head and shoulders, groaning and puffing. Thus he continued for some fifteen or twenty minutes, when he, and all others, seeing his failure, he proceeded to say, "The laws of nature have been so long transgressed, you can not be wholly healed; but," said he, "you can be benefited however." Then came in his remedial advice. "Now," said he, "you take some red peppers and vinegar, put them together in a basin, steep thoroughly; then take a rag and bathe your side with it quite frequently, as hot as you can bear it, and you will receive benefit from it." All this after claiming he and the Spiritualists had all the power of Christ and the apostles. It was a total failure. I really wonder if Jesus Christ or the apostles ever laid hands on individuals to heal them, and turned them off with red peppers, vinegar, and a rag. If the above is disputed, I will refer you to the citizens of Sommersett, Hillsdale Co., Mich.

I witnessed in the city of Toledo, in the Oliver House, the so-called wonderful cures of the great Dr. Newton. I saw Mr. N. lay his hands on about thirty persons, and pronounce them cured. A greater deception, swindle and humbug I never saw performed in open daylight.

ECCLESIASTICAL ABOMINATIONS.—One who had been a preacher for thirty-six years in the M. E. Church recently left it and joined the Free Methodists. In doing so he gave this among other reasons for withdrawal: "Because of the unchristian methods of raising money for gospel purposes,"—and instanced "a sort of religious theatre, sociable and opera combined," gotten up where he lives for the purpose of furnishing a new church,—one item in the programme of which was "'The old woman that lived in a shoe, together with the shoe and the large family that lived there.' This consisted of an india-rubber shoe, sufficiently capacious to hold a girl twelve or fourteen years old in a sitting posture, representing the old woman, with scores of small dolls in the shoe pinned to her clothes, and all around her to represent her large family." Who can for a moment suppose that the apostles and early christians would condescend to be connected with such a scene in the name of Christ! But the times have changed, and multitudes "having the form of godliness, but denying the power therof" are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," as it was foreseen they would be in the last days."—2 Tim. 3: 1–5.—Ex.

A PLEA FOR SIMPLE MELODIES.—Henry Ward Beecher is right upon the music question. He says: "It is no wonder that singing has died out from the congregation, when a choir is put up to recite words that nobody can understand, to music that nobody knows, and the people are left to listen to newly converted opera airs, which were brought over by a fresh troupe of foreign singers! And those sweet melodies, that stilted propriety has long ago driven from the churches, but which have gone forth among the people, and rung out gloriously in camp meetings, shaking the forest leaves with the ascending shouts of a mighty people; or which, more gently, have filled rural school houses and humble lecture rooms and village churches, not yet corrupted by the false pretences of 'classical music'—those sweet melodies that no one can hear with his ear, and not feel his heart beating within his bosom all the faster for the sound—are become the ridicule and contempt of men who think that God must be praised to the sound of Meyerbeer or Rossini, and not to the sweet and humble melodies of our own land."

ONCE when Father Taylor, in preaching to his audience of seamen, found himself entangled suddenly in a thicket of accumulated clauses, he extricated himself by exclaiming, "I have lost track of the nominative verb, but, my brethren, one thing I know—I am bound for the kingdom of heaven!" That was oratory superior to rhetoric! It was getting the wine of eloquence by crushing the grapes of style.

—Things should not be done by halves. If it be right, do it boldly; if it be wrong, leave it undone.

Hygiene.

MY EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—About four or five months ago, I had a severe attack of dyspepsia, under which disease I have long suffered. It occurred to me that it might be caused by the use of tobacco; and I resolved to abandon it forever. But just as I had formed this noble resolution, the devil whispers in my ears, You can't remove the desire by good resolutions; you will always want it. This, for the time, came very near destroying all hope. I paused a moment. My better reason returned, and with it these thoughts: You cannot, it is true, do this without the help of God; but with his help you can do anything. If you had faith as a grain of mustard seed, you could remove mountains. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." "Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." And "whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, . . . and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."

With these passages, and many others before me, I soon saw that if I had a bad propensity that my strength was not sufficient to remove, God could and would remove it from me, if I could ask in faith. I fell upon my knees by the road-side, and there asked God not to give me strength, but to remove the desire far from me, so that I might never want the cursed weed again. Although he did not do it immediately, yet I found courage to ask again and again; and every time I wanted tobacco, I would ask again, till I am happy to say God has heard and answered my humble prayer. I have no desire for tobacco at all. I feel no symptoms of the old complaint. I am in better health than I have been for twelve years. My memory is better than it ever was before. Glory to God in the highest. Yours in hope of the kingdom,

MY OWN EXPERIENCE.

Ever since I was quite young, I have been accustomed to drinking tea, and, for some years past, let me "go to town," and return an hour or two past my usual meal time, a severe headache was sure to follow nine times out of ten; and the tenth time, if perchance I escaped until I got my tea, that would shortly bring it on. About four months ago, I resolved to abandon the habit, and submit to the result that should follow, substituting as a warm drink "hot water and milk." This drink is called "contentment." The apostle says, "godliness with contentment is great gain," and so I have found it; for it is an absolute fact, worthy to be related, that since the above resolution was made, and the habit of drinking tea abandoned, although I have had occasion to be from home from early in the morning till night without eating, I have had no signs of headache whatever.

Fraternally yours, J. W. TAYLOR.

CARE OF CHILDREN.

It is a sad fact that about half of mankind die in childhood, especially in the civilized portion of the world. There are different causes for this, but the chief one is the abuse of the stomach. In "Good Health" for July we find the following, which is worthy the attention of all mothers:—

In the weekly bills of mortality, in the four great Atlantic cities, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, more than one-third of the deaths are of infants, or of children under five years of age. This should be a startling truth, and it ought to arouse the whole community, and summon them to action respecting such a fearful loss of life.

Why is it? If "more than one-half of all the deaths are from sheer ignorance, and might be averted," what proportion of this one-third is traceable to the ignorance and neglect of parents and guardians? Will not the blood of these "poor innocents" be found in their skirts? What, then, are some of the ways and means in and by which this fearful mortality is accomplished?

1. First, then, by violating God's natural laws, by intermarriages among blood relation.

2. Many infants die from the poisoning effect of the mother's milk. In all ordinary cases, the mother is the most proper nurse for the child, and she is an unnatural mother, and unworthy of the name, who refuses to perform this duty.

But there are cases where the mother is totally unqualified for such a trust; such are some of these where she is of a scrofulous or consumptive habit; or where she has some other disease or physical incapacity. A lady whose first two children died of convulsions before they were three months old, was advised not to nurse the third child. But the advice was unheeded. That, also, died like the others. She was blessed with the fourth child; and so much was said, both by the father and the physician, that she never nursed it. This child is still alive and healthy; and she has since borne two others, neither of which has she nursed, and both are now healthy children. The writer is confident it is not too much to say that many children, who would otherwise have lived and been healthy, have been poisoned by the mother's milk. A woman may also be disqualified for nursing her child by epilepsy, or by a tendency to insanity, or from malformation of the organs of nutrition for the child. These have been known to be totally unfitted for the use designed by Providence, by artificial pressure or tight lacing. Some are too nervous or excitable ever to be the nurses of their own children. An infant has been known to be thrown into convulsions by nursing immediately after the mother had indulged in a fit of anger, or violent passion.

3. A third cause of the death of some infants is over-feeding them. They nurse too often and too much. Two children had died in one family before the age of two years. The third child was taken sick. An irregular medical practitioner was the family physician. When a regular physician was called to see this third child, the wife of the man who had been the physician was holding the sick child in her arms; and, upon the entering of the physician, she said, "They have lost all their former children, and we wish, if you can do anything for this one, that you would, for we are afraid it will die, and we don't want it to die on our hands." The child was examined, and it was found that what disease it had, had first been induced by over-feeding, and then augmented by over and unsuitable drugging. But little medicine was given, and the mother was told 'not to nurse the child oftener than once in four hours.' The advice was followed, the child recovered, and is still living, and healthy; and still another has been added to the family and brought up in the same way, and is strong and healthy, having scarcely ever been sick. No child should ever be nursed oftener than once in four hours. Let this rule be adopted and perseveringly adhered to, and the sickness of infants will be diminished at least one-half. Regularity in the time of the child's taking its nutriment, should be established from the first. . . .

The recently-born infant should be scrupulously guarded against the officious interference of all who would compel it to swallow sweetened rum, whiskey, gin, molasses and water, or castor-oil, paregoric, and the whole paraphernalia of such like materials, which are all, in whole, and in every part, not only unnecessary, but positively injurious.

FRUIT FOR FOOD.

One of the common diseases of children is worms in the bowels. If a child's digestion becomes impaired, and the gastric juices become weakened or defective in quantity by over-eating or bad food, the whole alimentary canal becomes clogged up and filthy, and furnishes a nest for such worms as will breed there. In this weakened condition of the system they cannot be destroyed by the process of digestion, and hence great harm comes from them. Now, it is an interesting fact that fresh, ripe fruit, is the best preventive for this state of things. Dr. Benj. Rush pointed this out a hundred years ago. He made a series of experiments on earth worms, which he regarded as more nearly allied to those that infest the bowels of children than any other, with a view of testing their power of retaining life under the influence of various substances that might be used as worm medicines. The results proved that worms often lived longer in those substances known as poisonous than in some of the most harmless articles of food. For instance, in watery solutions of opium they lived eleven minutes; in infusion of pin root, thirty-three minutes; in claret wine, ten minutes; but in the juice of red cherries they died in six minutes; black cherries, in five minutes, red currants, in three minutes; gooseberries, in four minutes; whortleberries, in seven minutes, and raspberries in five.

From these experiments Dr Rush argued that fresh ripe fruits, of which children are very fond, are the most speedy and effectual poisons for worms. In practice this theory has proved to be correct.

If we eat and drink hot and exciting materials the blood becomes inflamed, the nerves exasperated, and the brain sends out thoughts that are base and mean. If we would do away with those foods that only influence the passions, and substitute more fruit in their place, we would need less restraint on wrong doers, for our heads would be clearer, our blood cooler, our nerves steadier, our impulses more subject to reason, and life would be a hundred per cent. truer and better than it is to-day.

We have only to read the travels of almost any of our great explorers that fruits are often the only medicine that will effectually restore health. Dr. John Ross, in his expedition to the northwest many years ago, gives an account of how he cured his men of a loathsome disease by simply feeding them on wild raspberries, found growing abundantly in all our northwestern States and Territories.

We should be careful, however, not to jump at conclusions. A very bad case of dyspepsia has been known to be cured by eating two slices of raw onion every day before dinner. But because it cured one person is no proof that it will cure another. Peaches have been known to bring on erysipelas. Consequently each person must determine what is best for himself individually.

DIRECTION FOR BATHERS.

An English physician, Dr. Fitzgerald of Folkestone, publishes in the London papers the following directions for bathers, which are as applicable here as in England:

1. Do not bathe immediately after a full meal; the best time for bathing is midway between breakfast and luncheon.

2. Do not bathe fasting; if a bath be taken early in the morning, a piece of bread and butter or a biscuit should be eaten from half an hour to an hour beforehand, with a cup of milk.

3. The most common error is the fear of entering the water while the body is hot; it is far better to plunge boldly in while warm than to wait to cool, as at no time is a person so ill-calculated to bear the shock of cold water as when cooled by the evaporation of the perspiration. Do not, however, take violent exercise before bathing so as to induce perspiration, but enter the water with the body in a moderate glow.

4 Do not remain long in the water; from two to five minutes is sufficient for an invalid. When the water is very cold one or two rapid plunges only should be taken and then the body should be briskly rubbed with a dry towel. A cold bath is never beneficial unless the whole surface is in a glow on leaving the water.

5. Do not bathe except under medical advice.

6. Do not bathe more than once a day.

7. Do not walk into the water, but plunge in headforemost; if this be not feasible, thoroughly wet the head and face first.

8. On leaving the water wrap a dry towel round the head; this serves not only to dry the hair, but prevents headache.

9. Cramp is not nearly so common a cause of fatal accidents as apoplexy, epilepsy, &c., which are frequently induced by neglect of the above rules. Should cramp come on, endeavor to kick the limb out vigorously, regardless of the pain; should it persist, paddle quickly with one hand, or float on the back, rubbing the affected leg with the other hand. Do not lose presence of mind; remember, no human body will sink while air remains in the lungs; frantic struggles exhaust the strength and allow water to enter the mouth and lungs. Throw the head well back till the chin points upward, and remain quiescent; the legs then come to the surface, and the body will float for an infinite time.

SUNSHINE, heat, air, water, food and exercise are the chief necessaries of life.

WAITING.

"All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come."

I will wait, I will wait,
As snow-wrapped earth awaits the spring,
I will wait, O Lord, thy wakening,
Nor deem thy coming late.

I will wait, I will wait,
As wreathed with misty veils, the day
Waits for the night to pass away,
At glory's morning gate.

I will wait, I will wait;
The lily-bulb waits in darkness hid,
The butterfly waits in its chrysalid,
Ere soaring forth elate.

Wait my appointed time;
Thou dost number our rolling years,
Thou dost measure our dust and tears
Upon thy throne sublime.

Wait till my change shall come,
Thou wilt change these bodies vile,
Wearing the light of our Father's smile,
As he guides his children home.

Ah! what a change from gloom,
From lifeless dust to forms divine,
The glorious likeness, Lord, of thine,
In fadeless youth and bloom.

To change the damp, dark grave,
For a throne in heaven's sunshine bright,
To range in joy the fields of light,
Beside life's crystal wave.

Come early then, or late,
Heap snow or flowers o'er my pulseless breast,
Until thy time my dust shall quiet rest;
For thee, O Lord, I wait.

THE NEW NAME.

A sermon delivered at the "Beers St. Christian Chapel," New Haven, Conn., by Eld. Geo. L. Teeple. Text, Isaiah 62: 2,—"Thou shalt be called by a new name."

What is in a name? Much every way. In ancient times names were given indicative of the nature, character, or future of the man. Thus God called the first man Adam—a man of earth. So that when his name was afterwards used, his nature was associated with it—mortal; of the earth, earthy.

Abram also had his name changed to Abraham, because he was to be the father of a multitude. The name signifies this, so that his future greatness was in the mind of those mentioning his name.

Jacob, a supplanter. His character was such. Jacob was changed to Israel, which signifies "a prince of God." The ten tribes were called Israel from this ancestor, being a majority of his descendants. Those who continued with the house of David were called Jews, or Judah. Neither of these names indicated any relationship to purity or godliness, but simply fleshly origin, relationship, and nationality. These names are, therefore, not applicable to those who were to be the people of God, and who were to know no man after the flesh.

This Jewish nationality was to be broken up and give place to something better. The old covenant was to pass away, and a new one made, and they which were not a people were to be called a people of God. They (the Jews) were to leave their name for a curse to God's chosen. He was to call his servants by another name. Isa. 65: 15. Thus when the time arrives for the old covenant to pass away, and the partition wall to be broken down which divides Jew and Gentile, there shall be a new covenant, a gathering in of another people; so that there is no longer Jew or Gentile separated, but both alike compose the family of God, and he gives them a new name.

Where shall we look for this new name? It cannot be of human invention, or expressive of national pride or national glory; neither will this name indicate our allegiance to human leaders or sectarian bodies.

The church of Christ was to be one, although composed of many members. To those who exhibited a sectarian spirit by saying, "I am of Paul," or, "I am of Apollos," Paul said, "Is Christ divided? . . . Was Paul crucified for you? or were you baptized in the name of Paul?" "Ye are carnal, and walk as men." So we are led to turn away from men, and look elsewhere for the name given to the whole family.

The people of God have received titles expressive as saints, brethren, and disciples; but these are not names, and if they were, we should fail to find anything in any of these that would warrant us in receiving it as "the new name" which the mouth of the Lord should name. On what occasion would we be the more likely to look for the announcement of this name? Would it not be when God should bring into one body both Jew and Gentile, and when many are added to the Lord? Yea, verily. Turn to Acts 10, and you will find that here for the first time Gentiles through the preaching of the gospel embraced Christ as their Savior. Peter justified himself to his brethren for preaching the gospel to the Gentiles, by rehearsing God's dealings with him, to teach him that in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted, and there is no respect of persons with him. Then they gathered together in Antioch, in Syria, and Jews and Greeks alike heard the word of the Lord.

And here it would seem, from the reading, the first Christian church was organized; and here we learn the disciples were called (or named) Christians. The Jewish forms and ceremonies were passed, their name left for a curse, and the expressive name of Christian given; so that henceforth they were to bear the name of Christ, suffer as a Christian, and not be ashamed.

But, says the objector, "This name is of human origin, and was given as a term of reproach." The Greek word krematizo, here rendered "called," is used "to impart a divine warning or admonition, give instruction or direction under guidance of inspiration."—Greenfield. Is this a correct definition of the word? Let us examine its use.

Matt. 2: 12, "Warned of God"; so also the twenty-second verse. This certainly is a divine admonition. In Luke 2: 26, it is rendered "revealed." It was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost. In Acts 10: 22, it reads, "warned of God." Heb. 2: 25, "That spake from heaven." Heb. 8: 5. "admonished of God." Heb. 11: 12, "warned of God." In Rom. 11: 4, we find krematismos, the corresponding noun rendered "answer of God." Here we have plain, positive testimony that the word translated "called," in Acts 11: 26, signifies "to give direction under the guidance of inspiration." Who shall dare say that Paul and Barnabas were not instructed of God to call the disciples Christians, and therefore it was a divinely appointed name?

Doddridge, in his Family Expositor, thus renders the passage: "The disciples by divine appointment were first named Christians at Antioch." An ancient MSS. of the Greek Testament says of Paul and Barnabas, "They instructed a great number, and there they first called the disciples at Antioch Christians."

This name is significant. While all other names are expressive only of a part; this, the whole. Christian is from christianos; this from Christos, Christ; "one anointed"; from chrio, "to anoint, consecrate, appoint for a specific and important purpose." Thus was Christ anointed, and his great work was associated with the name. He is represented as the great "Nobleman" leaving his business in the care of his servants. We are those servants, and how shall we be efficient laborers unless we are anointed for the work? 1 John 2: 20 says, "Ye have an unction from the holy One." Again (27th verse), "But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you." Paul in Cor. says, "He which hath anointed you is God." The same holy anointing which rested upon Christ, is given to his servants, and thereby they are made christians, and are prepared to labor with God.

Question: "Why were they not named on the day of Pentecost, when the anointing was first given?" Because it was not to be applicable to individuals only, but to the body of Christ; and therefore it could not be properly given until both Jew and Gentile receive the anointing. Again. It is not declared, a disciple was called a christian; but "the disciples were called Christians." The Gentiles received the same divine anointing, in proof of which they received the gift of tongues. Acts 10. It was a name for the entire body. Thus the name is significant—"one anointed, consecrated to an important work." Who shall presume to enter upon this work unconsecrated?

We said that this name covered the whole ground; all other names present to our minds only one feature. Thus, "Baptist"—one who believes in immersion. He may or may not be a Christian. "Adventist"—one who believes in the advent. And so of all names of human origin. We may be either of them and not be a Christian. Were we to take a name expressive of points in theology, and change our name as our views changed, I think we should have our hands full of a conglomeration of names in each sect or party, when we become Christ's and receive the Holy Spirit, by which we are made the sons of God. It is right that Father should bestow upon us the family name, while the world would "blaspheme that holy name by which ye are called?" We will glory in the name of Christ, and that we are accounted worthy to be a Christian, and also to suffer as such; but not be a "busybody in other men's matters." We may be reproached for the name of Christ; if we are, we can glory; but to glory in that which is of erring man, I cannot.

I am satisfied that many of us have been reproached and looked upon with scorn, on account of the fanaticism of some who claim to belong to our faith, by answering to "Millerite," "Adventist," and other names, which the world have been pleased to give us; and at the same time we, being without gospel order, or discipline, have been obliged to shoulder the fruits and curse of fanaticism, till we have been well nigh weighed down, and our influence narrowed to a small compass. Thousands, no doubt, through prejudice have been kept in ignorance, and this prejudice due to the impression made upon their minds by the heresy and infidelity supposed to be connected with Adventism.

Some few years ago I was called to labor in a place where the Advent truths, as they are called (properly, Bible truths), were not known; and I was resolved that I would use strategem to catch men. I commenced by preaching the gospel, and was determined to express my faith in Bible language. I was asked to what sect I belonged? I answered, To the sect "every where spoken against." "What is your creed?" The Bible. "By what name do you call yourself?" By the name of Christian.

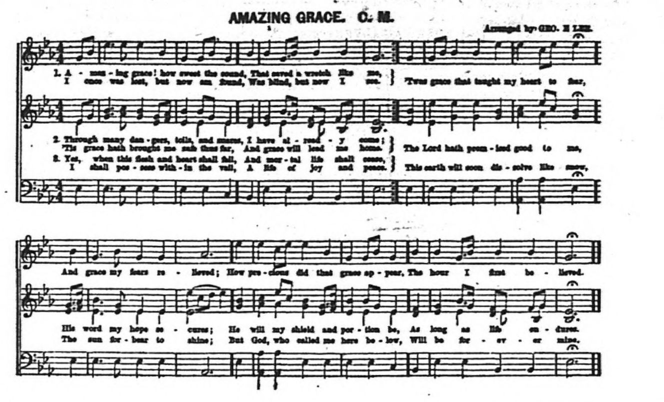
I had the pleasure of seeing the work prosper, and several converted. One man said to me afterwards,

"You caught me with guile."

How so? Have I withheld any truth? Have I shunned to declare to you the whole counsel of God?

"No."

How then?



"Why, if I had known you were an Adventist, as they are called, you never could have preached here."

Did you know any thing about them?

"No, only hearsay; but I thought they were worse than Mormons or infidels, and I should have done what I could to put them down."

If the world sees fit to call us names that Father has not given us, shall we adopt them, or shall we glory in nicknames? I understand that those the world calls "Millerites" met in Albany, N. Y., and took upon themselves the name of "Second Advent." They still retain their identity, believe in the conscious state of the dead, the eternal misery of the wicked, and publish the paper called the "Advent Herald." We are no more of them than we are of the Methodists. Why answer to that name? Let the world call us what they will, but let us adopt the simple name of Christian, and show by our lives that the name we have taken is appropriate.

I think all who love our Lord Jesus Christ could agree upon this name, unless they were bound with a strong sectarian band. There is "one body," not many; one head, even Christ. Then let the body be Christian; I do not mean simply in name, but in nature, in action, in life. "There is already a sect of that name," says one. What if there is? Shall we reject truth and right because some one else holds it? I would that all professed christian churches would lay aside all titles and be one in name. "But we do not believe alike." If we are christians, we are one in Christ, and some little point of doctrine, which may or may not be error, should not divide us. Let the church come back to her old paths, to her primitive simplicity; leave her sectarian names and spirit, and embrace all within her fold who have the spirit of Christ, and be known as Christians; and she will wield a mightier influence in the world, and God will be more glorified.

I believe with all my heart that if the people were thrust out of the churches in 1842–'43 had organized under the simple name of Christian, with no creed but the Bible, and no test of fellowship but character, there would have been thousands of devoted christians looking for the coming of Christ, where there are only hundreds now. Let us awake! It is never too late to do right, if we have an opportunity. Now is the time to act right. Labor for one great end, the salvation of men. I would not hide the light God has given us, neither would I compromise with the world; but I would be wise, and use the best means possible to catch men and gather them into the fold of Christ. Christ is the foundation; build on him. Christ is the good shepherd; follow him. Let Christ be all in all.

My brethren and sisters in Christ, I beseech you receive the anointing; then will your character correspond with your name, and your name indicate your character and work. There may be those here who are saying within themselves, "I wish I was a christian." There is no human power can make you one. The stain of sin can only be washed away by Christ. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as your only Savior, and he will grant you pardon and forgiveness, and the spirit of adoption, and you shall be able to say, "Father!"

God grant us his blessing, and enable us to walk worthy of the name he has given us. Amen.

For the World's Crisis.

BE NOT IGNORANT.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."—1 Thess. 4: 13, 14.

I am as well satisfied from the Scriptures that the greater part of the professed church are in darkness concerning those that are asleep, as I am that they do not preach the truth, when they tell us that as soon as one dies he goes direct to heaven or hell; and yet I never saw the man that would say that his friends had gone to the bad place; but it is always some one else. When will men be consistent, and let God be true, and every man a liar if he speak not according to the Scriptures? It seems to me, with the Bible in our hands, we need not be ignorant concerning them that are asleep. In literal, sound sleep we are unconscious, so that the mind as well as the body can rest and be refreshed, and prepared for the duties of another day; and I understand that the Lord has used the language in 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14, to show that when we die, or fall asleep, we then are unconscious, and are at rest. When the resurrection morning comes, he will awaken us or bring us to life again, to put on immortal bloom, instead of keeping us in suspense at the half-way place, as some think.

What does the apostle say concerning them that are asleep? He says, "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Where does God bring them from? Says one, "From heaven, of course." Well, if this is so, the judgment is passed, and the saints have got their reward; for in heaven there is fulness of joy. Says another, "There is to be a judgment where all are to be present, good and bad, so that all may receive according to their works." But this looks useless, for they that have been to heaven, as well as those that have been to hell, have already found out what is their destiny; why judge them over again? There is such an inconsistency in the thought of going to hell and heaven, and after this to be brought to a judgment, that I have made up my mind that it is better to take the word as it is, and then I can know something of my whereabouts. Then we need not be ignorant "concerning them which are asleep"; "for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

A SUGGESTIVE EXTRACT.

Dr. Dick, who earned the title of "Christian Philosopher," a voluminous writer, who has exerted an influence upon the opinions of Christendom more or less, has the following upon the profound subject of the final retribution of the ungodly, who in consequence of being "filthy" are "filthy still," while being lasts, because it is their choice; for, as H. W. Beecher says, "The elect are whosoever will, and the non-elect whosoever wont"; hence God is clear, and his government, when rightly viewed, approved. He remarks:

"From the preceding illustrations, we may learn something of the nature and essence of future punishment. If the exercise of love, in all its diversified modifications, constitutes the foundation and the essence of happiness, the unrestrained operations of malevolence must be the source and the sum of misery. We can not form a more dreadful picture of future punishment, than by conceiving the principles of falsehood, deceit, and malignity, and the passions of pride, hatred, malice, and revenge, raging with uncontrolled and perpetual violence. We need represent to ourselves nothing more horrible in the place of punishment, than by supposing the Almighty simply to permit wicked men to give full scope to their malevolent dispositions; leaving them 'to eat of the fruit of their own ways, and to be filled with their own devices.' The effects produced by the uncontrolled operation of such principles and passions would be such as may be fitly represented by the emblems of 'the worm that never dies,' of 'devouring fire,' and of their necessary concomitants, 'weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth.' What other ingredients of misery, arising either from local circumstances, from the recollection of the past, or the anticipation of the future, may be mingled with the cup of future woe, it becomes not us particularly to determine. And whether this scene of misery will ever come to a termination, must be determined by the consideration, whether the effects produced by such a punishment will have a tendency to produce repentance and reformation on the minds of the sufferers. If, after a lapse of ages, the principles of hatred to God, and to surrounding intelligences, continue to operate with increasing violence, without producing the least desire of returning to their allegiance to God, or the least symptom of reformation; then, we may conclude that the misery of wicked intelligences will continue so long as they remain in existence."—The Philosophy of Religion, p. 390–91.

Very well said, Doctor, "if" and "if"; better than to teach that an immaterial God is endlessly present in hell, as Benson taught, like some cruel Romish inquisitor general, taking delight in torturing the godless and vile. But has sin the power to preserve? Nay. "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption"—putrefaction. Why guard the way of approach to "the tree of life," "lest he put forth his hand, and take, . . . and eat, and live forever"; in other words, become an immortal, undying sinner, to be hopelessly miserable. "O Lord, how excellent is thy loving kindness in all the earth." Shall we not love and obey such a God? Every motive says, Try. God's goodness leads to repentance.

PERSONAL CONVICTIONS.

Touching the second coming and the kingdom of Jesus, and the various related topics, a hesitating or indifferent opinion is, we think, to be commiserated, at least in the case of such as decline offered and divine illumination. Yet how vague and uncertain are many people's ideas hereon. And it is true that upon this class of subjects it is idle and pernicious to trust wholly in others opinions. No matter whether one's counsellors are rich or honorable, or learned, or whether they are dignified with titles, it is awfully hazardous to confide, without inquiry, or consideration, or prayer, in the infallibility of judgment, or superiority of attainment, which they may be considered to possess. To lean upon the dictum or teaching of a doctor of divinity, may be to trust to a broken reed. God alone in his word is our safe counsellor. We may hear what is said for or against an alleged truth, but the Bible, the book of God, is alone a sure witness, a gate and seat of final appeal. Blessed are they who see the truth; who read clearly and joyfully the words of God, and receive them. Blessed are they who prize the word of God in the measure of its preciousness and purity.

Concerning the grand topics embraced in the advent, there is something in them to take powerful hold of honest minds—minds unchained by one conscious or unconscious metre of prejudice. The believer in that advent, as personal and imminent, and in its unspeakable meaning and necessity and blessedness, is no idler or trifler, seized and held by a cord of strong conviction. A belief in the absolute mortality of man, when once rooted and fixed, is likely enough to be held with the whole strength of creature assurance and faith. It is in the nature of the case, and it is right. The honor of God is intimately involved in this strength of individual conviction, and inflexibility in the maintenance of exalted truth. Be firm, then, brethren, be firm, though also gentle and kind. The word of the Lord is your rock of reliance. Stand to the truth; stand to that which, on trial and scrutiny, you have fully recognized as the teaching of the Spirit of all truth.

HEAR THE WORD.

"He that is of God, heareth God's word."

A little child has heard some new things, and she runs up to a loving father, saying, "Father, tell me if so and so is the case?" I can almost certainly say that the man of whom she asks counsel, though I may not hear her words, is her father. She is "of him," and she makes him her counsellor. She hears his words, and is perfectly satisfied; for to her childish mind all that the parent says is indisputable truth. And show me a man that from faith makes the word of God his refuge, and I, in return, will show you a man who is "of God." God is that man's Father.

"He that is of God, heareth God's words." He does not turn a deaf ear to them. Like the little child, often in our foolishness, we play on in the various fancies which please the little mind, and we appear as though we really disregarded the words of a fond parent; but our little work is done, the inattentive dream is dispelled, the spell power is gone, and our Father with open arms, strong knee, and loving words, turns all our subsequent enjoyments into the veriest trifles. We hear his words, and are convinced they are love-words; for his heart beats to us, and we are "of him"; he is our Father. How many of us can look back on the time when we sported under the smiling sun of his forbearance, and built our sand-castles of human fables, battling them down with the elegancies of orthodoxy; but the short insensibility to the word of a loving Father, who called us back to wisdom, perished, and here we are to-day, consciously accepted, hearing God's words and full of joy to him.

"He that is of God heareth God's words." He does not hear superficially. There are many people who profess to hear God's words; but do they? What do their practices say? Some have sat one Lord's day after another in their accustomed seat; but the sayings of Jesus have never sunk down deep in their ears. They have rested on the surface, and the birds have seen them; and oh! the depredations that have been committed, and—can it be?—they have never known it! The child listens to receive; but the poor hearer—art thou the man?—he is only a sieve, and the golden corn has dropped through. Oh! that he were good earth.

"He that is of God, heareth God's words." He does not hear unbelievingly. Why should he disbelieve God, or be at all captious, or have even the slightest suspicion in regard to God's words? He readily receives man's; and man is a liar. Shall he then hesitate, when the Faithful and True speaks, in giving his fullest confidence to infallibility? He has everything calculated to make him a believer; and why should the shadow of a question, or a far-distant doubt arise in his mind? There are no records to show God ever deceived man or lied; and the Bible says it is impossible for him to do so. On the other hand, there are records showing him equal to his word; and the balance, or good weight, is on the right side; so he lovingly and trustingly heareth God's words.

"He that is of God, heareth God's words." He does no hear them lightly. Oh, no; they are God's, and how great. They are divine, and divinely precious. They are of him who disdains paltry things, and therefore they are worth hearing attentively, and scrutinizingly. They are all heavy words—I was going to say ingots of gold; but no, they are better. There is not a little word, or an unimportant word, or a foolish word, that can claim God for its author. Really, it appears as if some men esteem them lighter than vanity, for they cast them away altogether, as beneath their notice. And others only put them on a par with man's, and treat all as equally precious! But there are others—these are "of God"—and they put them always before their eyes and say, "They are God's," and sanctify them from all others. We must not mix light with darkness, wisdom with folly, gold with baser metal. In these words, "How precious also are thy thoughts unto us, O God; how great is the sum of them."

Christian, let us hear the words of the Lord. Neither deafly, nor superficially, nor unbelievingly, nor lightly; but let us, one and all, by hearing God's words, in life give this proof to men that we are of Divine parentage, and leave behind us this testimony, that we were "of God." Let us not only say "we hear," but let us prove the same to the world. The words of God are not spoken to ornament a man, but to save him. Jesus said, "He that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them." That is the kind of hearing—that which leads to the doing; and without so hearing it would have been better if their sound had never reached us. Hear ye on this wise. Hear, and your souls shall live. O earth! earth! earth! hear the word of the Lord.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DEVELOPMENTS OF THIS AGE.

Among the remarkable developments of this age, those having an important bearing upon its progress, may be considered the improvements in the art of printing, and mode of traveling. The necessities of the times demand these improvements. The Franklin, or hand press, and stage coach, in their day served the public, and were all that it required in their line; but for these times they would be but a drop in the bucket. The press has grown from an infant to a well developed giant, capable of providing the multitudes with spiritual and intellectual food. It has an important mission to fulfill. Let us look into an Editor's room. We see nothing remarkable—a table, pen, ink and paper, exchanges, etc.; but wait awhile and see what a splendid banquet he has prepared for the multitude, at which nearly all tastes can be suited. He fetches viands from India and China; his table is perfumed with the sweet spices from Arabia; he procures gems, diamonds and pearls from the sacred oracles; the lightning contributes largely to his store; the metal horse with bones of iron, sinews of steel, wood and coal for its fodder, hot water for its drink, steam for its breath, fire for its vitals, iron for its pathway, and a whole community for its retinue, snorting, and puffing, and screaming, across the plains, through the forests, over the rivers, under the mountains, at the rate of fifty miles an hour, is constantly running to and fro, and fetching items to make up this intellectual repast.

But, alas! there are some caterers to the public taste whose larder we should think was filled with carrion, and this was the most palatable to their taste. They seem to delight in raking up the scum and filth of the lowest depth of society, and then spread it out before the public gaze. The daily papers are doing more to corrupt the morals of the rising generation than is being done by any other means. e have yet to learn that the publishing of the prevailing sins of this age have any elevating influence, but rather tends to demoralize; and yet the managers of these papers think they are doing a wonderful work. We admit that the daily press is a necessity, and if some one with his magic wand could purify its fountain, it would be a grand elevator of the human race.

About the time the press began to quicken its pace, the power of steam began to be developed; and now by its aid we are transported from place to place with the speed of the fleetest horse, with as much ease and comfort as though sitting in the parlor. We have no doubt that the prophet Nahum saw this in vision, when he penciled his prophecy. He says: "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation"; that is, the preparation of the great day of the Lord; and in this connection, "the gates of the rivers shall be opened,"—obstructions to inland commerce overcome. The same power which whirls the palace cars to and fro, also propels the steamer up almost every river upon the earth, and across every sea. The traveling public should be thankful to the men, or companies, who have provided them fast and convenient modes of traveling.

Should we particularize, we could mention the steamers Providence and Bristol, of the Fall River line, from New York to Boston, as excelling all other boats for convenience, strength and safety, of which we have any knowledge. They may justly be called floating palaces. One peculiarity with them is, none of their apartments are cramped for room. Their cabins, saloons, state-rooms, berths, etc., are arranged on a magnificent scale, and finished in the highest style of art. Another important consideration to them is, the officers, and all having any authority, seem to be gentlemen.

When we travel by water, we like to sail in a vessel built by a master builder, its timbers sound, its pilot clear-headed and far seeing, and its officers competent to fulfill their mission; and so, when sailing on life's stormy sea, we want a sure guide; and such an one we have. Its compass never varies, its chart is perfectly reliable, its highway has been surveyed and located by one who was competent to the task, even Jesus Christ, the Captain of our salvation. But, alas! how many travelers there are who choose a road beset with thorns and briers, rather than walk in this highway cast up for the ransomed of the Lord. They had rather sail in a craft whose timbers are rotten, pilot treacherous, crew dissipated, and its captain bent on destroying the lives of every one who comes on board. Choose ye the path that leads to eternal life.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

50. Marriage or Cohabitation with a sister denounced.—"Cursed is he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father." Deut. 27: 22. "And if a man shall take a sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, it is a wicked thing." Lev. 20: 17.

Abraham married his sister, and God blessed the union.—"And Abraham said, . . . She is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother." Gen. 20: 11, 12. "And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarah, thy wife . . . I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her." Gen. 17: 16.

The Bible indeed denounces marriage with a sister, but the truthful declaration of Abraham was made four hundred and seven years before any law was enacted against the marriage of near relatives. Says Dr. Sleigh, "There are two very obvious reasons why at the beginning, near relations were not prohibited intermarrying.

1. No physical evil arises from it till repeated through several generations.

2. In the beginning, as it seemed fit to the Creator that the earth should be populated from one pair, it was indispensably necessary for even brothers and sisters to marry, but as generations began to increase, the necessity became diminished, and the physical evil increased, till it seemed good to the Almighty to give specific directions on the subject. . . . Since that time of course, intermarriage with near relations, has been criminal."

51. A man may marry his brother's widow.—"If brethren dwell together, and one of them die and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without unto a stranger; her husband's brother shall come in unto her and take her to wife." Deut. 25: 5.

A man may not marry his brother's widow.—"If a man shall take his brother's wife, it is an unclean thing. . . they shall be childless." Lev. 20: 21.

Lev. 20: 21 forbids a man taking his brother's wife, while Deut. 25: 5 permits him to marry his brother's widow. The difference is obvious. While a woman's husband lives, she is a wife, but at his death she ceases to be a wife and becomes a widow. Hence Lev. 20: 21 is simply an enactment against adultery.

52. Hatred to kindred enjoined.—"If any man come unto me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brother, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." Luke 14: 26.

Hatred to kindred condemned. "Honor thy father and mother." Eph. 6: 2. "Husbands, love your wives. . . . For no man ever yet hated his own flesh." Eph. 5: 25, 29. "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." 1 John 3: 15.

In Luke 14: 26 the word hate merely signifies to love less. Please notice that a man is commanded to hate his own life in the same sense that he is commanded to hate his relatives. The meaning of the text evidently is, that he who so loves his father and mother or his own flesh as to obey any of their impulses, orders or directions, in opposition to the commands of God, "cannot be my disciple." It is evident that according to Scripture usage, the word hate simply means to love less—thus in Proverbs we find the declaration, "He that spareth the rod hateth his son." If our affections are placed upon God and his Son, every thing else will be of minor importance.

53. Intoxicating beverages recommended.—"Give strong drink to him that is ready to perish, and wine to those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more." Prov. 31: 6, 7. "Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thine own infirmities." 1 Tim. 5: 23. "Wine maketh glad the heart of man. Ps. 104: 15.

Intoxicating beverages discountenanced.—"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby, is not wise." Prov. 20: 1. "Look not upon the wine when it is red; when it giveth his color in the cup, . . . At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Prov 23: 31, 32.

The first three texts simply recommend the use of wine for medicinal purposes, and the last two forbid its use as a beverage. Such foolish objections are a shame to the boasted intellect of manhood.

"The Bible Triumphant," by Mrs. H. V. Reed.

— If those who sneer at practical religion would only seek it themselves, and make a fair trial of it, their lips would be sealed to scoffs, and only open to grateful praise. I never heard of a sincere christian who pronounced christianity an imposture or a failure. Have you?

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 25, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ FIDELIA CLARK—The paper goes to your brother.

☞ S. BODIN—Money received.

☞ M. G. S.—It was sent Aug. 25th.

☞ SR. A. M. TRIPP'S P. O. address is Searsport, Me.

☞ BRO. J. A. CLEAVELAND'S P. O. address is now at Marshfield, Vt.

☞ B. P. MANNING'S P. O. address is Goffstown, N. H.

☞ LEWIS F. COLE'S P. O. address is Yarmouth, Me.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

CAMPMEEPING.—CRISIS.—PAY EARLY.

As most of the subscribers for the Crisis, from a distance, who come to campmeeting, design to pay their subscription there, so as to avoid the risk of sending money by mail, we would make this suggestion: Attend to it by the middle of the week, as there will be so much to occupy your time after that, that you may forget it. Our subscription list may be found at the Book-stand, and all errors in names, addresses, or credits, will cheerfully be rectified. CALL EARLY.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

The time is drawing near when our great annual gathering at Springfield is to begin. It will be a meeting of great importance to us, as a people. Let each christian who attends do what he can to make it the most profitable of all our annual gatherings. Let those who cannot be present, remember the meeting by special prayer, that it may result in the salvation of many sinners, and the reclaiming of many backsliders. Let us all make this the special object of the meeting. If we do, great blessings will fall upon us, from the Most High, and we shall go away refreshed in the Lord, and better prepared for his coming and kingdom. This is the time for earnest work; and without it, we cannot expect to see much accomplished. If only one is saved as the result of the meeting, it will pay for all the trouble and expense attending the whole encampent.

Dear reader, should you be there, will you try to persuade at least one to come to Jesus? How blessed it will be to find even one in the kingdom, who was persuaded to be a christian by your feeble efforts. But few have any idea how much influence they may exert in persuading others to come to Jesus, till they make an effort. Let us all begin anew, and entreat the Lord to help us to win souls to Christ. Probationary time is nearly ended, and soon we must be present in the judgment scene. Will the King say, "Well done?"

HOW TO ENJOY A CAMPMEETING.

It often happens that persons go to campmeeting, expecting to receive great benefit, but go home sadly disappointed. Why is this? It may not be because the meeting was not good, but because they neglected to do what was necessary in order to secure a blessing. Those who attend campmeetings expecting to receive good without taking an active part in the prayer and conference meetings, will generally go away feeling more leanness than when they came. It is a poor place to act the part of a spectator, if one wishes to get spiritual strength.

If one wishes to enjoy a campmeeting, and the same is true of other meetings, he should take the earliest opportunity to express his sympathy with Jesus by taking a part in some prayer and conference meeting.

It is well for each one to select some tent in which to attend the daily prayer-meetings, instead of floating where it happens. Said Dr. Franklin, when speaking of those who often change their place of residence: "A rolling stone gathers no moss;" by which he meant such people are likely to continue poor. This is true spiritually of those who are continually running from tent to tent at a campmeeting. Have a home, and have a holy fire there, and not be dependent on your neighbors.

Another important matter that should have special attention, is secret prayer. It often happens that this is most sadly neglected at campmeetings. Let no day begin or end without it. One should have the courage to bow down in the tent where he spends the night, and have a sweet season of prayerful communion with the Lord before leaving the tent, and so at night before retiring. We do not see how a professed child of the Lord can think of doing less than this. We think they must be in a starving condition when they do not this much.

FAMILY PRAYER. Besides the secret prayer of every christian on the camp-ground, there should be family prayer in every tent. This is often sadly neglected at campmeeting. None but those who attend to this know its value. This year we hope every tent will have an altar. We go to campmeeting for the express purpose of receiving spiritual strength and comfort. Shall we be less particular than at home? There is a special need of cultivating our devotional feelings. If prayer is neglected, we soon grow cold and indifferent, and lose our interest for the salvation of others, and of ourselves. Spiritual consumption takes place; and death soon follows. If such come to campmeeting, let them apply in prayer for the healing balm, and begin anew in the service of the Lord. Think of the worth of "eternal life." None can afford to lose it. Let us secure that first.

PREPARATION FOR CAMPMEETING.

Those who have never been to compmeeting, and purpose to attend this year, may be glad to receive advice in relation to what they will need for their comfort.

Bring one or two bed-quilts, a warm shawl, rubbers, pillow, or a pillow-case which can be filled with straw or leaves; wear plain clothing that is not too good for a seat on the straw; bring towels, soap, comb and brush; and each tent's company will probably need hammer and nails, some twine, looking-glass, matches, lantern, lamps; and if they can bring an axe, spade, augers and a crowbar, they will find them useful, in pitching their tents. Leave family and business cares all at home; bring abundance of long-suffering, kindness, forbearance, brotherly love, and love for Jesus and his coming. When a company of such meet on the camp-ground, they will have a precious feast in the Lord, and sinners beholding them, will wish they were christians.

THE FAST.—We earnestly request all interested in the great gathering at Springfield to remember Friday, August 27th, as a day of fasting and prayer. Dear brethren and sisters, is it not time for all who are looking for the coming of Jesus to be more awake on this subject, and to be more entirely consecrated to the Lord, if we expect to be ready for "the marriage supper of the Lamb"? Let us be in earnest.

APPOINTMENTS.—As our paper will go to press earlier campmeeting week, it will be necessary for all to send their appointments so that we can get them by Saturday, Aug. 28th.

CERTIFICATES FOR DELEGATES.

It is necessary that the delegates from the churches* to the Annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the National Campmeeting, in Springfield, should bring certificates showing that they were duly appointed. The following form will answer:

This is to certify that —— was duly appointed by the church in —— as a delegate to the annual meeting of the A. C. A., to be held on the National Campground, in Springfield, Mass., Aug. 31st, 1869.

[To be signed by the Elders, Clerk, or deacons of the church, or Chairman of the meeting called to appoint the delegates.]

This matter of choosing delegates should be attended to at once, in order that those appointed may have time to make suitable arrangements to be present. Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members over the first twenty-five. Let every church be fully represented.

* A church is understood to be any number of christians who meet together for the worship of the Lord.

CAMPMEETING GOSSIP.—Much injury is often done to the cause of Christ by a few gossiping ones, who sometimes attend campmeetings. In a few days, they will sow enough discord to keep up a church fermentation for a whole year. They are busy gathering up the faults of others, to scatter them as tares among wheat. Such persons are to be dreaded worse than the cholera, or small pox. Thank the Lord, backbiters, evil-speakers, and busybodies, can not enter the kingdom. Let us all keep clear of such things.

DREAMING.

Dreaming is caused by the partial action of the brain while the rest of the physical organism is asleep. When the brain is entirely inactive, as in sound sleep, there is no dreaming. But dreaming is not confined to man. Facts are abundant to prove that the animals dream. But some argue that dreaming affords proof that man has an immortal soul. It affords equal proof, then, that beasts have the same, for they dream. Horses are said to neigh in their sleep; and we have often seen the dog agitated by dreams, while asleep, when he would bark and growl and show by his muscular motions that he was chasing his game in his dreams.

SPIRITUALISM.—Our readers will find in this paper an interesting article on Spiritualism, by Bro. J. C. Emery.

CORRECTION.—We learn from J. F. Lovering, Past Grand Chaplain of the "Grand Army of the Republic" (Dept. N. H.), that a quotation from one of our exchanges misrepresents the purposes of the G. A. R. He states that, while it is a secret military association, it is not an organization for political work, as intimated by our exchange.

FARE REDUCED.

The Rutland, Burlington, and Vt. Valley R. Roads have reduced the fare for those attending the Springfield Campmeeting. This line, as we understand it, extends from Burlington to Brattleboro; hence the friends will purchase a regular ticket to the latter place, then buy a regular ticket on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. from Brattleboro to Greenfield; and the Secretary on the camp-ground will furnish all such with a free return pass over these roads. At Greenfield a Campmeeting Ticket for Springfield must be purchased at the Ticket Office. A'GT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Those who purpose to attend the Alton Bay meeting, taking the cars at Boston, must purchase their tickets of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Fare $2.90, which is half fare. Those going from Lawrence, and all other stations between there and Alton Bay, will call for "campmeeting tickets." Remember, no campmeeting tickets will be sold at the depot in Boston.

Friends on the line of the Boston and Albany R. R., wishing to attend the Alton Bay meeting, can purchase tickets at Springfield, Palmer, West Brookfield, Worcester, Holliston, and South Framingham, for BOSTON and return, at one third discount. These tickets to be countersigned by Geo. T. Adams, at Alton Bay or in Boston.

COME EARLY.

Those who wish to enjoy the campmeetings should go at the beginning, and stay as long as they can. Those who are present at the commencement, and rise up with the increased interest of the meeting, enjoy it much better than those who come late. It is seldom that late comers get much benefit, because, they are inclined to be spectators. Others are in advance of them in their feelings, and this leads them to think they can not add to their interest, so they conclude to keep still and take no part in the exercises; and as sure as they refuse to act, so surely they will receive but little or no benefit. But if you must come late or not at all; we we would say come, and go to work at once after your arrival.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

THE HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP.

For the convenience of those who wish to carry the hymns in their pockets, we have had a lot bound with flexible covers, the margins of the pages being trimmed close to the printed matter, making it very convenient for the pocket,—the most complete hymn book in use among us. Price 75 cts. per copy, postage 12 cts; $7.00 per dozen by express. AG'T.

IS IT RIGHT?

When reading the following from the notes of Bro. Wm. Himes, in the Voice, the question came up with much force, "Is it right?" It is true, as Bro. Himes says, "there are too many 'muzzled oxen' among us." Hear what he says:—

"I stopped a night with Bro. W. Bro. W. is ready to spend all his time in the field, if the friends will call him out and sustain him. It costs something (as I found) to ride in the stage to meet appointments; and ministers should not be left to board and clothe themselves, and pay stage fare into the bargain. There are too many 'muzzled oxen' among us, in spite of Paul's admonition. When our ministers go into new fields, in missionary work, they expect to go the warfare at their own charges; but when a church, or company of brethren send for a minister to come and help them, they ought to see that his expenses are paid, and enough over to provide the food and clothing wherewith he will be content. And if his preaching isn't worth that much, then it isn't worth sending for or having. If the laborer isn't worthy of his hire, then don't ask him to leave other work and preach for nothing. Be generous. It makes one feel much better, and gives a zest to the preaching that can be imparted from no other source. And if you want the good news introduced in a new neighborhood, and are not able to do for the preacher all you think you should, just consult him beforehand, and let him know what he may expect; and if there is a prospect of doing good, he will share to the utmost in the needed sacrifices, and look to the resurrection for a reward. I can speak the more freely on this subject, because I have always been dealt with (one or two exceptions) generously, and have no complaint to make on my own behalf."

THE TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, held at the National Campmeeting, Chapin's Grove, Springfield, Mass., Aug. 28th, 1868, the following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, That we raise TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year.

Resolved, That our preaching brethren be, and hereby are, requested to act as Agents in this good work, to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once in every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, BOSTON, MASS.

CAMPMEETINGS.

BRO. GRANT:—As our great national gathering is soon coming off, and as the children of our coming King and the lovers of Jesus, with all others that please to come, are cordially welcomed to our annual feast, it is to be hoped that due consideration of the needs, wants, and rights of all may be the ruling influence of the meeting. It is an important meeting. The Advent cause is blended with it. It must and will give direction to it the coming year, and onward till our hope is consummated. Business affecting the whole body is to be transacted. Care and caution, with heavenly wisdom, will be needed. The Advent Christian Association will meet for the choice of officers, and much more business of great importance to the cause; for this reason, every church should be represented.

Again, we shall come together with our own notions of what is right and best for the cause, and so there will be a variety of opinions; and it may be difficult to bring them all into harmony; but I hope we shall all be very careful of the rights of others, and not claim what we shall not be ready to concede to them. While acting in the body, be free to carry out your own convictions of right; and if your plans fail, because you are in the minority, submit with due humility, and put your shoulder to the wheel as before. Let our motto be, we are one in spite of all our differences of opinion. Let us forever dismiss all these little petty, selfish, nutshell ways of doing things, and come on the broad, liberal, gospel way of doing things—upon the immovable basis—"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." This should be our working rule in all of our deliberations at the National Campmeeting.

Many things may come up for adjustment. "Let your moderation be known to all men; the Lord is at hand," and work by this rule, and all will come out right. And if we do not get our favorites into office, after we have done freely our best, then let us not be pettish, and slack in our work in the cause of Christ, and his coming kingdom; but let us all take hold together with Christ, and see, under God, how much can be accomplished to scatter our heaven-bought truth throughout the land, and convert all we can while time delays. I hope and expect to see christian liberality and courtesy manifest at this national feast.

Come, brethren, beloved of the Lord, come up to this meeting with the determination that your every act shall be in harmony with the Spirit and word of Jesus Christ. "Let love be without dissimulation;" and if we differ in opinion, let all see that we love one another "with pure hearts fervently." Our doctrine that is so blessed, and that we love so dearly still,—the coming of Jesus Christ, God's well beloved Son, the second time,—I hope will be made prominent; the resurrection of the dead, with the reward, and the life-giving gospel, with demonstration and power, will be expected. So mote it be.

"No life out of Christ" is the truth we all hold in common. It is our hope, "blessed hope." It is our sheet-anchor. Christ is the way, the truth, and the life. Then let us, while together in camp and out of camp, live like children of God, letting our light shine. God bless the dear children looking for Jesus. I hope for a blessed good meeting at Springfield. Pray the Lord to direct.

For the World's Crisis.

FINDINGS AND EXPERIENCE OF A PILGRIM.

The experience and journeyings of a pilgrim are generally read with interest by all who are acquainted with the pilgrim, or the scenes of the country through which he passes. And I find that the experience and travels of ministers of the gospel when written, are frequently a means of stirring up to more religious enterprise those who read them. This is my apology, if one is needed.

On the sixth of August, I left the loved ones of my pilgrim home, on the Grand Prairie of Illinois, to journey eastward by short stages, until I should reach Springfield, Mass., at the time of the "National Advent Campmeeting," August 30th. My first stopping place was Earlville, Ill., where there is a little company of faithful ones looking for Jesus. Here I met Bro. Wm. Himes, of Michigan, who, strange to say for this western country, had an appointment, by accident, at the same time and place that I had. If such a thing had happened in New England, we would not have thought it strange; but for such an event to occur in Illinois, was really a new thing. I hope no one will think from this occurrence that there are so many preachers west that their appointments must frequently clash. If we manage to see each other in this great harvest field once in six months, or a year, we think we do well; and such events as two appointments at the same time and place are nearly as rare as total eclipses, occurring about once in a century; consequently we shall not look for a repetition of such a ministerial eclipse, until the Lord comes. I was the one eclipsed this time; Bro. Himes preaching a splendid sermon on the words of Jesus, "I will come again," to a large and attentive congregation, who assembled partly because it was reported Eld. Grant was to be there. Well, there was another eclipse, which resulted in quite an interest being awakened among the people, and also some opposition. The Baptist minister attempted to oppose the truth after the dismission, but it only made it shine all the brighter, for the eclipse was past, and the truth beamed out from the sermon that was preached too strongly to be obscured. Bro. Himes and I enjoyed our visit to Earlville exceedingly, and we trust better things are in store for the brethren there in the future.

The next day, Aug. 7th, I went on to Alton, Ill., and there found my appointment was just in time to attend the funeral of Sister McDole, who had died very suddenly, thus throwing a circle of friends and the church into mourning. The concourse assembled at her funeral was very great, and the chapel was hardly large enough for the occasion. It was an exceedingly precious and profitable time to me, for the melting power of Jesus was with us during the day.

Passing on, with a short call to say "how do you do," to some friends in Chicago, and to attend their noon prayer-meeting, where Satan's imps made foul work of disturbance, I arrived in Nevada, Ohio, on Tuesday, 10th, and was greeted by one of God's tried and faithful ministers, Bro. H. G. McCullock. This was my first visit to Nevada, and I formed the acquaintance of several good soldiers of Jesus' army, and I found them all on duty, or ready at a moment's warning. The church here is thriving under the pastoral care of Bro. McCullock, and there is a large field for labor in this section. The church in Nevada possess the true missionary spirit, and are ready to go forth to the adjoining towns and proclaim the great truths God has committed to their trust. This is as it should be. True Advent christians cannot continually tread in one track and live. The truth we have is an evangelizing truth, and God demands of us that we go forth as heralds of the coming One, and we must respond to the call, or God will leave us to ourselves. The friends in Nevada treated me with great kindness, and I left them feeling a great work is to be done in Ohio by some one, if Jesus tarries any length of time. F. BURR.

A WORD FROM THE MASS. MISSION TENT.

Thinking that the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, and especially those that came out from Boston and vicinity, and met with us on Zion's Hill, July 5th, at the tent-meeting, would like to hear the result of the meetings under the tent, we will pen a few words in relation to them, and leave the remainder to be told in the day when the hidden things are brought to light; which day we believe is just before us.

We pitched the tent on Zion's Hill, near East Weymouth, June 17th. The place was first called Zion's Hill, because the East Weymouth "Praying Band" held prayer-meetings near, and on the hill; some of their number living on it. The "Praying Band" consists of about forty earnest, humble, devoted, working christians; a few from the Orthodox, but mostly from the Methodist church. Their name was first given them as a slur, by the proud and aristocratic portion of the church, because they were found holding prayer-meetings at dwelling houses, and zealously working in the highways. It pleased the Lord to bless their efforts, and many souls were converted. They thought the name a good one, and adopted it. We found among them three of like precious faith with us; but they were not known by any other name than Christian, which name we think, they truly merited.

We got the tent ready for meeting on the evening of the 17th of June, and the people were coming from every direction, when the bells began to ring, and in a few minutes we saw a large fire bursting forth from the roof of the large nail plate factory, which burnt to the ground, thus throwing out of employment between three and four hundred workmen, including most of the "Praying Band"; many of whom went the next day to other villages and cities seeking employment. Others followed in a few days. Our meeting was postponed for that evening, for it took all that were not in Boston, at the Jubilee concert, to save the churches, dwelling houses, and other buildings which surrounded the factory, from the devouring flames. The meeting commenced the next afternoon, and we moved cautiously on, day after day, endeavoring to heed the admonition of our blessed Savior, to be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." The interest kept deepening, and we kept pouring out the truths of the gospel of the coming kingdom, and it worked like the leaven hid in the meal. Independence day, we had a glorious meeting. Some over one hundred came out from Boston and vicinity; and the songs of praise, prayers, and exhortations, from the brethren and sisters from abroad, strengthened and greatly encouraged the hearts of those that were just embracing the truths of the gospel of the kingdom.

As the meeting continued, the interest increased. We remained on Zion's Hill until Sabbath, July 18th, making five Sabbaths. We should have remained longer, but the tent was engaged to go to the Tremont campmeeting. On the Sabbath evening that we closed, we had a large audience, and they gave good attention to the word. There was deep interest. By a unanimous vote, the people expressed their desire to have the tent come back again to Zion's Hill. Bro. John Tuttle, one of the "Praying Band" (a colored brother), then offered the following resolutions, which were passed by the audience:

1st. "Resolved, That the 'Praying Band,' and friends of East Weymouth and vicinity, tender their sincere thanks to Bro. Morrill and his friends for pitching their Mission Tent among us for the past few weeks.

2nd. Resolved, That the doctrine preached by them, from the stand under the tent, in our opinion is purely scriptural, and in harmony with reason.

3d. Resolved, That as such, we endorse it as our own, and will labor to make it become the world's.

4th. Resolved, That for the first time, to our knowledge, has the whole gospel of the kingdom been preached in this vicinity.

5th. Resolved, That we hail this seed-time among us as ordered of God, and destined to produce a plentiful harvest.

6th. Resolved, That for the accomplishment of so distinguishable and glorious results, we pledge ourselves to labor and pray."

The friends that were out with us to the tent July 5th, will remember Bro. Tuttle, and how interested you were in hearing him speak. He is one of the Lord's precious jewels. Bro. A. P. Moore was sitting by me when he was reading those resolutions, and we both thought it was asking too much of those Orthodox and Methodist brethren to pass them; but as it was a dish of their own cooking, we sat still, waiting to see what they would do with them. Some, whom I had singled out in my mind while he was reading them, that I thought would not vote for them, to my astonishment were found with uplifted hands in favor of them.

We thank the Lord for the good help he sent us; that he put it into the hearts of our good preaching brethren, A. A. Phelps, J. C. Smith, L. Boutell, S. W. Thurber, Geo. A. Brown, C. Goodrich, Geo. A. Cole, and A. P. Moore to come, who will long be remembered by the people of East Weymouth and vicinity; and although some of the above named brethren were not with us but once during the five weeks of the meeting, yet they left their mark behind them, which cannot be rubbed out till the judgment.

The tent is now pitched at Bro. Sherman's, near the depot, in Holliston. We are now at the close of the second week of the meeting. It is working well. Bro. Sherman is doing much for the cause. All he has is on the altar, and he is there with it. We have thus far been helped by the faithful labors of Brn. Grant, Goodrich, and Sr. Stoddard, and we hope for more of their labors before the meeting closes, which probably will not be until the Springfield campmeeting; for we have learned that where there is an interest, it is better not to be in a hurry to leave, but stay as long as the Lord says stay.

Brethren and sisters, pray for us and the meeting, that the Lord may send laborers this way, and pour out his Spirit upon the people of Holliston and vicinity, and that many may yet be led to believe on Christ, and be prepared with the wedding garment on, when the Bridegroom comes to enter in to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Yours in love of the truth, ENOCH MORRILL.

For the World's Crisis.

LAODICEA.

Christendom presents to-day a vast panorama of worldly conformity, having incorporated into her entire system the forms, fashion, and spirit of the world, till her members are disabled and the whole body paralyzed. It is like a huge apothecary shop, from which religious prescriptions are issued under the name of Christ, who is made the unauthorized surety for the host of unscriptural theories, deeds, and sectarian names that have sprung up within her borders; and without the unwarranted usurpation of which, the trade could never have been inaugurated. She is sinking under the weight of her own corruption. Christian principle is sacrificed on the altar of worldly policy. Lofty eloquence and imposing ceremonies blind the vision and hide Christ from view; while traditionary theology is substituted for his gospel.

The form of godliness is desperately maintained at the expense of mammon. The body being lukewarm, and prayer-meetings failing to move its members, a new remedy in the form of church fairs, festivals, oyster suppers, picnics, and the like, is found to be the only relief for religious constipation. Men assume to be "Reverend"—a term found but once in the Bible (Ps. 111: 9), and applied to God only—and take to themselves this title as if they were gods. They talk about going here or there, doing this or that, D. V. Time and space allowed the apostles to say, "If the Lord will." Acts 18: 21, 1 Cor. 4: 19, James 4: 15. Right Rev., D. D., LL.D., and Elder P. E., etc., are specimens of Rabbinical embroidery attached to names seeking honor of men. The names of the scriptural worthies begged no honor of this kind, but are preserved in "deeds of faith," which, like pure gold, require no plating, the necessity for which is greatest where real value is least.

Having loudly proclaimed a world's conversion, and boasting of riches and increased with goods, Christendom is compelled to behold the blood coursing through her veins laden with deeds of infamy and blotches of corruption, with moral darkness of increasing density, which she is powerless to remove, until shepherds and sheep, goats and mammon, are inseparably joined together, and characterized by inspiration, "Laodicea." Rev. 3: 14–18. Probably many of God's dear children have experienced a dread indifference and want of feeling with reference to the blessed hope of the gospel, and led to seriously doubt their acceptance with God, and to think that, after all, the past is but a pleasing dream; when the arch deceiver, taking advantage of the situation, suggests that they have lived on stale bread long enough, and require something new, when he submits for their acceptance some of his gilded wares in the form of new light, creature worship, and fabulous doctrines, as a sure remedy for the dreaded indifference.

A knowledge of our position on the prophetic journey to the kingdom of God gives us the key to its cause. We are crossing the great "Laodicean desert," the entire atmosphere of which is heavily impregnated with a lukewarm stupor, and its drowsy effect weighs heavily on every child of God. Our safety consists in holding fast that which we have, that no man take our crown. Rev. 3: 11. No time now to exchange. It is the evil time, and says the apostle, "having done all, to stand." Eph. 6: 13. Keep "the faith"; "walk by faith." Faith, not feeling, will carry us into the kingdom. Bigotry is despicable, and has many votaries; to avoid which, and the dreaded indifference of the hour, many give a desperate leap, crying Liberty; and enjoy freedom only when, like an unruly creature, they are jumping over or breaking through all Scriptural bounds, impeaching the testimony of inspired witnesses, leaving the word of God like the track of the tornado. The exigency of the hour demands steadfastness, watchfulness, and prayer; together with a firm confidence in the word of God.

The people who, a few years since, were called out to meet the Bridegroom have not escaped the ravages of the terrible Laodicean monster. The power of the Holy Ghost attended their coming out, accompanied by deeds which, together with the time and manner of the movement, were evidence of its being in line with royal ancestors of scriptural reputation. Having just escaped enclosures constructed of pen, ink, and parchment, they formed a new union by faith and the Holy Ghost; the members were ornamented with a meek and quiet spirit, beneath the banner of brotherly love; the pasture thus afforded being of excellent quality, and the flock orderly, paper fencing was unnecessary. The "earthen vessels" were regarded, not for personal attainments, but for the treasure (2 Cor. 4: 7) they contained; they lived by faith, and had power with God. Alas, we have fallen on perilous times. The same influence which has paralyzed nominal Christendom, is silently yet surely creeping over this once favored people, and an increasing formality is rapidly supplying a decreasing faith.

We talk about contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints; and so earnest has been the contention, that the primitive faith of deeds, which characterized the ancient worthies, has evaporated into a host of conflicting words, pet theories, and darling ideas, sufficient to occupy the attention of the Athenians and strangers at Mars' Hill a lifetime. Acts 17: 21.

Covetousness, the glaring sin of the age, has crept into our ranks, and we need shaking like the fig-tree, by a mighty rushing power from heaven, to shake off worldly conformity, and shake out worldly treasure. Many tongues, which express a desire for the Lord to come, involving the destruction of their treasures, are within reach of pockets that remain unconverted. They enjoy a good meeting that costs nothing; but a profitable trade far better. How many testimonies for Jesus and a pure gospel pass through a solution of tobacco juice, smoke, or snuff, which the carpet would be too good to receive. Of what use is it to talk like sheep in the fold, while we conform to the fashion of goats outside. We are commanded to come out and be separate. In what does our separation consist? is the distinction in every day matter of fact practically developed before all?

Visit the campmeeting; does not the scene vividly remind one of a vast visiting multitude? and is there not danger of being more zealously engaged in eating and drinking, than in the worship of [illegible]? in exhibiting specimens of photographic art, rather than reflecting the image of Christ? With what promptness and earnestness social services are held by the good sisters, cup and saucer in hand, around the stove, while frequently their presence and talent are wanting in the prayer-meeting.

Brethren, who complain of no gift to speak or pray in the prayer-meeting, exhibit considerable fluency of speech in unprofitable disputes. Brethren and sisters, who may attend the great gathering this year, will especially need to cleanse themselves of all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and come at the beginning with temples qualified to exercise long-suffering and forbearance. As pilgrims and strangers, shall we, with the promised rest just in view, go back to the leeks and onions of Egypt?

While the Son of God tarries, let us beware lest we worship the golden calf in the form of fashionable folly, covetousness, and filthy and useless habits. Let us not worship the Lord grudgingly, while these are paid for liberally. We are burdened with theoretical faith, and dying for want of practical. God wants men to feed the scattered flock, without respect of persons; and who cannot be auctioned off at any price. Men who are not magnetized by wealthy churches, pointing to them like the needle to the pole; but who obey the call of the Spirit, and trust the Lord for bread, while they dispense the "bread of life," instead of sickly theories of skin and bone, to the tried and tempted.

We have reached the time of gross darkness, which was to cover the people. Isa. 60: 2. The same power that withstood Moses through Jannes and Jambres, resists the truth at the present hour. "Faithless works and words," philosophical reasoning, and scientific arguments, will not save us. We must recover our identity as "pilgrims and strangers," which we as a body, like Peter, are following afar off. Let us shake off the worldly dross that has accumulated among us, that we may be qualified to receive the power of the Holy Ghost, and stand against all the wiles of the adversary. While journeying amid the intensity of moral darkness, surrounded by crafty and cunning devices for our overthrow, let us possess the "light of life" within ourselves, together with the golden faith which shines more bright by using, and which is soon to expand and blend with the universal dawn of the eternal day.

We need not pause to notice the various improvements upon the blessed hope of the gospel, presented for our acceptance at the present day. Decision's vale is filled with the doubting and unbelieving, hesitating, yet compelled to decide. The light which made the appearing of Jesus a "blessed hope" to the apostle, has not dimmed through the lapse of ages. Titus 2: 13. The same hope which centuries ago purified its possessor, saves to-day. 1 John 3: 2, 3. The same Jesus who said, If I go away, "I will come again" (John 14: 3), was confirmed in his testimony by the angelic pair, who said, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 11.

We are on the eve of the final act in the great Satanic drama. The most desperate and strategic efforts of the wily adversary, to divert the mind from the blessed hope of Jesus' coming, are before us. His name is used as a plaything; the word of God mutilated and degraded, to support the basest desires of the depraved heart, or wholly denied, to suit the case. Living faith alone will save us. Talking about faith and living on past experience are alike hopeless. Shall we arise in the name of the Lord, and arm ourselves for the conflict? Shall brotherly love, meekness and patience abound towards each other? If brethren disagree, a fulness of the Spirit of Christ will disarm and prevent quarrels. It is the best known remedy. Let us all seek to possess the most of it, and dwell together in unity, and though dark and lowering clouds hang o'er our pathway, they will soon disappear, when the night of weeping will be swallowed up amid the songs of the redeemed of the Lord. O. D. WOODRUFF.

INFORMATION WANTED.

In March, we put a note of inquiry in the Crisis respecting the address of Mr. John Hoxie, who had ordered a picture of "Our Savior." The editor gave his address "Little Compton, P. Q., Canada." To-day the letter, with the picture enclosed, is returned from the dead letter office, so Bro. Hoxie has not been supplied; and if he will write us again, with his address in full, we will duly forward. If any others have failed to get due returns, hope they will inform us.

Our work on Planchette has been delayed, so that no orders can be filled before the last week in August. Price 10 cts.; two copies for 15 cts. M. D. WELLCOME.

Extracts from Letters.

Bro. P. H. Harding, Vershire, Vt., writes: "I am glad the brethren are talking about a Vermont campmeeting. I hope it will meet with the wishes of all; not only this side of the mountain, but the other. I do not wish to be selfish, or seem to be; but I should coincide with Bro. Cleaveland in having it this side of the mountain, say on the line of the Central Railroad. The reason is this: the people have not been blessed with many opportunities for attending such meetings. If we have such a meeting, let us make a grand rally, muster all our forces, and call for all the foreign aid that the committee deem it profitable; and more especially invoke the blessing of Him that controls the wind and storm, that we may have a pleasant week together, and many souls gathered. Let each one interested breathe a prayer to Him every day, for the success of the cause of truth in Vermont."

Sr. M. J. Pratt, East Randolph, Mass., writes:—"Dear ones in the Lord, although I am not personally acquainted with many of you, I have been cheered many times by reading your letters in the Crisis, and felt perhaps I might write a few words to cheer some poor, discouraged one. I love Jesus, and am trying to be one of his children, that I may be ready for his appearing. He has said, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.' Let us ever trust him at all times, for he is our truest and dearest friend. We can go to him with all our cares. O let us be good and faithful. Soon we shall meet to part no more. Cheer up then, dear ones in Jesus. Though the way seems dark and drear, it will be but a little longer. Soon the Savior will appear."

More about the Imprisoned Nun.—We have already given the particulars of the twenty years' imprisonment and release of a nun in the Carmelite Convent at Cracow, Poland. A local paper publishes a story which would seem to give some clue to the cause of the mystery. It says:

"In the month of April, 1848, a patrol of the National Guard remarked, about one o'clock in the morning, a traveling carriage before the entrance of the Carmelite nunnery. Curiosity and suspicion induced the young men on guard to stop the carriage, which was just starting. Two of them went to the carriage door, and saw in the carriage two men, one of whom held on his knees a woman in a nun's dress, and having a night cap on her head. While the National Guards asked questions of the men in the carriage the woman jumped out and ran into the court yard of the convent. One of the Guardsmen ran after her, and, in spite of her entreaties, would not let her go. The noise in the midst of the night awoke the nuns and servants of the convent. When the nun remarked this she cried out, 'I am lost!' and fainted. What happened to her afterward is unknown. The patrol arrested the two men, and led them toward the town, but, moved by their entreaties, and seeing in the whole matter but a love adventure, the patrol, consisting of students of the University, let them go."

The Cracow paper now thinks that there may be some connection between this adventure, which happened in the year 1848, and the mystery lately discovered, and that by looking over the lists of the National Guard then existing, and tracing those who were on duty, the connection between the two might be established.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times states that there was great excitement among the population of Cracow after the release of the imprisoned nun, which was increased by the rumor that the Carmelite monk who had given the information concerning the imprisonment of the nun had died suddenly and under suspicious circumstances. Three several attacks were made on the nunnery and on monastic institutions in the city, but the authorities interfered seasonably. Both the Mayor and the Government Commissioner published warnings against any repetition of the excesses, and the papers all advised the public to wait for the result of the regular inquiry which has been set on foot. A petition is, however, it is said, being set on foot, praying for the removal of the Jesuits. The significance of all this is not a little increased by the fact that Cracow has been always considered as one of the strongholds of clerical influence.

Napoleon's Doctrine First and Last.—A curious bit of history has just been brought to light by M. Louis Blanc, in an article contributed to the Revue Moderne, which shows us something of the sentiments of the present Emperor of the French long before he arrived at his ambitious summit. When he was a prisoner in the castle of Ham, and pretended that he was a socialist, heart and soul, he solicited an interview with M. Blanc, who was at that time deeply interested in socialistic movements. The eminent historian had a long talk with the fretful young prince. Napoleon expressed it as his belief that all future government in France should repose on the national will, manifested by universal suffrage. M. Blanc said that, though universal suffrage ought not to be like a loaded pistol in the hands of an infant, every honest public man should try to imprint his views upon the popular will and attract the majority to himself, but should always be willing to bow to the sovereignty of the people. One must have a political credo. Louis Napoleon, after musing a few moments, said, fiercely: "My credo is the empire. Has not the Empire raised France to the summit of its grandeur? Did it not give back to it order and establish for it glory? I am convinced that the will of the French nation is in favor of an empire!" Thus far his credo has held good, and he only now awaits philosophically the time when that credo no longer is suitable, to adopt another suitable to the peculiar emergency in which he may find himself.—Boston Journal.

EVILS OF TOBACCO.

The editor of the Weekly News, published at Cape Girardeau, Mo., makes the following truthful remarks:—

"Tobacco and its evils, in our country, according to the best information we can gather, is sapping the constitution of many of our citizens, especially of the rising generation. In our city, we understand, there is only one out of every ten male citizens but what uses tobacco, from ten years of age up to the oldest inhabitant; and many under ten use it. This is a deplorable state of affairs for mankind to be placed in. We look upon the practice of using tobacco as one of the filthiest that belongs to our citizens. It has a degenerating influence, it destroys the nervous system, it impairs the mind, and in many instances produces insanity, apoplexy, and nervous debility."

How his Sermons grew.—A lay brother made the following remark of his minister, whose pulpit talents were quite ordinary: "Our pastor comes to the pulpit Sunday morning and preaches a little sermon; and in the afternoon he comes again and preaches another little sermon. In the evening he comes into the prayer-meeting full of love, and we all have a good time, praying, singing and exhorting. Then on Monday, after spending the forenoon in his study, he goes out and sees a family of his congregation, and talks to them about Jesus; he does the same on Tuesday and each day of the week, and by Saturday night the little sermons on Sunday have grown into big ones"

One can easily conceive how a people would be satisfied with such preaching. Reverse the matter. If great sermons on the Sabbath become little ones during the week by manifest inconsistencies, would it not destroy all pulpit efficiency?—Canadian Independent.

Obituaries.

Shafer. Died in Sparta (near Dansville), N. Y., Aug. 13th, 1869, Mr. Jacob Shafer, aged sixty-six years, eleven months, fourteen days.

Mr. Shafer's disease was of the esophagus, which caused him to literally starve to death. Seeing my appointments in the Crisis, he said he should die about the time of my arrival in Dansville, and his wish was for me to preach his funeral sermon. Strange to say, his death occurred as he had said, and on Sunday, the 15th, I preached at his funeral in Sparta to a large congregation, from 1 Pet. 1: 24, 25. F. Burr.

Durkee. Died in Dansville, N. Y., Aug. 14th, 1869, Sr. Ellen M. Durkee, in the twenty-fourth year of her age.

Sister Ellen was a firm, consistent christian, beloved by all who knew her, and those who knew her best loved her most. Her friends at the Water Cure, who loved her dearly, took charge of the funeral arrangements, and my appointment being in Dansville the 15th, I was requested to preach her funeral sermon from the text of her own selection,—"And there shall be no more death." She died looking for Jesus to come and raise her to immortality. F. Burr.

Richardson. Fell asleep in Ellington, Ct., Aug. 12th, 1869, of consumption, Luella, daughter of Bro. Royal and Sr. Eliza Richardson, aged thirteen years.

She experienced religion but a short time before her death, and is now sleeping that sleep

"From which none ever wake to weep."

The occasion of her burial was improved by the writer from Isa. 38: 1. P. S Butler.

Sheldon. Died in Putnam, Conn., Aug. 7th, 1869, Edith E., daughter of Wm. E. and Emeline A. Sheldon, aged fifteen years and three months.

Our child was baptized about two years ago, and has since lived a consistent christian life. We hope to meet her in the kingdom, where will be no sorrow. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. M. R. Phetteplace. W. E. Sheldon.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, Aug. 19. Dispatches from Teheran state that a band of Sectaries from Constantinople have been arrested, charged with conspiring to assassinate the Shah of Persia. It is said that many eminent persons are implicated in the conspiracy. The Persian troops have captured Garctrela, and defeated Farcomaces in a pitched battle.

Paris, Aug. 18. The Emperor to-day, presided at the Council of Ministers. His health is much improved.

Prince Napoleon will attend the ceremonies on the occasion of the inauguration of the Suez Canal.

The Viceroy of Egypt has sent a conciliatory reply to the letter of the Sultan.

Joseph Mazzini has arrived in Switzerland.

London, Aug. 4. In the House of Commons today Mr. Ottway, Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, said the agents of the British Government were making every effort to obtain access to the Englishmen now held captive in Paraguay. The last intelligence received in regard to them was furnished by American naval officers, and was to the effect that they were all well, but still restrained of their liberty by command of President Lopez.

Madrid, Aug. 18. Bishop Jean denies the jurisdiction of the present government, and appeals to the Holy See. Some of the Bishops have obeyed the decree of the Regent obliging them to warn their clergy against an insurrection. Others still maintain silence.

A Cortes has been summoned to meet on the 15th of September in consequence of the urgency of affairs.

Berlin Aug. 17. It is reported that the North and South German States have agreed to common action with respect to the Ecumenical Council, if the resolutions adopted by that body on the question of the temporal power of the Pope should threaten the peace of Europe.

Passing Events.

☞ The movement for woman's rights has spread to Italy. Not long since a young and beautiful woman appeared before the Roman Senate, and announced herself to be the last descendant of the Emperors of the East; and, producing documents, she demanded an investigation of her pretensions. The Senate recognized her as the Princess Lascaris-Paleologus, ordering her name to be thus inscribed on the "Book of Gold" at the Capitol.

☞ It is stated in the Italian papers that great progress is making with the Mont Cenis tunnel, the work being actively carried on night and day, and that there is every probability the line will be opened in the course of next year. To celebrate this event it has now been definitely decided that a Universal Exhibition shall be held in Turin in the spring of 1872.

☞ Fruit venders are up to all sorts of tricks. A very common one is to cover the top of the stock in trade with the most luscious-looking fruit, which the confiding purchasers are foolish enough to believe they will receive for their money. The bag or basket, however, is filled from the side of the pile, and unripe fruit is generally the most numerous.

☞ The miner's strike is now spreading throughout the entire coal regions of Pennsylvania. At Hazleton it has assumed a serious aspect. The strikers are laborers who are employed by the miners to assist them in loading and removing the coal after it has been blasted. They have stopped the pumps in nearly if not quite all the mines.

☞ It is said that from three to five hundred canal boats fully loaded with anthracite coal are now lying about New York, Jersey City and Hoboken, consigned to coal speculators in New York, who are paying the boat owners from $7 to $8 per day storage until they can force higher prices on the market.

☞ One hundred thousand baskets of peaches a day are being emptied into New York city. Every one of those baskets will contain about 180 peaches, which gives eighteen million peaches, or for the million of people eighteen peaches a day for every man, woman and child.

☞ The heat was most intense at New York, Aug. 20th, and probably caused more suffering than heat of any other day this summer. Several cases of sun stroke occurred, and in some cases animals dropped dead on the streets from the effects of the heat.

☞ The national revenue from distilled spirits for the last fiscal year is given at $43,800,000, and from tobacco in various shapes and forms at 22,200,000, making the handsome sum of over $66,000,000.

☞ The Rochester Express says: Short paragraphs are usually the most interesting department of a paper, as, when well edited, they require the most labor."

☞ The Sultan has ordered the streets of the Holy City to be made passable—an undertaking the practicability of which those who know the streets of Jerusalem will be disposed to doubt.

☞ A century plant less than twenty years old, has just bloomed in Louisiana.

How Spurgeon Looks and Preaches.—A correspondent of the Troy Times says that Spurgeon, the celebrated London clergyman, is an easy extemporaneous speaker, possesses the merit of distinct enunciation, and illustrates his points and enforces his arguments by very apt and sometimes very striking illustrations. He is not dramatic, but rather quiet in his style. There is, however, a magnetism in his manner after all, in his earnest appearance, and in his bright eye, too, that enchains the attention of his audience. He is by no means so able as Beecher, no. so graphic as Chapin, but he is really a magnetic man, and will always draw large numbers to hear him. In appearance he is rather inclined to portliness, has a large and pleasant countenance, and an expressive and keen eye. He looks to be a much younger man than he is, and is what the ladies would call quite handsome.

Pictures of Chloe Lankton and her residence in New Hartford, Ct., can be had of J. C. Garriques, 608 Arch Street, Philadelphia, by enclosing $1.00. The proceeds, above cost, to go to the benefit of Chloe.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a General Campmeeting will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 28th, and continuing till Sept. 6th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Sept. 5th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Milford, and Southville; beyond Worcester, at the usual stations. On the New Haven and Hartford R. R., fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Hartford, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. R. R., fare is reduced one third from So. Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 25th to Sept. 7th, must be called for at the ticket offices; and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Mass. and Vt. R. Road, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Brattleboro, Vernon, Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. that they may come from.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R. Campmeeting Tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the Depot in Providence, good from August 26th to Sept. 7th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have free return passes by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.50 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 o'clock P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the early morning train; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the Rail Road to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, and 8½ A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Arrangements with any other roads that may be made, will be noticed hereafter.

Advent Christian Association.

The next Annual Meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Tuesday, Aug. 31st, at nine o'clock A. M. As business of unusual importance is to come before this meeting, it is hoped that every church will be represented by delegates, and that preachers make an effort to be present at the opening meeting.

Every church co-operating with the A. C. A. is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members. Each delegate must bring credentials from the church to which he belongs.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Thursday, Sept. 2nd, nine o'clock A. M. Members of and delegates to the A. C. A. are members of this Society. A full attendance of the members is requested.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Notice.

The Union Female Missionary Association will hold its annual meeting on Springfield campground, Tuesday, August 31st, 1869, at one o'clock P. M. All the preaching Sisters and members of the Association are requested to be present, as some matters with reference to the best interest of the Association are to be considered. Come with hearts interested in the work of the Lord, and pray much that we may have the Spirit of Jesus to direct us in the transaction of business, that this meeting may be profitable to all. Reports from the different female missionaries will be given at this meeting. M. McKinstry, Secretary.

Notice.

There will be a Quarterly Conference in South Livermore, Maine, commencing Aug. 26th, one o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and unite with us in the work of the Lord. Call on C. Dennen, C. H. Boothby, Wm. Hobbs, Silas Timberbake, and others.

Eld. Jesse Gay.
Eld. A. Abbott.
H. B. Sevey.

Campmeeting in Maine.

At a meeting in Holden, last Sunday, the brethren decided to have a campmeeting in the vicinity of Bangor, to commence about Sept. 13th. Particulars hereafter. For the Brethren,

Geo. W. Brown.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. Preble.

Tents for Sale.

I have a tent nearly new, twelve feet by eleven and a half, with frame and pins, which I will sell for $16. Or I will sell the boarding mission tent, nineteen feet by thirteen, which has been at the Alton Bay Campmeeting several years. Price $20. Either of the above tents will be a good bargain for those who wish such a tent for campmeeting purposes, and can be sent to Springfield or Alton Bay by rail. I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

The quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of the State of New York will commence Friday evening, Sept. 17th, at Darien, Genesee Co., and continue over the Sabbath. Conveyance will meet trains at two P. M. from the east and four P. M. from the west on the New York Central R. R. at Croft's station, six miles west of Batavia.

D. Cogswell.
W. J. Hobbs.
B. C. Simonds.

Notice.

To our brethren and sisters in Massachusetts and New Hampshire we would say, that we expect to be at the Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings with the Mass. Mission Tent, where they will find a comfortable home. We also expect to have some good meetings under the tent.

Enoch Morrill.

Notice.

Dear Brn., as the time of year has come for holding protracted meetings, which are the most beneficial to all, I would say that if the good Lord will, I will go wherever a door is opened for that purpose. If any desire such a meeting, please to let me know at once. Direct to George A. Streeter, North Dana, Mass.

Notice.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Tent will be pitched in Albany, near Bro. Joshua Piper's.

J. C. Shorey, Tent Master.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Sunday, Sept. 5th, to hold through the week and over the following Lord's day. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 80 cents per day; breakfast and supper, 30 cents each; dinner, 50 cents; horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cents per day. The boarding department is under the charge of the committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad and steamboat companies, as follows: Boston and Maine R. R., trains leave Boston for the meeting 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M.,—half fare. Purchase regular tickets at Boston, of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, for Alton Bay, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R.; trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Littleton for the Wiers at 9 A. M.,—half fare. Those coming from Concord, Littleton, and Plymouth, can go through to the camp-ground the same day, by waiting at the Wiers. The fare on the steamboats one way.

Connecticut and Passumpsic River R. R.; trains leave Derby at 7 A. M. for Wells River, Plymouth, Wiers, and Alton Bay,—half fare. Passengers will purchase regular tickets, and receive free return checks on the camp-ground, signed by the Secretary of the meeting. If any of our friends wish, they can come for the same a week before the meeting.

Eastern R. R., half fare. Purchase regular tickets at the several stations, and receive free return passes on the camp ground, signed by T. H. Ford.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R.; trains leave Portland at 6.15 A. M., 8.40 A. M., and 2.55 P. M., for Dover and Alton. Fare about two thirds.

Fare reduced on the Concord and Portsmouth, and Nashua railroads, one half.

The Steamer Naugatuck will run from Melvin Village to Alton camp-ground as follows: Leave Melvin Village Sept. 5th, at 7 A. M.; Bay at 7-20, and Tuftonborough Neck at 8 A. M., arriving at Alton about 9.30; returning after the P. M. service; also the same each day of the meeting, Monday and Wednesday excepted. It will also leave Alton for Melvin Village Monday, the 13th, at 9 A. M. Fare both ways, 75 cts; one way, 50 cts. For the friends on the north side of the Lake this is far the cheapest, and also the most quiet and pleasant route to the meeting.

If our friends in Mass. or Maine, interested in the meeting, can get the fare reduced on any other railroads, we hope they will; and as we have been so successful in getting the fare reduced to the meeting, we hope our friends will avail themselves of it, and also of a good meeting. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

} Committee.

Fare Reduced.

Fare reduced from Springfield to Boston, on the way to Alton Bay. The tickets will be sold at Springfield, Palmer, West Brookfield, Charlton, Worcester, Holliston, and Framingham. Tickets good from Sept. 3d to the 14th inclusive, and must be indorsed by T. H. Ford to return.

L. Boutell, for J. G. Smith.

Alton Bay.

The tickets on the Boston and Maine R. R. to Alton Bay campmeeting are good from the 4th of Sept. to the 14th inclusive. Friends coming from Lowell can buy their tickets at Lawrence for the Alton Bay campmeeting of Bro. D. Churchill, at a reduced price.

On account of having to pay six dollars more on a ton for hay than last year, we shall have to put the price of horse-keeping, at Alton Bay campmeeting, at 85 cts. a day, instead of 75.

J. G. Smith.

Notice.

Our friends who have tents to build at Alton Bay, are requested to be sure and have them built before the meeting commences. We have engaged Bro. Wm. Chamberlin to carry the baggage from the depot to the camp-ground. For the Committee, J. G. Smith.

Campmeeting in Vermont.

Dear brethren, the call is to West Bethel, on Camp Brook. I wish all who intend to come with tents, to write to Geo. W. Lewis, or Jona. Washburn, and let them know something about the size of their tents, and they will have the poles on the ground, and all things needed. I would like to have all the preaching brethren in the State, who will try to be at the meeting, to correspond with me. Please drop me a line to East Canaan, N. H., care of J. B. Eastman, until the 5th of Sept., then at Alton Bay camp-ground. I would like to hear from any out of the State. Those who write to Brn. Washburn and Lewis, will please direct to West Bethel, Vt. Come, brethren, and all. We are few in number, so let every town be represented. Where there is but one, make a small tent, and come. Let us get together and do what we can. Let no small thing prevent. Bro. Child of Cabot, gave me encouragement that he would take hold and assist. We don't want any party division, or difference of opinion to enter the heart of any one. We wish to come together to save souls. We are too near the end of time to stop to quarrel about notions, or what we think is right, if we don't see all alike. We will live and let live. For my part, I wish sinners saved from the wrath to come, and to this end, let us pray earnestly that God may pour out his Spirit, and revive his work, and gather in a few more before Jesus comes. We want our preaching brethren to come from N. H., Mass., Conn., and from every where that they can. Do come up to old Vermont, and see us, preach to us, pray for us, and enjoy the meeting with us. Come, won't you? We wish all others to come. Particulars hereafter. Your Bro. in Christ, J. A. Cleaveland.

Marshfield, Vt., Aug. 20th, 1869.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made to hold a Second Advent Campmeeting at Bryant's Pond, Me., to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 14th, and hold over the Sabbath. Ample provision will be made for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cts. per day. Supper and breakfast at 25 cts. each; dinner 35 cts. Horse keeping, hay and grain, 75 cts. per day. Hay alone, 50 cts. Pasturage, 17 cts. The meeting will be held on an Island, about one third of a mile from the village. There has been a small steamer built in the Pond, that will run at all times during the day, to take passengers over and back for 25 cts. Baggage will be carried free of charge. Those who wish to come off to see to their horses, can make satisfactory arrangements. Those who wish to pitch their tents on the Island, we hope will be on the ground in season to do so.

We shall do what we can to get the fare reduced on the Grand Trunk R. R. Those coming on the Grand Trunk R. R. will stop at Bryant's Pond. An invitation is given to all to come and labor for the salvation of souls.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Conf. of New York will meet for its quarterly session with the church at Darien, Sept. 17th, and hold over the Sabbath. Homes will be provided for all, also teams to take them from the R. R. to the meeting. Come, brethren, to this feast, to enjoy its blessings and to unitedly prepare for work in the regions beyond for the coming winter.

Warren J. Hobbs, Clerk.

Notice.

At an adjourned meeting of the Conn. State Conference, held at Oak Grove Campmeeting, Aug. 17th, 1869, the committee presented the tent, purchased by order of the conference, whereupon Sidney Hall, B. Hitchcock, I. B. Potter, were appointed Trustees to take charge of the tent, and see that it is properly used, and the mind of the Conference in regard to it be carried out.

H. H. Dickinson, Sec. pro tem.

It is requested that all pledges heretofore made be promptly paid to Eld. B. St. John, Wolcottville, Ct. All applications for use of tent should be made to the Committee.

Grove Meeting at Westfield, Pa.

There will be a grove meeting at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa. (near the village), commencing Friday, Aug. 27th, to continue over the Sabbath following. C. F. Sweet, D. Cogswell, and others, are expected to preach the word. All are invited to attend. For the brethren, J. W. Taylor.

The Maine Mission Tent.

The Maine Mission Tent will remain in Rockland for meetings yet another week, and over next Lord's day, Aug. 29th. The Lord is at work, souls are converted, and others seeking salvation. Multitudes are attending on the word, and listening with great attention. Brethren, pray for us.

I. C. Wellcome.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by Geo. J. Fox, for the week ending Aug. 24th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	730	8,370	3,452
Last week	548	9,509	3,388

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $12.50@12.75; first quality, $11.50@12.00; second quality, $10.@11; third quality, $7.50@9.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $65, $75 to $100; Yearlings, $18 to $28; Two years old, $30 to $42; Three years old, $46 to $65.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.25, $2.50, $3@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75, 4.00, or from 4 to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3 to $4.12½; Veal Calves, $3@$15.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Lamb Skins, 50 to 75 cts. each. Sheared Lamb Skins, 17@25 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

Remarks.—Cattle. Prices have ranged at last week's rates. Some dealers started their cattle from the country, with the expectation of getting the advance of strong ½ ct. per lb., as noticed last Thursday at Brighton; but upon arrival, found over 2000 Western expected this week, and purchasers could not understand why the advance should be claimed, and bid accordingly. We find 730 head this week against 548 last week. Some very good oxen noticed. Quality generally fair.

Sheep and Lambs.—The large supply of last week being rather in excess of the demand, we find 1200 less in market from the Northern States, and figures were certainly no better, but inclined to drop. Not any sales noticed at over $4.12½ for best lambs; and last week there were some select lots sold at $4.50. There were mixed lots of sheep and lambs, mostly old slim sheep, sold at $2.25 to $2.50 per head. As the season for veal is nearly over, of which the market has been well supplied, the demand for mutton will increase.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of the chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrible, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what it is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies. A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression. The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 25 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 25 cts.

9. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

10. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; by the dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

I WILL CALL UPON THEE.

I will call upon thee
 When the morning is light;
I will call upon thee
 In the darkness of night.
I will call upon thee
 Amid sorrow and care;
I will call upon thee
 In the spirit of prayer.

I will speak unto thee
 When I'm weary and lone;
I will speak unto thee
 Till it reaches thy throne.
I will speak unto thee
 When burdened my heart;
I will speak unto thee
 Till the burden depart.

I will look unto thee,
 Look in every distress;
I will look unto thee,
 And my sins will confess.
I will look unto thee
 When all covered with gloom;
I will look unto thee
 Till I enter the tomb.

I will pray unto thee—
 Prayer is all of my life;
I will pray unto thee—
 'Tis my weapon in strife;
I will pray unto thee
 With my uttermost breath;
I will pray unto thee
 Till I slumber in death.

I will sing of thy love,
 My Redeemer, my God;
I will sing of thy love
 Till I reach thine abode.
I will sing of thy love
 When thy face I shall see;
Then will sing of thy love,
 O, forever to me.

For the World's Crisis.

SPIRITUALISM THE "STRONG DELUSION."

Spiritualism is not a human device, or deception of man, but a fearful fulfillment of Scripture. The apostle Paul has distinctly foretold the time when this "wicked" should be revealed "whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." 2 Thess. 2nd chap. 1st to 12th verses. I think we cannot be mistaken in regard to his true meaning. He there distinctly declares it to be the last device and delusion of the enemy of all righteousness. In the light of this Scripture, I can but believe that Spiritualism is its exact fulfillment. That manifestations are made, and mediums are possessed, and are made to produce wonderful phenomena, unaccountable to all human reason, I have not a shadow of doubt. That they do reveal data and circumstances connected with the lives of those living and dead, producing a fac simile of character, cannot be questioned. And further, that they do this, at times, when no one, not even the medium present at the time has any knowledge of the circumstances revealed. Furthermore, that the adherents of this doctrine have come to a right conclusion respecting these manifestations, that they are spiritual, I do not question. But that they are from spirits of deceased friends I find to be a sad delusion, a lie of Satan.

I admit and deny this much, and no more. To do less, is to grant the argument, and strengthen the belief of many honest investigators. For there are many candid people who are led to embrace the doctrine from the fact that they are unable to reason away, or even account for, the astounding revelations on any natural principles. They are, to all human appearance, experimental realities. Neither can they be explained away from anything that is known of the wonderful phenomena of psychology, animal magnetism, or electricity; nor by the cowardly epithet of "humbug." It can only be met successfully by courageously admitting the fact of a revelation, and pointing out its true nature from a Bible standpoint. I believe the Bible shows such revelations and visions to be possible, and explains their nature. And, furthermore, that they are not direct from the spirits of departed friends, but from evil angels. Such visions and revelations are recorded in the word of God as coming from both good and evil angels. Such was the case of the "temptation," Saul's vision of Samuel, the demoniac possessions; and on the other hand the appearance to Joshua, Abraham, Lot, and John the Revelator. And also to persons downward to the present. The fact of the creation, existence and office of angels, adds strength to the conclusion. As in the case of man, angels have not fulfilled the design of their creation as a whole; but some "kept not their first estate," turned to the service of the Prince of the powers of the air. And we are assured that their theatre of operation is this lower world, "working in the hearts of the children of disobedience" as Satan's instruments.

As the angels of God are messengers of good to man, so are the fallen angels messengers of evil to him. Nor does it appear that in their fall they lost any of their powers of discernment or communication to man. I think the inward experience of every one goes to prove the proposition. The suggestions of good and evil, so constantly our companions in life, are experimental evidences. The angelic mind, we conceive, is endowed with a vastly higher grade of intelligence than man. And hence their powers of minute discernment and imitation are vastly superior. Therefore, these facts being established by revelation and experience, what conclusion must we come to, when we compare these facts with the latter-day spirit-manifestations, called Spiritualism?

First, we conclude that these evil angels are permitted to be present with individuals; and using their opportunity they are present in the wicked, and ever near to assail the righteous. Eph. 2: 2; 6: 12. Therefore, being thus present to mortals, and having a far more vivid power of perception, memory and imitation, they have the means and ability of reproducing the characteristics, in counterfeit, of any individual, dead or living; and they do not lose the opportunity, as the manifestations through mediums clearly show. It is seen that they must have a human instrument through whom they can operate, to produce these delusive revelations. This I believe to be the whole machinery of this infernal craft. Could there be invented a more stupendous scheme to lead astray the memory? I believe not. It is the last device of the Man of Sin. It is the revelation of that "wicked;" his "forlorn hope;" his last, and final delusion before his destruction by the "Faithful and True" at his appearing and kingdom, followed by the armies of heaven.

Reader, are you aware of the full meaning of this mighty wonder? Brethren, are we fully awake to the issues of the hour—the signs of the times that it betokens? Look to the many who are led captive at this craft of Satan. Look at the mass upon whom is sent this "strong delusion that they should believe a lie." Do you not see through this cunning device? How easily is the heart-striken mother, bereft of the idol of her heart, deluded into a belief that the spirit of the departed has come back through the medium to comfort her. How soon is she taken captive in her heart-broken weakness by this satanic counterfeit. I cannot conceive of a more stupendous delusion than this. And it is so adroitly carried on, that none but those of true spiritual discernment can detect it. It is wholly supernatural, or it would never have gained the adherents that it has. And to be successfully met, we must have a supernatural discernment. We need not be in darkness concerning this enemy, for God has always granted wisdom commensurate with each time and occasion. Is it not "high time that we awake out of sleep," and "not sleep as do others,' looking "well to ourselves and to our doctrine," that we may be able both to save ourselves and others? Let the wise virgins sound an alarm in God's holy mountain, that our fellows may be saved from this strong delusion.

Candid reader, this is not the product of a fitful dream; but conclusions drawn from careful research and experience. I have been intimately connected with all the phases of these latter day spirit manifestations. My mind was once open to conviction. I come to you from within the ring with my deductions. I once sat in the circle of this demoniacal craft. I have both produced and held in bay spirit manifestations. Thirteen years' experience has taught me a valuable lesson in the matter. I never fully endorsed it, nor could I fully put from me the conviction that there was something in it strangely true, until I was converted to God, and received a spiritual help of discernment in a full baptism of the Holy Ghost. By this I detected its delusion; and after years of thought upon every phase of these spirit manifestations, compared with the word of God, I am fixed in the belief that only upon the above hypothesis can they all be accounted for. If you will try the experiment of meeting it upon this ground, I think you will find as I have, that they will rather not meet you. They feel like the legion, "Why hast thou come to torment us before the time." All the manifestations from the Rochester tippings to the last "flank movement" of the Planchette, can be successfully met; as much so as when Michael met it and overcame it in heaven. I hope the readers of the Crisis will give these thoughts a candid perusal and study in the full light of the word and Spirit, and let us hear their conclusions. It is rightly called a Satanic delusion, but how does he operate?

For the World's Crisis.

WINTERPORT TENT-MEETING.

According to appointment, the Maine Mission Tent was pitched in Winterport Village, July 28th, and meetings commenced. This is a pretty village on the Penobscot river, twelve miles below Bangor. The inhabitants had been notified of our coming, and stories circulated among them that we were "free lovers," "infidels," "dangerous people," etc.; but the most of them concluded to come out and hear for themselves. This is the way of wisdom, and gives each an opportunity to judge for themselves. We were very kindly received by the people, and I think we never got a more full and candid hearing in any community. From four hundred to six hundred persons were in attendance much of the time evenings, and from eight hundred to nine hundred on each Sunday. The people were generally civil, orderly, respectful, and inquiring. The word was preached to them by Brn. Baker, Wellcome, Smith, Cole, Hall and Ridley. There were none in the place known as Adventists, but several families kindly invited and received us into their houses, and thanked God for sending us to preach to them "the old-fashioned gospel," "the pure word." Members of different churches attended generally, and took part in our social meetings, feeding on the word of life, and often expressing their surprise that their ministers did not sympathize and unite with us in this gospel work. The false statements about us, and our teachings, were manifestly refuted by the preaching and social exercises in the tent.

The word made many deep impressions on the hearts of sinners, who seemed to be persuaded that it was best to seek the Lord. Christians were built up in the Lord and his truth, and were persuaded that the Lord is soon to come. Brethren from Frankfort, Searsport,, Buxport, Brewer, Bangor, and other towns, came in to aid in the work, and to bring provision for us, which they did in abundance. The Lord blessed them in the effort, and it was a joyful season in the Lord, and we trust will produce fruit unto eternal life. We thank God for opening the way for us and his word in Winterport.

Bro. F. A. Baker was with us a few days in the first of the meeting, but took a cold, and by imprudent efforts grew sick, and was obliged to give up labor and seek a place of retirement. We left him confined in bed with fever and neuralgia at Bro. West's, in Frankfort, where he is well cared for by that family, his wife, and other kind friends. We pray the Lord to restore him to health and gospel work soon. Our meetings closed Aug. 12th, with a good influence on the community, and a deep interest in some for us to remain longer.

"REMEMBER ME."

"Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Luke 23: 42.

The thief seemed to entertain fears of being forgotten, or, if remembered, not remembered in mercy. Nature seems to teach man his mortal nature. Hence man in his natural state is afraid of being forgotten. David in contemplating the magnitude of the visible universe, exhibited astonishment that God was mindful of so diminutive a being as man. Psalm 8: 3, 4.

When we part from loved ones, we frequently entreat them not to forget us, and during long years of sickness, trouble, and disappointment, if we cannot be cheered by their presence, it is a source of great consolation to know that we still retain a place in their memory. Men in all ages of the world have used every available means to perpetuate their memory among their fellow men, and thereby dispel to a certain extent the pall of darkness which hovers over the tomb. This class of men includes those who disbelieve in the power of Jesus Christ to raise the dead, and a large number of those who profess to believe that man is immortal by nature. Every graveyard I pass through, every marble monument that I see, every flattering epitaph and inscription that I read, tells me of misguided man seeking "honor and immortality" in a wrong direction. The mummies and the pyramids, the deeds of mighty conquerors, the many names enrolled on the glittering page of fame, all tell us man is mortal, and is trying to preserve his identity.

Annihilation presents no beauties to the thinking mind. Man without faith in the power of Jesus to raise him from the dead, shrinks from approaching dissolution. The grave looks dark to him, the loss of existence, oblivion, chaos, and eternal night, present pictures of horror to his mind. It was without doubt, the fear of annihilation that created the idea of an "immortal soul" in the philosophic mind of Socrates. And men of like minds have received it, defended it, and promulgated it. But while men of the world are trying to immortalize their names on earth, the Christian's name is enrolled in the fair Lamb's book of life in heaven. And while the grave and the future look dark to those without God or hope in the world, glory to God, the christian knows that Christ has burst the fetters of the grave, and although he sleeps that dreamless sleep, yet "in his flesh shall he see God." He asks not for the honors of earth. He wants no marble monument to perpetuate his memory. It matters not to him if he fall or, if he sleep in old ocean's remotest depths. He knows that the hairs of his head are all numbered, and that when the trump of God shall sound, that awful blast will reach old earth's remotest bounds, and that "the sea shall give up its dead." "and the graves shall be opened," "and the dead both small and great" "shall stand before God."

"Where the Oregon rolls its silent course,"

Thank God, when Christ comes to establish his kingdom on the new earth, he will remember all his dear children; not one shall be lost or forgotten.

A SIGN.

"But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."—2 TIM. 3: 13.

Where is the person living in these days, who cannot see the literal fulfillment of this prediction. A few years ago, when I belonged to another denomination, I used to hear them pray that the Lord would hasten the time when every house would become a house of prayer. I imagine they believed that such a state of things would really come to pass; but, oh! how reverse from the present appearance. One would almost imagine that every house would become a groggery. A few years ago, perhaps we would find a groggery in every third or fourth corner; now they are as thick as two to four in almost every street in the city, and still they are opening new places. Dwellings, which once have been occupied by respectable families, are now occupied by those who are a disgrace to the community. Thus we are having the literal fulfillment of this prediction. They are evil men, and they are becoming more bold in dealing out that which has poisoned so many honest men, and distressed so many families. If they still increase in the future as they have in the past I imagine that in a little while there will be very few if any christian men in business.

O may the Lord keep us from the temptations of these days, that we may be prepared for the change when Jesus comes. Praise the Lord, he will soon come and end these things, and cover the earth with his glory; then we will not be depending on worldly men for a livelihood, but we will have that which we need before we ask for it; and while we are yet speaking, the Lord will hear, says the prophet Isaiah. O Lord, hasten the blessed change, and give us everlasting peace.

THOMAS J. WHITECAR.

AN ANGEL'S VISIT.

An angel desirous of becoming acquainted with the signs of the times and the indications of the approaching millenium, descending to our world, first came in view of a lofty steeple to which he bent his flight. Here he found a very costly and nice edifice, and it being Sabbath day, he lingered here awhile to become more particularly acquainted with the manner in which mortals worship the great God.

A large assembly of worms soon filled the house, wrapped in various gaudy articles of finery, borrowed from beasts and birds, of which they appeared to be somewhat proud. A large, plump worm soon appeared upon the stand, and all the worms rustled their finery and greeted his appearance with applause. Then several worms that had crawled into the singing gallery, sang as only those could sing who had well trained voices which they delighted to display; and another rustling of finery among the worms as the last strains of music were dying away, indicated that they felt very much gratified that they had the best singing worms in the place.

And then the plump worm on the stand stood up and read the Scriptures, as only one could read who felt that he was master of his business, with an admiring audience at his feet. And then he prayed as only one could pray who felt fully satisfied with himself and in need of nothing, but yet deemed a form of sound words essential. Again the singing worms lifted up their voices, and many of the worshipers thought the music to be almost equal to any thing they had heard at theatres or other like places. And then the plump worm on the stand commenced his sermon, which happened to be on the millennium. The aim of his sermon was to show that the world was soon to be converted, and the following arguments were used in the case:

1. The present great number of professed Christians, including Papists, Spiritualists, Mormons, Universalists, Free Masons, with many other fast growing branches of christianity. He showed that such heavenly institutions were multiplying very fast, and therefore the millennium could not be far distant.

2. He showed that railroads, telegraphs, rifled cannon, needle guns and iron clad vessels of war, all proved the millennium nigh.

3. He showed that ministers were now more highly honored, flattered, and fattened than formerly, and he felt like singing, "The morning light is breaking," as his salary became enlarged, and he looked forward to the time when he might have nothing to do but to laugh and grow fat over a salary three times as large as the present one.

4. There is really less notice taken of little faults, such as adultery, perjury, stealing, etc., than there used to be; such things don't trouble society as they formerly did. The world is progressing, and the good time is coming when such trifles will not be counted worthy of notice, but all will be allowed to do as they please, with none to molest or make them afraid.

"Fly swifter round ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

5. Improvements in church building show that the world is moving in the right direction. The time was when the poor of this world were the called and chosen, but such progress has been made that the rich and respectable now take the lead, and the poor are left so far in the rear that in many cases they are unable to occupy a seat in church.

Who that observes these facts will doubt that we are progressing towards the good time coming? The church can boast of having some of the most costly and extravagant buildings in the world, and the time is at hand when it will no more be said that the weak and foolish things of this world belong to the church, but that it has the most splendid edifices, the most stylish and showy congregations, the smartest speakers, its ministers shall have higher salaries and honors than the officers of state; and in that day many will have "a call to preach."

The angel spread his wings and left before the close of the scene.

J. HAYDEN.

SWEETNESS OF WORSHIP AT EVENING.

When the noise and turmoil of the day are over, it is sweet to commune with God; the cool and calm of eventide agree most delightfully with prayer and praise. The hours of the declining sun are so many quiet alleys in the garden of time, wherein man may find his Maker waiting to commune with him, even as of old the Lord God walked with Adam in Paradise in the cool of the day. It is meet that we should set apart a peaceful season ere the day has quite departed, a season of thanksgiving for grace abounding, of repentance for follies multiplied, of self-examination for evils insinuating. To leap from day to day like a mad hunter scouring the fields, is an omen of being delivered over to destruction; but the solemn pause, the deliberate consideration—these are means of grace, and ensigns of an indwelling life. The tide of ocean stays awhile at ebb, before it resolves to flood again; the moon sometimes lingers at the full; there are distinct hedges in nature set between the acres of time—even the strike of the bell is a little mound of warning; men should not remove landmarks, but beat the bounds frequently, and keep up with due interval and solemnity the remembrance of the passing away of days, and months, and years; each evening it were well to traverse the boundaries of the day, and take note of all it has brought, and all it has seen.

The drops of the night come from the same fount as the dew of the morning; he who met Abraham at break of day, communed with Isaac in the field at eventide. He who opens the doors of the day with his hand of mercy, draws around his people the curtains of the night, and by his shining presence makes the outgoings of the morning and of the evening to rejoice. A promise at dawn, and a sure word at sunset, crown the brow of day with light, and sandal its feet with love. To breakfast with Jesus, and sup with him also, is to enjoy the days of heaven upon the earth. It is dangerous to fall asleep till the head is leaned on Jesus' bosom. When divine love puts its finger on the weary eyelids, it is brave sleeping; but that the Lord's beloved may have such sleep given to him, it is needful that he should make a near approach to the throne, and unburden his soul before the great Preserver of men. To enter into the blaze of Jehovah's presence by the way of the atoning blood is the sure method to refine ourselves of earthly dross, and to renew the soul after exhausting service.

The reading of the word, and prayer, are as gates of carbuncle to admit us into the presence of the august Majesty, and he is most blessed who most frequently swings those gates upon their sapphire hinges. When the stars are revealed, and all the hosts of heaven walk in golden, then surely is the time when the solemn temple is lit up, and the worshiper is bidden to enter. If one hour can be endowed with a sacredness above its fellows, it must be the hour when the Lord looseth the bands of Orion, and leadeth forth Arcturus and his sons; then voices from worlds afar call us to contemplation and adoration; and the stillness of the lower world prepares an oratory for the devout soul. He surely never prays at all who does not end the day as all men wish to end their lives—in prayer.

In many households the gathering of the family for evening prayer is more easy than the morning opportunity, and in all the tents of our Israel the evening sacrifice should be solemnly remembered. Ere we cower down beneath the wings of the eternal, let us entreat him to deliver us from the terror by night, and give us safe dwelling in his secret place. It is blessed work to set the night warders in their posts by supplication, and then commit ourselves, without fear, to the embrace of divine love.—C. H. Spurgeon.

REPORT.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to give a brief account of my labors the past year, ending June 6th. I wish to say to my dear brethren that I am trying to do what I can to save perishing sinners. I have traveled over two thousand five hundred miles in the last year, at an expense of $219.39, and have received of the brethren where I have labored enough to supply my wants, without being obliged to make one public collection. I can truly say that I have lacked nothing. I trust that I have done some little good in my Master's vineyard. There have been quite a goodly number of sinners converted, and backsliders reclaimed. I have baptized twenty-two in the localities where I have been. I have preached in all, one hundred and sixty-six discourses, besides holding two discussions, one on the immortality question, the other on knowing that the coming of the Lord is near; both with good results.

The good Lord has been with me, and my efforts have been blessed in the different fields of my labor. Dear brethren, pray for us, that we may have sustaining grace to help us in this our day of trial. We are almost home. Yes, glory be to God, Jesus is soon coming to relieve us of our charge; but we must occupy until he comes. I expect to work on in the service of my blessed Master until he does come. I mean to be found giving meat in due season. I remain your brother in Christ.

J. W. BURROUGHS.

Neponset, Ill.

— A certain amount of opposition is a great help to man. Kites rise against the wind and not with the wind: even a bad wind is better than none. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm. Let no man wax pale, therefore, because of opposition; opposition is what he wants, and must have, to be good for anything. Hardship is the native soil of manhood and self-reliance.

THE BIBLE.

Who composed the following description of the Bible we may never know. It was found in Westminster Abbey, nameless and dateless:—

A nation would be truly happy if it were governed by no other laws than those of this blessed book.

It is so complete a system that nothing can be added to it.

It contains everything needful to be known or done.

It affords a copy for talking, and a rule for a subject.

It gives instruction to the senate—authority and direction to a magistrate.

It cautions a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence.

It sets the husband as lord of the household, and wife as mistress of the table—tells him how to rule, and her how to manage.

It entails honor to parents, and enjoins obedience on children.

It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, the rule of the ruler, and the authority of the master—commands the subjects to honor, and the servants to obey, and promises the blessing and protection of the Almighty to all that walk by its rules.

It gives directions for weddings and burials.

It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both.

It teaches a man to set his house in order, and how to make his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife, and entails the right of the first-born and shows how the young branches shall be left.

It defends the right of all, and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, over-reaches the oppressor.

It contains the choicest matters—gives the best instruction—affords the greatest pleasure and satisfaction that we ever enjoyed.

It contains the best laws and most profound mysteries that were ever penned; it brings the best of comforts to the inquiring and disconsolate.

It exhibits life and immortality from everlasting, and shows the way to glory.

It is a brief recital of all that is to come.

It settles all matters in debate, resolves all doubts, and eases the mind and conscience of their scruples.

It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, unparalleled wars.

It is the best covenant that ever was agreed on; the best deed that ever was sealed; the best evidence that ever was produced; the best will that ever was signed. So, to understand it is to be wise indeed; to be ignorant of it is to be destitute of wisdom.

It is the king's best copy, the magistrate's best rule, the housewife's best guide, the servant's best director, and the young man's best companion; it is the school-boys spelling-book and the learned man's master-piece.

It contains choice grammar for a novice and profound mystery for a sage.

It is the ignorant man's dictionary, and the wise man's directory.

It affords knowledge of witty inventions for the humorous, and dark sayings for the grave, and is its own interpreter.

It encourages the wise, the warrior, the swift, the overcomer; it promises the eternal reward to the excellent, the conqueror, the winner, and the prevalent. And that which crowns all is, that the Author is without partiality, and without hypocrisy.—Ex.

THE MAN OF SIN.

We are informed by the apostle Paul, that the mystery of lawlessness should work until it produces a falling away or apostacy, which would be finally headed by the Man of Sin, who is also called "Antichrist," the "Wild Beast," the "King that should come."

As to how soon this awful tyrant may arise, there are signs, ominous and increasing, which indicate that he is nigh at hand, and perhaps already on his way. Many and respectable writers upon prophecy have felt moved to express their expectation that the present ruler of France may be the dark and mysterious prince who is to be developed soon in this fearful character. My own impression is that the evidence offered in support of that startling view is sufficiently alarming to justify us in keeping a watchful eye upon that Monarch, and in girding up our loins with increased expectation, looking for our Lord. The Holy Ghost has been pleased to give us one special clue to the Man of Sin in Rev. 13: 18, "His number is six hundred, threescore and six." In the names, titles, and characteristics of Louis Napoleon, that number is said to meet no fewer than thirty-three times. This, in connection with many other things in him similar to Antichrist, may at least afford us ample cause for watchfulness and prayer.—Signs of our Times.

Gems.

— Patience is always crowned with success. This rule is without an exception. It may not be a splendid success, but patience never takes anything in hand that it does not succeed with in some form.

— The highest flames are the most tremulous: and so the most holy and eminent christians are more full of reverence, and fear, and humility.

— We carry an atmosphere with us, and by it either raise or depress the religious temperature of the community; we are icebergs to chill, or central fires to warm.

— Dr. South says: "The tale-bearer and the tale-hearer should be both hanged up, both back to back, only one by the tongue and the other by the ear."

— We can do a great deal for our friends, but there are some things we cannot do. We cannot repent for them or die for them.

— If we would be safe and happy, act when tempted according to the resolutions you made when blessed.

— Men who are exceedingly blind to their own faults, are often exceedingly quicksighted to the faults of others.

— Experience alone can unravel the mystery of religion: all is dark without experience.

I COME TO THEE.

I come to the Rock
That is higher than I,
To be washed—
To be cleansed from my sins;
I know thou wilt help me,
For Jesus has died:
And me to thyself
Thou wilt bring.

— Don't teach the Bible, but let the Bible teach you.

— None ever gained esteem by tattling and gossipping.

GOOD MANNERS.—Every household should cultivate good manners. They are indispensable even to the young, a churlish, rude deportment bespeaks a low, unfeeling mind; no position, wealth, or education, can make amends for it. Good manners are attractive and winning, and should be carefully observed in every family circle. Parents should never indulge themselves in careless manners or coarse language, much less to their children or domestics. The feelings of those in inferior stations should be regarded as well as those of the highest. The smile, the pleasant tone, and the courteous bow, is quite as highly appreciated at home as abroad. If we wish a free and easy code of manners, we must cultivate them at home, by being courteous and polite to those who surround us, and we will not only add to the happiness of those we love, but be at ease in society.

TO MAKE HAPPY AND BE HAPPY; OR, LITTLE FOLKS DROPPING KIND WORDS.

"Scatter seed!
Small may be thy spirit-field,
But a goodly crop 'twill yield;
Sow the kindly word and deed,
Scatter seed!"

Little folks drop kind words—sow good seed? Yes, they do—here, there, all about—"Apples of gold in pictures of silver." Every little boy and girl born from above, indoctrinated gospelly, interested deeply and heartily in the love of Jesus, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, as all little folks should be, will drop kind words, they can't help it. And what more beautiful, praiseworthy? Look at an example.

Here is a good little boy dropping kind words, that

"Scatter the gems of the beautiful
In the depths of the humble soul;
They shall bud and blossom and bear the fruit
While the endless ages roll.

He drops a kind word wherever he is, wherever he goes, at home or abroad, from house to house, in all his visitations and distributions. Wherever there is an opportunity to squeeze in something good, kind, loving, consolitary, heart-cheering, elevating or purifying, he is sure to do it; no opportunity is lost. This dropping kind words or good things, is his regular, systematic, constant business; wherever he is, in the morning, at noonday, or at eventide, he is sure to be dropping kind words, words that tell on the heart and conscience for time, for eternity. His heart is full of this dropping—overflowingly. His whole soul is in it. It seems just as easy to drop a kind, gracious, loving word, here, there, all about, as to breathe. "Out of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh." Is he in the merchant's office, behind the counter, in the school-room, in the street, by the wayside, in the house, in the kitchen, the parlor, the dining-room, up stairs, down stairs, lying down, rising up, going out, coming in—all the same—out drops a kind word, fresh from a heart of love, soul-kindling. Does he meet a little boy, or a sweet, smiling little girl, a kind word is dropped invariably. Are the little folks in trouble, tearfully, he is sure to bind up the broken heart by dropping in a kind, cheering, comforting word of grace and consolation.

Everybody loves him, little and big, for his kind words dropped here and there. This dropping kind heavenly words has been so constant, so frequent, so universal, that now everybody that meets this angel of mercy expects, as a matter of course, to have a kind word dropped the first thing. Does he visit a friend but for a moment, a kind word is dropped in the outset. His salutations are always mingled, more or less, with these kind, gentle droppings.

This perpetual dropping of good things is his meat and his drink. He appears to be made up almost entirely of these blessed, comforting, edifying, heart-cheering droppings. They descend like the dew of heaven, or as the rain upon the mown grass. Wherever he visits or goes in the lanes or alleys, in the hovel or in the mansion, among the rich or the poor, the bond or the free, he is sure to light up every countenance joyfully, by these heavenly droppings. "The widow's heart is also made to sing with joy!" Blessed boy! happy boy!

Oh, for a world of these droppings! how soon would it blossom as the rose! Angels would tune their golden harps afresh—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men."

Why is not every little boy and girl alive, wide-awake, on fire to make the world better and happier; swift on errands of love, mercy, and truth; running here, running there, flying here, flying there on deeds benevolent, gracious, glorious? To do good to this one, to that one; making this one better and happier, and that one better and happier?

What hinders the lambs of the flock being just as zealous, just as active, if not more, in doing the Master's will, telling how good Jesus is, how ready, able, and willing to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him, as the big folks are?

Children will you promise to do something every day to make others happy, to lighten somebody's toil, cheer some sorrowful one, cause a cheerful smile upon some disconsolate face, cause some widow's heart to sing for joy? Do thus in the name of the Lord, and for his glory, and you are sure to be happy. Your light shall rise as the dawning sun.

"Beautiful hands are they that do
The work of the noble, good and true,
Busy for them the long day through.

Beautiful feet are they that go
Swiftly to lighten another's woe,
Through summer's heat and winter's snow.

Beautiful children, if rich or poor,
Who walk the pathway sweet and pure
That leads to the mansions strong and sure."

D. F. N.

TALKING AND LISTENING.—Do not go into society, young man, under the solitary impression that to be entertaining you must talk. More young gentlemen, and some old ones, too, make bores of themselves because they labor under this impression, than from any other cause.

Dr. Johnson, we are told, entertained companies the whole evening; his mere conversation would not have done it, had not his reputation already commanded the unbounded respect of his listeners. They felt it a privilege to listen to him.

Unless a young man consider himself so much more than Dr. Johnson that he can do the same thing, without the advantage of Dr. Johnson's reputation, he will do well to look for other examples. This is as true in the case of individual listeners as of whole companies.

THE LITTLE GIRL'S TESTIMONY.—The most stirring exhortation we recollect hearing in the prayer-room, came from the lips of a little girl some ten years of age, who was troubled with a serious imperfection of speech. With considerable difficulty of articulation she told of her hope in the Savior, ending with, "If ever the time comes that I can't talk at all, I shall raise my right hand to show that I love Jesus." Let all silent christians come to a like determination.

— A Hartford four-year old saw his parents preparing for church and asked them to take him along with them. He was told that he was too little, and must wait till he should grow bigger.

"Well," returned he, "you'd better take me now, for when I get bigger I may not want to go."

The parents saw the point: he was taken.

— Let the youth who stands with a glass of liquor in his hand, consider which he had better throw away—the liquor or himself.

"A LITTLE WHILE."—1 Cor. 7: 29-31.

Beyond the smiling and the weeping,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the waking and the sleeping,
Beyond the sowing and the reaping,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the blooming and the fading,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the shining and the shading,
Beyond the hoping and the dreading,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the rising and the setting,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the soothing and the fretting,
Beyond rememb'ring and forgetting,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the gathering and the strewing,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the ebbing and the flowing,
Beyond the coming and the going,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the parting and the meeting,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the farewell and the greeting,
Hearts fainting now, and now high beating,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the frost-chain and the fever,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the rock-waste and the river,
Beyond the ever and the never,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home,
Sweet hope!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

THE NUMBER OF THE NAME—666.

We see in the January number of the "Signs of Our Times," a reference to the work of Mr. John Eason, 43 Greenwood Road, Dalston, in which Mr. Eason maintains that "if Napoleon be the antichrist, the fatal number 666 will meet in him thirty-three different ways." Not having had the pleasure of reading Mr. Eason's work, we are not prepared to estimate the reasons for his opinion; but from a careful examination and study of the subject of the susceptibilities of the name of Napoleon Third in relation to the highly important and diagnostic apocalyptic number, we are inclined to suspect that Mr. Eason has placed the aggregate of numerical correspondences at a pretty high figure. Still he may be right. Stimulated by a sense of the magnitude and importance of the subject, and believing it a matter of just and intelligent interest, we subjoin the result of our inquiries in this direction, and this the more willingly from a recollection of the intense interest with which we perused the impressive work on Napoleon, by Rev. M. Baxter, and subsequently the able treatise of Rev. R. C. Shimeall.

The identification is traceable in at least three languages; viz., Latin, Greek and Hebrew. The principle of admeasurement or reckoning is contained in the numerical value of letters, which anciently corresponded to figures. The first series inviting attention is in Latin. The whole name of the French Emperor is Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte. Heading the list is the Latin form of the name Louis, which is Ludovicus. The number 666 is discovered very readily thus: Ludovicus. L—50, u or v—5, d—500, v—5, i—1, c—100, u or v—5. Total, 666. The fact that there are two non-numerical letters in the name, viz., o and s, does not interfere with the conclusion, or impair the value or force of the argument furnished in the name. It has been asked if antichrist is to be known by the name of Louis, how are we to know which of a great number, living and dead, is to be known or denoted in this connection? We shall see presently.

Second, in the Latin series is Carolus Judaeus or Charles a Jew. The numerical letters are c. l, u, j. or i, u, d, u, which together count 666, thus: c—100, l—50, u—5, i—1, u—5, d—500, u—5. Total, 666. The significance of this form is seen in the prophetic character and elevation of Napoleon, as the antichristian leader and patron of the restoration of the scattered Jews to their ancient territorial home in unbelief. It is not our purpose now to trace, or attempt to trace a Jewish element in the ancestry of Napoleon, nor do we unhesitatingly affirm the flow of Israelitish blood in his veins; nor do we rely on Jewish peculiarity of physiognomy, nor on the friendship manifested to the Jews by Napoleon I.; but when to these incidents we add the great and notable fact of a prospective headship, a nominally and falsely messianic headship of this people, in the inception and process, or at the completion of a restored nationality, we can estimate the propriety and value of the designation given above. And it is worthy of remark, that the fact of the existence of this number in the name Charles, together with the distinctive qualifying adjective, fixes upon the present French Emperor with the greater clearness as the coming antichrist, rather than any other living Bonaparte.

Third, Louis Secundus, or Louis the Second. L—50, u,—5, i—1, c—100, u—5, d—500, u—5. Total, 666. But what is the force or propriety of the designation Louis the Second? The explanation is as follows: 1. We understand by this a Bonaparte instead of, or in contrast with, a Bourbon dynasty. For a long term of years France was ruled by a succession of kings bearing the name of Louis. There were not less than at least eighteen rulers in this Ludovicic series in the Bourbon line. Louis Second is therefore a Bonaparte, successive to a Bourbon.

2. He is also an Emperor, as successive to a King, or, in other words, the second dynastic Louis in French history is imperial instead of regal.

3. In the history of Bonapartism in Europe, we find thus far two members of the family who have attained to power, bearing the name Louis; the first Louis, the King of Holland, and brother of Napoleon I.; and the second Louis, his son, the present emperor of the French.

4. There were born to the elder Louis two sons, one Napoleon Louis, and the other Louis Napoleon. The first of these died at a comparatively early age, leaving the second Louis to fill out the prophetic mould, as septime octave, or healed head of the beast. Thus we have observed the detective value of the name, both comprehensively and in detail.

Fourth, we may mention a few other forms in Latin, without seeking to attach undue importance to any, but they may be not altogether without interest in such an important connection. The reader will readily put together the numerical letters, without any necessity of pointing them out here. 1. Carolus Oriundus, or Charles who is to arise. 2. Redito avunculo, To the uncle restored. 3. Redivivo, filio capiti, To the son a head revived. 4. We group together the following without caring to designate them otherwise than perhaps simply curiosities. Louis Napoleon, filius perditionis, or Louis Napoleon, a son of perdition. Louis Q, diaboli Louis, or Louis Second, the adversary's Louis. Napoleonti duci x, or To Napoleon leader of ten (kingdoms.)

We now turn to examine identifications in the Greek language. First is Λοις Ναπολεον, or Louis Napoleon; thus: Λ—30, ο—70, ι—10, ς—200, Ν—50, α—1, π—80, ο—70, λ—30, ε—5, ο—70, ν—50. Total, 666. A critical or philological objection may be urged to the form Lois for Louis. But that the abbreviation is perfectly warrantable, see note 3, page 55, of Butman's Greek Grammar, in which it is shown that the Dorics and Ionics sometimes shortened the diphthong ou, as in the case of Bolesthai for Boulesthai.

Second. Ναπολεοντι or Napoleonti. To Napoleon. This is the dative case of the name Ναπολεων, and is inscriptive, as serving the convenience of a period and passion for the idolatrous homage of a man, which is prophetically certified to mark the closing hour of Satan's princedom prior to his arrest and judgment at the coming of the mighty.

Third. Να. Βοναπαρτη 3, or Napoleon Bonaparte Third. The letters combined thus: Ν—50, α—1, Β—2, ο—70, ν—50, α—1, π—80, α—1, ρ—100, τ—300, η—8, 3—3, form the aggregate 666. No one, we presume, will object to the letters Na. as an abbreviation of Napoleon, for all are familiar with the use of the first two letters as representative of a name, in such cases as Th. for Thomas, Ph. for Philip, Ma. for Mark, etc.

Fourth. Α. Ν. Καλονμερος, or L. N. Calonmeros, thus: Λ—30, Ν—50, Κ—20, α—1, λ—30, ο—70, ν—50, μ—40, ε—5, ρ—100, ο—70, ς—200. Total, 666, After the initials in this case, we have the strictly Greek form of the Italian word Bonaparte. In Baxter's Napoleon it is shown, by quotation from the Dutchess D'Abrantes, that this was really the original family ancestral name prior to the emigration of the earlier Greek stock into Italy. The name of a prominent ancestral representative was Calomeros Comnene. Now we have simply inserted the letter n after the first o, which makes a perfect Greek form of the word, or words, signifying a good part. If there was the slightest objection to this, the number is still remaining in the name, by changing the second initial to Nn, which would be unexceptionable entirely, as the first and last letters of a name are often taken in abbreviation, e. g., Wm. for William, Jn. for John.

Fifth. Κομνηνε Ελληνικος, Comnene Ellekinos, or Comnene, a Greek. It has already been seen that this word Comnene was one of the Bonapartean Greek names. The added adjective is particularizing as denoting nationality and derivation. The letters Κ—20, ο—70, μ—40, ν—50, η—8, ν—50, ε—5, Ε—5, λ—30, λ—30, η—8, ν—50, ι—10, κ—20, ο—70, ς—200. Total, 666.

Sixth. Λοις εκ Ρανιολινι, Louis ek Raniolini, or Louis descended from Raniolini. I have seen the question asked, "If Ludovicus, or Louis be antichrist, how are we to know what Louis among many is to be thus denoted." The answer has already been given above, and is furnished again in the present form. Letitia Raniolini was the maiden name of the wife of Charles Bonaparte, and the mother of Napoleon I. and the elder Louis. The emperor of France is therefore the grandson of this woman, and his descent from her is expressed in the form here given, which exactly fills the number, thus: Λ—30, ο—70, ι—10, ς—200, ε—5, κ—20, Ρ—100, α—1, ν—50, ι—10, ο—70, λ—30, ι—10, ν—50, ι—10. Total, 666.

A seventh form is perhaps hardly worthy of special notice, though it may be given. A. Ναπολεον 3. Θηριον δεκα, L. Napoleon 3, therion deka, or Louis Napoleon third, wild beast of ten (horns.) To some it might appear worthy of mention that the form, L. N. Colonmeros, by a slight transposition of letters, and one or two trifling changes, would read N. μικρον κερας, or Napoleon a little horn. It happens that Ludovicus, also by transposition, strangely reads Divus luco, god in a grove.

We have thus mentioned particularly ten forms in this kind of apocalyptic nomenclature, without reckoning seven inferior cases, though, if these were included, we should have not less than seventeen in all, or a little more than half the number demanded by Mr. Eason. The subject is one of immense importance as helping to identify "that man of sin" whom the Lord shall destroy at his coming. Comments we reserve for a future article.

THE SAVIOR'S MISSION.

[Serial—No. One.]

BY GEORGE W. GREEN.

"Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."—John 1: 29.

This language, uttered by John the Baptist, sets forth in few words the glorious mission of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It announces the removal of the sin of the world; and the Savior is set forth as the person by whom this great work is to be accomplished.

In order to comprehend the magnitude of the Savior's work, it is necessary to understand what is embraced in the phrase, "the sin of the world." As the word is here used in the singular, we inquire, "What is sin?" An inspired apostle answers, "Sin is the transgression of the law."—1 John 3: 4. Hence, whenever we have transgression, we have disobedience; and whenever we have disobedience, we have transgression, which is sin. From this it would seem that "the sin of the world" is comprehended in the term DISOBEDIENCE. Hence, we understand that every shade of transgression is included in what John the Baptist calls, "THE SIN OF THE WORLD." The Scriptures inform us that "all unrighteousness is sin." 1 John 5: 17. It is disobedience that constitutes unrighteousness; consequently, when the sin of the world is taken away, disobedience will be taken away, and all unrighteousness removed.

What a glorious and sublime era will this be in the history of earth! Men will no longer be "filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful"; but "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." God grant that the time may soon come.

But is the sin of the world to be literally taken away? Our text affirms it; and shall we deny it, and say that John the Baptist lied about it? Never. O, how great, how glorious is the work of Messiah!

THE PURIFICATION OF THE EARTH.

The Bible brings to view a time when the earth is to be free from sin. In support of this proposition, we appeal to the sacred oracles. "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."—Num. 14: 21. We have here the words of the eternal Jehovah, uttered under oath, that "ALL the earth shall be FILLED with the glory of the Lord." No language can be plainer, or more significant. When ALL the earth is FILLED with the GLORY OF GOD, there can be no room for evil. There can then be no more sin. Such is the manifest import of the text; and this truth is corroborated by numerous other scriptures.

"All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord."—Ps. 22: 27. When all the ends of the world remember and turn unto the Lord, there can be no sinners left, and, consequently, no sin. Hence, it is easily seen that John the Baptist was not alone when he taught that the sin of the world is to be taken away. When describing the millennial reign of Christ, David again testifies upon this point as follows: "All kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him." Ps. 72: 11.

If this text teaches anything, it teaches universal homage to Jesus Christ, when he shall sit upon the throne of his father David. No one should ask for plainer testimony; but so impressed was David's mind with this thrilling theme, that still again he reverts to it as follows: "All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name,"—Ps. 86: 9. It seems to us that none can read such positive and explicit declarations, and fail to see that David believed that God will fulfill his oath, as recorded in Num. 14: 21. But we cannot enlarge here; and with one other quotation from the sweet Psalmist of Israel, we close his testimony upon this subject. "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name forever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen and Amen. The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended."—Ps. 72: 18-20.

We have here the last of David's recorded prayers; and how could he close them more fitly than in praying that THE WLOLE EARTH should be FILLED with the glory of God? It should be remembered that this prayer was inspired; and can we for a moment suppose that the Holy Spirit would direct David to record a prayer that God intended never to answer? Never. Rather let us believe with David that God will yet purify the earth, and make it free from sin and all its consequences.

We now invite attention to the testimony of Isaiah. "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."—Isa. 11: 9; Hab. 2: 14. When they shall no longer "hurt," nor "destroy," and the earth shall be FULL of the knowledge of the Lord, certainly sinners will no longer exist, and sin will have been removed. Here we close our testimony from the Old Testament; and here arises the question,—Does the New Testament confirm the teaching of the Old in regard to the purification of the universe?

Speaking of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, Paul uses the following language: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, of things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."—Phil. 2: 9-11. "And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13. When EVERY knee shall bow, and EVERY tongue shall confess to the glory of God the Father; and when EVERY creature in heaven and on the earth, and under the earth, shall say, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever," where will sin and sinners be found? Nowhere, for the sin of the world will have been removed, and every thing that hath breath shall praise the Lord, and the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God. Ps. 150: 6; Num. 14: 21.

"THE TIME OF THE END."

The following article from the Christian Radical, under the above heading, contains some prints worthy of serious consideration. The writer says:—

"The present religious organizations will have to stand aside. There is no help for it. The more we meditate on it, the more deeply does this conviction enter the soul. They are incompetent to do the work of Christ in this age. We fear a worse charge than this against them is true, that to do the work is not their chief concern. They are chiefly concerned about their creeds, their ritual, relative strength, wealth, and social power. These are the things the assemblies, synods and conferences talk about, and their papers more or less filled with. Their isms are the things they write of and that they raise money to extend. These are facts, not of occasional but of continual occurrence, and indicate the prevalent habit of the different denominations. They are already to take insult, and lift up their hands in horror if we charge them with exalting their church above Christ; but in the face of their uplifted hands we falter not in saying that practically such is the fact. And the evil has become chronic. It is imbedded in the very structure of the organizations themselves. There is no cure for the evil in them. The only remedy is to pass out of them—forward into something simpler into which Christ shall be the Lord to the glory of God the Father, and not to the glory of Methodism or Calvinism, or Lutheranism, or some other of the long catalogue of ecclesiasticisms. At this point we are met with the declaration that denominations must arise, they are necessary. So 'offences must needs come.' The necessity lies altogether on the human side and not at all in the divine scheme of the church, in which denominations have no place.

If any will nevertheless maintain that they have been overruled for good we shall not dispute with them; but whatever may have been accomplished by them in the divine hand, their power for good is exhausted, and we feel that God is tired of them. As we have said, they will have to stand aside. They are not normal, are not included in the divine scheme, originate from the human side; and although used, in his providence, to subserve certain ends, they are nevertheles transient, and must pass away. And the time has come. They are exhausted. The sceptre is dropping out of their hands. They feel it too. Hence the effort to do something to regain their prestige, in many cases by an increase of the rites to make more imposing service, in other cases by uniting the different sect families of the same name into one powerful denomination, for it does seem to us that the union movement, with a great many, takes no higher pitch than this. But they cannot be saved. The currents of christian life are seeking to flow forward out of them now. God is calling us out of them into larger, better, more capable things. They are no help to Christ, they stand in his way. In due time he will make things new. Let us prepare the way before him in order to his coming.

We are standing on the borders of a new and better time. We shall possibly pass through a period of doubt and falling away ere we enter fully therein. But the time of the end has come for the denominational organizations. The day is closing on them now. They are beginning to grope their way. Night will settle down upon them. To those whose 'all in all' is Jesus Christ there will dawn a morning of sweetest light.

In all this we are calmly confident."

For the World's Crisis.

A DOOMED WORLD!

As once destroyed by a Flood, now awaits the Deluge of Fire!

God's word declares, "The world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished," and also declares, "But the heavens and the earth which are now by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

How was it in the days of Noah? "The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence." "And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." "Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot, they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded." "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

Excess in all things is now fully developed, filling up the prophetic picture. Prophecy coverges to this point, and is nearly fulfilled. Yet unbelief pervades the world; well expressed by a writer who says: "As in the days of Noah, whose eye, anointed by the Holy Ghost, foresaw the approaching deluge; prepared an ark for the saving of himself and house. Let us contemplate the scene, as the family of Noah were safely housed within the ark, while the last appointed day of earth's doom sped on. No sign was there of change; all nature moved in wonted harmony; and men in science deeply read, and wise in academic theory, foretold improvements vast; and learned skeptics proved that earth should with eternity endure; concluding madly that there was no God." Men pursued their ceaseless round of business, sin and pleasure, forgetting that they were wearing out the last brief moments of divine forbearance and of human probation. How solemn the last week! How dread the suspense!

The world goes on as usual. The farmer is in his field, the merchant in his shop, the drunkard at his cups, the reveler at his revelry, and the sinner at his sin. Violence and strife and iniquity roll on in resistless current; the world is given up to destruction, and yet fears no danger. What a scene! To night, a world's feast! To-morrow, a world's funeral! The last day dawns; still "No sign of change appeared. To every man that day seemed as the past."

The laborer goes to his toil, the tradesman pursues his calling, the murderer marks his victim, the robber watches for the unwary, the harlot gads abot in gay attire, and men scoff about Noah's folly, while little children join in mockery of this man of God. Men shake their heads and say, "We're safe enough, and Noah will feel different to morrow." But hark! The swelling echoes of the distant thunder! See! swift as the eagle's flight, vast inky clouds roll up the sky. Earth rocks like a storm-tossed vessel, beneath the blackened heavens, and on every hand the ground swells and yawns beneath our feet. Who can depict the scene! The flood-gates of heaven are opened, the foundations of earth are broken up, the deep rolls up its floods, the waves roar, the winds howl, the clouds gather, the rains descend, the lightnings blaze, the thunders bellow, sinners wail, joy departs, hope expires, and above, beneath and around, is one wild scene of confusion, darkness, anguish and dismay. What a funeral! The funeral of a godless world! What a night succeeded that fearful day! No sun, no moon, no stars, no peace, no joy, no hope; but one dread scene of blackness and desolation on every side, What a change from music, mirth and blasphemy which was world wide, to the awful roar of deep calling unto deep, and thunder answering thunder!

Shall I drop a warning? Hear it: "As in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

This last generation has witnessed the ending of the great tribulation, followed by the supernatural darkening of the sun and moon, also the falling of the stars, distress of nations, great earthquakes and tidal waves, or sea and waves roaring. Also, the universal cry, "Let us have peace," or peace and safety when "sudden destruction cometh!" The very tokens that were to precede and warn us of earth's coming doom. If not, what means all these strange succession of events so completely fulfilling God's word. Sinner!

"'Tis the last call of mercy,
Oh, turn not away;
For now swiftly hasteth
The dread vengeance day!"

Soon will the gathering angel thrust in his sickle and reap; for the time is come to reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe." Soon, suddenly and unexpectedly will a sleeping, unbelieving, ungodly world, awake to meet her final doom!

THE SOLAR MUTABILITY.

We now know that our own sun (resembling in this, probably, most other solar bodies of the same kind) is in so highly fluid and excitable a condition as to be constantly sending out from its surface forked tongues, thousands of miles in extent, of inflamed hydrogen gas, like the flickering streams of light from the stars of a street illumination, and moreover as to be subject to great periodical disturbances, now called magnetic storms, which are in all probability caused by certain combinations in the movements of those little solid bodies, on one of which we live, round the sun. Even now one such epoch of magnetic storm seems to be thought pretty near at hand. The sun has been lately exhibiting the most surprising forms of disturbance, and presenting to scientific eyes less fixity of essence than before. Spots so vast, that we must estimate their dimensions by millions of square miles, have broken out from time to time, and have presented rapid changes of figure, indicating the action of forces of inconceivable intensity. Clusters of smaller spots, extending over yet vaster areas, have exhibited every form of disturbance known to the solar physicist, and every degree of light, from the apparent blackness (in reality only relative) of the nuclei, to the intense brilliancy of the fæculous ridges. And we know that these appearances are not merely matters for the curious, with which, as they happen at a distance of above ninety millions of miles, practical men need not concern themselves.

In point of fact, it is by no means impossible that the issues of peace or war, of a financial crisis or a religious agitation, may be closely bound up with these phenomena, if not indeed—which is also quite possible—the disappearance of our whole system after the fashion of other solar systems, which have thus disappeared. This much at least is certain, that the vast changes now going on in the physical constitution of the sun, are changes which do most powerfully affect the electric condition of our earth, which have in former years caused the most violent disturbances in the various artificial, as well as natural electric apparatus of the world we live in, and which, to speak of the least of all its possible effects, might just as well as not happen some day to throw the electric condition of every telegraphic cable on our planet, under the sea and above it, into the most dire confusion, and send down telegraphic companies' shares to zero in a lump; even if they do not contrive to telegraph to us, after some strange inarticulate fashion, that shares in all public companies, even in that very limited public company the human race, are, in a physical point of view, of very doubtful value indeed. Let us explain briefly to what we allude.

On Sept. 1st, 1859, shortly before noon, two astronomers, Messrs. Hodgson and Carrington, one at Oxford, the other at London, were at the same instant scrutinizing a large group of sun spots. On a sudden, two intensely bright patches of light appeared in front of the cluster. So brilliant were they, that the observers thought the darkening screens attached to their telescopes must have become fractured. But this was found not to be the case. The bright spots indicated some process going on upon the sun's surface, —a process of such activity, that within five minutes the spots traveled over a space of nearly 34,000 miles. Now at the new observatory, there are self-registering magnetic instruments, which indicate the processes of change by which the subtle influences of terrestrial magnetism wax and wane. At one time the line traced by the pointer will be marked by scarcely perceptible undulations, indicating the almost quiescent state of the great terrestrial magnet. At another, well marked waves along the line exhibit the pulsations of the magnetic system, influenced in a manner as yet intelligible to the physicist. And then there is a third form of disturbance, the sharp, sudden jerks of the pointer, exhibiting the occurrence of those mysterious phenomena termed magnetic storms. When the records of the new observatory came to be looked over, it was found that at the very instant in which the brilliant spots of light had appeared to Messrs. Hodgson and Carrington, the self-registering instruments had been subjected to the third and most significant form of disturbance,—a magnetic storm began in fact as the light broke out on the sun's surface.

But this was not the only evidence of the sympathy with which the earth responded to the solar action. It was subsequently found that soon after the spots of light had appeared, the whole frame of the earth had thrilled under a mysterious magnetic influence. At the West Indies, in South America, in Australia, wherever magnetic observations are systematically made, the observers had the same story to tell. In the telegraph stations at Washington and Philadelphia, the signalmen received strong electric shocks. In Norway, telegraphic machinery was set on fire. The pen of Bains' telegraph was followed by a flame. And wherever telegraphic wires were in action, well marked indications of disturbance presented themselves. Even this, however, was not all. The great magnetic storm was not a mere instantaneous electric throe. It was hours before the disturbed earth resumed its ordinary state. And thus it happened that in nearly all parts of the earth, night fell while the storm was yet in progress. During the night, magnificent auroras spread their waving streamers over the sky, both in the northern and southern hemisphere. As the disturbed needle vibrated, the colored streamers waved responsive; and it was only when the magnetic storm was subsiding, that the auroral lights faded from the heavens.

Now it is evident that these phenomena show the most intimate relation between these peculiar disturbances in the sun and the magnetic currents of our own earth. Directly, when one of these changes takes place upwards of millions of miles away, the electric condition of our planet is changed in some mysterious way, of which our instruments and even the condition of our sky bear record.

The pens of all our telegraphic wires may some day trace in flame a handwriting more ominous of human destiny, than was the handwriting which during Belshazzar's feast traced a warning on the wall of the fall of Babylonian dynasty. Moreover, note this, that these changes in the condition of the sun take place at intervals of about eleven years; so that it seems most likely that every eleven years certain magnetic conditions recur which have not occurred in the interval. If so, perhaps the magnetic excitement of 1859 will recur, and it may be in much greater force, next year—1870. And if it does, how are we to say what may or may not recur with it. It is quite possible that those periods of speculative financial excitement, which are also said to follow periodically, in something very like the same period, may be more or less dependent on the magnetic condition of our planet; and that so near a phenomenon, as speculative frenzy on the various stock exchanges of Europe may be more or less connected with these wonderful discharges of voltaic batteries in the sun. It is not quite impossible that the electric political condition of Europe in 1848, and again at an interval of eleven years, in the year of Italian revival and revolution—1859, may not recur after one or more periods of eleven years—in 1870, in consequence of the returning epoch of magnetic excitement in the sun.—Selected by J. K. Bellows, from the "London Spectator."

ARE WE DOING IT?

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10: 31.

God looks at the incentive instead of the act, and never blesses a good action done with an impure motive. There is a difference between doing something because God wishes us to, and doing it because it will be for our personal interest to do so. I have known people leave off flowers and gold because if they wore them people would think that they were not christians. A short time ago I heard a girl say, "O how I wanted to attend that concert last evening, but I knew the church would talk so if I did, that I staid at home." Was God pleased wtth her staying at home? If the heart is pure, will not the motives be?

I have heard a brother or sister argue and exhort, and plead an hour with a young convert about wearing a ring. If she is one of God's children, and 'tis wrong for her to wear it, will not he show her her duty and help her to do it? There is too much pruning off the branches instead of pulling up the root. If we have a garden, when weeds appear, we do not break off the top that is above the ground, but take up the root and branch together; and so if we are God's children, we will not only repress the expression of feeling, but God will take the feeling from our hearts; we will not only keep from saying hateful things when angry, but from anger itself.

If we are his, we shall delight to do his will. He requires nothing but what is for the happiness of his children. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous."

UNCONDITIONAL ELECTION.

We sometimes hear brethren thank God that the doctrine of unconditional election is "dying out." I should really be happy to unite with them in this kind of thanksgiving, but I fail to see the truth of what they claim. On the contrary, stubborn facts prove that this pernicious and soul-destroying doctrine is startlingly on the increase, though it may be in a new phase and bearing a new name. Modern Spiritism, that last and most gigantic deception of the Devil, in various ways, inculcates the same idea. May God help us to realize that we are not mere machines, acting only as we are acted upon, and doing only those things that God has predestinated before our existance that we should do, but that we are accountable beings, amenable to him for all our actions.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 1, 1869.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

SOME ONE sends $1.25 from Salmon Falls, N. H., for the World's Crisis, and 50 cents for tracts, but does not sign his name. Who was it?

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

CAMPMEEPING.—CRISIS.—PAY EARLY.

As most of the subscribers for the Crisis, from a distance, who come to campmeeting, design to pay their subscription there, so as to avoid the risk of sending money by mail, we would make this suggestion: Attend to it by the middle of the week, as there will be so much to occupy your time after that, that you may forget it. Our subscription list may be found at the Book-stand, and all errors in names, addresses, or credits, will cheerfully be rectified. CALL EARLY.

PLEASE NOTICE that the present volume will close with the next number. Now is a good time to renew your subscription, and to ask your neighbor to take the paper. Send him yours. Try him. It may be the means of his salvation.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.—We purpose to give our faithful compositors and clerks a rest next week. They deserve it. We trust our readers will cheerfully grant this favor.

BE SHORT.

It often happens that prayer-meetings are almost spoiled by long prayers and exhortations. They make the meetings dull and tedious. This is emphatically true at campmeetings. We have often known a campmeeting to drag through the whole week because some talked and prayed so long in the conference meetings. It seems as though some thought that the more they said the more good they had done. Then there are others who take such occasions to advance their pet theories, and thus kill the prayer-meetings. After the experience and close observation of more than a quarter of a century, we are most fully satisfied that short prayers, exhortations and hymns, are most productive of good results in prayer and conference meetings. We hope this point will be specially remembered by those who attend the coming campmeetings.

We sometimes meet those who insist on having a long talk because they claim to be led by the Spirit. In such cases we have generally found the spirit by which such were led, was a strong self-will, and an overbearing, harsh spirit.

WHAT NEXT?

To the man interested in passing and coming events, this question has become one of special importance. Had the inquiry been made in the days of Belshazzar, the answer would have been seen on the wall of his palace,—"mene, mene, tekel, upharsin,—"thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." Dan. 5: 25–28.

What next? What will succeed the Medo-Persian kingdom? The Grecian with an Alexander at its head. Then what? "His kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity; . . . for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others besides those." Dan. 2: 4.

What next? The "fourth kingdom" was the Roman, as all must admit. The Roman empire began with Augustus Cesar, 31 B. C. What next? It "shall be divided." Dan. 2: 41. Into how many parts? Ten. Dan. 7: 25. In the fifth and sixth century it was thus divided. Then what? "Three of the first horns" were to be "plucked up by the roots." Dan. 7: 8, 24. Those were plucked up in the reign of Justinian, between A. D. 533 and 554. What next? The one that subdued three kings shall become a persecuting power, "wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they [the times and laws] shall be given into his hands, until a time and times and the dividing of time." Dan. 7: 25. There is no room for doubt but that this has been done. For many centuries that power upon the "seven hills," symbolized by this little horn with "eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things" (Dan. 7: 8), did slaughter "the saints of the Most High, till some fifty or seventy-five millions were slain." When speaking to the same power, symbolized by a "woman" riding upon a scarlet-colored beast, John says:—"I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." Rev. 27; 6. Is she drinking their flood at the present time? Certainly not. This work of hers is in the past. Then what? When referring to the close of her history, after she gets through drinking "the blood of the saints," John speaks of "the ten horns" which are to "receive power as kings, one hour with the beast," and says: "These shall hate the" woman, "and shall make her desolate." Rev. 27: 16. Is she hated now by the ten divisions of Italy, which formerly loved and sustained her? Certainly. Then we are thus far down the stream of time.

What next? Says Daniel, when speaking of the "little horn," which most evidently represents the same as the woman and the beast that carries her,—"They shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it unto the end." In 1859, we believe this work of taking away her dominion—St. Peter's Patrimony, as it is called—commenced, when the ten horns began to push against her, and hate her, and throw off her yoke. At the present time her dominion is all gone but what is on the seven hills at Rome.

What next? The next and last thing in this prophetic series is the total destruction of the remnant that is left at Rome; and then comes "the marriage supper of the Lamb," which cannot take place till after the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. All things indicate that the close of the present dispensation is at hand. Are we ready?

DOOMED WORLD.—The article in this week's paper, entitled a "Doomed World," can be had on a sheet, well arranged, by addressing Bro. S. L. Manley, Rochester, N. Y. Price two cents per copy. It will be well to send for several, as the postage on a number will be no more than for one.

"THE SAVIOR'S MISSION."—Under this heading we have the first of an interesting series of articles from Bro. Geo. W. Green.

"THE YOUNG GIRLS" will find some excellent "maxims" in this paper.

"THE RAINBOW."—We are glad to learn that several are anxious to take The Rainbow, an English monthly, ably edited by Dr. Wm. Leask, 9 Newington Green, London, Eng. We have been asked to give the subscription price. This we are not now able to do; but we have written to Dr. Leask for information, and will report as soon as possible.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD?"—This is the title of a new tract by Eld. J. S. White, and published at the Crisis office. It treats the subject with candor, sound argument, meets objections fairly, and presents the truth in a clear light. It should be widely circulated.

"GOOD HEALTH" for September is at hand, full of valuable articles, giving instruction in relation to the laws of health. It is an able health journal, published monthly by Alexander Moore, 21 Franklin St., Boston. Price, $2.00 a year. It is well worth the money.

BETHEL TENT-MEETING.

The meetings in the Bethel Tent, at Cooper's Point, Camden, N. J., have been a happy success. Many attend from Philadelphia. A large number of members of various churches have become deeply interested, and often rise in our prayer and conference meetings to express their gratitude that they ever came to the Bethel Tent. They have found what they had long desired,—a people who truly loved Jesus and his coming. They have begun a new life in the lord, and feel quite like young converts. A goodly number of such have been baptized, and received very special blessing. They all feel like persons who have come out of darkness into light. Why is this, if it is such horrid infidelity as some affirm? Has it come to pass in these last days, that the Lord blesses the belief of error more than he does the truth?

The baptisms in the Delaware river, which runs near the tent, have been pleasant scenes. We attended two at sunset, when the moon and the evening star in the west were smiling sweetly upon us, while singing the beautiful songs of Zion on the bank of the noble river. It was a hallowed hour, and caused happy emotions in the hearts of Jesus' friends, who witnessed the scene.

Our meetings Sabbath day were seasons of special interest. The weather was fine, the order and attention excellent, and the audiences large. At ten o'clock, we met for a love feast, and had a refreshing season. The Lord is doing a good work in the tent. The people dread to have it leave. They beg earnestly to have it remain till cold weather. It was designed to take it down Monday, Aug. 16th, but the interest is so great, Bro. Hook has concluded to remain another week. We had three seasons of baptism during the week we were there; and Bro. Hook was to baptize again Monday evening, the 16th inst. The meetings are exerting a hallowed influence, which is spreading rapidly in all directions. Some, who do not think it best to attend them, are talking against us; but those who come are delighted with the spirit of the meetings; and say they are like the good meetings held by the Methodists forty years ago. They did not think they should ever find such meetings again, as they enjoyed in former years; but these were even better than those.

In all places where they receive the blessed truths that are now shining forth so brilliantly, they tell one story; i. e., the Bible is more precious to them than ever before; they love Jesus better, and take more delight in his service. Knowing this to be the common experience, it gives us boldness in presenting the truth which we could not feel if the opposite result followed. We can well afford to be called hard names, if we can be instrumental in leading people to love Jesus and his word more ardently. It is blessed to suffer reproach for our dear Lord. Let us all glory in the cross of Christ.

During the Sabbath day, we presented the great chain of prophetic evidence which shows beyond all controversy that we are near the end of the present dispensation; and also showing that the failure of set times in the past does not affect in the least degree the main arguments which serve to prove that the kingdom of God will soon appear. The large audiences listened with marked attention. It was evident that they thought the subject was worthy of their candid consideration. In all places we find an increasing interest to hear on the reasons of our hope. We have only to present them in a kind, christian spirit, to see happy results follow. But if any take occasion to speak harshly against the churches, calling them by name, they must not expect to see much good come from their labors. There are things which are true, which should not be spoken at all times. We can reach many with kindness, while very few can be reformed by cold censure. He that would win souls must show by word and deed that he loves them; and if he has the spirit of Christ, he cannot feel otherwise. Whenever we hear a person denouncing other denominations with a bad spirit, we feel sure there is a lack in his heart. He may believe and advocate the truth; but his manner of doing it is more calculated to drive people away from Jesus, than to lead them to become his humble followers. Let us present the truth in love to all; and we may be sure of seeing good fruits from our labors. Jesus often suffers in the house of his friends, because they do not show love to his enemies. He loved us before we became his disciples; so we should be kind to those who have not yet seen the truth we prize so highly.

Monday morning, Aug. 16th, we left the city of "brotherly love" at half-past six A. M., and had a very pleasant ride by cars to Amboy, and thence by boat to New York. The only disagreeable thing on our journey was the tobacco smoke we had to endure on the boat. If some who profess to be gentlemen, knew how disagreeable they made themselves, we think they would not thrust their offensive smoke and tobacco spittle into the presence of those who do not use the poisonous weed, and are disgusted at its sight and smell. It is smoke, smoke, chew and spit; snuff, snuff, chew and spit everywhere. If the money thus worse than wasted was given for tracts and to the poor, what blessed results would follow to the giver and receiver. If the tobacco were thrown away, men would enjoy better physical and spiritual health, have better memories, and clearer heads, purer hearts, less evil imaginations; neater and sweeter homes; richer peace and joy; and be less likely to fall into the hands of Satan.

After spending a few hours in New York, we left the city at five P. M., en route for Boston, on the steamer "City of New York," and had a delightful ride to New London; passing some very beautiful situations on the verdant banks of the sound, that could not but make one think of paradise. Well, thank the Lord, the christian may yet have a home more beautiful than any thing the earth now affords. Dear reader, let us be there together.

GOOD HEALTH.

BRO. GRANT:—I desire a little information on living healthy and economically; and seeing from the Crisis that you are a practical health-reformer, I take the liberty of writing you, hoping if you have an opportunity, and can possibly spare a few moments, you will be kind enough to answer a few questions.

Next Wednesday I commence a "preparatory course" at P. Academy, and I wish to live on the hygienic system. First, because I wish to have my mind clear, and I know that depends greatly on our manner of living. I am confident more students have been ruined by improper food than by hard study; and as I am young (seventeen years of age), I shall try and avert that evil.

Second, my means are scanty, and I have no one to depend on but myself, and shall have to work my way through; so, of course, I shall have to be economical.

Please give me a few suggestions on hygienic living; some of the principal articles of your diet. I wish a thorough education, and shall study very hard; shall be temperate in ALL THINGS. I have thought some of being a minister of Christ. Pray for me that I may be guided right. Yours trustingly,

W. H. R.

Dear Bro. R.:—We will consent to comply with your request, and give a few thoughts, for the first time in the Crisis, on the subject named, and some facts in our own experience. We are much rejoiced to find you so anxious to start right, and that you are willing to deny yourself of all that is injurious to the human system. It is a pleasure to speak to such, and help them in their noble efforts.

For a number of years it has been our special study to ascertain what would promote "good health," and we have endeavored to put into practice the knowledge obtained. Previous to that time, scarcely a week passes without more or less derangement of the system, manifested in the head, stomach, or bowels. We are now fully satisfied that nearly all our bad feelings arose from abuse of the stomach.

Some nineteen years since, the following scripture arrested our attention:—"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10: 31. We at once began to inquire, How shall we eat and drink "to the glory of God?" Previous to that time, we ate and drank what was pleasing to the appetite, when it could be obtained without special trouble. But in answer to the inquiry, How shall we eat and drink to the glory of God, we were soon settled that it required attention to four things: (1) The quality of food; (2) quantity; (3) the manner of eating it; (4) the time.

As to quality, it soon became apparent that some kinds of food are unhealthy for every body; others are healthy for some, and unhealthy for others; while there are other kinds of food that are healthful for every one.

Being satisfied that the Lord did not wish to have his children suffering with disease, and thus shortening their useful lives; we saw clearly that the only sure way to eat and drink to the glory of God, was to adopt those articles of food that are healthy for all; and cut off all the rest. Our next inquiry was, What are the most healthful articles of diet? Without hesitation, we at once concluded that swine's flesh could not be reckoned in the list; as we could see no other reason why the Lord forbid its use as an article of food among his people, only that it was not made to eat, and was unhealthy.

We remembered the feast that, in the days of Adam's innocence, and even down to the time of the flood, the "fruit" "which is upon the face of all the earth," was given to man and beast for "meat." See Gen. 1: 29, 30. We remembered too, that while the children of Israel were contented without animal food, during their sojournings in the wilderness, there was not a sick one among them; but after they began to "lust" after the "flesh-pots" of Egypt, and "murmur" against Moses because he did give them the Egyptian food, the Lord "gave them their request; but sent leanness into their souls" (Ps. 106: 15,) and "a very great plague" besides. Num. 11: 33. We remember, also, that Daniel and his brethren refused to eat "the king's meat," or to drink his wine; but chose instead, a simple vegetable diet, and, as the result, showed greatly to their advantage. In speaking of this, Josephus says their minds were "more pure, and less burdened, and so fitter for learning; and had their bodies in better tune for labor; for they neither had the former oppressed and heavy with variety of meats, nor were the other effeminate on the same account." Josephus' Antiquities, Book 10, chap. 10, sec. 2.

With these, and many other facts before us, we came to the conclusion that it would not be wrong to stop eating "all living creatures," as did Daniel; being well satisfied it was better to take the first use of the wheat, corn, and oat-meal, the nice fruits and other vegetables ourselves, rather than to pass them into swine's flesh, or that of other animals, and then eat them at the risk of partaking of their natures and dieases.

With these conclusions upon our mind, over sixteen years since, we resolved to make the experiment of living on a vegetable diet, which we have followed to the presen with the most satisfactory and blessed results, physically, mentally, spiritually, and financially.

We do not say it is best for every one to do just as we have done; but we do think that seven-eights of the sickness, and a large proportion of the deaths in childhood, and a vast amount of mental suffering would be prevented, if they could be persuaded to eat and drink "to the glory of God."

We are saying more than we intended. We would like to say much, but we know some cannot bear it now. We will close by giving a few statements in relation to our own diet, as requested.

For over sixteen years we have used no meat, butter, tea or coffee. For over eight years we have eaten but two meals a day. Our food consists of the unleavened Graham bread, oat-meal pudding, beans, peas, pop-corn, apples, and other fruits in their season. Meal hours, eight and half-past two o'clock. We have eaten nothing between meals for the last sixteen years. We use no sugar, salt, pepper, ginger, mustard, horse-radish, pies, cakes, nor sweetmeats. We use no seasoning on any food, except a little milk on the oat-meal pudding, and beans. We sometimes eat figs, dates, and walnuts. Do not eat chestnuts, peanuts, nor candy. We have not taken a particle of medicine for many years, and our purpose is never to use it again. If we must die, we choose to die a natural death.

We have no desire for any other food; no hunger, faintness or "all-goneness" between meals. Our appetite is the same every meal, and our simple diet affords perfect satisfaction. We desire the same every meal in the year. We are astonished at our powers of endurance. We can preach nine times a week, or more, besides all our editorial labor, and feel as fresh at night as in the morning. We rarely know what it is to feel tired. Work is a luxury. We have no "blue Mondays." We have not had the sick headache since we began to live in this way; but was often troubled with it before.

We can only say a word now as to the quantity of food used, and the manner of eating it. Four ounces of Graham meal, for bread; one ounce and a half of oat-meal for the mush, or pudding, two apples baked, or raw; two handfuls of pop-corn; and one or two gills of milk, constitutes a sufficient quantity for a meal, costing about six and quarter cents. When we take other varieties of food, then we take less of these just named.

Time. We formerly ate in five or ten minutes, and ate much more at a meal than we do now. Our rule has been for many years not to eat a meal in less than half an hour. This we consider a very important rule. We drink nothing with our food, but moisten it with the saliva in the mouth. This is easily done when one eats slowly.

We always sleep with an open window, summer and winter, and do not use feather beds. We have taken a sponge bath every morning, when possible, for more than twenty years.

If our brother should wish further explanation of any points, we should be pleased to answer any inquiries.

FAST TRAVELING.

The Boston Journal says: "A special train ran on the Central Railroad from Syracuse to Utica, N. Y., at the rate of one mile and five eighths per minute." This would be at the rate of ninety-seven and a half miles per hour. Had this been a subject of prophecy in the Bible, we think as few would have believed it fifty years since, as now believe that the "same Jesus" that was taken up into heaven "shall so come in like manner," and literally raise those who are sleeping in the graves.

DARK OMENS.

From all parts of the world there comes a general cry of alarm at the low state of nominal christendom, and the rapid progress of wickedness in its varied forms. The following is from the Christian at Work:—

"The statistics of the church indicate yet more clearly how inadequately we are fulfilling the divine command. The Presbyterian church in America is not behind its fellow-workers in christian activity and zeal. It is reported that in the three principal branches of that church there are not, on an average, more than eight conversions to each local body per annum. The number of baptized children is greater than that of the converts. The statistics of other churches are not at my hand. If my memory serves me aright, those of the Congregational churches are no better. At this rate, the church is not trenching on the world; the world is trenching on the church. We are not gathering in the lost; we are not even keeping in safety our own lambs."

FARE REDUCED.

The Rutland, Burlington, and Vt. Valley R. Roads have reduced the fare for those attending the Springfield Campmeeting. This line, as we understand it, extends from Burlington to Brattleboro; hence the friends will purchase a regular ticket to the latter place, then buy a regular ticket on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. from Brattleboro to Greenfield; and the Secretary on the camp-ground will furnish all such with a free return pass over these roads. At Greenfield a Campmeeting Ticket for Springfield must be purchased at the Ticket Office. A'GT.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Those who purpose to attend the Alton Bay meeting, taking the cars at Boston, must purchase their tickets of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. Fare $2.90, which is half fare. Those going from Lawrence, and all other stations between there and Alton Bay, will call for "campmeeting tickets." Remember, no campmeeting tickets will be sold at the depot in Boston.

Friends on the line of the Boston and Albany R. R., wishing to attend the Alton Bay meeting, can purchase tickets at Springfield, Palmer, West Brookfield, Worcester, Holliston, and South Framingham, for BOSTON and return, at one third discount. These tickets to be countersigned by Geo. T. Adams, at Alton Bay or in Boston.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

THE HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP.

For the convenience of those who wish to carry the hymns in their pockets, we have had a lot bound with flexible covers, the margins of the pages being trimmed close to the printed matter, making it very convenient for the pocket,—the most complete hymn book in use among us. Price 75 cts. per copy, postage 12 cts; $7.00 per dozen by express.

LEND A HELPING HAND.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel grieved to hear that Bro. Burbank's receipts have been only $7 for six weeks' labor. Only a little over one dollar a week to pay his rent, board, and washing. Who can stand that long? I hope the brethren, who have the means, will see that he is not in want; for truly "the laborer is worthy of his hire." He believes the Lord wants him to work among the lowly, and he has sacrificed everything to do his will. Now, brethren, do not let this servant go neglected. Give to him, and "lend to the Lord."

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

Our work here has not ceased. Though our reports have been few and meagre for the last six months, our labors have been great and manifold. These, with our many trials, might have been constantly laid before the friends of missions, but it was thought best by us to work on in silence, knowing that the Lord did not forget anything done for him, and if the work was his he would see that it was carried forward. Never since we came here have we labored harder than through the past year; and in no one of the three years here has there been so much accomplished toward scattering light and truth among this people. The fact that we have been opposed so bitterly, and had to fight so constantly, shows that the work has been pressed on with more zeal and earnestness.

There has been a pruning and cutting off of branches in our church here. This has been greatly to the advantage of the tree. Some have gone out from us because they were not of us, and have left us in peace and prosperity. A more firm and established church in the Advent faith can not be found in the land. It is built upon the rock. While the tempest may have blown away some loose materials, every stone and pillar remains, unshaken and firm. The mission has been blessed by the outpouring of the Spirit upon the school and Sabbath School the past year, as never before. A great work was wrought here last winter in the conviction and conversion of many of our scholars. About fifty have been baptized during the year, and many professed religion at our meetings who were persuaded by their friends to unite with other churches here. The coming of the Lord has been kept before the people, and our faith in this great event has been made prominent at all times by us. This is the distinguishing characteristic of our church here. For this, and our faith in the dead being dead, we are opposed by nearly all professed christians outside of our doors. But sinners and strangers come and hear, and so the Lord works by us to the conviction and conversion of those here whom he has chosen. Well, blessed be his name that he has given us any as the reward of our toil, sacrifice, and sufferings.

I have received but little aid of late in relieving the poor and sick, and so have had to use my own small means. But as our church has been of late much blessed with health, there has not been so much of a call for help as most of the time heretofore. Only two have died recently, which we had to bury. Towards their burial I had to pay $16. We must bury our dead here, or the credit of the mission and church is lost. The sick and destitute must be helped by me, or my christianity is questioned by all. Laboring and giving must go together here, instead of working and getting. He that does not give here might as well not be here.

I have received within the last four months the following sums: From Bro. J. B. Cook, Poultney, Vt., $5. R. I. Conf., through Bro. H. F. Carpenter, $5. Mrs. L. Bedell, Chicago, Ill., $1. "M. W.," Bondsville, Mass., $2. The last two contributions were in answer to my call for help to publish a tract here for southern distribution. It is all that I have received for that purpose, and will be used towards buying and scattering the best tract I can find.

My work is nearly done here, and into other hands must soon pass the mission. Health, strength and mind have nearly all been spent here; but if in the great day it is seen that one soul is saved thereby, God shall have the glory. I. I. LESLIE.

LETTER FROM BRO. J. B. WADSWORTH.

BRO. GRANT:—On the 7th of August, I bade adieu to the Mission family at Memphis, a few minutes past five o'clock, P. M. I found myself on board the steamer "City Cairo." After a voyage of eight days, I safely landed here. I had a pleasant and interesting time on board the boat to Cairo, as well as after the exchange from Cairo here. On both boats I left some tracts. The evening before arriving here, I was invited to preach. I told them I was no preacher, but we would talk about it; and we had singing and prayer in one end of the tent, and card playing in the other, which reminded me of the parable of the tares and wheat. "Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest, I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn."—Matt. 13: 30. I could only say to the card players, This I once loved, but now I hate.

I made several calls on my way between Memphis and here. I called at Hickmond, and should have called to see the sleeping girl, but I learned I should have to stay over there probably two days, which would render my tour too expensive, as I had but little money. I learned from a gentleman, whose visage had an honest appearance, that Miss Godsey was yet alive. He said he was a near neighbor to her, and that the circulating reports about her prophecy were not true. "But it is true, said he, that she has been asleep about fourteen years, only waking at intervals, about once in twenty-four hours." He said as soon as she awakes, which is at four o'clock, she calls for something to eat. She converses a few minutes, and falls to sleep again; and is as placid all the while as an infant child. Her mother, who is a widow, and poor, is said to be a very pious lady. There have been several offers made to get Miss Godsey for exhibition purposes, and they have taken her as far as Nashville, Tenn. A lady in Hickmond offered Mrs. Godsey $10,000 for her daughter, but she refuses on the ground that it is wrong to exhibit her for money. It is said that Miss Godsey is very beautiful, and enjoys excellent health. So much for the charming sleeper.

From here I went to Cairo, and walked from Cairo to Mound City. Soon after I arrived, I met with a gentleman who got robbed along the road where I had just walked. He said that two men met him with clubs, and knocked him down, taking all he had with him, except his shirt and pants, which he had on. His head was cut dreadfully. I did up his wounds for him. He said that he asked for a place to stop at, till he could travel, but he could not find any body so kind as to take him in, except a poor negro and his wife, who paid every attention to him, as if he had been their own child. He said they prayed with him night and morning, and said they would have given him money to pay his way home, but they had it not. As his home was at Paducah, Ky., the place I intended to call at, we went on in company together.

In conclusion, I will acknowledge the receipt of money that has been so kindly sent me. From yourself, $5. Hope, $1. R. Evans, $2.50. A Bro. in East Boston, $1. A sister in Langus, $1. G. W. Harwood, $6. Two friends in Natick, $16. Bedell, Chicago, $1. A. A. Phelps, Rochester, N. Y., $1. Charles M. Shepard, Prescott, Wis., $5.25. J. F. Carleton, Machias, Me., $5. Levi Ransom, No. Carver, Mass., $1. John S. Hastings $2. John C. Grover $2. J. Roberts $1, Aaron Hastings $1, all of Newton Upper Falls, Mass. A. G. W. Smith, M. D., Castleton, Vt., $5. Bro. D. D. Reed, Crow Wing, $10. Julia A. Ives, Chateaugay, N. Y., $2.00. There may be letters for me at Memphis. All that come to hand will be acknowledged in my next. That will be when I hear from this. I have received in all for the horse $68.75. I received $113 while at Memphis, from friends. $45 of this money I previously acknowledged, and have used it; also a part of the money I received for the horse, towards paying my expenses, such as board, clothing, and traveling.

The Mission family hesitated in taking any thing from me, but as I explain their situation you will not wonder at it, or blame me for offering it. The few months I was with the mission, the house seemed more like a free hotel to the colored people, who make calls for medicines, and for the doctor about meal time; besides visitors, who often partake of their substance; and the sick poor have their diet prepared. This can not be done without means. I have known the time when fifteen cents was all they had left, when the meal was completed; but God, who careth for the sparrow, supplied their every need. None can have a correct knowledge of the trials incident to a mission life, and labor with the poor, but those engaged in it. I have known them take their own money to bury the dead when they were at the mercy of the city. Bro. Leslie is not only pastor of the church, but has a long practice as physician, which adds greatly to his labor and trials. I have known him while in the pulpit, and preaching, to be called to go in haste to some one taken suddenly ill. Often have I seen him while busy writing, when he ought not to be disturbed, aroused by the cry, "Dr., Dr., somebody wishes to see you." Even while in his chamber for prayer, the same earnest cry has grated on his ear; and at midnight he has been awakened from sleep by the pitiful cry, Come, for mother, or father, or some one, is sick. Thus his life has been one of constant toil, both of mind and body. Sister V. also bears her part of the burden with others who have labored there. Now it requires patience to endure all this. They meekly bear it all.

May God bless my donors, who have aided me in scattering tracts. Many, doubtless, have given of their hard earnings, denying themselves for unworthy me, or rather, for Jesus' sake. May they hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." I thank the Lord for your sympathy and love. I am in a new field of labor. As I have said, I can not preach, but I feel all the while that there are many in darkness, and I must give them the light some how. When I have given the light to one, I see more ahead, and it keeps me going, or feeling restless till I do go. I believe if I should stop scattering tracts, and not aid its cause in the least, I should be lost. I never felt so happy as when I am out sowing the seed. I have exposed myself to all kinds of weather, but still it was sweet to me. I have been in so much pain from walking, that after stopping to rest I could not for some time walk fifty yards. I have known what it is to be hungry and thirsty, and to bear the scorns and hisses of the low and debased. I have been pelted with sticks, and made to walk before a loaded gun and dogs; still the Lord has been my defense. When there was no eye to pity, his own Almighty arm brought me out safely, and he will continue to guide and protect me, even to the end, if I will abide in his keeping. Jesus says, "My grace is sufficient for thee." O let us hold fast to Jesus, for he that overcometh shall inherit all things.

I am to have my book published as soon as possible. Those who wish a copy can send to Louisville, Ky. Price 25 cts. Yours in love,

J. B. WADSWORTH.

THE LIFE AND EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL,

By Rev. W. J. Conybeare, M. A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Rev. J. S. Howson, M. A., Principal of the Collegiate Institution, Liverpool. In one volume, published by Charles Scribner & Co., New York.

The above work is one of rare merit, and of much value for the great amount of information it gives of the political, religious, and moral elements of the times of Paul. Three publishing houses in this country are publishing it, and no little competition is manifest between them, each claiming to publish the best edition. The above is undoubtedly the most full, as it is the complete reprint of the English edition. But many of the notes are in the original language. He who buys either edition will find his money's worth and more. Price, $5.00. L. C. WELLCOME.

SHETUCKET CAMPMEETING, WINDHAM, CONN.

"The best campmeeting held among us for ten years"; "Your meeting is a success"; "I bless God for this meeting"; "This seems really like our old-fashioned meetings." These, and many more which the mind fails to recall, are the expressions of happy hearts that fell upon my ear as I was passing among the people, attending to my various duties at the never-to-be-forgotten Oak Grove Camp. They met and do meet responses from many hearts. We will report some of the blessed features of this meeting.

1. Its beautiful site. Those who came, even amid the storms which visited us, pronounced it lovely. In sunshine it was delightful.

2. Its simplicity. The old-fashioned stand and seats, and neat cloth tents, brought up at once fond memories of days past.

3. Its travail for sinners. From the first, both preachers and laymen were drawn out after the perishing. All side issues were forgotten, or concealed and lost sight of, in the desire to save some. The agency of divine truth was by no means lost sight of in this great work; but man's nature and destiny, Christ in all his characters, the resurrection of the dead, just and unjust, and the judgment to come, were boldly and affectionately set forth with power.

4. Its love, harmony, and sweet christian fellowship. All seemed to be of one mind, of one accord in one place, serving the Lord.

5. Its results. Conviction rested upon the people. Some instances occurred in which sinners begged for mercy, without being first urged. Some were happily converted to God.

6. The quiet and order upon the ground. We were told that we must have a strong police force, or we should have trouble; but only one man visited us who seemed disposed to evil, and he was intoxicated and readily quieted. The large gathering on Sunday was very attentive and quiet, and many eyes dimmed with tears as Bro. Hastings told the story of redeeming love and gospel hope.

7. The ease with which expenses were met, and a balance left in treasury for next year.

8. The goodly representation from different parts of the country. About thirty preachers were present, and lay members from several States.

The committee feel grateful for the hearty response to their call, and join with all in giving God the glory. He, beyond question, had listened to the many prayers offered for this meeting. Words faintly convey an idea of the cheer imparted to many hearts at this meeting. To be there was to know it. The farewell meeting and communion service of Sunday evening told how strong the bonds which had bound heart to heart. May these sweet bonds of christian love between distant hearts remain unbroken till eternal in the encampment of glory soon to be summoned at our Eden restored. H. F. C.

GO WORK.

There is work to be done, and the world needs workers. Does it wait for you? Is there a place for you to work? Is there not something for you to do? Yes, and no body can do that work as well as you. Why don't you do it? Is it because you are too lazy, wicked, or too much a coward? If you refuse to do it, it must be undone, and it will be a swift and sure witness against you. These are facts high as heaven and far reaching as eternity. It comes to us with all its force of duty. The world waits for workmen; it waits for you. Look about you. The fields are white for the harvest. There is work to be done. There are aching hearts to be soothed, parched lips and fevered brows to cool, hungry mouths to feed, and the naked to be clothed. Suffering and want abound on every hand. The poor appeal to us, and they appeal to us rightly. The low, sad wail of sorrow comes from the aching heart of humanity all about us. Don't shut your ears and eyes against the painful cries of suffering humanity.

Go and bless the nearest object of necessity. Don't wait for some great opportunity; do not sound a trumpet before you. The working of the divine Spirit in your own bosom will direct you to do something, if you can do no more than give to "one of these little ones a cup of cold water." "Verily," said the Master, "you . . . shall in no wise lose" your "reward." Do heart deeds, that shall be reported (not by human) by angel tongues and angel pens to the high court of heaven. Work for the sublime mission of today. Work is a necessity. The world needs your work; it waits for you. God commands it. Go work. J. E. CLARK.

Correspondence.

From Bro. Jay Francis.

DEAR CRISIS READERS:—After wishing for some time to send you word from the gathered ones of Chicago, I have at last found time to do so, while crossing the lake in quest of a still larger measure of just such labor as has for many weeks prevented my communicating with you. How I often long for more time to write to the good pilgrims, and talk with them; and, if not make any aggressive moves myself, at least be where I could say "Amen" to others' good words and deeds.

I imagine some one asking, "Haven't you an abundance of earnest work right at hand in Chicago? O, yes, work enough, and a good number of workers too; and, better than all else, some of the work is being done. God's people are inquiring after the necessities of the vineyard, and making some effort to graft in new scions, and to keep the old branches trimmed and in bearing condition.

In accordance with Bro. Ramsey's suggestions, and under his direction, as God's servant, an earnest and united missionary enterprise has been started, and already good results are seen; praise the Lord. Meetings for prayer and preaching are held in half a dozen places in different parts of the city. They are well attended, a good spirit of prayer and devotion is prevalent, and the world's servants are being won over to Christ—one, three or five at a time. There is no excitement, but an earnest, healthy purpose; and, so far as it goes, a consistent effort characterizes the doings of the "little ones" in Chicago. Brethren Hough, Burr and Deverell have been with us, one or two weeks each, and preached the word to profit.

If God's people, regardless of party, sectarian names, would only unite to work, not for "our church," so called, not for numbers or costly edifices, but this one thing—to save the lost, to bring the dead to the life-fountain, what a power for good and salvation could be seen in this great Babel of conflicting creeds and characters; what a counter-current of pious loyalty might be raised against the overwhelming tide of impious "liberty," now so rapidly running over this city. Those living here, whose eyes are open to the light, and whose hearts are in sympathy with Bible religion, are week after week more and more convinced of the fact that infidelity to God and his truth, and fidelity to sin and self, are steadily and surely gaining ground. Thank God, while this is so, we also know that some are coming to see and acknowledge the truth, and to love its Author, turning from the "refuge of lies" in which the mass are fancying themselves secure, and hiding their lives with Christ in God.

Do I, do you, my brother, or sister, feel any indication to slothfulness, to self-love, to go after "fables?" Then are we an evidence to ourselves that we are in the "last days," spoken of by Paul; and should see in our own tendencies, an unusual inducement to godliness of life, that the coming of the Bridegroom may find us with oil in our vessels.

JAY FRANCIS.

On Lake Michigan, Aug. 11th.

From Bro. E. N. Root.

BRO. GRANT:—I am perfectly in love with your paper. I can hardly wait from week to week to see its coming. How much more am I impatient till Jesus comes. I am a Baptist, but I can't find anything in your paper but that accords with my views. As to the question of the unconscious state of the dead, or the blotting out of the wicked, that does'nt trouble me. I know that for those who love Jesus there is a blessed eternal heaven in store. The law is not for us,—terrible as it may be to the wicked. We are safe within the vail. Oh how I long to meet my Savior, and be redeemed from the "body of this death."

I feel his presence—his literal presence—nearer and nearer each day. During the Eclipse, nearly every housetop in Brooklyn, where I live, was covered by the gazers, and when it had reached its totality (or nearly so), and the awful solemnity of the occasion was brooding over the scene, the words of Jesus came suddenly to me, and startled me with their fearful appropriateness: "He that is on the housetop let him not come down." I could not help but think of the coming of the great day of the Lord. May we all be ready to meet him in the air when he comes.

Yours truly, E. N. ROOT.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. LUCY M. WARD, Vermillionville, Ill., writes:—"I love the Crisis, and all other Advent papers. It is all that I care to read, except the Bible. I love to watch the progress of God's doings, and his special care over his truth. Surely, I believe he is sending his servants everywhere to give the last invitation to the ungodly to come 'to the marriage supper of the Lamb.' I take a deep interest in the writings of Elder C. Colegrove, of Sardinia, N. Y. I bless God for raising up such a man in that region to preach his true word, where they have heard but little preaching of the right kind. One reason why I have been unusually interested in his labors is this: I used to reside in the town of Ashford, not many miles from Sardinia. O how my heart felt for my kind neighbors and friends around there. I prayed much for them, and wept much. I left there fifteen years ago. Four years ago my husband came from Springville, adjoining Sardinia, and told me he heard that Eld. Colegrove was crazy. In a few months after, I saw a piece in the Crisis written by him. O how I did rejoice and thank God for remembering those towns around there. And when I read of the tent-meeting in Yorkshire, my heart was with them. I hope Bro. Colegrove will go to Ashford and East Otto, if possible, and preach these blessed words in the ears of the people,—that Jesus is coming soon to give immortality to his dear children."

A MINISTER OF THE M. E. CHURCH, Chester, S. C., writes:—"My Dear Sir: At the last South Carolina Conference, the Bishop moved me from M——, No. Carolina, to this pastoral charge, which includes this town and three churches in the county. The more I have studied the Scriptures in regard to the peculiar views you advocate, the more I am convinced of their soundness in reason and religion, and by the help of my blessed Savior, I am pressing them home with all my might upon the hearts and consciences of the people, who flock to the churches with more serious and weeping attention to hear the word, than has been the case for twenty years; and while the clergy express their horror at such doctrines, the most intelligent among the laity of the different denominations say to me, that the Bible seems to be a new book, and the gospel a new dispensation. O pray the blessed Jesus to make his word the power of God to the salvation of all the people. 'Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.'"

SR. H. L. HERRICK, Athol Depot, Mass., writes:—"Allow one who has learned to love those who preach the coming of Christ, to say a few words in favor of the blessed hope, for I do believe it to be the fullness of joy to all believers of God's word, so far as it can be enjoyed here. I do thank my heavenly Father that I ever had the privilege of attending a meeting where I could hear the gospel in its simplicity. Seven years I have tried to serve God, believing all the time I had an immortal soul; but by carefully reading God's word, I find I was mistaken. I thank the Lord I ever heard the truth as it is in Jesus. Blessed be his great and holy name. I can stand up and say that I am no longer a close communion Baptist, I am looking for the soon coming of Jesus, when we shall all sit at one table, and there will be no distinction of sect. The faithful will all be one in Christ."

SR. N. J. SMITH, Hartland, Me., writes:—"The Crisis was the first thing that set me to studying on the sleep of the dead. I was brought up to believe that the dead knew more than the living. But I soon got light on the word, and was brought out of that error and a backslidden state. I had a hard struggle to give up the old theory and tradition that I was taught from my childhood. It was two years after I saw the light, before I would confess it. I took no peace day nor night until I did acknowledge the truth. I was afraid of opposition, for I knew my friends would be opposed to the doctrine. The kind hand has been withheld from me in times of poverty and distress, and I have been carried through some pretty straight places; but the Lord has preserved me. I feel like struggling on a little longer through the opposition."

BRO. ISAAC COLE, Clinton, Iowa, writes:—"Jesus will soon come. He is at the door; but who will be able to stand when he appeareth? Those with a pure heart and clean hands. Although I have been a great sufferer for twenty-two years, I have been enabled to say, 'the Lord doeth all things well.' Dear brethren and sisters, get on the wedding garment. Live by faith."

LET US HAVE MORE SUCH MEN.—We are glad to see by the Crisis that one of our western brethren, Wm. Watson, of Illinois, has given generous donations to the Crisis office and Scriptural Tract Repository, as he has previously to the western office. God give us more such men, who act as stewards of the Lord.—Voice.

"CHURCH GOING."

Under the above heading, the Philadelphia Daily Ledger, Aug 14th, calls attention to some things connected with the popular church worship at the present day, that deserve the attention of every friend of true christianity. The time has come when the secular press is outspoken against the worldliness that is now manifested among the fashionable church goers. The reformatory power that should ever be in the professed church of Christ is now nearly departed; and those who should be leading sinners to Christ are becoming stumbling blocks in their way. The time has come when it is hazardous for a young convert to join a popular church, lest he be drawn into the spirit of the world, and led into a mere cold, dead formality, and settle down in a lukewarm state.—ED.

The Editor of the Ledger says:—

The question is often asked, why do not more people attend church? And it is answered in various ways, though very unsatisfactorily. One reason assigned is that they work so hard during the week that rest is absolutely necessary on Sunday; or, in other words, they want an excuse for lying in bed. Now surely this is an answer that is unworthy of a rational being, who has any sense of accountability to his Maker. The system of fine dressing, now so prevalent, has a great deal more to do with keeping people from church. Poor people hesitate to enter any of the large, fashionable temples with which our great cities abound, and whereon architecture, sculpture, decoration and music exhaust their resources to gratify the taste or the love of display which animates the congregation.

There is among modern sects a rivalry as to which shall build the handsomest churches. The expenditure thus incurred involves a corresponding increase of pew rent, so that the renting or owning of a pew is frequently beyond the means of a man of moderate income. Then, again, in those churches where there are free seats reserved for the poor, the very fact of their being so set apart prevents the poor from occupying them, for very few persons have the moral courage to confess their poverty, as the sitting in one of these seats would amount to. There is as much pride in the heart of the honest poor man as there is in that of his wealthy neighbor, and just as little disposition to be considered a nobody. The desire to appear like a lady is as active in the bosom of a poor man's wife as in that of the wife of the millionaire, and she will gratify it whenever she can. Now it is precisely at church that the ladies of wealth make the greatest display, and their humbler sisters, being unable to compete with them, stay away, whereby the church suffers in popularity and efficiency. This showy dressing is a very serious evil in more ways than one, but inasmuch as every lady has the right to dress as she pleases, there is no remedy for it to be hoped for except in a higher moral tone of society, and a more just appreciation of the objects for which the Sabbath was instituted. If ever genuine humility should take the place of pride, and church-goers be thoroughly impressed with the fact that they are 'miserable sinners,' the day will have arrived when fine dressing for church will be laid aside and become a thing of the past."

Married.

Passing Events.

☞ A clock which has just been completed for the Cathedral of Beauvais contains 90,000 wheels, and indicates, among many other things, the days of the week, the month, the year, the signs of the Zodiac, the equation of time, the course of the planets, the phases of the moon, the time at every capital in the world, the movable feasts for one hundred years, the saints' days, etc. Perhaps the most curious part of the mechanism is that which gives the additional day in leap year, and which consequently is called into action only once in four years. The clock is wound up every eight days. The main dial is twelve feet in diameter, and the total cost exceeds $40,000.

☞ The Pilot (Roman Catholic) shows the rapid increase of its church in Massachusetts. There are in the State 128 churches, 8 buildings; 36 chapels and stations; 155 priests, and 11 ordained since the last report; 88 clerical students; 3 male and 15 female religious institutions; 2 male literary institutions, and three female academies; and 13 parochial free schools; aggregate number of pupils, 5,855. Hospitals and orphan asylums, 5 each; and 550 orphans. There are twelve benevolent and charitable institutions, and a Catholic population of over 350,000 in the entire diocese.

☞ A man has appeared in a country district of Poland who pretends to be our Savior come again to save the world. He has selected twelve apostles and pretends to heal the sick. Having gained considerable popularity, he is now turning to politics. He denounces the peasantry for their indifference to the rising of 1863, calls upon them to repent and prepare for new efforts, and prophesies the speedy re-establishment of the old Polish Kingdom.

☞ Boy burglars, and boy criminals of other grades, are becoming plentiful in New York city, we are told. This is not to be wondered at. In no other part of the world are "half grown boys" permitted such latitude and license. In the poorer quarters of the city gangs of them may be found as late as midnight, standing upon favorite corners, and indulging in the vilest language, and the most depraved conduct imaginable.

☞ An English firm is manufacturing for the Russian Government a huge steam hammer, which will weigh in all about one thousand tons. The hammer head alone weighs forty-two tons, and the anvil block five hundred tons. The hammer, which is believed to be the heaviest in the world, is to be used in forging steel guns.

☞ Stagnant as general business is on this side of the Atlantic, it is no worse than it is throughout Great Britian. If any one doubts, he has but to glance over the London and Liverpool commercial circulars, reviewing operations for the first half of the current year in connection with the situation as it exists at present.

☞ The Roman police fancy that they have just discovered a vast conspiracy to prevent the meeting of the Ecumenical Council; failing in this, to cut short the deliberations by assassination and incendiarism. They claim to already have the names of many of the plotters.

☞ Rev. Dr. Cummings has written a letter to the Pope, asking leave to attend the Ecumenical Council for the purpose of explaining the reasons for the separation of the Protestants from the Roman Catholic Church.

☞ Further advices from Stettin announce that the suffering among the Jews of East Prussia and the Russian frontier continues deplorable in the extreme.

☞ The Empress Eugenie is expected to visit Constantinople in September. Preparations, on a most extensive scale, have already commenced there for her reception.

☞ The Imperialists have a special organ in Philadelphia called the "Empire," and are about starting one in New Orleans, to be designated as the "Southern Imperialist."

☞ It is estimated that 100,000 men in New York expend altogether $6,720,000 a year for liquors, cigars and tobacco.

☞ The Spanish decree of 1495 by which Jews were forever banished from that country, will probably be revoked by the new government.

☞ We learn from our exchanges that Jews all over the world are proposing to hold a Synod in Germany next summer.

☞ The lowness of the river Nile excites general attention. The water is lower than it has been within the last 150 years.

☞ Several families in Chicago are suffering from trichina, induced by eating diseased ham.

☞ China has 500,000 temples, with about 3,000,000 idols.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

Providence permitting, a GENERAL CAMPMEETING will be held at Springfield, Mass., on the new camp-ground, beautifully located, about one and a quarter miles from the R. R. Depot, on land of C. W. Chapin, Esq., known as "Chapin's Grove," commencing Saturday, August 28th, and continuing till Sept. 6th.

Ample accommodations will be provided for board at the new and commodious boarding house on the ground. Board 85 cents per day. Breakfast, or supper, 35 cents each. Dinner at 50 cents, excepting Sunday, Sept. 5th, when it will be 75 cents. The boarding department is under the charge of the Committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad is reduced one third, which will be $4.00 from Boston to Springfield and return. Tickets to be obtained at the ticket offices, between Boston and Worcester at Grantville, Holliston, Natic, Westboro, Millford, and Southville; beyond Worcester, at the usual stations. On the New Haven and Hartford R. R., fare is reduced one third; tickets to be obtained at New Haven, Meriden, Berlin, Hartford, and Windsor Locks. On the Conn. R. R., fare is reduced one third from So. Vernon and intermediate stations to Springfield. On all the above roads campmeeting tickets, good from Aug. 25th to Sept. 7th, must be called for at the ticket offices; and they must also be signed by the Secretary at the campmeeting. Remember this.

On the Mass. and Vt. R. Road, persons will purchase regular tickets at the offices for Greenfield. At Greenfield they will go into the ticket office and call for Campmeeting Tickets for Springfield. All such when they go to the Secretary on the camp-ground to have their tickets countersigned, will be furnished with a free return pass from Greenfield to Brattleboro, Vernon, Athol, Fitchburg, or any place on the Mass. and Vt. R. R. that they may come from.

On the Worcester and Nashua R. R. Road, friends from Nashua, N. H., Groton Junction, and Clinton, will purchase regular tickets at the stations for Worcester, at which place they will purchase tickets for Springfield; and free return passes from Worcester will be furnished them by the Secretary on the ground.

On the Providence and Worcester R. R. Campmeeting Tickets at one third discount can be obtained at the Depot in Providence, good from August 26th to Sept. 7th. Call for Campmeeting Tickets.

Arrangements have been made with the Eastern R. R. Co., by which those taking the cars from Portsmouth and intermediate places for Boston, paying full fares at the ticket offices, can have FREE RETURN PASSES by application to the Secretary, on the camp-ground.

Friends coming from New York can come and return for $4.50 by taking the boat at New Haven, and thence by cars to Springfield. The boat which leaves New York at 3.15 P. M., connects with the train at the steamboat wharf at New Haven. The other boat, which leaves New York at 11 o'clock P. M., reaches New Haven in time for the early morning train; but passengers will have to go across the city by horse cars to the depot of the Hartford and New Haven R. R. Tickets for the Rail Road to the campmeeting will be sold on the steamboats. Passengers buying through tickets, will be furnished with a return ticket, which will be good only when endorsed by the Secretary of the camp-ground.

Cars leave the Boston and Albany depot, Boston, at 5, 7, and 8½ A. M.; and at 3, 4½, and 9 P. M.

Advent Christian Association.

The next Annual Meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Tuesday, Aug. 31st, at nine o'clock A. M. As business of unusual importance is to come before this meeting, it is hoped that every church will be represented by delegates, and that preachers make an effort to be present at the opening meeting.

Every church co-operating with the A. C. A. is entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members. Each delegate must bring credentials from the church to which he belongs.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of this Society will be held at Springfield, Mass., commencing Thursday, Sept. 2nd, nine o'clock A. M. Members of and delegates to the A. C. A. are members of this Society. A full attendance of the members is requested.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

The Union Female Missionary Association will hold its annual meeting on Springfield campground, Tuesday, August 31st, 1869, at one o'clock P. M. All the preaching Sisters and members of the Association are requested to be present, as some matters with reference to the best interest of the Association are to be considered. Come with hearts interested in the work of the Lord, and pray much that we may have the Spirit of Jesus to direct us in the transaction of business, that this meeting may be profitable to all. Reports from the different female missionaries will be given at this meeting. M. MCKINSTRY, Secretary.

Notice.

To our brethren and sisters in Massachusetts and New Hampshire we would say, that we expect to be at the Springfield and Alton Bay campmeetings with the Mass. Mission Tent, where they will find a comfortable home. We also expect to have some good meetings under the tent.

ENOCH MORRILL.

Campmeeting in Maine.

At a meeting in Holden, last Sunday, the brethren decided to have a campmeeting in the vicinity of Bangor, to commence about Sept. 13th. Particulars hereafter. For the Brethren,

GEO. W. BROWN.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. PREBLE.

Notice.

The quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of the State of New York will commence Friday evening, Sept. 17th, at Darien, Genesee Co., and continue over the Sabbath. Conveyance will meet trains at two P. M. from the east and four P. M. from the west on the New York Central R. R. at Croft's station, six miles west of Batavia.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made to hold a Second Advent Campmeeting at Bryant's Pond, Me., to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 14th, and hold over the Sabbath. Ample provision will be made for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cts. per day. Supper and breakfast at 25 cts. each; dinner 35 cts. Horse keeping, hay and grain, 75 cts. per day. Hay alone, 50 cts. Pasturage, 17 cts. The meeting will be held on an Island, about one third of a mile from the village. There has been a small steamer built in the Pond, that will run at all times during the day, to take passengers over and back for 25 cts. Baggage will be carried free of charge. Those who wish to come off to see to their horses, can make satisfactory arrangements. Those who wish to pitch their tents on the Island, we hope will be on the ground in season to do so.

We shall do what we can to get the fare reduced on the Grand Trunk R. R. Those coming on the Grand Trunk R. R. will stop at Bryant's Pond. An invitation is given to all to come and labor for the salvation of souls.

} Committee.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Conf. of New York will meet for its quarterly session with the church at Darien, Sept. 17th, and hold over the Sabbath. Homes will be provided for all, also teams to take them from the R. R. to the meeting. Come, brethren, to this feast, to enjoy its blessings and to unitedly prepare for work in the regions beyond for the coming winter.

WARREN J. HOBBS, Clerk.

Alton Bay Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, a general campmeeting will be held at Alton Bay, N. H., commencing Sunday, Sept. 5th, to hold through the week and over the following Lord's day. Ample provision will be made for board and horse-keeping. Board at 80 cents per day; breakfast and supper, 20 cents each; dinner, 50 cents; horse-keeping (hay and grain) 85 cents per day. The boarding department is under the charge of the committee, and any profits accruing from the same will go to the support of the meeting.

Arrangements have been made with the railroad and steamboat companies, as follows: Boston and Maine R. R., trains leave Boston for the meeting 7.30 A. M., 12 M., and 3 P. M.,—half fare. Purchase regular tickets at Boston, of Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover Street, for Alton Bay, and at all intermediate stations, beginning at Lawrence.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R.; trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Littleton for the Wiers at 9 A. M.,—half fare. Those coming from Concord, Littleton, and Plymouth, can go through to the camp-ground the same day, by waiting at the Wiers. The fare on the steamboats one way.

Connecticut and Passumpsic River R. R.; trains leave Derby at 7 A. M. for Wells River, Plymouth, Wiers, and Alton Bay,—half fare. Passengers will purchase regular tickets, and receive free return checks on the camp-ground, signed by the Secretary of the meeting. If any of our friends wish, they can come for the same a week before the meeting.

Eastern R. R., half fare. Purchase regular tickets at the several stations, and receive free return passes on the camp ground, signed by T. H. Ford.

Portland, Saco, and Portsmouth R. R.; trains leave Portland at 6.15 A. M., 8.40 A. M., and 2.55 P. M., for Dover and Alton. Fare about two thirds.

Fare reduced on the Concord and Portsmouth, and Nashua railroads, one half.

The Steamer Naugatuck will run from Melvin Village to Alton camp-ground as follows: Leave Melvin Village Sept. 5th, at 7 A. M.; Bay at 7-20, and Tuftonborough Neck at 8 A. M., arriving at Alton about 9.30; returning after the P. M. service; also the same each day of the meeting, Monday and Wednesday excepted. It will also leave Alton for Melvin Village Monday, the 13th, at 9 A. M. Fare both ways, 75 cts.; one way, 50 cts. For the friends on the north side of the Lake this is far the cheapest, and also the most quiet and pleasant route to the meeting.

D. CHURCHILL,
J. G. SMITH,
T. W. PIPER,
J. LANGLEY,
J. SHOREY,
J. JENNESS,
T. H. FORD,
} COMMITTEE.

Fare Reduced.

Fare reduced from Springfield to Boston, on the way to Alton Bay. The tickets will be sold at Springfield, Palmer, West Brookfield, Charlton, Worcester, Holliston, and Framingham. Tickets good from Sept. 3d to the 14th inclusive, and must be indorsed by T. H. Ford to return.

L. BOUTELL, for J. G. Smith.

Alton Bay.

The tickets on the Boston and Maine R. R. to Alton Bay campmeeting are good from the 4th of Sept. to the 14th inclusive. Friends coming from Lowell can buy their tickets at Lawrence for the Alton Bay campmeeting of Bro. D. Churchill, at a reduced price.

On account of having to pay six dollars more on a ton for hay than last year, we shall have to put the price of horse-keeping, at Alton Bay campmeeting, at 85 cts. a day, instead of 75.

J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

Mr. Luther A. Church desires me to say that arrangements have been made to sell a through ticket from stations on the Portland and Kennebec R. R. to Alton Bay, and a free return ticket to be issued, making one fare for the round trip.

J. W. CLAPP.

Notice.

Our friends who have tents to build at Alton Bay, are requested to be sure and have them built before the meeting commences. We have engaged Bro. Wm. Chamberlin to carry the baggage from the depot to the camp-ground. For the Committee, J. G. SMITH.

Campmeeting in Vermont.

Providence permitting, we shall have a campmeeting at West Bethel, Vt., commencing Sept. 20th, and continue one week. Those coming with tents, must write to Geo. W. Lewis, or Jona. Washburn, and let them know something about the size of their tents, and they will have the poles on the ground, and all things needed. I would like to have all the preaching brethren in the State, who will try to be at the meeting, to correspond with me. Please drop me a line to East Canaan, N. H., care of J. B. Eastman, until the 5th of Sept., then at Alton Bay camp-ground. I would like to hear from any out of the State. Those who write to Brn. Washburn and Lewis, will please direct to West Bethel, Vt. Come, brethren, and all. We are few in number, so let every town be represented. Where there is but one, make a small tent, and come. Let us get together and do what we can. Let no small thing prevent. Bro. Child of Cabot, gave me encouragement that he would take hold and assist. We don't want any party division, or difference of opinion to enter the heart of any one. We wish to come together to save souls. We are too near the end of time to stop to quarrel about notions, or what we think is right, if we don't see all alike. We will live and let live. For my part, I wish sinners saved from the wrath to come, and to this end, let us pray earnestly that God may pour out his Spirit, and revive his work, and gather in a few more before Jesus comes. We want our preaching brethren to come from N. H., Mass., Conn., and from every where that they can. Do come up to old Vermont, and see us, preach to us, pray for us, and enjoy the meeting with us. Come, won't you? We wish all others to come. Particulars hereafter. Your Bro. in Christ, J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Marshfield, Vt., Aug. 20th, 1869.

Notice.

There will be a grove meeting held in Rome, Me., near Belgrade Mills, in the grove of S. W. Ray, commencing Sept. 16th, and continue four days. Let all who are interested in this meeting do what they can to support it with their prayers and presence, and otherwise as is necessary. Will Bro. Seavey and other brethren be present to preach the word, and labor for the salvation of men? Let those who come do what they can to take care of themselves, although there will be provision made to care for a goodly number.

ALLEN DAMAN.

Tents for Sale.

I have a tent nearly new, twelve feet by eleven and a half, with frame and pins, which I will sell for $16. Or I will sell the boarding mission tent, nineteen feet by thirteen, which has been at the Alton Bay Campmeeting several years. Price $20. Either of the above tents will be a good bargain for those who wish such a tent for campmeeting purposes, and can be sent to Springfield or Alton Bay by rail. I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

Dear Brn., as the time of year has come for holding protracted meetings, which are the most beneficial to all, I would say that if the good Lord will, I will go wherever a door is opened for that purpose. If any desire such a meeting, please to let me know at once. Direct to George A. Streeter, North Dana, Mass.

German Tracts.

Bro. Heimer has a good supply. Send your orders to L. REIMER, 106 Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

☞ To Preaching Brethren.

☞ Preachers sending appointments to Wakefield, Mass., are particularly requested to correspond with JOHN B. ADAMS.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to preach in Portsmouth, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. JAMES B. TREFETHEN.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Hampton, N. H., are requested to correspond with Bro. Rufus S. Johnson. They will find a home at his house.

☞ Brethren wishing to preach in Manchester, N. H., will please correspond with the following committee:—A. J. Mayhew, S. R. Davidson, O. Proctor.

☞ Brethren sending appointments for London Ridge, N. H., will bear in mind that the fourth Sabbath in each month is engaged.

☞ All preaching brethren who desire to communicate with the church at Rochester, N. Y., are requested to correspond with J. E. WELLS, 32 Smith Street.

☞ Preaching brethren wishing to send appointments to Portland, Me., will please correspond first with Eld. R. R. York, or with either of the following committee:—H. C. Freeman, James Berry, S. K. Dyer.

☞ Brethren wishing to visit the church in Bristol, Ct., will please correspond with Elder H. HITCHCOCK, Forestville, Ct.

☞ Persons wishing to communicate with the church in New Britain, Conn., in regard to preaching, will please correspond with Bro. A. POWELL, Cor. Sec.

☞ All preachers desirous of coming to Wrightville, Ct., will please correspond with the writer, and also call on Bro. D. Grant, near the Chapel, as arrangements have been made with him by the Church to that effect. By order of the Church,

ELD. A. D. FLAGG, Cor. Sec'y, Torrington, Ct.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

THE PROMISED LAND.

TUNE.—"The Shining Shore."

For Jesus' sake let all awake,
 For glorious things are coming;
And let us all our sins forsake,
 And keep our lamps all burning.
Cho.—For now we stand near th' promised land,
 Where we shall dwell together;
And hand in hand, a loving band,
 We'll praise the Lord forever.

"O Jesus, come," has been our song,
 While we have all been watching;
And he has seemed to tarry long,
 While foes we still are fighting.

But just at hand is th' promised land,
 For which we still are waiting;
Then at our post we all will stand,
 "The story" oft relating.

Then let us tune our harps anew
 To higher strains of praising;
Our faith and hope, our zeal renew,
 On Jesus ever gazing.

O, there we'll meet at Jesus' feet,
 The saints of every nation;
And then "the story" we'll repeat
 Through all the new creation.

For the World's Crisis.

GO TO WORK.

"Why stand ye here all the day idle?" Is there nothing to do? Are the sheaves all gathered in? Are the fields all reaped? Shall there be no more sinners saved? Are thy friends all in the ark? Has the Master bid thee lay down thy sickle, and cease from toil? Should you be called to give an account of your labors to-day, would you hear the "well done?" Would it be said of you, as as it was of one anciently, "She hath done what she could?" Have you done all that you could do? Are you idle because you know not what else to do? Do you say that no one hath hired you? Hark! what meaneth this? "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard." These are Christ's solemn words. They express the affection of a father, and the authority of a Sovereign. The fields are already white. The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. God loves perishing men. He has no pleasure in the death of the wicked. Go work. Tell dying men of the love of God. Invite them to Christ. Beseech them to be reconciled to God. The judgment is coming, and there is no time to be lost. Soon the work will be done. Sinners must be forever saved, or eternally lost, very soon. O, how can we be idle? Why are we so stupid? Up, thou drowsy soldier. Go to work.

"Thy Master calls for reapers,
 And shall he call in vain?
Shall sheaves lie there ungathered,
 And waste upon the plain?"

Be wise, that you may "shine as the brightness of the firmament." Turn many to righteousness, that you may dwell with the white-robed throng, and wear the starry crown of eternal triumph. The resting time has not come yet. The labor precedes the rest. Now is the working time. Be faithful a little longer. The harder the work, the sweeter the rest. Think of the love of Christ. Let that constrain you. Think of the great reward. Let that inspire you. Think of the solemn command. Let that move you. It is not the hearers, but the doers of the word that shall be saved. Jesus says, "Go work." His words imply a duty, for the neglect of which, no excuse will be deemed sufficient. There is no alternative between doing the Master's work, or suffering his displeasure. O how awful it will be to suffer the wrath of the Lamb, and be forever excluded from that blissful kingdom; yet, all who do not work for Christ must hear it said, "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity." Do you wish to escape this doom? Are you anxious to do something for Jesus? Do you inquire what you are to do? Which is your field of labor? When you are to enter it? How long you are to toil?

Let me answer these questions by a story I once read.

"There was once a man named Quatremer Disjonval, who was thrown into a dungeon in the city of Utrecht. All alone, without a companion, without books, what could he do in solitary prison? Apparently nothing. But unwilling to be idle, even there, he gave himself to the careful study of the habits of a spider, which had spun its web within his cell. He soon found himself able to predict changes in the weather by its movements; a trifling discovery, but yet vastly useful to him in the issue; for the next winter, a French army invaded Holland, and was in the full tide of victory, when a sudden thaw stopped its progress, and led its chiefs to resolve upon a retreat. But the prisoner, who had learned its movements from his jailor, and who, from the conduct of his spider, judged that severe frost would soon return, contrived to inform the French of his opinion. They put faith in his judgment, and maintained their ground. The frost soon returned as he predicted. The victorious French completed their conquest. Disjonval was set at liberty."

In this fact we see a man doing all that is possible for him to do under his circumstances. It was a little thing he did, but it had mighty sequences. It determined the issue of a war, and gave him his freedom. And what does Christ require of those who labor in his vineyard, but to do always what may be possible, under their circumstances; to diminish the amount of human sin, sorrow and suffering; and to increase human purity, comfort and happiness? It is in our power to do many little things, which would tend to make the world brighter and pleasanter. A word, a smile, a tear, a gift, a prayer, a song, a sermon, may be the thing required, according to the ability or opportunity. Every moment is the time, every place the sphere of your labors; every human being, who comes within the reach of your influence, is the subject for you to act upon. "Do good unto all men," is the divine injunction. The duty may sometimes seem trifling in itself, or weighty and serious; but if done in faith, and done aright, it will be fraught with mighty consequences. A virtuous act is never lost. Go work, then, in the spirit of this command, and do "whatsoever thy hand findeth to do," with promptness and delight. Seek thy work, and it will come to thee. Perform it well, and you shall hear the "Well done," when the Master cometh.

Labor in faith. If you see the fruit, rejoice; if not, still continue to work, and "be not weary in well doing." The child who sows flower seeds in his garden at night is apt to weep in the morning, if the flowers do not appear. Sometimes he impatiently destroys his first labor by raking after the seeds, to see if they have not sprouted. And with a spirit similar to this do many labor for God. With zeal they sow the seed, but when the fruit delays its coming, with childlike impatience they fret and worry, and pronounce their labor lost. This is wrong. It shows an undisciplined will, an unsanctified heart, and an impatience unworthy a disciple of Christ. Those who labor in the gospel field must learn to wait, as well as to labor. It is theirs to sow, to plant, and to water; it is God's to give the increase. The tardiness of the seed to throw out its shoots, is not always a proof that its vitality is lost. A moral harvest is often reaped after the sower has found rest in the grave. Therefore, labor in faith, and wait in hope. Bread cast upon the water shall be found again, after many days. The minister who, walking in the footsteps of Jesus, "goes about doing good," may not see the immediate result of his toils; but he has the consolation that they who sow in tears shall reap in joy. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Those who work for God do not labor in vain. Their fruit will appear sooner or later, and their hearts shall be made glad. Some seed will surely fall upon good ground.

A boy once shot an arrow into the air. So lofty was its flight, that he failed to detect the place of its descent. Long time he searched in vain around the meadow, and at last went home mourning the loss of his arrow. Years passed away. The boy became a man. After many wanderings, he revisited the haunts of his boyhood. Walking around the meadow, he gazed upon a venerable oak, whose wide-spreading branches had frequently sheltered him in his boyhood from the rays of the sultry sun. Full of old memories, he paused until his eye rested upon a feather which protruded from a hollow in the tree. He drew it forth, and with it the identical arrow which years before he mourned as lost. And is it not thus many times with the efforts of God's children? They speak in the ears of sinners, they bestow a tract, they utter an exhortation; or, if in the ministry, preach a sermon. They strive to watch the flight of their shaft. Vain endeavor. They cannot track it as it enters the mysterious regions of the mind, and they too often foolishly deem it lost. But it is not so. It has done its work, and either in the future years of time, or in eternity, that effort, like the long lost arrow, shall come back to the bosom of its owner, bringing with it a blessing, even the reward of a duty faithfully performed.

It is said of Dr. Coke that, while journeying in America, he once attempted to ford a river; but his horse lost its foothold, and was carried down the stream. The doctor narrowly escaped drowning by clinging to a bough which overhung the river-side. A lady in the vicinity gave him entertainment in his distress, sent messengers after his horse, and did him much kindness. When he left her roof he gave her a tract! For five years the good doctor toiled on in the cause of God, in England and America. Whether his tract had been destroyed, or had pierced a human heart, he knew not—nay, had forgotten his gift. But one day, on his way to a conference, a young man approached him and requested the favor of a brief conversation.

"Do you remember, dear sir, being nearly drowned in —— river some five years ago?"

"I remember it quite well," replied the doctor.

"Do you recollect the widow lady at whose house you were entertained after escaping from the river?"

"I do, and never shall I forget the kindness she showed me."

"And do you also remember giving her a tract, when you bade her farewell?"

"I do not, but it is very possible I did so."

"Yes, sir, you did leave a tract. That lady read it and was converted. She loaned it to her neighbors, and many of them were converted too. Several of her children were also saved. A society was formed, which flourishes to this day." This statement moved the doctor to tears. But the young man after a brief pause resumed, saying:

"I have not quite told you all; I am her son. That tract led me to Christ. And now, sir, I am on my way to conference to seek admission as a traveling preacher."

Thus did the good doctor find his arrow in an unexpected hour. And thus will your shafts come back to you, O christian, in due season. Courage, therefore, drooping friend; weep not over any apparent want of success. Toil on. Thy work shall be rewarded. Only labor in faith, and God's blessing will rest upon your efforts. There is much to be done. The Macedonian cry arises from every quarter, "Come over and help." Sinners are perishing. Death is carrying away his victims every minute, and dragging them to his dark prison-house, without any hope in Christ. O how awful! Who can bear the thought of dying without a preparation to meet God? It is a dreadful thought, and yet the multitudes think but little about it. They are seeking after the vanities of the world, and neglecting the things of eternal interest. O let us do our duty. If God has saved us, let us try to save others. Cry aloud, and spare not; arouse the careless dreamers; thunder in their ears the truth of God; weep over the perishing; show men that you love them; be in earnest; get rid of pride and formality; plead with God until your soul is deluged with his love; then you can reach the hearts of others. It is the burning, glowing, intense love of Christ in our own hearts that makes us effectual laborers. Lazy, loafing, half-hearted professors, are but cumberers of the ground. God never called men into his vineyard to shirk, but to work. Get near to God, and then you can get near to men. Pray for the unction from on high. God's Spirit is the mighty agent. Let that fill your heart, and you can be an idler no longer. You will feel for the perishing as you never felt before. O for men like Barnabas, "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost," and then we should see "much people added to the Lord."

The time is short. What is done must be done quickly. Soon the last sinner will be sealed as an heir to the kingdom. The watchmen will be called to lay down their commissions at the Savior's feet, and the gospel trumpet will be blown no more. Jesus will have ceased pleading, and sinners will be left without a Savior. They may cry for mercy, but it will be too late. They are lost, eternally lost! All who have been faithful in the vineyard will then receive their reward. O how will it be with us? Shall we be free from the blood of souls? Have we done all in our power to save our fellow men? Are we at work to-day in every way we can to save sinners? O let us resolve anew to do more for Christ than we have ever done yet. He has done great things for us. We are not our own. We are bought with a price. We are the Lord's. Our time, talents, and all we possess, belong to Him who hath bought us with his blood. O, then, let us labor cheerfully for him. The crown of glory is before us. Only a little while, and it will be ours to wear forever. O the thought of being forever with Jesus! This is enough to stimulate us amid all the toils and sorrows of life. Cheer up, then, weary worker; be patient in "well doing" a little longer, and eternal life will be yours. J. W. THOMAS.

CHRIST IN THE WILDERNESS.

"And he was with the wild beasts."

The thoughtful student of the Bible often finds a word or a brief sentence containing a deep meaning, which, like gold in the mine, is hidden from the careless reader. In Genesis we read that God who gave Adam "dominion over the creatures," said that man needed a companion, and then made all the birds and beasts to pass before Adam, who gave them names. Adam thus learned that every animal had his mate, and desired to have one for himself, but found none fit for him among the inferior creatures. Then God created Eve, and brought her unto Adam to be his wife. Our blessed Lord, the second Adam, "was with the wild beasts," and, while the absence of his fellow-men became more painful to him, through the presence of fierce beasts, they doubless were innocent toward his holy humanity, though it had been enfeebled by long fasting, as they had been to Adam before the fall; and they owned in him their Creator. The Bible speaks of the lion, wolf, bear, leopard, unicorn, behemoth, etc., and promises their eventual harmony among themselves, and subjection to man, when "a little child shall lead them."

The brutes feel the effects of man's sin, and look upon him with reproachful, vengeful eyes, as conscious of his degradation and loss of power over them. With Adam they lived in harmony, in willing subservience to acknowledged superiority. But now the showman enters the den of trained animals, and rules them by fear, since he cannot command their respect. He keeps his eye warily upon them, and backs out of the cage, whip in hand. Should he turn his back, his life is in danger. Not so with Christ in the wilderness. His mere presence hushed the wolf's growl, and shut the lion's mouth. And when the devil, the "roaring lion, seeking whom he "may devour," assailed him with temptations that derived their power from the necessities of his enfeebled frame, and the earnest desire for that universal dominion, for which he had yet long to wait, according to the Father's plan, the Son of man silenced the tempter by a word, and, by the triumph of the divine over the necessities of the human nature, proved himself also the Son of God.

Why was he thus tempted or tried? That he, as man, might know how to sympathize with and succor them who are tempted. It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. Although a Son, yet he learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

Disciple, art thou "pressed beyond measure" with temptation and trial? Your Elder Brother suffered all this, and more. He is able and ready to help you. "Eternal salvation." A very notable expression. The living God, says Paul, is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe. Some base a hope of universal salvation on this text. But, observe,—especially of "those that believe." He is their Savior in a higher sense, with a fuller salvation, than in the case of unbelievers. Our text explains the difference. In one case he gives temporal salvation, as at various times in Jewish history he "gave Israel a Savior." See 2 Kings, 13:5. In the other case, he is the author of eternal salvation—not to all, but to those that obey him.

Reader, are you still wilfully disobedient? Then you have no hope, and are without God in the world. Listen, then, to the awful threatening and the gracious promise: "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." M. R. STEEL.

EXAMINE THE GUIDE-BOARD.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I wish to say a few words, hoping to do some one some good. We are near the end. The perils are thickening. The enemy is busy. Faith is growing small; but little left on earth. We exhort you to watch and pray; have your lamp trimmed and burning. Look away to the Leader. Don't fail to examine the guide-board, as you journey along; for once out of the right road, it is hard getting back again. Don't get careless when we are so near home, as I did the other night.

I wish to tell you how it was. It may do some one good. It did me. I learned a lesson by it; but it cost me something, as you will see. It was this: We were quite a long distance from home, very tired, after riding fifty miles the day before, and over thirty that day; but notwithstanding all this, we must come home that night. It was a long road, and not much of a moon for a light; but with all of these obstacles before us, we thought of home,—we must be there in the morning; so we counted the cost, and prepared for the journey. In the first place, we knew the most, if not all, would be in bed and asleep, and we would have to watch the guide-boards; but in order to do that, we must have some kind of a light. So we bought us a good lantern, well filled and lighted, and started. We were very watchful, I tell you, hardly passing a guide-board without getting out and examining, so as to be sure we were on the right road. This we did until we got almost home, perhaps within about nine miles. We then became careless; thought we knew the road; but we got on the wrong one, and went some distance, till we thought perhaps we were wrong, and we tried to arouse some one; but we could make the dog bark, that was about all. So we went on down a hill, just as almost every one does when they get on the wrong road; but we had it to climb, and come back to another road, but did not get back far enough. Supposing this was right, we did not look to the guide-board, but kept on, and went quite fast. Don't know how far we went, but it was quite a long road. We finally concluded we would try to arouse some one, and see where we were. To our sorrow, we had been going away from home some time. How sad we felt. Almost worn out, horse tired, all because we did not get out and find a guide-board.

The next time, I think I shall be more particular. I thought this resembled the journey of the dear pilgrims towards their heavenly home. They must be there. They get the light, but with it we must examine the guide-boards, or we shall get on the wrong road, and go down hill. The further we go, the harder it is. The Lord help such to turn back, and when you turn, come back to where you missed the road. Don't do as I did—come back and take the next wrong road; but out with your light, and examine the guide-board. Find the right road, and keep it. Thank God, he ever led me to see this road, for I believe it leads to the golden city, to glory, the crown, the river of life and the tree of life, to bright scenes beyond the river, to the marriage supper of the Lamb, to mansions prepared for all those that love and serve Jesus. I long to be there.

I expect in a little while, if faithful, to see that land of rest, and have the privilege of walking those golden streets. The Lord keep you all, dear ones, until he comes to take us home. Pray for J. T. KIMBALL.

WATCH AND PRAY.

Watch and pray, watch and pray,
Pilgrim on life's tearful way;
Strength you'll need each fleeting hour,
While you feel the tempter's power.
 Watch and pray,
Faith shall turn the night to day.

Hope and trust, hope and trust,
Child of sorrow, child of dust;
Place not here thy fond desire,
But to heavenly things aspire.
 See on high
Joys that ne'er will fade or die.

Pray and fight, pray and fight,
Keep thy armor ever bright;
Soon thy trials will be done,
Soon the crown of victory won.
 Watch and pray,
Looking for the better day.

Watch and pray, watch and pray,
Ye that seek the brighter ray;
Grace can all thy foes subdue,
Grace thy fainting strength renew.
 Watch and pray,
Pilgrim on life's tearful way.

"NOT AS I AM SITUATED."

"Do you find yourself abiding in Jesus in your daily life?" asked Mrs. Weston of Miss Eaton.

Both were members of the same church.

"No," was the reply, "I can't say I have his presence as I desire."

"I wish we might both live nearer to him; as Payson says, 'in the circle nearest the sun, where we may ever be in light and warmth.'"

"I don't think it possible for me to live aright where I am now," persisted Miss Eaton. "My position is very unfavorable to growth in grace, and I feel that I can't have that nearness you speak of; not as I am situated."

"Do you mean to let your circumstances prevent you from ever being nearer to God?"

"Oh no, I hope not! I have prayed a great deal that God would put me where I can serve him better. I can't do much as I am situated."

Mrs. Weston was the youthful mother of two babies; and with one of these in arms, and the other clinging to her skirts, she did her household work unaided, in addition to many other duties. Miss Eaton was quite free from the overburdening cares which crowded the path of the young housekeeper, who had sometimes thought, "If I only had sister Eaton's leisure for meditation and prayer, and her opportunity to attend public means of grace, how much nearer I might live to my Savior." The above answers to her questions started her thoughts in the right direction, and she answered:

"I have sometimes felt I could not live so near to Christ amid my cares, but, after all, I think it must be that our growth in grace should, and may, go on favorably in any circumstances in which our Lord sees fit to place us. Some of the loveliest christians I know are in positions which seem most unfavorable to piety; and all history tells us that the most devoted and successful soldiers of the cross have been so in opposition to circumstances."

After this, when Mrs. Weston found no time to read, she put her Testament in her pocket that she might catch a verse or two while she tended her baby, and think the passage over to edification while she washed the dishes or cooked the dinner. Then feeling the need of more seasons of secret prayer than she could command away from her little ones, she called to mind that she could kneel in their presence, thus teaching them most effectually the nature of prayer. She never again turned her knocking Savior from her door with the excuse, "Not as I am situated."

Miss Eaton's circumstances did not change, and she continued to lament that her religious life was rendered so fruitless by her surroundings. Her prayer for a new situation was never granted, for one day she suddenly sickened, and the next day died, upon the very bed the position of which had been one of her greatest hindrances in the divine life; the other bed in the same room being occupied by an irreligious room-mate. It was a mercy that in her dying hour she found voice to cry to Jesus to meet her even there. How many say, "Not as I am situated," waiting and sighing for favoring gales to waft the soul heavenward, forgetful that earth's winds are all contrary to the heaven-bound bark, which, if it ever comes into port, must do so in spite of them.

Bunyan sends his pilgrim rushing with stopped ears, in defiance of hindrances, to the wicket gate, and thence onward, fighting his upward way. Of the white-robed throng seen in "vision bright" the angel said: "These are they which came out of great tribulation."—Ex.

NOTICE.

"Prayer meeting and lecture as usual on Wednesday evening, in the lecture-room. Dear brethren, I urge you all to attend these weekly meetings. Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together."

Some of the "dear brethren" deported themselves in this way:

Brother A. thought it looked like rain, and concluded that his family, including himself, of course, had better remain at home. On Thursday evening it was raining very hard, and the same brother A. hired a carriage, and took his whole family to the Academy of Music, to hear Mr. Agassiz lecture on the "Intelligence of the Lobster."

Bro. B. thought he was too tired to go, so he staid at home, and worked at the sled he had promised to make for Billy.

Sister C. thought the pavements were too slippery. It would be very dangerous for her to venture out. I saw her next morning going down street to get her old bonnet "done up." She had an old pair of stockings drawn over her shoes.

Sister D. thought there wouldn't be more than a dozen people at prayer meeting. She doesn't like those little meetings, so she didn't go. If she had gone, there would have been thirteen. I met her next evening at a social gathering where there were just ten folks. She said she had spent a "delightful" evening.

Brother E. thought he might be called upon to lead in prayer, or make some remarks. He stayed at home. Next day he went around with a petition praying Congress to repeal the tax on beeswax. His name headed the list of petitioners, and he spoke eloquently and waxed warm as he urged his reasons in favor of repeal.

Three-fourths of the members stayed at home. God was at the prayer meeting. The pastor was there. One-fourth of the members were there, and God blessed them. The persons who stayed at home were each represented by a vacant seat. God don't bless empty seats.—United Presbyterian.

— God will not accept the tongue alone, though it were of the most sublime orator; not the lips alone, though they were the lips of chosen Israel itself; not the head alone, though it were the head of a learned Diotrephes; but God will accept any contribution that may be entered under this head: "A broken and a contrite heart." He will accept all the former with the latter; but he despises every surrender that does not embrace the heart. Are my affections fully and cheerfully given to God.—W. Kelleway.

— To forsake all, is God's condition of eternal life; but men have considered the terms severe, and offer as much for less. Which shall prevail, men's selfishness, or Jehovah's authority?

LIFT A LITTLE!

Lift a little! Lift a little!
 Neighbor, lend a helping hand
To that heavy-laden brother,
 Who for weakness scarce can stand.
What to thee, with thy strong muscle,
 Seems a light and easy load,
Is to him a pond'rous burden,
 Cumbering his pilgrim road.

Lift a little! lift a little!
 Effort gives one added strength;
That which staggers him when rising,
 Thou canst hold at full arms' length.
Not his fault that he is feeble,
 Not thy praise that thou art strong;
It is God makes lives to differ,
 Some from wailing, some from song.

Lift a little! Lift a little!
 Many they who need thine aid;
Many lying on the roadside,
 'Neath misfortune's dreary shade.
Pass not by, like Priest and Levite,
 Heedless of thy fellow-man;
But with heart and arms extended,
 Be the Good Samaritan.

LOST! LOST!—"I was called," says a venerable divine, "in the early part of my ministry, to stand beside the bed of a beautiful young mother whose life was fast ebbing away. Anguish, deep, hopeless anguish, was riveted on her countenance. Death was knocking for admission. Her time had come. I asked her if she was willing I should pray with her. Her reply was 'I have no objection, but prayers will be of no avail now; it is too late, too late; I must die; I am lost! lost forever!' I prayed earnestly with her, but her hard heart was untouched; there was in it no fountain of love to its Maker; it was 'too late.'

"What was the cause of her cold and careless indifference? Listen, mothers, and from her who, 'being dead, yet speaketh,' learn a lesson. This lovely mother was, at a very early period of her life, deeply and seriously impressed with the importance of religion, and the arrows of conviction were fastened in her heart. 'My mother,' says she, 'sent me to a dancing school, and I danced all my convictions away.' As she lived, so did she die—without Christ in the world."

TO RESTORE WILTED FLOWERS.—According to one of our exchanges, if wilted flowers have about half an inch of their stems cut off, and the stalk thus trimmed inserted into boiling water, they will in a few moments resume almost their original freshness. The process is most applicable to colored flowers, as roses, geraniums, azaleas, etc., white ones turning yellow. Thick petaled flowers show the most marked improvement. Another excellent method of restoring freshness to old flowers is to place them in water, and cover with a glass shade. Finely powdered charcoal placed in the bottom of the water in vases, and the stems of the flowers inserted into it, has a marked effect in maintaining them fresh a long time, and keeping the water sweet.

NOBODY.

If nobody's noticed you, you must be small;
If nobody's slighted you, you must be tall;
If nobody's bowed to you, you must be low;
If nobody's kissed you, you're ugly, we know.

If nobody's envied you, you're a poor elf;
If nobody's flattered you, you've flattered yourself;
If nobody's cheated you, you are a knave;
If nobody's hated you, you are a slave.

If nobody's called you a fool to your face,
Somebody's wished for your back in its place;
If nobody's called you a tyrant or scold,
Somebody thinks you of spiritless mold.

If nobody's eaten his bread from your store,
Nobody 'll call you a miserly bore;
If nobody's slandered you,—here is our pen,—
Sign yourself "NOBODY" quick as you can.

HOW TO KEEP POOR.—There is no man but who would rejoice to have a way pointed out by which he might honestly attain riches. No one would thank us for a prescription to insure poverty, and yet there is many a man who keeps himself poor by indulging in the following: Two glasses of ale a day at ten cents, seventy-three dollars; three cigars, one after each meal, one hundred and nine dollars and fifty cents; board for a big dog, thirty dollars—all in one year, two hundred and twelve dollars and fifty cents—sufficient to buy six barrels of flour, one barrel of sugar, one sack of coffee, a good coat, a respectable dress, a frock for the baby, and half a dozen pairs of shoes.—The Evangelist.

GOOD REASONING.—Did Jesus of Nazareth rise from the dead? If this historical fact is not proven, then no historical fact has ever been, or ever can be proved. And if Christ rose from the dead, then the whole Bible is true. The Old Testament is true, for he said it was. The New Testament is true, for his resurrection proved it. He could never have risen from the dead to commission false teachers or delude them with false promises. All the revelations of the Bible are true—its doctrines and precepts are true. Its plan of mercy and terms of mercy are divine. The apostolic commission is divine, "Go preach my gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."—Imperialist.

ALIVE TO CHRIST.

Dear Lord, we pray we may be dead
 To every vain and lustful sin;
And joined to Christ our living head,
 We hope eternal life to win.

Alive to Christ; O blessed thought!
 O bliss that cannot be expressed;
In him whose blood and life hath bought,
 Our soul finds perfect peace and rest.

Alive to Christ, O joyful hour!
 When angels rolled the stone away,
To wake by his almighty power,
 To life and bliss, our sleeping clay.

UNSELFISHNESS.

DEAR CHILDREN:—I told you a few weeks ago about a little girl [Mary D—.] who lives in Virginia, who is "conscientiously honest." You remember I told you that I thought you would like her for a school-mate. Let me tell you more about her. She is unselfish, generous and kind. Wherever you find one good and noble trait of character, you may rest assured that there are others clustering around it. Often had I seen her divide an apple among her school-mates, reserving the smallest piece for herself. Often, too, had I seen her share her dinner with poor Kate, lend her books, and help her to get her lessons. Kate's father was a drunkard, and but poorly provided for his family. If any one needed sympathy it was Kate, and yet some of the scholars delighted in laughing at her misfortune, but she always found a true friend in Mary.

I saw her kindness and generosity toward her schoolmates and teacher every day; yet I did not realize how unselfish she was, until near the close of school. I learned that the third day of the term, she gave up a very desirable seat to another scholar, and took the only vacant seat, and that was without a back or desk. There were over fifty scholars, and every seat was occupied. Mary gave up a good seat voluntarily, although she had an undisputed claim to it. Now, children, if that was not a noble, unselfish, uncommon act, I never saw one. What say you? I have known scholars go to school on commencement day, before breakfast, in order to be first, and "pick out" the best seat, and were they called upon to give it up, they would make bitter complaint.

Children, will you give an honest answer to this question? Which gives you the most happiness, is it getting the best seat, eating all of your dinner, and keeping the whole of your apple for yourself, or is it when you do as Mary did? Perhaps some of you don't give enough to know that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." I don't believe the angels in heaven look down on a more pleasing sight than a girl or boy that is honest, unselfish, and kind. I know that if she lives, a useful life is before her; for she is always trying to make those around her cheerful and happy. She always took extra pains to please her teacher, to do right, and to help her school-mates to do right.

Persevere in doing as you would be done by, and you will be rewarded by the many friends you will find around you. I will give you a motto to write on the fly leaf of the book you open the most frequently—write it, too, in large letters, in the most conspicuous place in your bed-chamber, that you may read it every morning, or what is still better, write it on the tablet of your heart,—I MUST DO ALL THE GOOD I CAN TO-DAY. No selfish person can have any true enjoyment. The highest enjoyment is that which comes from helping others to enjoyment. If there is anything that will make a child happy, it is Jesus in the heart, helping him to do as he would be done by.

"HE'S YOUR FATHER."

"Who made the trees, Aunty?" said little Aggie, who is two years and a half old.

"God made them, dear," we replied. Then looking in the bright blue eyes, that were upturned to ours in pleasing wonder, we asked, "Do you know who God is, darling?"

With a look of reproachful surprise she said, "Why don't you know, Auntie? He's your Father."

Folding her to our bosom, a joyful tear-gush fell, while words of grateful prayer and praise went up from our inmost heart to our heavenly Father, who notes the sparrow's fall, and who has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Moorestown, N.J. ANNA E. MCELLISTER.

TWO FACES.

I know a little girl who has two faces.

When she is dressed up in her white dress and blue sash, and has on her blue kid shoes, and around her neck a string of pearl beads, then she looks so sweet and good that you would wish to kiss her, for she knows that company is going to call on her mother; and she expects that the ladies will say, "What a little darling!" or "What lovely curls!" or "What a sweet mouth!" and then kiss her little red lips, and give her some sugar-plums.

And the ladies who praise her think she is very ladylike too: for she always says, "Yes ma'am," and "No ma'am" when she ought; and says, "Thank you," so sweetly when anything is given her.

But when she is alone with her mother, then she is sometimes very naughty. If she cannot have what she would like, or cannot do just as she wishes, then she will pout and cry and scream; and no one would ever think of kissing such homely lips. And no one would think her to be the same little girl who behaved so prettily in company.

So, you see, this little girl has two faces. One she uses in company, and puts on with her best dress; the other she wears when she is alone with her mother.

I know another little girl who has only one face; and that is always as sweet as a peach, and never so sweet as when alone with mamma. Which little girl do you like best? The one with two faces, or the other who has but one? And which will you be like?—The Nursery.

MAXIMS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

Examine every garment when it comes from the wash, and, if necessary, mend it with neatness and precision. Do not sew up the holes in your stockings, as we have seen some careless, untidy girls do, but take in a broad margin around the hole, be it small or large, with a fine darning needle and darning cotton, and cover the fracture with an interlaced stitch, so close as to be strong as the body of the stocking, and also fine enough to be ornamental. Stockings mended in this way need darning but a very few times in the course of their existence.

If you want to marry, do not court or try to attract the attention of gentlemen. A little wholesome indifference, real or assumed, will be much more likely to accomplish the object. Consider, moreover, that it is better to be a woman than a wife, and do not degrade your sex, by making your whole existence turn on the pivot of matrimony.

If you are in your father's house, take some department of household labor upon yourself, and a part of the sewing, and make it your business to attend to it. Do not let a call from this idle girl, or a visit from that, or an invitation from the other, interfere with the performance of your duty.

Train yourself to useful occupation. Remember it is wicked to waste time, and nothing gives such an impression of vanity and absolute silliness as a habit of idling, and never having anything to do.

Never make your appearance in the morning without having first bathed, if only with a sponge and a quart of water, brushed and arranged your hair, and dressed yourself neatly and completely.

Keep your clothing, especially your under-clothing, in perfect order. Never let pins do duty as buttons, or strings take the place of proper bands.

Never carry coarse, embroidered, or laced handkerchiefs. Fine, plain ones are much more ladylike.

Avoid open-worked stockings, and fancy slippers. Fine, plain, white hose, and black kid slippers, with only a strap or rosette in front, are more becoming.

Let your pleasures come in as a recreation, not as the business of your life.

If you can, cultivate to perfection some art by which you can gain an independent livelihood. Do it whether there is necessity for it or not. Do it quietly if you will, but do it. There is no telling when or under what circumstances you may need it.—Demorest.

A LIE STICKS.

A little newsboy, to sell his paper, told a lie. The matter came up in the Sabbath-School.

"Would you tell a lie for three cents?" asked a teacher of one of her boys.

"No ma'am," answered, Dick, very decidedly.

"For ten cents?"

"No ma'am."

"For a dollar?"

"No ma'am."

"For a thousand dollars?"

Dick was staggered. A thousand dollars looked big. Oh, would it not buy lots of things? While he was thinking another boy cries out, "No ma'am," behind him.

"Why not?" asked the teacher.

"Because, when the thousand dollars are gone and the things you've got with them are gone too, the lie is there all the same," answered the boy. Ah yes! That is so. A lie sticks. Everything else may go, but that will stay, and you will have to carry it round with you, whether you will or not; a hard and heavy load.

ASKING GOD'S BLESSING.

Charley was going home with his uncle.

They were on the steamboat all night. A steamboat is furnished with little beds on each side of the cabin. These little beds are called berths. When it was time to go to bed Charlie undressed himself.

"Make haste and jump into your berth, boy," cried his uncle.

"Mayn't I first kneel down and ask God to take care of us?" Asked Charlie.

"We shall be taken care of fast enough," said his uncle.

"Yes, sir," said Charlie; "but mother always tells us not to take anything without first asking."

Uncle Tom had nothing to say to that, and Charlie knelt down, just as he did by his own little bed at home. God's bounty and goodness and grace you live on day by day, my children; but never take it without first asking.—Child's Paper.

IN THE WAY.—A mother who was preparing some flour to mix into bread, left it for a few moments, when little Mary—with childish curiosity to see what it was—took hold of the dish, which fell to the floor, spilling the contents. The mother struck the child a severe blow, saying with anger, that she was always in the way! Two weeks after, little Mary sickened and died. On her death-bed, while delirious, she asked her mother if there would be room for her among the angels. "I was always in your way, mother; you had no room for little Mary! And will I be in the angels' way? Will there be no room for me?" The broken-hearted mother then felt that no sacrifice could have been too great could it have saved her child.

BE GOOD.—We often hear little children in their play tell what they are going to be when they grow up to be men and women. I have over heard them talking on this subject; and some were going to be ministers, some doctors, some lawyers, some teachers, and so on. I once asked a little boy what he was going to be when he grew up to be a man. He looked up into my face, and with a smile replied, "I am going to be good." What a beautiful answer!

FOREVER WITH THE LORD.

At home with Jesus! He who went before,
For his own people mansions to prepare;
The soul's deep longings stilled, its conflicts o'er,
All rest and blessedness with Jesus there—
What home like this can the wide earth afford?
"So shall we be for ever with the Lord."

With him all gathered! to that blessed home,
Through all its windings still the pathway tends;
While ever and anon bright glimpses come
Of that fair city where the journey ends:
Where all of bliss is centred in one word,
"So shall we be for ever with the Lord."

Here kindred hearts are severed far and wide,
By many a weary mile of land and sea,
Or life's all-varied cares and paths divide;—
But yet a joyful gathering shall be,
The broken links repaired, the lost restored,
"So shall we be for ever with the Lord."

HOW IS SIN TO BE REMOVED?

[Serial—No. Two.]

BY GEORGE W. GREEN.

Having seen, in a former article, that Christ is to take away the sin of the world, the question now arises, How is this great work to be accomplished? We answer, By moral and physical power. By moral power, we mean the application of the glorious truths of the gospel to the hearts and consciences of men, which causes them to believe in Christ, and to take up their crosses and follow him daily. Thus it will be seen that the sin of the world is to be partially removed through the proclamation of the gospel.

By physical power, we mean the utter and irrevocable destruction of all the enemies of Christ, after the judgment of the great day of God Almighty. In this way sin is to have a final end, and the earth, purified and cleansed, is yet to bloom as the paradise of God, and the everlasting home of the redeemed.

From the day that Adam fell, sin has been in the world; and rebellion against the government of God has sadly marred the peace of earth. But we need not here dwell upon the extent of sin. Suffice it to say that "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."—Rom. 3: 23.

The final end of sin was plainly foreshadowed in the penalty of violated law, as given to Adam in the words—"In the day that thou eatest thereof, dying, thou shalt die."—Gen. 2: 17. Margin. Indeed, we find life and death set before mankind all through the Scriptures. Life is offered as the reward of righteousness, and death is represented as the wages of sin. Still, as free agents, men continue in sin, notwithstanding the doom of sinners is plainly revealed. David declares that "the Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy."—Ps. 145: 20. And the time of this destruction is also plainly revealed. See 2 Thess. 1: 7–10.

Notwithstanding the doom of sinners is destruction; notwithstanding this destruction will be inflicted after the judgment, the Christian dispensation has been proclaimed by the God of heaven, and pardon is freely offered to rebellious man upon the terms of the gospel. Sinners are invited, yea, entreated, to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and to keep his commandments, that they may receive the remission of their sins. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3: 16. The angel of the Lord announced to the shepherds the gift of God's Son in the following language: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2: 10–11. How sweetly these words must have fallen upon the ears of the watching shepherds. They were indeed glad tidings, and proclaimed the dawn of a new era in the history of earth.

A brief survey of the Savior's ministry reveals the glorious truth that sinners, though under sentence of death, may have their sins forgiven, so that they may stand justified in the sight of God. The Savior "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance"; and Paul affirms that "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Hence we hear the Savior calling upon men to "repent and believe the gospel." And we also hear him saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."—Matt. 11: 28–29. How cheering to the repentant sinner's ear.

Again we hear the Savior saying, "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."—John 10: 11. And we find that "in due time Christ died for the ungodly."—Rom. 5: 6. O, how great such love as this!

Thus we find that Christ preached "the gospel of the kingdom," and invited the burdened sinner to come unto him. And to demonstrate his love for mankind, he suffered, died, and rose again the third day, "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke 24: 46–47.

But the Savior knew that he must return to his Father; and in order that the work of salvation might still go on after his ascension, we find him gathering around him the twelve apostles; and for forty days after his resurrection from the dead he remained with them, "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God."—Acts 1: 3. To the apostles he commits the mighty work of making known to the nations the plan of salvation: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15–16. What a cheering message to fallen man. But the apostles were to "tarry" in the city of Jerusalem for "the promise of the Father," by which they were to "be endued with power from on high," and fully equipped for their great work. See Luke 24: 49.

The work of his first advent having been completed, the Savior led his apostles out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands and blessed them. "And it came to pass while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven."—Luke 24: 50–51. "And while they [the apostles] looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in shining apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1: 10, 11.

This language not only shows that the Savior will return, but it also shows the necessity for his return; for if it were not necessary, he would not return; and it also reminded the apostles of a promise made by the Savior himself in the following words: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 14: 2–3.

In order to understand this language in all its force, it should be taken in connection with another declaration which the Savior uttered before this promise was made. When the Pharisees and chief priests sent officers to take Christ, he said unto them, "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, ye can not come." John 7: 33–34. After this, he addressed his disciples thus: "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye can not come; so now I say to you."—John 13: 33.

This sentiment clearly shows the absolute necessity for Christ's return from heaven. If his followers can not go where he is, he must needs "come again" in order that he may "receive" them unto himself.

From what has been said, it will be seen that "the Savior's mission" did not receive its completion with his first advent; and it will also be seen that when he returns from heaven he will receive his waiting saints unto himself, and bestow upon them the crown of life. "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."—Rev. 22: 12. But now the Savior is making intercession for his people. He is our great High Priest; and he now sitteth upon the right hand of the Father as our advocate. "And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."—1 John 2: 1. "Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Heb. 4: 14–16.

But, as we have seen, the Savior is to return, and with his return eternal redemption will come for all his waiting saints. Paul tells us that "unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."—Heb. 9: 28. In view of this fact, why is it that the professed church has lost sight of the second Advent? Is it not because they hold that "death is the gate to endless joy"? Why should one look for the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, if he expects to go to heaven to be with Christ at death? The writers of the New Testament looked for eternal redemption at the second coming of Christ.

Paul's testimony: "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, THEN shall ye also appear with him in glory."—Col. 3: 4.

James' testimony: "Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye ALSO patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."—James 5: 7, 8.

Peter's testimony: "When the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Pet. 5: 4.

John's testimony: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."—1 John 3: 2.

But why need we multiply testimony? Certainly we have given enough to show that the second advent has an important place in "the Savior's mission." Then the great separation will take place between the righteous and the wicked (Matt. 25: 31–41); and then the Savior's promise to his disciples—"I will come again, and receive you unto myself," will be verified. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.

And thus "the sin of the world" is to be partially taken away. May God hasten the glad hour of Christ's appearing.

IS THE MIND IMMORTAL?

Thought has been ascribed to various organs of the body, by different nations, as well as authors. Some ascribe thought to the "reins," "spine," "heart"; others have located the soul in the "heart," "bowels," etc. But researches have long since exploded these foolish notions, and established the proposition that the brain is the instrument of thought, feeling, and moral emotion. It is the position of those who believe in the immortality of the soul, that when the man is dead, and his brain resolved into dust, he still thinks and feels. If this position be true, should any disease or injury of the brain interrupt the manifestations of the mind? But disease and accidents do destroy these manifestations. A number of persons are born idiots, and never manifest any mind at all. Why is this, if the mind—the intellect, be independent of cerebral organization? If men can think and reason without a brain (that is, after they are dead), what should hinder them from thinking with an idiotic or imperfect brain? And if they cannot reason with an imperfect brain, how are they to do so without any brain at all?

In childhood, the mind is feeble as the body; but in manhood we discover those strong intellectual faculties which result in a sound, well matured, and developed organization. In old age the mind is again as feeble as the body. The whole system, including the brain, becomes shrunk and enfeebled, the limbs totter, and man becomes forgetful. Why is all this, if the mind be immortal? If this were so, should not the mind be as strong in childhood and old age, as in the prime of manhood? Certainly, if the mind were immortal. Even the state of the atmosphere will affect the mind, either elevating or depressing it.

When the skull is fractured, and pressure is made upon the brain, all consciousness is suspended. A Mr. Jones, recorded by Sir Astley Cooper, was deprived of consciousness by being wounded in the head while on board a vessel in the Mediterranean Sea. He remained in this state of insensibility for several months, in Gibraltar, whence he was transmitted to Deptford, and subsequently to St. Thomas' Hospital, London. A surgeon found a portion of the skull depressed, trepanned him, and removed the depressed portion of the bone. Three hours after the operation he sat up in bed, sensation and volition returned, and in four days he was able to get up and converse. The last circumstance he remembered was the capture of a prize in the Mediterranean, thirteen months before. Will any one explain, or reconcile this phenomena with consciousness in death? "The dead know not any thing."—Eccl. 9: 5. Death closes the scene. "In death," says David, "there is no remembrance of thee." "In sheol who shall give thee thanks?" There is no hope except the Lord come and raise those who sleep. Therefore, the believers in Jesus long for the resurrection morning, when they shall put on immortality and incorruption, to die no more, to suffer no more; but to dwell in their Eden home for ever.

RESURRECTION OF THE JUST AND UNJUST.

What does Christ say? "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves [not a part, but all] shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5: 25, 28, 29. This plain declaration should suffice, and for ever settle the matter of the resurrection of all, both good and evil. What was Paul's confession on this point? "So worship I the God of my fathers, believing [not a part but] all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there [may be? No.] shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." Acts 24: 14, 15.

Does Job say, "when the wicked shall lie down alike in the dust," that is the end of them? No, but rather, "That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath." Job 21: 26, 30. The apostle Peter confirms this, who also declares, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto [the day of death? No.] the day of judgment to be punished." 2 Pet. 2: 9. "But the heavens and the earth .... are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Pet. 3: 7.

Would it be punishment, or perdition, to cast a dead body into the fire? "Upon the wicked [not a dead body] he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest." Ps. 11: 6. "And thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed." Prov. 5: 11.

Says the Revelator, "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death."—Rev. 21: 8. How could this be the second death, if they had not died and had a resurrection? "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God." How could they stand there if they were not raised from the dead? "And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works." "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death."—Rev. 20: 12–14.

Again, we ask, if these were not raised to life, then how could this be to them the second death? Could the second death harm or hurt an inanimate body? Says the Revelator, "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."—Rev. 2: 11. Then it is not dead bodies, but "overcomers" that shall not be hurt of the second death. Then it appears that all who are not overcomers—all whose names are not written in the Lamb's book of life, will be cast into the lake of fire; consequently, must and will be hurt of the second death. If we are not to "add," neither are we to "take away from the words of the book of this prophecy." "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Now if death is the end of the wicked, how can they meet with their just reward, when Christ shall come, without a resurrection; or be rewarded according to their works?

Says the prophet Daniel, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."—Dan. 12: 2. Now methinks Daniel must have made a great mistake, if (as some profess) the wicked dead are not to awake. Rather let us believe Daniel was a true prophet, and also the words of our Savior, who said to his accusers, "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven."—Matt. 26: 64. Can those who crucified our Savior see him coming in the clouds, without a resurrection?

Again. "Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence." "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." Luke 13: 26–29.

Shall this very class which Christ was then addressing witness these events, as declared by our Savior, and not have a resurrection? "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." Can every eye see him, and they also that pierced him, without a resurrection?

Again. "The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and condemn them." "The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it."—Luke 11: 31–32. These declarations are too plain to need note or comment. Also read Rom. 2: 5; 14: 10; Matt. 13: 41, 42; 2 Cor. 5: 10; John 12: 48.

"CONTINUE YE IN MY LOVE."
John 15: 9.

Bro. Grant:—Being prevented from attending campmeeting by sickness in my family, I will try to write a few words for the readers of the Crisis, earnestly praying that the effort may be blest to their edification and advancement in the way of life. My companion has been very low, but is now convalescent, and we hope in the course of a few weeks she will be restored to her usual health. We should rejoice to have the privilege of meeting with the pilgrims at the Springfield camp; but we thankfully receive and enjoy the blessings and comforts of home, and also rejoice in the thought of the feast of love and truth enjoyed by our brethren in the tented grove.

A few suggestions in regard to retaining the blessings and benefits received at campmeeting may now be appropriate. Those who are always actively engaged in the Master's work, will not need these suggestions. They have within them a well of water, springing up unto everlasting life. But there is a class of well-meaning people, who seem to experience a famine or drouth spiritually for the whole season, and nearly all the refreshing they have is during campmeeting week. As this state of things continues year after year, they almost conclude that they cannot enjoy much except on such special occasions; but if any of this class should read this, and follow the directions here given, they may have Jesus always with them, and find

"December as pleasant as May."

Consider the cause of your increased enjoyment at campmeeting. You leave the world and its cares behind, and devote your whole soul to the service of the Lord. You pray much, both with the brethren and alone in secret. You acknowledge all your faults, and seek and find pardon and peace. Now if you continue to do this every day, you will find your joys ever increasing, and instead of a parched, barren desert, your wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and your dry land shall be filled with springs of water. O that I could impress upon you the need there is of your pursuing this course. Surely it is not enough to "run well" one week in the year, and be asleep during the other fifty-one. This seems too much like putting the hand to the plow and looking back. You are in extreme danger of being lost, unless you keep up the heavenly flame at all seasons. I do not speak thus without an experience similar to yours. I have tried that way, and I know it is a bad way, a dangerous way, and I entreat you to labor with me to avoid it from henceforth. Maintain constant secret prayer. Do not neglect the morning and evening sacrifice at the family altar. Testify for Christ every day and every hour. Then instead of an occasional season of enjoyment, followed by a long period of slumber or spiritual death, you will have constant enjoyment, having the witness of the Spirit that you are sealed unto the day of redemption.

If you keep the sayings of Jesus, he will come unto you, and make his abode with you. He will manifest himself unto you in a way that he is not manifested unto the world. Read the fourteenth chapter of John, and from this hour walk circumspectly, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Get into the enjoyment of light and liberty, and STAND FAST therein.

ANNIHILATION.

Bro. Grant:—The following, from Zion's Herald, of August 12th, will doubtless interest many readers of the Crisis. Let us take courage and continue to press the battle.

C. H. S.

"All theories of annihilation or non-existence, as the penalty of sin, alike reject the essentials of Christianity. The Millerite excitement of '42 swept over the country like a tornado, leaving ruin behind it. Being an anti-scriptural and unwholesome excitement, it confused and unsettled the minds of very many on the subject of religion and of church order. But the adoption of annihilationism by the Millerites, or Second Adventists, as they are termed, is calculated and likely to do immensely greater mischief. Its workings are less noisy, but more subtle, and consequently more wide-spread and injurious. The first did its harm by the apparent sincerity and earnestness of its advocates, as connected with so great a mistake, while they claimed to have the witness of the Spirit that they were called of God to thus warn the people concerning the time of the end of the world. With the same people, there is a similar honesty and zeal in the promulgation of their annihilation theories. Though with less excitement, yet with far greater efforts do they labor to extend much more dangerous sentiments, by a profusion of books and tracts, and preaching wherever they can secure an audience. They pretend to believe in Jesus Christ, the atonement, spiritual regeneration, and future rewards and punishments, while their theories absolutely exclude these and other important doctrines, as taught by the evangelical churches.

Should a Second Advent Annihilationist, on first coming to a place, state his doctrines, fully and honestly, he would make few, if any, proselytes. Their success depends upon the fact that their doctrine, excluding the essentials of evangelical religion, and the infinite demerit of sin, is kept out of sight. For a while they preach hard against sin, they argue against its infinite demerit, and ridicule the doctrine of conscious punishment as the penalty of the moral law. Nor is this a question upon one point of doctrine only; it includes true christianity as a whole.

The question involved is, whether that system of religion in which the churches, called evangelical, harmonize, is true or false. If the religion of the Annihilationists is true, ours is entirely wrong; and if ours is right, theirs must be wholly false. What is needed for general circulation is a book that clearly states the annihilation doctrine, presents the different and contradictory theories, gives the argument which overturns these theories, and demonstrates the immortality of man. And the plan of the book and the manner of conducting the argument, should be such as shall keep up a lively interest in the subject while reading it, and clearly show the advantages of our religion over that of the Adventists. 'Man Immortal,' by Rev. E. B. Fletcher, of the East Maine Conference, published by Bailey & Noyes of Portland, is admirably adapted to this want. This book, of more than two hundred pages, with bold type, on the best of paper, and neatly bound, is afforded for the moderate price of one dollar and twenty-five cents. It states in a clear and concise form the various theories of the Advent Annihilationists; gives the arguments by which they attempt to prove them, and then shows these theories to be unscriptural and false, by arguments that cannot be invalidated. Every clergyman would do well to secure it. And its circulation generally will operate as a successful antidote against the writings and preaching of the Annihilationists."—R. Atkinson, Cape Elizabeth, Me.

If man is now immortal, why does he die? If he is immortal, why is he required to "seek for . . . immortality" by patient continuance in well doing"? If man is immortal in this life, why does Paul say he will "put on immortality" when "the trumpet shall sound"?—Ed.

INFIDELITY ADVANCING.

That infidelity is advancing with rapid strides, is a fact too well known to be denied. The perils of these last days increase every hour. The following, from an able writer, is to the point:—Ed.

How obvious the demands which are made to doubt and disbelieve all that purports to be sacred and divine! In all directions are we met by the free handling, as it is called, of our holy things. The whole province of natural religion is traversed by our so-called advanced thinkers, without any awe upon their spirits, and nowhere in the entire province of revealed religion does it occur to them to put their shoes from off their feet.

The Pentateuch of Moses occupies in their esteem exactly a similar place with the Shoo-King of Confucius. The Psalms of David are deemed to be just akin to the Odyssey of Homer. Isaiah and Virgil are held, not only in equal admiration, but in equal veneration also. Paul and Aristotle are regarded as compeers in their authoritative claim on the seekers after truth. That Jesus of Nazareth was one teacher sent forth from God is not denied, but that Socrates was another teacher sent from God is strenuously affirmed.

Neither prophet, nor evangelist, nor apostle ever spake as he was moved by the Holy Ghost, any more than poets and philosophers and literati have spoken as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Not a word of our so-called "oracles of God" was given by any special inspiration of God. Of no avail is it, consequently, to quote from those oracles with a view to prove anything by the authority of the quotation. There is no element of authority in anything which they contain; for the purpose of conclusive argumentation it is really nothing worth. Let men and women, therefore, who are honest and bold enough, detach themselves from the Bibliolatry which, over less bold and honest ones, will still be dominant; and then let them, to such extent and in such manner as may chance to be expedient, give themselves to bring the Bibliolatry into general disrepute. Let them throw discredit upon the Mosaic account of the creation and the constitution of man; let them insist that miracle is incredible; let them be well up in the disproofs of a particular providence; let them know how to show the utter senselessness of prayer; let them have in readiness for alternate use against the evangelic doctrines of man's ruin by sin and of his recovery by grace the plausible argument, the fierce invective, the specious remonstrance, and the felicitous lampoon.

For such purposes abundant material is at hand, and, that the purposes may be promoted, the material is introduced into our lighter and weightier literature in all directions; sometimes covertly, and with some semblance of hesitation; at other times defiantly and without the affectation of a blush.

A quotation which I will read is worthy of your attention, as an illustration of what is going on. "Already," says the Westminster Review, "character and influence and sympathy with mankind mark those who stand aloof from christianity The best heads and the best hearts are gone. The ablest and the sincerest feel their faith giving way. The newspaper, the review, the tale by every fireside is all written most exclusively by men who have long since ceased to believe; so also is the school book, the text book, the manuals for study of youth and manhood, and the whole mental aliment of the day. The mother's words fall coldly on the ear of the son; the prayers of the wife are unmeaning to the husband; and the gray hairs of the preacher scarcely save him from contempt."—Wm. Brock.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

55. Woman's rights denied.—"And thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee."—Gen. 3: 16. "I suffer not a woman to teach, nor usurp authority over a man, but to be in silence."—1 Tim. 2: 12. "They are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law."—1 Cor. 14: 34. "Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him Lord."—1 Pet. 3: 6.

Woman's rights affirmed.—"And Deborah, a prophetess . . . judged Israel at that time . . . And Deborah said unto Barak, Up, for this is the day in which the Lord hath delivered Sisera into thy hand. . . And the Lord discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak."—Judges 4: 4–15. "The inhabitants of the villages ceased; they ceased in Israel, until I, Deborah, arose, a mother in Israel." Judg. 5: 7. "And on my hand-maidens I will pour out in those days my spirit, and they shall prophesy."—Acts 2: 18. "And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy."—Acts 21: 9.

Because a woman is taught to render due respect to her husband, and not to usurp authority over him; because women were forbidden to habitually speak in public, or to interfere with matters which it was a man's business to attend to; does it therefore follow that when the Lord pours out his Spirit upon them, that they are still to be silent? If God bestows an extraordinary gift upon a woman, or gives her a work to do, no apostle of Jesus would forbid her. Anna was allowed to prophesy in the temple as well as Simeon. And Paul's prohibition of a woman's praying or prophesying unveiled was certainly an acknowledgment of her right to do so, under such a regulation. Hence the Bible gives to woman a position of dignity, and also of delicacy; it points out the true sphere in which she is to act with becoming modesty and self-respect.

56. Obedience to masters enjoined.—"Servants, obey in all things your masters after the flesh. . . . And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord."—Col. 3: 22: 23. "Be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward."—1 Pet. 2: 18.

Obedience due to God only.—"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."—Matt. 4: 10. "Be not ye the servants of men."—1 Cor. 7: 23. "Neither be ye called masters; for one is your master, even Christ."—Matt. 23: 10.

The passages in the first part of this proposition simply teach servants to obey their masters in matters relating to their regular employment. But the infidel thinks he finds a contradiction of this in Matt. 4: 10, which teaches that the "Lord thy God" is the only object of worship, but it requires little discernment to see that this passage has no reference to secular things. He also quotes 1 Cor. 7: 23, which reads, "Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men." Christ having given his life for the saints, they are to obey him in preference to men. There is surely no contradiction here, for the texts quoted in the first part of the proposition nowhere teach that servants are to obey their masters in preference to Christ. Matt. 23; 10, is an admonition to the saints, which forbids the assumption of titles.

57. There is an unpardonable sin.—"He that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness."—Mark 3: 29.

There is no unpardonable sin.—"And by him all that believe are justified from all things."—Acts 13: 39.

The key to this problem is found in the latter part of the text last quoted, and which the infidel was obliged to leave off in order to make out his "contradiction." The text reads thus: "And by him all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." By quoting the whole text, the difficulty is at once obviated. There was no justification in the law of Moses, as will appear from Rom. 3: 20; "Therefore by the deeds of the law, there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin." It is not the province of law to justify, but to condemn those who transgress. Hence, in the New Testament, justification is attributed to the grace of Jesus Christ. The unpardonable sin mentioned in Mark could not be committed under the dispensation of the law. Hence Acts 13: 39 has no reference to it whatever. The unpardonable sin consists in an apostasy from the truth of the gospel. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame."—Heb. 6: 4, 6.

SUGGESTION ON TIME.

In reviewing an article on "Prophecy," the following idea presented itself to me, which I am inclined to think might furnish a clue to a better knowledge of the time. I leave it in the hands of those who are in the habit of investigating the time question.

Prophecy, Dan. 7: 8,—"I considered the horns [the ten kingdoms], and there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns [or kingdoms] plucked up by the roots." This horn had a mouth speaking great things. By referring to Rev. 13: 5, it was to be a blasphemous power, and to continue forty-two months, or twelve hundred and sixty years; when, as it reads in the tenth verse, "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity."

This little horn is acknowledged to be the Papacy. In just about ten years from the formation of the last of the ten kingdoms, the following three horns or kingdoms were plucked up by the roots: the Heruli in Italy; the Vandals in Africa; the Ostrogoths. This was in the year 538; and the Pope wears to this day the three-crowned cap, or tiara, in token of the uprooting of those three kingdoms, called now the three Estates of the Church. So much for the fulfillment of the prophecy.

Now reckon his continued power of 1260 years from 538, making 1798, as the ending of it. Do we find anything in history to point that period? We do. In February of 1798, Gen. Berthier, by orders of Napoleon Bonaparte, took the Pope captive, from Rome to Paris, where he died.

Now if we add Daniel's period of blessedness (12: 12), 1335 years from 538 end in 1873; or reckon the seventy-five years additional to the times of the seventh verse, which end in 1873; when we may expect the saints of God will stand in their lot.

ALL-SUFFICIENT GRACE.

"Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days so shall thy strength be."—Deut. 33: 25.

How often do we hear the last clause of the above passage quoted and misapplied, while the principal clause is entirely overlooked. Indeed, many use it who seem to know nothing of the beautiful and essential connection it has with the preceding clause. The separation of the clauses is not warranted or justified, and to do so is only to mar and destroy their force. When understood and taken together, as they should be, they contain one of the most encouraging promises in the Bible.

The text is addressed to Asher, one of the tribes of Israel, which possessed the land bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, by conquest more than 3300 years ago. The country abounded in iron and materials for brass. "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass." The marginal reading is, "Under thy shoes shall be iron and brass." The land being rough and hard, we see the convenience or rather the necessity of having feet protected.

It would be fool-hardy to attempt to stand on the water, or walk over rough and stony ground, thinking that God would save us from a watery grave or keep our feet from being bruised, unless he so ordered and we obeyed, having our faith in him unshaken. We should not invite temptation, thinking to show our strength in resisting.

If we have "put on the whole armor of God" (Eph. 6: 11); if we have "done all," or overcome; if we have buckled on "the shield of faith"; if we have taken "the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God"; then may we take to ourselves the precious promise found in Isa. 41: 10. If our feet are "shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace"; then as our days so shall our strength be.

Somers, Ct. A. L. Adams.

GOOD ADVICE.

I found this pasted on a looking-glass. I copy it and send it for publication. S. K. P.

Preserve the privacies of your house, your marriage state, and your hearts, from father, mother, brother, sister, and all the world. Between you two let no third person come, to share the secret joy or grief that belongs to you two alone. Do you two, with God's help, build your own quiet world, not allowing the dearest earthly friend to be the confident of aught that concerns your domestic peace. Let moments of alienation, if they occur, be healed and forgotten in after moments, and years of faithful, devoted love; but never let the wall of another's confidence be built up between you and your wife's or husband's hearts. Promise this to yourselves and to each other. Renew the vow at every temptation; you will find your account in it; your souls will grow as it were together, and at last become as one. Ah! if many a young pair had on their wedding-day known this all-important secret, how many marriages would have been happier than, alas! they are.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 15, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

CLOSE OF THE VOLUME.

It will be observed that this is the last number of the present volume. Now is the time to renew subscriptions, and pay in advance for the next volume. We purpose to spare no pains to make the Crisis worthy of the liberal patronage it is receiving. We are devising means to increase its value to our readers. We hope none of its former patrons will refuse to receive its weekly visits another year; but let every reader try to secure a new subscriber. One preacher said last year he intended to get one hundred new subscribers. When he came around to our annual meeting, he had his hundred. Will not others make a renewed effort? Let us do more this year than ever before.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

Our great National campmeeting at Springfield is now numbered with the things that were; but its memory is blessed. Those who have been in the habit of attending campmeetings for the last twenty years say our last one was the best.

THE GROUND

is a very pleasant one. It was said by those who have visited many camp-grounds that they know of none more so, excepting the one at Martha's Vineyard, where the Methodists have their annual meeting. The ground is within the city limits, about one and a half miles from the depot, on an elevated table land, about as high as the tops of the steeples in the city. The land is dry and sandy. From four pumps we have an abundance of the best of water. All, so far as we know, are pleased with the location. A number of houses have been erected—some of them good sized and very convenient. There were one hundred and seventy-eight tents and houses on the ground. There were four large tents, holding from five hundred to one thousand people; in which meetings were held when there was no preaching at the large stand. The ground is seated the best of any one we ever saw. The seats have easy backs to them, and are estimated to seat five thousand people. The ground rises gradually from the preacher's stand to the back side of the circle, thus giving all a good view of the preacher.

While engaged in the worship of the Lord, we were greeted with the cheering notes of the cuckoo, the locust, and the sweet songs of the forest birds, which added a charm to the scene, and made one think of the coming paradise, when the saints are gathered home.

began Saturday evening, Aug. 28th, when we had an excellent conference meeting in the Bethel tent. We saw at once that there had been much prayer for the campmeeting, and that the Brn. and Srs. had come to work for the Lord. The first meeting was a key-note for the whole, and gave us much cause to rejoice in the Lord.

Sabbath, Aug. 29th, was a lovely day, and our meetings were seasons of special refreshing from the presence of the Lord. At 9.15 A. M., we had an interesting love-feast, when a goodly number confessed their love for Jesus. Nearly all expressed their determination to consecrate themselves anew to the service of the Lord, and go to work with faithfulness in his vineyard. As a result the Lord gave them very rich blessings. At the hour of preaching, a large audience was present, characterized by good order and attention. We think there must have been between two and three thousand people present during the day. It was truly a feast-day to the saints of the Most High. Preaching in the morning by the writer, in the afternoon by Bro. Himes, in the evening by Bro. Munger. Several requested prayers. We could all say it was good to be there.

Monday, Aug. 30th, was a busy day on the camp-ground. Tents went up in all directions, and by night we had quite a settlement. It was a soul-stirring sight to witness the hearty greetings of dear friends in Christ. It could be truly said, see how they love one another. As they embraced each other, tears of joy would flow, shouts of praise ascend to the Lord for his persevering care, and for permitting them to meet again on that consecrated spot. One could well afford to go a long distance for the privilege of seeing so many of Jesus' friends; and listen to their songs of praise, and cheering testimonies. We do not expect to find in this world any thing more like paradise than some of the scenes we enjoyed at the camp-ground.

At 10 o'clock, on Monday, Sr. Hastings had a meeting in the large Bethel tent for the young people; and at the same time we had an excellent meeting at the stand. The meetings for the young folks resulted in much good during the week. Several of them decided to serve the Lord.

In the afternoon, at 2 P. M., Bro. F. Burr, from New Rutland, Ill., preached from the stand. He is a true minister of Christ, and gave a good discourse on faith. At 4 P. M. we had an excellent prayer-meeting in the large Bethel tent. In the evening, we had another interesting sermon from Bro. H. Pratt, showing that the christian is "the light of the world." The interest of the meeting at the close of Monday was two days in advance of what it is generally. We have never before attended a campmeeting where the Brn. and Srs. seemed so well prepared to go to work at the beginning of the meeting, as at this one.

Tuesday was a lovely day. We had good preaching from Brn. J. G. Hook, L. Boutell, and I. B. Potter. The prayer-meetings were well attended, and were seasons of refreshing.

Wednesday, Sept. 1st. The weather continued fine, but cool for the season. The prayer-meetings to day were heart-cheering. The Spirit of the Lord caused many hearts to rejoice. We had more good preaching by Brn. J. W. Thomas, A. W. Sibley, and A. A. Phelps.

Thursday. The weather continued cool, with some rain. The meetings were excellent. Bro. H. H. Dickenson preached in the morning, Bro. H. F. Carpenter in the P. M., and Bro. J. Couch in the evening. We had a rich feast from the preaching. The sermon in the evening on faith will be long remembered by those who heard it.

Friday the weather was lovely. Bro. S. G. Thurber preached in the morning, Bro. Hook in the afternoon, and Bro. Hitchcock in the evening. The interest continued to increase. The evening discourse was one of special richness. Quite a number were found who desired to become christians; and those who came in their sins found peace in believing.

Saturday. The weather was fine during the day, and quite warm. The meetings were very good. In the morning we had a love-feast indeed. Bro. W. Himes preached in the forenoon, Bro. J. Hemenway in the P. M., and Bro. Geo. A. Streeter in the evening. The prayer-meetings in the tents after the evening sermon were precious seasons. Many were seeking the Lord, and a goodly number had been delivered from the enemy's power into the glorious liberty of the gospel.

Sabbath. The last day of our great feast was very pleasant. The early morn was cheered by happy songs of praise to the Lord. It seemed almost like paradise. Everybody appeared to be happy. We do not see how any one who loved Jesus could feel otherwise, when enjoying such delightful surroundings.

At 8.30 we met for our closing love-feast, and we never had a better one. It was a feast indeed. We can hardly conceive of anything better. We had two hundred and forty-eight testimonies in about an hour, besides four prayers and fifteen hymns. We never had richer ones. They came from hearts full of love to God. Their smiling faces showed that they felt what they said, and were truly joyful in the Lord. One man who had been brought up a Catholic, arose and said he had never before seen any thing that appeared so like genuine christianity as what he had seen on the camp-ground. He requested prayers that he might be a true christian. Others did the same. One could well afford to go five hundred miles for the privilege of enjoying one such meeting as we had on that beautiful morning. We do not expect to enjoy a more heavenly season this side of the coming kingdom.

At the hour for preaching an immense audience was present—the largest we ever saw at a religious meeting. It was estimated from fifteen to thirty thousand. Excellent order prevailed during the entire day. We think it is very rare that so large an audience behaves with such decorum as was manifested at the Springfield camp-ground, on the last day of our great feast of tabernacles. We were greatly indebted to the city marshal, Mr. Pease, and his efficient police who exercised a faithful watch care over the ground night and day; also to Mr. Loomis, the state constable, who took an active part in the meetings, and enjoyed them with us, as did other christians of different denominations. Mr. S. S. Daman, the policeman who had the special care of the ground nights, became deeply interested in the meetings, and felt sorry to have them closed. Like many others, he became fully satisfied that the Spirit of the Lord was with us, and that we were proclaiming the truth of the Lord.

Sabbath morning we had preaching at the stand by Bro. S. Mathewson, in the great Bethel tent, by Bro. A. A. Phelps, in the Massachusetts tent by Bro. S. Morrill, and in the "Life and Union Tent" by G. W. Brown. The immense audience at the stand listened to the sermon with deep interest. It was weighty and produced a deep impression upon the minds of those who heard. He brought out the plan of salvation in a clear and forcible manner.

In the afternoon the audience was considerable larger than in the morning. The large area inclosed by the first circle of tents was densely packed, including the standing room in the aisles. Excellent order continued to prevail. Preaching at the stand by the writer, in the Bethel tent by Bro. Himes, in the Massachusetts tent by Bro. H. Pratt. In compliance with a request from the Christian Union at Chicopee, about three miles from the camp-ground, we preached at four o'clock in a pleasant grove to a large audience. In the evening Bro. Munger preached on the camp-ground. We then gathered around the table of the Lord to commemorate the sufferings of our dear Savior; when several hundred sat down to show their faith in Jesus as their Savior. Thus closed the best campmeeting we have had for many years. A goodly number were converted, and many backsliders began anew to serve the Lord. Twenty-nine were baptized, and quite a number more were ready, but did not go forward for want of opportunity.

It was very apparent that great good was accomplished by that meeting, in giving new strength and courage to the saints, and in the awakening of the children of the Lord. We think we have not seen the Brn. and Srs. more determined to live near the Lord than at the present time. They feel the importance of entire consecration to their divine Master. The prospect is bright for better days in the church of Christ. Truth and light are spreading in all directions. The Springfield campmeeting has exerted a hallowed influence that will not soon die away. It was truly a Bethel to many souls.

It made us feel sad to leave those lovely scenes and go out again into the cold world to experience the buffetings of Satan; but we parted with bright hopes of meeting again soon in the everlasting kingdom of God.

ALTON BAY.—We are now (Sept. 10th) at the Alton Bay campmeeting. It is a large meeting, and thus far is very good. The Spirit of the Lord is with his people. The prayer-meetings are excellent, the preaching very good, and the order all that could be expected. More anon.

A TERRIBLE STORM.

A terrific storm passed over Boston and vicinity Wednesday P. M., Sept. 8th. The day preceding was quite warm. The following from the Boston Post will give some idea of the terrible scene:—

"The city and vicinity were visited by a rain storm from the southeast yesterday afternoon, beginning shortly after four o'clock and continuing until about seven. It blew at times a gale, and nothing so terrific has been known certainly since 1851, when Minot's Ledge Lighthouse was destroyed. At that time, if we recollect, the gale, at least upon land, was not so severe as yesterday. The atmosphere during yesterday was oppressive and sultry to an extent that had not been known before during the season. It proved, as some had anticipated, a weather-breeder, and the breed was as rare as it was dreadful. Out of that gentle, zephyr-like breeze came a power which swept over the city carrying varied destruction. Such a carnival of the elements would have been grand to look upon but for the fearful danger which accompanied its exhibition. From five to seven the gale was at its height. It was at this time accompanied by floods of rain which descended by a sort of continuous Niagara. The black sky marshaled its solemn batteries to this point and that, and at another time the heavens were a dense mass of blackness. The streets ran with water, and some were almost impassable. Amid this mad fury of the elements, signs were being blown to the sidewalks, awnings were audaciously flapped in the faces of pedestrians, bricks came tumbling down mercilessly, and in some cases whole chimneys were prostrated with frightful violence. This wild tumult of the elements was accompanied by the most alarming howling of the wind. The rain was hurled impetuously against windows, sometimes fracturing glass, sometimes upheaving roofs, and sometimes prostrating whole buildings. It at length became dangerous in the extreme to pass along our streets, and it is almost a miracle that many lives were not destroyed. To carry umbrellas and similar protection was utterly impossible. Men and women were blown over; and in streets which took the force of the wind it was difficult in the extreme to navigate. The Coliseum was a victim, in part, of the storm, and its days of usefulness are doubtless numbered. The handsome spire of the Methodist (formerly Unitarian) church, on Hanover street, was blown down, and an edifice at South Boston was badly damaged. The trees upon the Common are badly damaged, large limbs having been blown in many cases to a great distance. The city will be found this morning strewn with the fragments of the terrible and almost unprecedented storm.

The Arlington street church was somewhat damaged, several of the windows having been broken by tin-roofing blown against them from neighboring buildings. Such buildings as are in progress of erection in the locality of the Back Bay were more or less damaged. Stagings, walls, chimneys, etc., were prostrated in numerous instances.

The Common suffered not a little by the gale. A large branch of the famous Old Elm, the history of which runs back into the dim past, was broken off with a bound, and now lies upon the ground. On the Beacon street side of the Common, the havoc of the storm was very noticeable. Beacon street was so blockaded with huge branches of trees that the passage of carriages was impossible. The attempt by impatient and daring hackmen was abandoned as hopeless; and last night this ton thoroughfare was the scene of sad demolition of the umbrageous ornaments of the Common. In every direction the Common is strewn with branches of trees, indicating the severity and unsparing nature of the storm.

Several of the fine trees in Chester Square and along Chester Park were blown over, and stripped of their limbs and foliage. Many chimneys at the South End were toppled down, fences laid over, and loose staging sent helter skelter by the force of the wind. The steeple of the Hollis Street Church was lifted from its cap three or four inches, and the residents of that locality were very apprehensive that it would fall over altogether. A chimney on the Pine Tree Block on Washington street, opposite the Boylston market, was blown into the middle of the street. A portion of the falling bricks knocked down a horse attached to an express wagon, driven by Mr. F. Jones.

METHODIST CHURCH ON HANOVER ST.—At the commencement of the gale the 'Cockerel Church' showed signs of weakness, and the swaying to and fro was plain to everybody. At six o'clock the police closed the streets, placing a rope across the street at Richmond and at Fleet street. The fact that unless the gale abated the steeple must go, was evident to everybody, and the residents of the houses in the immediate vicinity either left them or were ordered to leave by the police. At about half-past six, the ornaments on the church commenced to fly, and the top of the steeple to describe a larger arc. The news had spread, the crowd had thickened, and the streets were thronged with spectators, who almost breathlessly awaited its fall. Imagination was so strong that oftentimes they turned and fled, thinking it had toppled. At seven the crisis came—a strong gust of wind, followed immediately afterward by a similar one, completed the business, and, with a cracking and heavy rumbling sound, one hundred feet of the steeple fell in an east north-easterly direction, and an answering crash denoted the demolition of the doomed houses which lay in its track. Several of the smaller pieces found their way into the streets, and made them present a scene of destruction. But in the line of its fall, which was from the street obliquely, the effect was more plainly apparent. On falling, the steeple broke into several pieces. One portion fell perpendicularly through a house occupied by Mr. G. Oakes, carrying the roof and all the two floors to the cellar. Mr. Oakes was in the house at the time, but escaped serious injury. A similar house in the same block, occupied by Mr. David Baker, was damaged very nearly as much. At the time of the fall the Sabbath School Relief and Clothing Committee were giving the first sociable of the season. Some twenty or thirty ladies and gentlemen were present, and some laughed at the idea of its falling. One said, jocularly, 'It's coming!' and, to his own astonishment, a low, heavy, rumbling sound, followed by a terrible crash, which shook the building to its foundation, apprized them of the truth of his joke. The organ, and other property in the basement of the church, is uninjured. The whole damage by the fall is probably $15.000. The excitement was intense after its fall, and curious individuals hung round the scene till midnight, and repeated the tales of the other disasters which had happened to the city.

South Boston, being somewhat exposed, suffered fully as bad as any of her neighbors. The principal calamity was the fall of the Methodist church, which occurred about six o'clock in the evening. The church is newly built, and in fact is not yet completed. The tower, after swaying in such a manner as to lead many to suppose it could not stand, fell over on the church, carrying the roof down to the ground. The walls being new, the mortar was not wholly dry, and the sides and end were thrown down. In its course the cottage owned and occupied by the Manning family was destroyed, the family being at supper at the time, but all escaped without injury.

The roof of the repair shop belonging to the Old Colony Railroad was removed, and also that of the Hartford and Erie repair shop. Damage considerable in both cases. At the Bay State Iron works, a guy fell, striking a clerk named Holt, and severely injuring him. The wind was so strong on Eighth street as to lift the Bay View cars from the track. Several times one of the drivers essayed to go round, but the last time he was blown from his car, the car returned, and the passengers went the other way. Two frame houses on Gates street, near Telegraph, were blown down and thoroughly demolished. On Dorchester street, near the Old Colony Railroad bridge, two new frame buildings were completely wrecked.

Not a little damage was also done by the storm in Chelsea, Cambridge, Brookline, and other places in the vicinity. A church was blown down in Chelsea, and also one in Malden. Houses were unroofed, chimneys blown over, trees prostrated and in some cases uprooted, and there was a state of disorder and confusion generally.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

FORBIDDING TO MARRY.

It is a well-known fact that the spirits and many of their followers are making earnest efforts to have the marriage laws abolished. The following from a writer in the Rostrum, a Spiritualist monthly, published in Chicago, is to the point:—

"The fact cannot be denied nor disguised that at this day Spiritualism is implicated in the charge of free-love, or disloyalty to the institution of legal marriage, and rendered thereby obnoxious. There are some who discriminate between such disloyalty and that which is vulgarly denominated free-love. Others, again, hold that all malfeasance to the sacredness of legal marriage virtually means, and ultimates in, free-love. But the fact remains that such disaffection to the institution of legal marriage does exist both in the sentiments of thousands of Spiritualists, and in the teachings of its leading authors and lecturers. In proof of this it is only necessary to cite the inquirer to the works of Andrew Jackson Davis, Warren Chase, A. B. Child, Henry C. Wright, Austin Kent, Thomas L. Nichols, the Rostrum and Universe, etc., etc, and also many contributors to the Spiritualistic periodical literature, as J. Madison Allen, J. M. Peebles, E. V. Wilson, Moses Hull, and a long list of others.

NAPOLEON AT ROME.—The Standard of May 19th says "The Emperor of the French is about to build himself a villa on the Palatine Hill at Rome. A site has been purchased from the King of Naples, the workmen have already commenced their labors, and in a short space of time, the curiously significant fact may be witnessed of a residence for modern Gallic Royalty, completed on precisely the same spot as that on which the palaces of the ancient Cæsars once stood. The Palatine Hill was the most sacred ground of Roman tradition, with its stately palaces and temples, its regal villas built by opulent nobles and its rigid exclusion from its precincts of all, who could not boast of the best Latin blood in their veins."

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord:—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied unto you, and the love of Jesus towards you all in the bonds of Christ Jesus our Lord. I thank God to-day, that we are nearing home. I am glad that all things portend that Jesus' coming is near at hand. I feel to cry out, with one of old, "Come, Lord Jesus," and "come quickly." Come, end the sighs, the groans, the sorrows, and wipe the last lingering tear from off all faces, and let thy people rest in the land of Eden. Come, and heal the wounds that have been made by the cruel tyrant death, and let him be destroyed, and let thy dear ones join in the grand song of redemption.

We are in the perils of the last days, and we shall be tried and tested, all that we can bear; and the enemy will try, if possible, to draw us away from the blessed Jesus, and cause us to lose the crown, when we are within sight of the better shore. We need to watch and pray, as time rolls along, far more than ever; for the enemy of all righteousness is on our path, trying his best to draw us away from the Good Shepherd. Let us show to the world that we are not of the world, but have been chosen out of it, and for that reason the world hates us. If they say all manner of evil against us falsely for Jesus' sake, let us rejoice and be exceeding glad. I am so glad that Jesus knows all about us, and that he can see what is in the heart; and though people may judge us, and condemn us, yet that does not make it so. How good it is to leave all in the hands of God, and feel the blessed assurance that Jesus owns us and smiles upon us. Let others frown on us and forsake us, we know that we have one Friend that sticketh closer than a brother, who will never leave nor forsake us. This to me is more blessed than every thing else besides.

I feel to thank God for the kind friends Jesus has raised up to write to me, and cheer me in my lonely hours. May the blessing of heaven ever abide with you all; for the kind favors bestowed upon me. How often have your words of hope and cheer gladdened my weary, fainting heart. Your letters have been like healing balm. God bless you all, every one of you, from the crown of your heads to the sole of your feet, for all you have done for me in my long continued sufferings and sickness, is the earnest prayer of one that loves you all. How often do I wish that I could see and greet you, and speak words of hope and love to you all, and talk of our blessed hope, and the soon coming of Jesus.

In answer to the inquiries of dear friends, concerning my health, and that of dear sister Mary, I would say that she seems better at times, and then worse. She is in a dangerous situation. Do pray for her, that she may be spared. My sufferings have never been so severe before as during the past few months. Pray for me, that I may be perfectly patient.

Your Sister in Christ, L. B. WEAVER.

No. Dana, Mass.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I arrived here last night. I stopped on my way here in Hornersville, Ga. Was there from Thursday till the next Tuesday. The meeting was a success. I baptized three, and Bro. Mattox had baptized three before I came back. Although there had been quite an effort made to oppose our views before I arrived, yet we had fifteen to partake of the Lord's Supper, and a meeting was to be held the day I left to see about building a meeting-house. Three different men offered lots to build it on. Bro. L. C. Mattox will be an able defender of the truth. May the Lord bless the noble stand he and others have taken.

What a call there is in other places in Ga. to hear about these truths. I would to God that others who are adapted for southern fields of labor might be thrust out to scatter this flying message. I am glad the Lord is raising up men who have been born in the South, and are regular preachers, to engage in the work. I think we will soon be strong enough to have a conference.

To-morrow I start to fill my appointment on Suwannee Shoals. I expect a good meeting. Yours in hope, P. A. SMITH.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. M. A. ELDRIDGE writes:—"I am confined at home a great part of my time on account of poor health. Studying my Bible and perusing the pages of your paper, I am daily profited and comforted. God bless the editor and its contributors. Its columns are weekly filled with far better matter than anything I could produce from my pen. Yet I would say that I deeply sympathize with the servants of God, when reading over their letters, and see the opposition they meet with in their endeavors to spread Bible doctrine and arouse the churches and multitudes to see how far they have departed from the old landmarks of truth. But they need not fear. God is at the helm. They stand 'on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.'

After listening to a few sermons preached by Eld. C. F. Sweet a few years ago (somewhat against my will), I was convicted, but not convinced of the truth of the doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead and final destruction of the wicked. But the Spirit had attended the word preached; for the desire to compare Scripture with Scripture increased daily, and I besought God to show me what was truth. I had been a member of the M. E. church for several years, and had thought the greater part of their doctrines were in accordance with the word.

But when God answered my petitions, and light broke in and showed me from his word that the whole human family had no immortality out of Christ; although denounced as an infidel by church, pastor, friends, companion and all; after a severe struggle I was by the grace of God, after several months, enabled to heed not the arrows of ridicule, the bolts of envy, or darts of scorn. Thus far the campaign has been a rough one, the battles many, the enemy fierce and formidable. May the Lord help us so to live that the words of our mouths and the meditation of our hearts may be acceptable in his sight."

SR. R. A. DELANO writes:—"I wish to acknowledge my thankfulness for your kindness in sending the Crisis to me until the present time. My sad heart has been cheered and encouraged to hold out a little longer, as I have read the letters from the dear pilgrims from week to week, and while I live I shall pray the good Lord to reward you abundantly."

For the World's Crisis.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

We, the undersigned, do make the following statement: In consequence of reports concerning Mrs. A. E. Smith, the Executive Board of the A. C. A. appointed a committee to bring about an investigation of the matter, and to summon witnesses in the case. And in answer to such summons, we appeared at Springfield campmeeting, to substantiate said reports, Sept. 2nd, 1869, the day appointed for trial; after which the Board discovered, by a clause in their constitution, that they had no jurisdiction in the case, unless requested by the accused. She being informed of the fact, an investigation was solicited, to which Mrs. Smith replied: "I am not amenable to the A. C. A., as I am not a member of the Advent body, and do not draw my support from them alone, but from Methodists, Baptists, and others."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, 7th. The Times, in an article on the French situation, says: "Many think Prince Napoleon's speech was only a feeler to arrive at a knowledge of men's minds. If so, it was promptly answered. The clamor raised places the real liberal inspirations of France beyond doubt. The Prince's speech may be taken as the programme of the Imperial Government—such as must arise when the present men and principles are removed and when the Constitution is re-formed on the basis of national sovereignty, municipal self-government and ministerial responsibility.

Prince Napoleon's part in the new order of things depends on the chances of the Emperor's recovery. Should the Emperor live, a liberal ministry, with Prince Napoleon at its head, would be an experiment worth trying. If the Emperor's absence from the Cabinet is to be indefinitely prolonged, it is difficult to see who would dispute the lieutenancy of the Empire with Prince Napoleon. The present crisis in France cannot be without grave consequences, and the Prince has placed himself in a position in which it will be no good policy for the Emperor to dispense with or overlook him."

BERNE, 7th. The Swiss Federal Council have declined to take part in the joint action proposed by Prince Hohenlohe, the Bavariam Prime Minister, with regard to the Ecumenical Council.

Recruiting for the army of the Viceroy of Egypt has been forbidden in Switzerland.

MADRID, Sept. 8. Slight disturbances have occurred in this city, owing to the removal of volunteers from posts which they have held since the revolution. Several of the volunteers were wounded.

PARIS, Sept. 8. Advices from the Emperor's household to-day report his condition much improved.

LONDON, Sept. 8. The Bishop of Bath and Wells has resigned.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Sept. 7. Foreign papers state that a package, has been seized at Frume containing 10,000 copies of a revolutionary proclamation of Kossuth. The patriots of Hungary and the Slavic provinces are invited to hold themselves in readiness, as the day of a general insurrection cannot be far distant.

Philadelphia, 8th. Special dispatches from Scranton, dated at four o'clock A. M. to-day, report the finding of nearly two hundred dead bodies of the miners piled up together in the Avondale mine.

TERRIBLE DISASTER IN THE MINES.—Two Hundred Men Suffocated to Death.—A fire broke out at Plymouth, Monday morning in a flue at the bottom of the Steuben shaft, owned by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad company. In a short time the whole breaker and out-buildings were in flames, and the hoisting apparatus, the only avenue of escape for the miners was destroyed. All efforts to stay the flames were unavailing, and the whole structure fell, partly filling up the shaft. Over two hundred men are in the shaft, and have no communication out, with no chance for air, as the only way of getting air into the shaft was through the main opening, and that was filled with burning timbers and the debris of the flames. It is feared that the whole number have been suffocated by the smoke. The fire departments of Scranton, Wilkesbarre and Kingston are on hand and are playing streams down the shaft for the purpose of quenching the fire, so that the rubbish can be cleaned out and the condition of the men ascertained. It will probably take till to-morrow morning before any tidings can be received from them. The scene at the shaft is heart rending. Families of miners from all parts of the country are there at work, and the merchants, and in fact the whole population of the town, have turned out to assist.

At ten o'clock, this evening, the shaft was cleared and two men went down. They penetrated sixty or seventy yards to a closed gangway door, which they could not force open. They found three dead mules outside the door, and sulphurous fumes were pouring out through the door. They sent word up to send down a pick and shovel to clear the doors with. The bucket was brought up and two men started down with tools. As they were lowered the men at the bottom requested them to hurry, and on their reaching the foot of the shaft both were found dead. No hopes are entertained for the men in the shaft; all are supposed to have perished. Black damp is very bad here.

The loss by the fire will amount to about $100,000, partly covered by insurance. All the physicians of the vicinity have been summoned to attend, when the condition of the men is ascertained. The affair has cast a gloom upon the whole community, and business is almost entirely suspended. The mines only resumed work to-day, after a suspension of about three months. Among the men in the mines is Superintendent Hughes.

EXTENSION OF THE FIRE IN THE DISMAL SWAMP.—From the Norfolk (Va.,) Herald we learn that the fire in the Dismal Swamp has not abated, and that it has got into the best timber. The fire commenced near Suffolk, and has burned a wide track clear through to near the northwest locks, a distance of nearly twenty miles, and it is still going south. The ground, which is lined with pete for at least eight feet, is also being consumed, and the loss in timber will not fall far short of $200,000. Wild game—bears, deer and wild turkeys—are in abundance on the outskirts of the swamp, and are devastating the crops. The trains on the Petersburg Road are delayed every evening by falling timber, which not only blocks up the track but burns the ties and twists the rails. On the 6th instant they had to take up the rails in the rear of the train and put them in the places where the heat had warped those in front of them. When the wind is west, steam and other vessels on the James River have to anchor on account of the impenetrable smoke with which they are enveloped.

ACTIVITY IN THE NAVY YARDS.—A Washington dispatch says it is noticed by those connected with the Navy, and particularly by officers awaiting orders, that there is unusual activity in all the Navy Yards, and that they are being worked to almost their full capacity. Officers also say that every war vessel of the Navy which could be put in order is now ready to go into commission, and that all officers have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for immediate service. It is also stated that Secretary Robeson's and Admiral Porter's recent tour of the Navy Yards was for the purpose of pushing forward the work necessary to place the Navy in complete order for service.

LUSUS NATURÆ.—Mr. Horace Sessions of Fisherville, N. H., has a dwarf pear tree of the Duchess d'Angouleme species, that has leaved and blossomed twice this season. The first time was at the usual time in the spring. About the middle of August the first leaves turned yellow, and one afternoon they all dropped off within an hour. Since then new leaves have come out and the tree is now in blossom.

☞ Iowa has been visited this year by numerous destructive storms. Nearly every section of the State has been seriously damaged in this way.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting held at Fayville, Mass., commencing Sept. 16th, under the Mass. Mission Tent, which will be pitched near the house of Bro. H. S. Woods. Let all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns come and labor for the perishing and lost.

S. W. THURBER.
C. GOODRICH.

Conference.

The Massachusetts Advent Christian Conference will hold its quarterly session at Westfield, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. It is desirable that all the churches be represented by delegates. Those who cannot send delegates, we hope will report by letter, directing to the Secretary of Conference at Westfield, Mass.

S. W. THURBER, Pres.
P. S. BUTLER, Sec.

Notice.

The campmeeting at South Deerfield, N. H., for which some bills have been circulated, has been postponed, and a protracted meeting will be held instead, at West Deerfield, commencing Wednesday evening, Sept. 15th, and continue over the Sabbath, and as long as duty demands. Able servants of Christ will be present and preach the word. ENOCH MORRILL.

General Campmeeting at Camp Brook, Vermont.

There will be a general campmeeting, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday, at Camp Brook, Vt., on land owned by Jona. Washburn. The N. H. Mission Tent will be pitched on the ground, in which meetings will be held in case of rain. Those coming on the Vt. Central R. R. will stop at Bethel depot, where there will be teams to convey persons to the ground for reasonable compensation. Those coming with teams can get horse keeping at reasonable rates. A boarding tent will be on the ground for the accommodation of those who do not wish to board themselves, where meals can be had for reasonable prices. All who can bring tents are requested to do so, bringing bedding with them. Straw can be had on the ground. Elds. J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, and other able ministers, will be present to preach the gospel.

Come to this feast of tabernacles. Let no earthly consideration detain you from this important gathering of the disciples of Jesus. Let there be a rallying in the Green Mountain State to this encampment, where the banner of truth will be unfurled, and the word of God sounded out to perishing men.

JONA. WASHBURN.
GEO. W. LEWIS.
NORMAN LILLEY.
CLARK DAVIS.
W MAGIFFANY.

For the committee, J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Dear brethren, the committee of arrangements desire all those who intend to put up tents, to write and let us know the length and size of the poles you require. If your tent requires more than one pole, state the number. Please ascertain also the number, as nearly as you can, that will come from your several places in the cars, and let us know; so that we can arrange for teams. Should any of the brethren desire to send baggage in advance of themselves, it should be directed to the care of C. S. DAVIS, Bethel, Vt. All letters should be directed to GEO. W. LEWIS, Bethel, Vt.

Mr. Elliot, general ticket agent for the road [Vt. Central], will furnish blank return tickets, to be filled in favor of those who have paid full fare to the ground. We expect Bro. McAllister will be on the ground Friday with the tickets, and take charge of that branch of the business.

In behalf of the committee, GEO. W. LEWIS.

The Maine Mission Tent.

By request we go to Bryant's Pond campmeeting, on Wednesday, Sept. 15th, to aid them through their meeting.

I. C. WELLCOME.
W. H. MITCHELL.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Bridgton Centre for meetings, to commence as early as Sept. 22d or 23d, and continue as long as thought duty. This is an entirely new place for our message, not a believer there that we know of. We hopeour brethren from the surrounding country may come in with provision and bedding. We can furnish tent accommodations.

I. C. WELLCOME.
W. H. MITCHELL.

New York Mission Tent.

Our meeting now being held at Hemlock Lake will close, and the Tent will be pitched at East Randolph, Cattaraugus Co., Sept. 24th, and continue there as long as the weather will permit. Brn. Colegrove and Low are expected to be with me part of the time. J. WENDELL.

Notice.

A quarterly conference will be held in Bristol. Me., Newharbor meeting-house, to commence on Thursday, 5 P. M., Oct. 7th, and hold over Sunday. Brn. and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. We hope the ministers will come to this new field of labor. There will be homes for all who will come. S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made to hold a Second Advent Campmeeting at Bryant's Pond, Me., to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 14th, and hold over the Sabbath. Ample provision will be made for board and horse keeping. Board at 75 cts. per day. Supper and breakfast at 25 cts. each; dinner 35 cts. Horse keeping, hay and grain, 75 cts. per day. Hay alone, 50 cts. Pasturage, 17 cts. The meeting will be held on an Island, about one third of a mile from the village. There has been a small steamer built in the Pond, that will run at all times during the day, to take passengers over and back for 25 cts. Baggage will be carried free of charge. Those who wish to come off to see to their horses, can make satisfactory arrangements. Those who wish to pitch their tents on the Island, we hope will be on the ground in season to do so.

Fare on the Grand Trunk R. R. will be greatly reduced rates. Those coming on the Grand Trunk R. R. will stop at Bryant's Pond. An invitation is given to all to come and labor for the salvation of souls.

O. FRENCH,
A. PINGREE,
W. CHAMBERLAIN,
J. WHITMAN, } Committee.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. PREBLE.

Notice.

The quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of the State of New York will commence Friday evening, Sept. 17th, at Darien, Genesee Co., and continue over the Sabbath. Conveyance will meet trains at two P. M. from the east and four P. M. from the west on the New York Central R. R. at Croft's station, six miles west of Batavia.

D. COGSWELL.
W. J. HOBBS.
B. C. SIMONDS.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Conf. of New York will meet for its quarterly session with the church at Darien, Sept. 17th, and hold over the Sabbath. Homes will be provided for all, also teams to take them from the R. R. to the meeting. Come, brethren, to this feast, to enjoy its blessings and unitedly prepare for work in the regions beyond for the coming winter.

WARREN J. HOBBS, Clerk.

Notice.

There will be a grove meeting held in Rome, Me., near Belgrade Mills, in the grove of S. W. Ray, commencing Sept. 16th, and continue four days. Let all who are interested in this meeting do what they can to support it with their prayers and presence, and otherwise as is necessary. Will Bro. Seavey and other brethren be present to preach the word, and labor for the salvation of men? Let those who come do what they can to take care of themselves, although there will be provision made to care for a goodly number.

ALLEN DAMAN.

Notice.

Tent Meeting in Connecticut.

If the Lord will, the Connecticut Mission Tent will be erected in the town of Sharon, as Bro. Lyman Mills may arrange, and meetings commence on Wednesday Sept. 22d, to continue over the following Sabbath, and as long as the interest may demand. It is earnestly desired that all interested persons living in the region should make special effort to attend, to do good in the name of the Lord. BY TENT COMMITTEE.

Information.

Bro. S. C. Hancock would inform those interested, that his music, entitled, "Comfort in Affliction," and "Waiting," may be had by addressing him at Forrestville, Ct. Price five cents each.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

REMARKS. Cattle.—Our prediction proved true as regards numbers. There were 2299 head of western against 1219 last week. There was rather a scarcity of extra Cattle, hardly enough for the demand, and many of the butchers, who usually buy the best, had to take second best. Prices on good grade of Cattle were as high as last week. Common grades sold at 50 to 75 cts. per cwt. lower. A. N. Monroe sold 37 Steers at $7.62½ per cwt. L. W. average 1054 lbs. 55 Steers at $12 per cwt., ½ shrink average 1111 lbs. Hathaway, Fitch & Co. sold 41 Steers at $13 per cwt.; 30 shrink average 1403 lbs.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts 1531, mostly Western, handled by Brighton butchers on commission.

REMARKS. The demand for fresh fruits is still large. Choice lots of Peaches closed out with rapidity. Prices unchanged. Butter held firm as previously quoted. Tomatoes plenty, with fair demand. Pork $1 per bbl. lower. Lard unchanged. Hams 20 cts. and quiet. The demand for flour moderately fair; prices unchanged.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Sept. 14th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	817	7,256	4,074
Last week	1,085	10,736	4,412

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $12.50@13.00; first quality, $12.00@12.25; second quality, $10.50@11.75; third quality, $8.00@10.00.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $75. to $100@115; Yearlings, $18 to $26; Two years old, $28 to $42; Three years old, $45 to $60.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.25, $2.50, $2.75@$3.50 each; Extra, $3,75 to $4.25, or from 3 to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $4.50; Veal Calves, $0.00@$0.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 50 to 75 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—There has been a general delay of the live stock trade, occasioned by the lateness of the trains by accident in the vicinity of Acton, Mass., the Vt. Central train running into the Rutland and Burlington and killing nearly a car-load of sheep. Fortunately, no harm was experienced by the cattle dealers. Stock over the Lowell road arrived on time. The market early for cattle was a little quiet, buyers waiting to see the quality of the stock back. Prices have averaged a shade off from last week.

Sheep and Lambs.—We have booked 7256 head of sheep. There are probably 1000 more to arrive. Many lots are sent direct to butchers on commission. Prices to-day on extra goods have not depreciated in value. Common lots are quiet, and sold at small margin. The confusion caused by accident, and the shortness of the time after arrival, does not enable us to give as complete a report as we desire.

For the World's Crisis.

MEDITATION.

When weighed down with toil and care,
As the ills of life I bear,
Oft my heart is made to sigh, "When will He come?"
I would love to bid adieu
To this world so oft untrue,
And be welcomed to the better one to come.

Mid those scenes of toil and strife,
Where all wickedness is rife,
O, I would not, nay, I dare not, seek a home;
For the night will soon be past,
And we'll rest with Christ at last,
Where no pain, nor sin, nor sorrow e'er can come.

When I think we're almost through,
I oft weep and wonder too,
That I see so many halting by the way;
Some are by the world ensnared,
And so few are well prepared,
That I almost feel to dread the coming day.

O how sad to think that there
Some, whose prospects once were fair,
Will be cast away and lost forevermore;
All because they saw no harm,
When the world would soothe and charm,
But would carelessly admire and adore.

Unto such I feel to say,
Will ye sport the time away
While ye say "the Judge is standing at the door"?
Will ye still persist to trifle,
And your faithful conscience stifle,
And be found at last a worldling—nothing more?

Let us rather all awake,
And the armor wholly take,
For we know that now we near the heavenly shore;
Let us break the tempter's spell,
Lest our birthright we should sell,
When our race of toil and strife is almost o'er.

THE VALUE OF THE NUMBER 666.

The value of this apocalyptic sign, the number of the name, is, we apprehend, seriously underrated. Our Lord has said, in reference thereto, "Here is wisdom." Elsewhere he has also said, "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom." "Doth not wisdom cry?" "Wisdom is better than rubies." Job in his grief and affliction inquired, "But where shall wisdom be found?" A reply in the "revelation of Jesus Christ" is given—"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count," etc. Then if God encourages this computation, and aids also in a correct perception and application of the number, surely man should not object. The great question in the connection is that of so reading and reckoning this arithmetic of prophecy, as to identify the character and the man meant and mentioned. Can we do it? I think so. And it is something to be marked in the mind, it is the number of a man. Let us not too earnestly insist, then, that it is the number of an order of men, a series, a race, or an official line. But there is in the foresight of Jehovah a man to appear, a therionic head, a pet and elect of the wicked enemy, Satan, who shall receive "the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them" at his hand. When God says "a man," will any venture to say "no, not a man, but a power"? "It is the number of a man," and "the number of his name." How simple and perfectly distinct!

Again, whatever individual or official character is denoted by the two-horned beast, we think it is perfectly manifest throughout that the personage and headship whose identification is so clearly made a possible attainment in the last verse, is that implied by the first and not the second beast. It is an imperial and not precisely a papal man. It is the first beast that occupies the chief place, and that is worshiped through the active manœuvres of the second. The imperial beast may combine and unite ecclesiastical prerogatives in his function of secular ruler; and whether he does or not, it is he that receives the world's homage. If the second beast is the pope, it is not the pope that is adored in this prophecy. If Lucien become the last pope, it is not Lucien that receives worship, but it is Lucien that industriously uses the arguments of fire from heaven, and divers miracles and wonders, and infernal energy of a speaking oracle, to persuade men to worship the first beast. Hence it is useless to spend time in searching for a pope to match this arithmetic of 666. It has no application to pope or papacy. The Greek words Lateinos and apostates ("a Latin man" and "apostate") which contain this number, cannot mean the pope, we conceive, even if interpretatively applied to him. They denote an infidel-imperial man, and head of kingdoms, on the ground of the Roman empire of antiquity, and head of the Latin race. Such will be Louis Napoleon, we feel assured, and that in a very short space.

The immense value and importance of this arithmetical test may and will become soon incontestably clear. It will be clear, when so many will be tempted to doubt, and full of hesitations. Immense prejudices will have to be overcome, a tremendous unbelief surrendered. The glory gathering around the name of Bonaparte, the fame of his deeds in gathering to himself the Catholic world, and standing conspicuous in an adhesion of ten kingdoms, and as a restorer of the dispersed Jews after his victory over Prussia, not to mention also his air of amiable and pacific regard toward all nations and people that he can reach with some syllable of flattering speech,—this glory and fame, and radiant philanthropy (in seeming) and glittering eminence, will take millions in a snare. The point will be to convince many slow-seeing christians that this is antichrist. Satan works cunningly to throw thousands off the scent of danger. He will deceive them by the suggestion of absurdity in the cry of alarm, and warning of evil at hand. At such a time, what extraordinary value will this number have, as an index of unerring certainty, to identify the beast and antichrist. In this view we may realize that such as ridicule the study or import of this number, if really the friends of Christ, do not know or realize what they do. Let every one be careful and teachable, and earnest in the search of truth.

POSTSCRIPT.

It may be proper to add that the words Lateinos and Apostates, which are so frequently specified as corresponding to the number 666, do constitute a very proper and important fulfillment. But let it be remembered that their just application is to a man, for they are in the form (as an adjective and a noun respectively) of the masculine gender, and a reference of these words to a race, genea, or a kingdom, basileia is defective; and the same is true of a church, ecclesia. Besides, the future apostasy is to be far greater than any in the past. Some have imagined that because the number is found in the name Gladstone, that therefore the English premier is to take the position now anticipated as the aim and "destiny" of Napoleon. But in our humble judgment this is a great mistake. That he is to represent with England one of the ten horns is very likely, and it is possible every one of the ten kings will have the fatal number in his name. It is, at least, worthy of notice in the approaching development.

The number 666, in the Hebrew form of the name of Napoleon, was undesignedly omitted to be mentioned. C. COLEGROVE.

FINDINGS AND EXPERIENCE OF A PILGRIM.

Leaving Nevada, Ohio, my next stopping place was Dansville, N. Y. I arrived here on the 20th of August, and received a hearty greeting from old friends. Dansville has changed but little during my three years' absence; and as I walked up Main street, it seemed but yesterday since my feet last pressed its pavements. I found the church doing well, having continued to received additions to their numbers since I left them. But, as at Alton the Sabbath previous, so at Dansville, my time was occupied in preaching funeral sermons. Mr. Shafer, who had been lingering a long time at death's door, and who had said he should die when I came, and made a request for me to preach his funeral sermon, passed away the morning of my arrival.

I called to see Sr. Ellen Durkee, a dear saint of God, who was very sick, prayed with her and the friends gathered at her bedside, and the next morning she also was sleeping in Jesus. Sunday was a busy day. Large congregations assembled at both funerals, and the services were very solemn and interesting. The Lord gave me liberty in speaking to the crowds who assembled. on the blessed theme of life through Christ, and many heard these truths for the first time. May God grant some fruit from these efforts. Going seven miles to Rogersville, I preached in the evening to a good congregation, and stopped for the night with Bro. Smith. The interest is kept good in this vicinity, mainly through the efforts and labors of Bro. Cogswell, who is highly esteemed by the brethren. He is one of those earnest men who cannot rest while Satan is busy, and the whole region around feels the effect of his mighty blows for the truth.

On Monday, by invitation of Dr. Jackson, I dined at the Water Cure, and sat down to a table filled with the luxuries of food. Yes, luxuries, for in my opinion nothing could be prepared more suitable to the eye and taste of a hungry man. There were potatoes cooked in milk, graham and oatmeal mush, puddings, berries, peaches and cream, and other fruits, making a meal so palatable that I enjoyed it better than any meal since I left home; and the only thing it lacked to make it equal to home was the presence of wife and children. "Our Home on the Hillside" is well filled with patients, and as thriving as ever.

Bidding adieu to kind friends, I went on to Springwater. Here I found the interest in the truth was on the increase, and quite a congregation assembled at the M. E. church in the evening to hear the word. The Withington brothers, who live here, are quite earnest in their efforts to keep the truth before the people, and God is blessing them. They need a preacher to live right among them, and mean to have one. I made a short visit in Canadice, at Bro. Tibbals, who is one of those sharpshooters whom God keeps out on duty constantly, and who, with the unerring aim of a practical marksman, points his weapon for no uncertain purpose.

I then passed on to Honeoye Flats. Here thronging memories of the past crowded my mind. It was here that I came in the first days of my ministerial career, amid strangers and strange scenes, to receive the encouragement and sympathy of a few lovers of Jesus. Here, by the streams and lakes, at the hearths and homes, have I ever found God and his people ready to receive me. Here dwell hearts linked with mine by the strongest of spiritual ties. When I was weak they strengthened me. In trials they sympathized with me; and so twined themselves around my heart that I am led a willing captive to their love. Have I any strength? Thank God and Honeoye. Whatever I am in the ministry, I owe under God to the friends in Honeoye; and as I gaze once more upon the beautiful scenes of this fair land, and clasp once more the hand of affection, my heart melts, and my eyes suffuse with tears, and I think if this be earth, what will the kingdom be? I found the church here awake and keeping their light shining. During revival seasons many have been added to their numbers, and God is blessing them. Their new and commodious hall was crowded on Lord's day, and I enjoyed the meeting much. The New York Mission tent was pitched at Baptist Hill, seven miles from Honeoye, where Brn. Wendell and Fenn were doing a good work for the Master. I visited them in the afternoon, and enjoyed the privilege of speaking to an interested audience. F. BURR.

BURIED ALIVE.

O dreadful thought! I once was buried alive! To all outward appearances, I was dead; but I was not dead, for I loved the world, and that love had never been subdued. I tried hard for awhile to keep in the narrow way, and would often think I had overcome the world; but, alas! I knew not my own poor sinful heart, for I loved the world, and often tried to carry it along with my religion.

Thus it was with me at the age of seventeen. I professed to love the Lord, and was buried in baptism; but I was not "dead unto sin," for I loved the things of this life, and not being dead to the world, I was often led to join the gay and thoughtless in their parties of pleasure. I often felt condemned, and would resolve to go no more, for I found it was weaning me from the love of God, and it caused me much trouble. At last, it seemed that I was acting the part of a hypocrite; that I did not love the Lord; that my heart was far from him. Then I began to doubt if ever I had religion. It seemed, if I had, that I would not keep longing to enjoy the things of this life, and that I would not be so proud. I could not be content to dress plain, and appear in society as God had made me; but would stand before the glass with curling iron in hand to curl the hair that was very straight and beautiful; and to daub my face, that God had made very fair, with white and red.

I often wonder that God has spared me to see my vileness. No wonder I had doubts and fears, for I knew I could not serve God and mammon. I must part with one or the other. So when asked if I enjoyed religion, I told them that I never had any. It was all excitement. I knew that there were many that belonged to the church that walked as I had walked; and I often asked myself, How can they enjoy religion? I thought strange that I could not do as they did; but I could not; no, no. It was like mockery. So I forsook my first love, and turned "to the weak and beggarly elements of the world." For many long years I walked the broad road of folly; but, thank God, yes, glory to his holy name, I once was lost, but now am found; I once was blind, but now I see.

One year ago last March, I died, and was buried. Yes, thank God, I died unto sin, but am now alive unto God. The things I once loved, I now hate; the things I once hated, I now love. Yes, thank God, I love his blessed word. The way is not too strait for me now. I have cast off every chain that bound me. I no longer love this world of vanity. God in his goodness forgave me, and I love and adore his holy name. I love all his children. I can pray for those that despitefully use me. I have often said, Forgive me, by word and by letter. I enjoy religion now. I am trying to redeem the time, because the days are evil. I am looking for our dear Lord from heaven. Yes, he is soon coming to take his children home. "Sweet, sweet home." I am ready now, thank God. I long to see the King of the Jews. O, it will be a glorious day, when we can say, "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him."

Let me say a word to those that profess to love the Lord. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." Let us "live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." O let us be spiritually minded; for if we lose eternal life, we lose every thing. I believe the end is near. I can say, Come, dear Jesus; for "in his day shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace, so long as the moon endureth."

Why will any one reject the offers of a King to come into his royal family? Who can desire more honor, glory, peace, happiness? Is the right to eternal life on earth to be disdained? Here sin and sorrow afflict the children of God, who hold fast his name, and do his will; but there they shall not be tried and tempted, but will rejoice evermore with him who bought them. Hasten, O glorious day, when the kingdom shall fill the whole world.

JESUIT'S OATH.

Among the extra-judicial and secret oaths, we must rank the Jesuit s oath. But, before introducing it, we will quote from "Form of oath, at the the consecration of a Bishop in the Roman Pontifical, pp. 63, 65: "Heretics, schismatics, and rebels against the same our lord (the pope) and his successors, I will persecute and fight against to the utmost of my power."

"I do renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince, or state, named Protestant, or obedience to any of their inferior magistrates or officers. I do further declare that the doctrine of the church of England, of the Calvinists, Huguenots, and others of the name of Protestants, to be damnable, and they themselves are damned and to be damned, that will not forsake the same. I do further declare that I will help, assist, and advise all or any of his holiness's agents in any place wherever I shall be, in England, Scotland, Ireland, or in any other territory or kingdom I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestants' doctrine, and to destroy all their pretended powers, regal or otherwise. I do further promise and declare, that notwithstanding I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical for the propagation of the Mother Church's interest, to keep private all her agent's counsels from time to time, and they intrust me, and not to divulge, directly or indirectly, by word, writing or in any circumstance whatever, but to execute all that shall be proposed, given in charge, or discovered unto me by you, my ghostly father, or by any of this sacred convent. All of which I, A. B., do swear by the blessed Trinity and blessed sacrament, which I am now to receive, to perform, and on my part to keep inviolably. And do call the heavenly and glorious host of heaven to witness these, my real intentious, and to keep this my oath. In testimony hereof, I take this most holy and blessed sacrament of the eucharist, and witness the same further with my hand and seal in the face of this holy covenant."—Jesuit's oath as quoted by Usher.

The reader will see from an examination of this oath, that the Society or Order of Jesuits is a secret organization; that the members are pledged to do their utmost to extirpate all Protestant teachings; to destroy all their powers, regal or otherwise; and that they are allowed to assume any religion, no matter how heretical, for the purpose of the more effectually propagating the interests of the Catholic church; that they are pledged to secrecy, and are not to divulge any of the agent's counsels, directly or indirectly, by word, writing, or in any circumstance whatever.

The obligation of secrecy as expressed in the above oath, strongly reminds one of the Masonic oath of the first or Entered Apprentice degree; and, on carefully comparing them together, it is difficult to resist the conviction that they belong to the same category. And as vengeance is to be taken on all who oppose the Catholic faith, where and whenever they have the power to execute their purposes; so the Knights of Kadosh swear to "take vengeance on the traitors of Masonry."

That the peace of society, and the safety of the State demand the suppression of such oaths and obligations, will ultimately be patent to all considerate and reflecting minds; but of this fact the public, in all probability, will not be convinced until it is too late to remedy the evils resulting from organizations thus secretly bound together.

Secret, oath-bound societies are rapidly multiplying all over the world, and particularly in the United States; and human liberty, the freedom of the press, the liberty of conscience, and popular rights already tremble in the balance. We are aware that Free Masons disclaim any sympathy with Romanism, but it is a fact nevertheless that the Pope of Rome is a Mason, and hundreds and thousands of Catholics are Masons; and as Jesuits are allowed to profess any sort of religion for the purpose of advancing the interests of the Catholic church, can any one doubt that there are Catholic Jesuits in the Masonic Order? The seeming hostility of the Pope to Free Masonry is simply Jesuitical. The Popes in time past have been patrons of the Order, and have seemed to only oppose it as a matter of policy.

Secretism is a powerful enemy to the church of Christ. This is true whether it be social, political, or religious. Indeed, we may consider Jesuitism and Secretism as synonymous terms; and in warning our readers against one we warn them against both, in which we include all the dark plots and secret orders of the day whose names are legion, for they are many. He that doeth good cometh to the light.—Banner of Christ.

CHURCH CURSING AND DAMNING.

The following specimen of clerical profanity is an excellent illustration of the totally profligate spirit of false religion, the very opposite of the true—the religion of animality. It was published in a religious newspaper, under the appropriate head of "Church cursing and damning." G. W. STETSON.

"Wm. Hogan, Esq., who was removed from the Boston Custom House, was once a Catholic priest in Philadelphia; and, whilst in that office, advised his wardens that they were under no obligations to give a deed to the Pope of all church property—including the burying grounds, cemeteries, etc. For this crime he was excommunicated, and here is the act of excommunication. It would be horrible, if it could do any harm to the man. Its language is downright blasphemy."

"By the authority of God Almighty, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and of the undefiled Virgin Mary, mother and patroness of our Savior, and of all celestial virtues, angels, archangels, thrones, dominions, powers, cherubims, and seraphims: and of all the holy patriarchs, prophets, and of all the apostles and evangelists, of the holy innocents, who are found worthy to sing the new song of the holy martyrs and holy confessors, and of all the holy confessors, and of all the holy virgins, and of all the saints together with all the holy elect of God—may he, William Hogan be damned.

"We excommunicate and anathematize him, and from the thresholds of the holy church of God Almighty, we request him, that he may be tormented, disposed, and be delivered over with Dathan and Abiram, and with those who say unto the Lord, 'depart from us, we desire none of thy ways,' and as fire quenched with water, so let the light of him be put out forevermore, unless it shall repent him, and make satisfaction, Amen!

"May the Father who created man curse him! May the Son who suffered for us, curse him! May the Holy Ghost who was given to us in baptism, curse him! May the holy cross, which Christ for our salvation, triumphing over his enemies, ascended, curse him!

"May the holy and eternal Virgin Mary, mother of God, curse him! May Saint Michæl, the advocate of holy souls, curse him! May all the angels, archangels, principalities, and powers, and all the heavenly armies, curse him!'

"May the praiseworthy multitude of patriarchs and prophets, curse him!

"May St. John, the precurser, and St. John, the Baptist, and St. Peter, and St. Paul, and St. Andrew, and all other of Christ's apostles, together curse him! And may the rest of his disciples and four evangelists, who, by their preaching, converted the universal world, and may the holy and wonderful company of martyrs and confessors who, by their holy works, are found pleasing to God Almighty, curse him! May the holy choir of the holy virgins who, for the honor of Christ, have despised the things of the world, damn him! May all the saints from the beginning of the world who, to everlasting ages, are found to be beloved of God, damn him!

"May he be damned wherever he be, whether in the house or the stable, the garden or the field, or the highway, or in the path, or in the woods, or in the water, or in the church, may he be cursed in living and in dying.

"May he be cursed in eating and drinking, or being hungry, in being thirsty, in fasting, in sleeping, in slumbering, in sitting, in lying, in working, in resting, in———, and in———, and in blood letting.

"May he be cursed in all the faculties of his body.

"May he be cursed inwardly and outwardly, may he be cursed in his brains, and in his vortex—and in his temples, in his forehead, in his ears, in his eyebrows, in his cheeks, in his jawbones, in his nostrils, in his teeth and grinders, in his throat, in his shoulders, in his arms, in his fingers.

"May he be damned in his mouth, in his breasts, in his heart and pertenances, down to the very stomach.

"May he be cursed in his reins, and in his groins, in his thighs, and in his genitals, and in his hips, and his knees, his legs, and feet, and toe-nails.

"May he be cursed in all his joints, and articulations of his members, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, may there be no soundness in him!

"May the Son of the living God, with all the glory of his majesty, curse him! And may heaven, with all the powers which move therein, rise up against him, and curse and damn him—unless he repent, and make satisfaction! Amen, so be it!—be it so, Amen!"

The horrible brutality of this specimen of the dark ages is loathsome indeed; but we see everywhere, even in Protestant countries, the same disposition in men of grovelling sentiments and violent passions, to identify the Deity with their own profligate impulses, and bring the influence of religion to bolster up every falsehood and every wrong inflicted upon mankind. Everywhere in Europe, at the present time, the crimes of the people's oppressor's—red as they are with blood, and infamous with perjury and robbery—are sheltered by the moral influence of what is falsely called religion, from the storm of popular indignation.

A SHORT SERMON.

"I'd be little and unknown,
Loved and prized by God alone."

1. You wouldn't You are not so humble as you pretend—and in your soul you know it. One of the things that troubles you most is the fact that you can't be as big as the "biggest toad in the puddle," if not the "biggest toad" himself. When you hear the "gifted" Brother Aquila or the "fluent" Sister Priscilla exhort or pray, you are saying away down in your heart, "O, if I could only talk or pray like that!" And because you can't do as well as they do, in nine cases out of ten you sit still and do nothing. You don't envy them? Perhaps not, Thank God for it. You are terribly tempted to do so, at any rate.

"I'd be little and unknown."

You know better. All your life you've been longing and trying to be greater and better known, and if you've left any means untried, laziness and not humility was at the bottom of your neglect.

Sometimes you've tried to cheat yourself into the belief that you really meant what you said when you quoted with so much unction in the class-meeting the words of our text. You imagined Bro. Smith saying to Bro. Brown as they walked away, "how humble Bro. Jones is!" How it tickled your fancy! How your heart swelled with pride at the thought, and very likely a sharp little monitor inside punctured your inflated humility! But Smith didn't say it. He judged you charitably by himself. He had felt just so. You may have the jewel true humility—but you don't desire to be little and unknown.

2. You couldn't. You can be little. Perhaps you are so. I am afraid you are. If not, all you have to do to become so is to be mentally and spiritually idle,—I am afraid you have always been so. You can be unknown. Sloth will change you into a human jelly-fish, and nobody will care to know anything about you. You won't be worth knowing. You can live and die unnoticed by anybody but God—and he notices even jelly-fish. God has a care of jelly fish, too; but I don't think he prizes them much in any true sense of the word prize. He "accepts," "prizes" in every nation him that feareth God and worketh righteousnets. He who worketh will be great (Matt. 20: 26, 27,) and his deeds will make him known. God loves and prizes most those whom men love and prize most. So, then you see, if you're little and unknown—if you don't make the most of yourself for God and man, you will not be loved and prized by anybody.

3. You shouldn't. If you were Robinson Crusoe you might innocently be little and unknown. But you are not. His little Juan Fernandez was bounded by the great ocean that shut him out from all fellowship with his kind. Your island is in the midst of the great ocean of humanity, toiling, suffering, dying, doubting, groping, blind humanity. Its boundaries are but the measure of your power to bring rest, comfort, faith, light, and so life. Your own needs and your brother's needs cry to you to be great in overcoming evil and in doing good; to make yourself known by loving words and loving deeds; by earnest, whole-souled work for God and man.

If you are little and unknown, it will be because you are too cowardly to stand up for the truth, or too selfish to sacrifice for it. Too lazy to work for it, or too insensible to care for it. Go to work, not for the sake of being known, but for the sake of good. Dig up your buried talent and begin to trade upon it, or you'll find yourself little and unknown in results at the reckoning day!—The Methodist Times.

FRAGMENTS OF THOUGHT.

"Rest and Welcome" is the name of an inn in England, inviting the weary to stop and regale themselves. Jesus Christ is God's "rest and welcome," and he gives in Christ a welcome, saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Whoso is wise, will turn in at wisdom's voice. Reader, are you wise?

"If we believe that he heareth us, we know that we have the petition that we ask of him." How can we doubt the fact of his hearing us? If he listens to the cry of the raven, and attends to the hungry lion roaring for food, and has his ear open to all creation, he will not turn away his attention from the chief of his creatures, man. Not only is his ear accessible to all the works of his hand, as Creator, but it is especially accessible to his people as his children, for his ear is unto their prayers, to catch the feeblest, faintest whisper offered in the same mind that was in Christ; and if he hears us—and we know he does as Creator and Father—we have the petition that we ask of him. Impossible for our earnest cry to reach his ear, and not result in blessing; for the heart of God is a fountain of love and riches, constantly springing, and believing prayer is the cup with which we dip, and with which we drink the royal dainties.

If it be true that

"Satan trembles when he sees
The weakest saint upon his knees";

is he not dreadfully alarmed at the assembly of God's faithful people for united and believing prayer and thanksgiving?

The Lord with his people—what exalted company! The Lord in his people—how great the guest! The Lord for his people—who shall, with the Lord of Hosts for his protector, fear what man shall do unto him? The Lord through his people—their righteousness and strength; through them in all godliness, and in the power of his Spirit. The Lord round about his people—an impassable casement of fire, delivering them from evil. The Lord under his people—their rock and support. The Lord over his people—their heavenly watcher and the listener to the voice of their prayer. Through Christ our Lord are all things. "Who is a God like unto our God?" W. KELLAWAY.

IMPORTANT GEOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES.—The Vincentown marl beds, about twelve miles from Burlington, N. J., have become very interesting to geologists. Some workmen there, while digging the foundation for a projected building, came over a number of fossils, the remains apparently of some of the huge monstrosities which inhabited this planet at the opening of the tertiary period. These fossilized relics are said by men of science to be those of a mastodon, a large fish, and a mammalia of a race of monsters which, according to the testimony of geology, were most numerous at about the period at which the earth began to get fit for the habitation of man. Among these was found a grinder tooth, fourteen inches in circumference, four inches in breadth, and, notwithstanding the loss of weight which its age and surroundings must have effected, two pounds in weight. It is now in possession of Mr. J. S. Cook, the superintendent of the work of the Marl Company. It was white when first taken from the earth, but a few hours' exposure to the air made it black. It is supposed to have been once the property of a mastodon, and answers the description given by scientists generally of the grinders of that class of beings. A bone, eight feet in length and as many inches in diameter, was also taken out. Exposure to the air made this so brittle that it broke when handled. Mr. Cook also found a tooth of a shark, three inches long, and a number of other geological curiosities.

As soon as these discoveries became noised about, the grounds were visited by a number of scientific gentlemen. These found a number of geological gems. Professor Marsh took from the ground, among other things, the rib of a whale and the snout of a swordfish. Professor Thomas also visited the grounds, and declared them rich in geological deposits. It is understood that the search for these interesting relics will be continued until enough shall have been gathered to complete the skeletons of which pieces have been found. The search cannot proceed without further interesting discoveries being made.

THINKING is an important preparation for speaking; but in the heat of an argument there is not always time for it. Do you know how Lord Palmerston kept his pen waiting for his brain? He wrote standing, and had his desk at one end of the room and his inkstand at the other. Every dip involved a walk, and a brief cogitation that prevented rash expression. Moreover, the body was kept in healthy exercise and the blood in constant circulation.

TELL IT TO JESUS.

How good it is that there is some one to whom we can go and tell our sorrow.

Not long ago sister—came into trouble. She went to one of her friends and told her sorrow. She expected to get help, but, to her astonishment, the whole family whom she thought to be her friends, flew at her. Sister—could not say anything; she only stood and heard how they abused her in her sorrow. She then went to a neighbor and told her story, telling her how rudely she had been treated by her supposed friends, and asked her advice as to what she had better do. Her neighbor did not wish to say much on either side, but simply said: "Go and tell Jesus: something will turn up to help you."

Sister—went home, went into her closet and told Jesus her story, told him all, and asked him for strength to bear her cross, and implored him to help her out of her trouble. Help came, and the sister was happy because she had found a new friend.

"Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. * * * * Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

Jesus is a true friend. He has suffered vastly more for us than we ever can suffer, and happy is he who resteth on his bosom. He is the beloved for those who are hated; a Father to the fatherless; the widow's God; and a very present help to those who are in any trouble. Tell him all your sorrow and glorify his name.—Free Methodist.

"NEVER MIND, IT WON'T BE LONG."

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED AT A FUNERAL IN EDENVILLE, OHIO.

Two sisters were taking the last sad look at the corpse of a loved father. The grief of one seemed almost beyond control, when the other said to her, "Never mind, sister, it won't be long."

Never mind, it won't be long
Ere we join the Conqueror's song;
These weeping days will soon be o'er,
So never mind, we'll reach the shore.

Never mind, though rough the way
That leads to realms of endless day;
The King of glory soon will come,
So never mind, we're nearing home.

Never mind, though sad your heart,
And with friends you are called to part;
The tearless world by faith appears,
So never mind, and dry your tears.

Never mind, the Savior knows,
He feels for every weeper's woes;
He'll wipe the tears from every eye,
So never mind, that day is nigh.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

VENTILATION.

The commonest, and by no means the worst form of ventilating a room, is by opening the windows. But since the heated and impure air always ascends, the windows should open at the top, and extend to near the ceiling. It is a great mistake, however, to suppose that opening windows upon one side only suffices to ventilate an apartment. It often happens in the still and sultry atmosphere of summer that the temperature inside a room is the same as that outside. In such a case no more change will take place in the air of a room having windows which only open at one side, than would occur in the contents of an open-mouthed bottle immersed in water. In order to change the air of an apartment, means of escape as well as of entrance must be provided. If the door be kept open, so much the better; and if not, the inevitable imperfections in its fitting allow some air to pass. But whatever may be said about the wastefulness or inconvenience of open fireplaces, they have at least one great recommendation. In houses where no provision is made for ventilation,—and, as already said, such a provision is altogether exceptional,—the chimney is in this respect of essential use. When a fire is burning, an artificial upward draught is created, which materially assists in purifying our rooms in winter; and in summer, when there is no fire, the chimney acts as an air-shaft. The principle that double orifices are necessary for ventilation, should never be lost sight of. One of these should be as near the floor, and the other as near the ceiling, as is convenient, and they should also be placed, if possible, at opposite sides of the apartment. Notwithstanding this, the fireplace in summer is often closed up as tightly as possible with a fireboard. This is done for the sake of appearance, and no doubt generally in ignorance that appearance is consulted at the expense of health.

Light and air are two of the essentials for health. Of the influence of light, much could be said did space admit of it. But there is no such connection between them as some appear to suppose, for at night ventilation is often of even greater importance than during the day. More time is passed in the same atmosphere during sleep, than in our waking hours. The system is also more susceptible of noxious influences when we are sleeping. On these accounts the ventilation of bed-rooms should be carefully attended to. Unfortunately an absurd belief still prevails that night air is dangerous. This belief we have taken some pains to aid in dispelling, in our article on "Taking cold," in our July number. Here we shall only add, that no air admitted from without is likely to prove half so perilous as that which is breathed and re-breathed by the unfortunate occupant of a small and tightly-closed bed-chamber. The great objection to open windows and doors, is the uncomfortable draught which is caused by them. This objection is with many persons insurmountable, and there are numerous contrivances for otherwise giving entrance and exit to the atmosphere. One of the simplest is to have a portion of the window filled by perforated plates of zinc, or with perforated glass. The draught caused by air entering through small apertures is diffused and rendered less perceptible. But ventilation by this means is necessarily very imperfect, Another plan is that by the revolving tin fan, still to be seen in England occupying the place of a pane of glass in some old-fashioned windows. Ventilators made of plates of glass which can be opened or closed after the fashion of a Venetian blind, occupy the same position in some modern windows. These are in every way superior to the preceding, as they do not interfere with the light, and the current of air can be directed either upwards or downwards.

Ventilation from below is effected by means of air-channels and grated openings in the floor, but it is disagreeable on account of the draught thrown upon the legs of persons in the room. A far better method is to have the skirting boards of the room arranged so that spaces for the transmission of fresh air shall exist between them and the walls.

Several methods of ventilating from the roof are employed in factories, stables, and other buildings. One method is interesting because it depends upon a curious property of the atmosphere. It consists in the perpendicular insertion in the roof of a tube, which is divided longitudinally by a partition. One extremity of the tube communicates with the outer air, and the other with the room to be ventilated. It is found that the foul air passes out through one part of a tube so divided, while the fresh air passes in through the other part. A tube inserted within another tube, with a space between them, is sometimes substituted for the divided tube. But the objection to both methods is, that at the ceiling the fresh current, in its descent into the room, mixes with the vitiated current.

We have now to describe one of the best and simplest modes of ventilating ordinary rooms with which we are acquainted. It is one equally applicable in winter as well as in summer, because all draught is avoided; for, even if a window be opened at the top, a downward draught is frequently felt, and in rainy weather it is often impossible to keep the window open. The present plan is applicable in all kinds of weather, and would be perfect if the ventilation could be effected nearer to the ceiling.

As it can be applied at an expense of a few cents, and as no unsightly appearance is made, it is equally applicable to the cottage and to the mansion. A piece of wood an inch or more in thickness, three inches wide, and exactly as long as the breadth of the window through which ventilation is to be established, is to be prepared. Let the sash be now raised, and let the slip of wood be placed upon the side of the window; the sash is then to be drawn down closely upon the slip of wood. If the slip has been well fitted—and the fitting may be made more complete by adapting it to the grooves in the sash and in its frame, if any exist—no draught will be experienced in consequence of the displacement of the sash at this part. The effect of such an arrangement is, however, to cause a separation between the bars of the sashes at the centre. By this means a perpendicular current of air will be projected into the room between the glass in the upper and lower sashes and their respective bars, or else the current will pass outwards in the reverse direction, in a manner by which all inconvenience from draught will be avoided.

Supposing that two or more windows at opposite sides of a room are fitted in this manner a very satisfactory ventilation will be secured. Owing to a difference in its equilibrium, the air will rush in on one side and rush out on the other side of the apartment. If the slips of wood are painted of the same color as the windows themselves, they will attract little notice.—Good Health.

OUR CELLARS.

The cellar is a part of the house, and needs attending to as well as the kitchen or parlor and possibly more. But it does not get it. Now and then there is a clean cellar; you meet it, and you are surprised. It is a pleasure to be in such a cellar. But such cellars are rare; even a woman reputed neat is shy of her cellar.

Now the cellars with its odors is a breeder of mischief. This has often enough been said; but yet our cellars stay as they were. There is much sickness, especially in the spring; but people never think of their cellars; they do not lay it to the odors that are constantly emanating from them, and enter the rooms. There is little escape out door for the pestilent air before it first afflicts the family. Here then is a malaria and a poison constantly entering the room where the family are, and into the other rooms till up into the garret, where it is held. But the first attack fresh from its haunt, is in the room occupied; and this is breathed all night steadily, in the morning the same, and during the day; there is no riddance.

This odor is perceived every time the cellar door is opened. If apples prevail, apples will be the smell, if cabbage, the poisonous scent of that plant rotting will invade your olfactories and penetrate your lungs. There are potatoes rotten foul enough, and perhaps carrots and turnips, and onions, and what not. Mould is universal and mixes with the rest; a poison it is as well as the rest. And there is the air itself confined perhaps all winter.

How many cellars do not answer to this description? Is this as it ought to be? No sensible man or woman will say it is. How comes it that each man or woman owning such a cellar is ashamed of it, excuses it?

We dread to go into a cellar in the spring. Fruit kept there and kept sound, and the air fresh and sweet; all mould kept out, and vessels of all kinds wiped and kept dry, the walls limed, and deodorisers constantly employed, this is a different thing. Once in a while you meet with such a cellar and you want to stay in it. There is a scent, but it is such a scent as you delight in. The fruit ripening, telling you by the escape of its scent, and by the rosy cheeks it exhibits. There may also be a ground smell when you approach the roots, and the boxes that hold your scions, etc. This is not offensive. But putrefaction in all its forms is, and especially the advanced stage of it.

Such a cellar, pure, sweet, healthy, is a source of comfort in a house. Every time its door opens (in spring) you are minded of what not even the apple blossoms themselves can do—take you back to the earlier times the dearer domestic, closer than all out door life. A cellar, therefore, wants attending to as much as any part of the house, and more; it is nearer at the sea of pestilence-breeding, in a warm, constantly warm part of the house during the winter.

Attended to properly, here is the place to keep things. Of course you want different compartments, set off for different purposes: some kept warmer, some kept cooler. Butter will stay sweet in such a cellar; so will cream. A cooked dish, after cooling in the open air, will not absorb bad odors here, sweet odors rather. From such a cellar you can set your table with what is always appetizing, and you set what is an excellent example.—Ex.

LIGHT IN THE SICK-CHAMBER.—"The quantity of light admitted into the sick-chamber is a matter of immense importance to its suffering occupant. As light is an element of cheerfulness, it is on that account desirable that as much should be admitted as the patient can bear without inconvenience. The light should be soft and subdued, not glaring; and care should be taken that bright, lustrous objects, such as crystals and looking-glasses, should be kept out of the patient's view, and that neither the flame of a lamp or candle, nor its reflection in a mirror, be suffered to annoy him by flashing across his field of vision."—Ridge on Health and Disease.

GEO. T. ADAMS,
Treasurer A. C. Association.

The Board of the A. C. A. at this point introduced the report of their action in the case of Eld. D. T. Taylor, which was read as follows:—

Report of the Board of Managers of the A. C. A.,

CONCERNING THE PROCEEDINGS IN THE CASE OF ELD. D. T. TAYLOR, TO THE ASSOCIATION, AT ITS ANNUAL MEETING, AUG. 31, 1867.

Inasmuch as certain hurtful and erroneous impressions respecting the relations existing between this Board and Eld. D. T. Taylor, some of which impressions are that certain members of this Board have, out of envy and malice, sought to cripple the influence of Eld. Taylor, lest he rise too high in power and position in our association; and, inasmuch as these impressions have arisen from the fact of the appointment of a council, in part by this Board, to investigate certain charges against Eld. Taylor currently reported in certain localities, and have been strengthened by the silence of this Board respecting the council and its results; Therefore we, the members of this Board, do feel it our bounden duty to report to you the following record of our doings in the matter from beginning to end, which we will do as follows:—

Eld. D. T. Taylor being Corresponding Editor of the World's Crisis, and ex-officio a member of the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association, did, on the 5th of July, 1867, address a communication to the Board in the following language:—

"I beg leave to introduce for your consideration the following preamble and request, which I humbly pray you to carefully and at once attend to, viz: 'Whereas, certain evil reports and charges, injurious to and destructive of the moral character of the Corresponding Editor of the World's Crisis, are in circulation, emanating from hostile parties in Castleton, Vt., and elsewhere; and, whereas, the truth of these charges and allegations has been from the first, and still is, firmly denied and indignantly repelled by Eld. D. T. Taylor, who has never failed to explain his past course of conduct to all who have asked him for explanations; and, whereas, these reports have been believed and industriously circulated by members of this Board for months, and, the Board taking no action in the matter, I do hereby request and demand that this Board do appoint two of its members, viz., the President, Eld. S. G. Mathewson, and the Sec'y, Eld. H. F. Carpenter, a committee, who shall call, select and summon two other ministers, and members of this Board, which two last shall select a third, which five together shall meet at Rutland, Vt., at — o'clock P. M., on Thursday, the 16th of July, or sooner, to inquire into, hear, consult and decide upon Eld. Taylor's case.'"

In accordance with the above request and demand, this Board did appoint two of its members (substituting Eld. Couch for Eld. Mathewson) to select two others, which two selected a third, which five did assemble at Castleton, Vt. (to which place, rather than Rutland, it assembled at the request of Eld. Taylor), Aug, 6th, 1867; and being enlarged by the addition of two brethren, selected and named by Eld. Taylor, did there and then enter upon the duties to which they were called; viz., "to inquire into, hear, consult and decide upon Eld. Taylor's case." The council, after a patient hearing of the case, did decide that the principal charges were sustained, notwithstanding his continued denial, and the council reported their decision to this Board, which report was accepted and adopted.

Eld. Taylor, soon after the rendition of the verdict of the council, wrote—"I desire at once to be released from all responsibility and connection with the office of President of the Publication Society; as also that of Cor. Ed. of the World's Crisis"; expressing his determination to retire from the contested field to privacy and silence. Eld. Taylor did, apparently, for a time, retire from the field; and it was thought by the Board would either confess to the charges of which he was convicted, and be fully restored to christian fellowship, or at least cease to minister in holy things, and thus spare the Board the painful necessity of making his case public. Eld. Taylor subsequently addressed a communication to the council, which he termed an apology, confession, etc., etc., which the council referred to this Board, which returned the same to Eld. Taylor, it being unsatisfactory.

Here the matter now rests, and we think it will be apparent to all that the investigation of the matter, and the appointment of the council, was instituted at the request of Eld. Taylor, and not through the envy or malice of any of the Board.

Now, beloved brethren in association assembled, having laid before you the simple report of the origin and progress of matters pertaining to this case, and our action in reference to the same, we submit them to you for your consideration and final disposal; hoping that our heavenly Father will give you wisdom so to dispose of this perplexing case, that our common enemy may not be able to use it as a cause for further division, strife and jealousy among us.

This report was accepted, and under a motion to suspend, a motion to adopt was entertained. This motion called forth a spirited discussion, during which the original specifications and findings of the council against Eld. Taylor were called for and, on motion, read. Under the pressure of the previous question, the motion to adopt was finally carried by a small majority, whereupon the meeting adjourned till 4 P. M.

Tuesday, 4 P. M. After prayer, the President of the A. C. P. S. reported by the following address:

President's Address.

Mr. President, and members of the Advent Christian Association:

As our heavenly Father hath in great mercy protected us through the threatening and dangerous vicissitudes of another year of toil and labor in his vineyard, let us now offer grateful praise for the past, and implore divine protection for the future. As another fiscal year of your benevolent and christian Association has passed, and as your Association is the parent and guardian of the Advent Christian Publication Society, its officers are under covenant obligations to report annually to you their stewardship, and to lay before you the ways and means which their official experience has taught them will be the most efficient in accomplishing the great and holy work for which we are associated.

The President of the A. C. P. Society is not constitutionally an executive, but a presiding officer; therefore you can expect no more of him than an address upon general principles and future operations. The protecting providences and divinely appointed guards of the bridal church have been thrown abundantly around us through the swiftly revolving lunations of another official period. How abundant and heart-felt should be our songs of praise as we recount the innumerable blessings of physical and spiritual enjoyments poured upon us by a forgiving God since our last salutations in this consecrated temple. Our bountiful Father hath bestowed upon us health, intelligence, abundant harvests, wealth, and the inestimable blessings of peace, together with divine truth, the heavenly unction, and all the christian graces as resources to be appropriated and employed in this glorious work in which we are fraternally engaged.

The principles and objects which have called us around your chair, Mr. President, are not of a secondary and unimportant character relatively in human associations; but they are pre-eminently necessary, important, and essential for human happiness and eternal salvation. Captains, priests and kings have met in tent, palace and temple, with high sounding fame and brilliancy of royal equipage, to discuss questions and decide principles involving the interests of millions of the human family; but never have men met since the last meeting of the Carpenter and fishermen, or associated together for a more important work than you are fraternized to accomplish. Your love and benevolence embraces every tribe and family upon the earth, not only in their present interests, but in their eternal welfare. Your hope and expectations speak for the unnumbered millions of the dead, not only in the certainty of their rising and happiness, but in their immediate accomplishment. Your faith views, in the immediate future, the heavy folded drapery of the curse removed from the earth, and the beautiful mantle of paradisiacal glory wrapped around it.

Your calling is a high and holy one; to speak for God to this generation, and notify it of coming judgment. Arise, then, above the level of nominal christianity, and plant your feet upon the eminence of perfect love and full consecration to Christ, that you may be prepared to write with gospel clearness, and speak with that thrilling eloquence which the heavenly unction alone can give; and that you may cause the heart of this generation to pulsate with a sense of ending mercy and coming glory.

Tell the world, and tell it faithfully and earnestly, that sin and evil are about to end; and that their last foul stain will soon be washed away, and never defile the beautiful robes of the new creation. Tell the people that sin and the sinner must end together; for how can sin be finished while the sinner remains? Speak with authority, and tell the deceived and scoffing generation that the "seed of the woman" will surely crush the serpent's head; and, with infinite love and almighty power, sweep from the universe every scratch and stain caused by the satanic rebellion. Put the trumpet to your lips, and with agonizing earnestness swell the last note of warning to unprecedented fullness; roll it back to the darkest corners of human habitations, sounding its awakening echoes around the western mountains, and its seven-fold thunderings across the eastern plains.

Speak with heavenly authority, and fear not to make it emphatic; saying, Behold the Bridegroom cometh! prepare to meet him! Push out the life-boat which God has put in your care; push it out quickly, for the night grows dark, and the storm clouds are fast gathering, while the awful roaring of a destructive tempest is heard by holy watchers who refuse to sleep, and the noble ship bearing the rearguard of earth's mighty army is nearing the lee-shore of a dangerous coast. Wait not for the disturbed winds to fill your sail, for you have not a moment to lose. Ply your oars, and shoot your safe boat into the fearful tempest, for the ship is laboring hard, and fast drifting upon the predicted rock, where she must surely part, and her unprotected passengers go down into the dark waters of perdition.

Therefore, men of God, strike your oars together; pull in the same direction; fear not wind or wave, for Christ has sent you. Take along the life-preservers. Keep out a clear light, that the perishing may see that a Savior is in your midst. Let not Satan palsy your arm with jealousy and division; for it is raised to strike the last blow against a strong and enraged foe, who, seeing that his last opportunity for deception and destruction has come, raises his barbed spear of satanic lies, and with death spasms grapples with Immanuel's faithful sentinels, hoping to destroy forever God's messengers, who bear the last message of love to a perishing world.

Do not think me enthusiastic or fanciful in describing your calling, work and position. No language can describe it; no figure can illustrate it; no emotion can realize it. It is the last link in the chain of human experience; the last work that God has given mortals to do. It is the experience of transition from mortal woes and the darkness of the curse, to the angelic joys and infinite glories of the coming kingdom. Your position is one foot upon the sea, and the other upon the land; standing where time and eternity meet. You stand near the line of demarkation between mortality and immortality. This is the grand predicted period when human monarchs will end their cruel and bloody usurpation, and Immanuel commence his triumphant and eternal reign.

Oh! then, let us open our eyes to comprehend the magnitude of our work, and the responsibility of our position. We are called to make plain the closing mysteries of the gospel of Christ, so that the last generation may have the opportunity of seeing their true relation to the events of the past, present and future.

As the work assigned to the church of Christ of this generation is more important and responsible than that assigned to any other, God has furnished it with corresponding resources to be used in the accomplishment of that specific work. Every department of the world has been taxed to produce light upon the great questions that we feel required especially to discuss. That light is concentrated upon a focal point where we stand. The Bible is the great fountain of spiritual and gospel light in the world; and it never gave such clear and glorious illumination as at the present time. This increased light is not in consequence of the book being more luminous than before; but results from circumstances and events having been thrown around it, which serve as the reflectors of a lamp, to reflect and concentrate, and thus increase the light upon certain focal points. So has God thrown around his word at the present time multiplied circumstances and facts, which cast the reflected rays of inspiration from ancient manuscripts and exhumed sculptured stones, from long-buried ruins of ancient cities and modern nations, armed and angry, from earthquakes numerous and fearful, and sea-waves roaring and portentous, from the sun's mid-day shadow and the moon's intercepted and crimsoned light, from the stars shooting revelry, and men's fearful expectations of coming change, from the spasmodic insanity of Spiritism and the overspreading tide of infidelity and Atheism, from the increase of knowledge and decrease of piety, from the warning which all nations have heard of coming judgment, and the unmistakable witness of the heavenly unction, that the end of all things is at hand.

God gave one inspired book for the especial benefit and instruction of the last generation of his church; therefore it was sealed and hidden from all others, and reserved as a key to unlock the last heaven-sent message to this sinful world. If we belong to the class to whom the sealed book was dedicated, then it becomes clearly our duty to publish to the world the important and sacred truths unfolding from its pages. As the opening visions of the sealed book are prophetical, the divine hand unmistakably points to the prophetical Scriptures as especially important to be faithfully published at the present time. As those visions also partake largely of the chronological element, it is manifestly the duty of the church to place in the foreground the chronological scriptures, so that all nations may see their relative position to the coming judgment.

Then, dear brethren in Christ, may we duly consider the vastness of the work in which we are called to engage, and the infinite importance hinged upon its faithful accomplishment. We are under strong obligations to use all of the means and instrumentalities God has put in our possession, with the most earnest and united efforts to discharge the great responsibilities resting upon us. How entirely disproportionate do the instrumentalities and means we are using appear when compared with the great work we are called to do; therefore let us prayerfully unite in making an earnest effort to improve, enlarge, and extend their usefulness as much as possible.

The "World's Crisis," the "Young Pilgrim," tracts, pamphlets and books are the important organs through which we propose to publish the truths due to this generation. Let us therefore earnestly pray and labor to inscribe upon their pages those truths and sentiments which shall warn a slumbering world of coming judgment and swift destruction. Make their columns radiant with heavenly light, dispelling the darkness of error, manifested in mystical interpretations and satanic lies; the false assurance that a persistently infidel nation has the divine promise of future glorification; the blinding insinuation that Messiah will fail to make ALL who are in their graves HEAR his voice and COME FORTH; the false promise holding out the delusive hope that a more propitious age is coming in which rebels can become loyal to Christ; the ensnaring cry, that "peace and safety" will be enjoyed on the battle field before the strong man's goods are spoiled; the murmuring sound whispered from the secret chamber of a spirit medium, blasphemously assuming the divine prerogative, and dooming to perdition all who do not obey its mandate, and rest on the Hebrew day.

Make your publications as a trumpet. Put it to your mouth firmly. Find the key-note of heaven's music made for this generation. Give it the "certain sound." Raise it above the jargon of Babel's confusion. Sound it clear and long. Roll it far back to the ends of the earth, and let the world hear the judgment note. Raise them as the artist's canvass. Paint upon their pages the "fearful sights and great signs from heaven"—sure precursors of coming change.

Draw the outlines of the dark picture of coming woes, pencilling in crimson hues the tragical scenes of Armageddon's battle. Bring out on the fore-ground, in life-like clearness, the countless hosts of Gentile manhood, now standing in uniform, holding plough-share swords and pruning-hook spears, suddenly falling as if by leaden hail from heaven, leaving none to give them the sacred rite of burial.

When your sympathetic hearts sicken and fail in tracing the dark lines of coming wrath, raise the vail, and look beyond the smoke and dust of human strife, and see through the rended curtain of blue the bright face of the coming Deliverer, clothed in glorious majesty, seated upon his eternal, coming—O, alleluia, coming—yes, coming to find and embrace his broken-hearted and long-waiting bride. Behold his beaming countenance, and see the indescribable expression of love as he casts his eye upon the meek and lowly ones, who are waiting in an agony to see him. Look at his sharp eye, as it runs along through the chambers of the dead, viewing the dreamless sleepers lying upon their cold pillows, as the Godlike emotion rises in his heart saying, O death, I will be thy plague; O grave, I will be thy destruction!

See his opening lips as they utter the sentence vitalized by almighty power, Ye dead, come forth! And O the wonderful sight seen by guardian angels and waiting saints, as the unnumbered hosts arise; some to shame, and some to glory. Look again, as the Conqueror raises his arm and sweeps into eternal oblivion the curse, and all rebels, bringing out the new creation all spotless and glorious, in which will not be seen one foul stain of sin, or heard one discordant note in the harmonies of the universe throughout the eternal ages.

Brethren, I know your emotions, as your duties and obligations in this matter come up before you. I know how your heart pulsates and your hand trembles, as you take the pen to attempt to perform such responsible duties. But dip your pens in heaven's ink, and upon your knees commence the work, and God will help you shade the picture correctly.

O, ye servants of the Most High God, make one more effort to get a little nearer the throne Dip deeper into the fountain of divinity. Draw larger supplies from the store-house, for the battle waxes hot, and the enemy roars like a tempest, and comes like a whirlwind, with the desperation of death-spasms to strike his last blow.

Stand, then, at your post. Listen to no voice but that of your Captain. Follow his signals. Do your appointed work faithfully, and the divine protection will shield your head in the day of battle, and give speedy victory and eternal peace in the kingdom of God.

JOHN COUCH.

This report was heartily accepted and adopted, and it was further moved that it be published in tract form, and circulated far and wide, and also that it be called "an Address," instead of "a Report," both which motions were carried. Then came the usual report from the Secretary, Treasurer and Business Agent of the A. C. P. S., all of which were accepted and adopted.

Report of Secretary of A. C. P. S.

Mr. President, and Brethren of the Advent Christian Association:—

Your Publication Society has had two meetings during the year;—the first in this grove, at the last National Campmeeting, Aug. 28th, 1868; and the second at 6 o'clock this morning, Aug. 31st, 1869. At the first meeting, Aug. 28th, 1868, the following business was transacted: It was voted that Bro. Geo. T. Adams be continued as Business Agent the ensuing year, at a salary of $200 a year, as heretofore, and that his salary as Treasurer be the same as last year, $300. The Secretaries of the two Societies were voted the usual $10 each for their services the preceding year. The Treasurer was authorized to refund to Bro. Grant the amount of Crisis monies lost when his pocket was picked.

It was Voted that any articles (letters, obituaries and notices excepted) which shall be sent from persons in good standing among us for publication in the World's Crisis, and declined by the Editor, shall be forwarded by him to the Editorial Committee, whose decision shall be final.

It was Resolved that we raise $2000 for the distribution of tracts the ensuing year; and that the preaching brethren be requested to act as agents to solicit contributions to the Tract Fund, as often at least as once every quarter, and forward the same to the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

At the meeting this morning, Aug. 31st, 1869, the Reports of the Treasurer and Business Agent were read, accepted and approved, and ordered to be read before the meeting of the Advent Christian Association; and the minutes of the Secretary (of which this Report is, in brief the substance) were read and approved.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM B. HERRON,
Secretary Adv. Chris. Pub. Society.

Business Agent's Report.

Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society.

Through the continued mercy of our heavenly Father, we are brought to the close of another year; and it becomes my duty, as your executive Agent, to report to you the business operations of the Society for the past year. In most of the several departments of our business, we have the pleasure to report a favorable degree of prosperity. And, although our business has not been quite so extensive, and our receipts somewhat less than in 1867, or 1868, yet, while we remember that those were years of special interest to a large portion of our patrons, and that the past year has been one of more depression in various branches of business, we have much reason to be grateful that the same kind hand which has led us from our small beginning, still leads, putting it into the hearts of his people to furnish us with means by which we are enabled to send forth the papers, tracts and books in all directions, proving, as we trust, a blessing to many who shall thus be led to see the truth as it shines forth in the word of God; and with us rejoice in hope of life eternal at the appearing of our blessed Savior.

The capital with which we commenced the business of the year, as reported last year, was $14,331.41. Our present capital we put as follows:—

Property on hand, valued at	$9,402 81
Cash in the Treasury	201 05
Amount due the Crisis, valued at	4500 00
" " " Pilgrim	300 00
" " on book acct.	300 00
Total capital	14,703 86

Our receipts the past year were $20,258.64, which is $1,066.22 less than the previous year. Of this amount, $250.00 was received from the Executors of the estate of the late Bro. J. Turner, of Levant, Me., who, as we are informed, left a donation to the Society of $1000.00, leaving the sum of $750.00 yet to be paid in to the Society.

THE BOOK AND TRACT DEPARTMENT.

We have issued during the past year 2,523,248 pages of tracts, several of which are new ones, namely; "Historic Echoes of the Voice of God"; "The Nature of Man; is he mortal or immortal?" "Will the wicked be raised from the dead?" "Salvation neglected"; "Our Creed," and "The Resurrection of the Wicked Dead." We have published the second edition of the "Hymns of the Jubilee Harp,"—about 2000 copies. Considering the fact that the market has been so fully supplied with the Jubilee Harp, and various Hymn books, the Hymns have had, and are having a fair sale, though not so extensive as the Harp.

"The Scriptural Question Book."—Several months since, when we went to the printing establishment where this work was first got out, and where the stereotype plates had always been kept and the printing done, to order another edition, the plates were no where to be found. And although a liberal reward was offered for their recovery, and diligent search made, no traces could be found of them. The firm who printed the last edition having dissolved, and the establishment passed into other hands, we could not obtain any remuneration for the loss. In view of the fact that there was quite a demand for the book, we thought it best to procure a new set of plates, which we did at an expense of $136.50, giving us better plates, however, than the first ones, from which we have published an edition of 1000 copies, which are having a good sale.

The value of books and tracts on hand at the beginning of the year, as reported, was $3,552.17. The cost of books and tracts made, purchased and donated during the year, is $3,952.63. Due on book sales, less than last year, $175.00. Total books and tracts, $7,679.74. The receipts for books and tracts was $4,995.54. Amount received from the tract fund for tracts granted, $1,065.79. Total sales and grants, $6,061.33. Value of books, tracts, and papers on hand, $3,291,32. Total, $9,352.65.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

This paper, the most important of all our issues, has had a good degree of prosperity the past year. At the beginning of the year, we were printing a weekly edition of some 8200 copies, there being upon our subscription list a few short of 8000, quite a number of copies being sold every week to persons whose names were not on the list. We now print an edition of some 8700 copies weekly, and are constantly adding. The whole number of names on the subscription list is 8,492. The number of new subscribers is 1,486. The number of stoppages 941, leaving a net increase of 545 during the year. The number of free subscribers on our list at the present time is 809, being an increase of 82 since last year; during which it declined 150. The expense of our free list, at our usual rates, it will be seen is more than $2000.00. On the free list, Maine has 125, N. H. 103, Vt. 40, Mass. 146, R. I. 24, Conn. 73, N. Y. 101, Pa. 20, Iowa 20, Wis. 26, Mich, 24, Ill. 31, and other States from 1 to 10 each.

The receipts for the Crisis during the year have been, on the subscription and sales, $13,000.33. On the poor fund, $47.30. Total, $1,3047.63. The expenditures about $12,700, not including outlays for new type, etc. There is a large amount due from subscribers, and it is important that some action should be taken in regard to continuing the Crisis to those who are far behind in their payments, and who do not notify us of their wishes in the case. Some of the brethren have done nobly in obtaining new subscribers for the Crisis during the year; one brother having obtained about 80, and we expect he will soon make up 100. Others have also obtained a goodly number. Upon the whole, we think the prospects of "Our Family Paper" were never better than at present. We hear a good word for it from various directions. Let the brethren and sisters, looking for the speedy coming of our Lord, do what they can in the direction of getting new subscribers for our paper, and thus help scatter the truth.

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

Last year, we printed a semi-monthly edition of some 5800 copies, there being 5035 copies on the subscription list. We have continued to print about the same number as last year; but it now appears that the subscription list has constantly decreased,—the stoppages being so much more than the increase, that at the present time there are on the list only 4346 copies. The receipts for the year are $1,054.83; the expenditures not far from $1,500.00. There is quite an amount due on the Pilgrim; and only about 128 sent out free.

THE TRACT FUND.

The amount received on the Tract Fund the past year, we are happy to say, is more than double what it was last year. This year it is $910.64; last year it was $413.19. There is a constant call for tracts, for free distribution, from various parts of the country, and we have sent them forth in all directions; grants having been made to the amount of $1,065.79, being $155.15 more than received on the Tract Fund this year. This deficit is made up from a balance on hand from previous donations. We hope the friends will continue their offerings to this Fund, for we know of none that is doing more good; and we have many tracts that should have a wide circulation—some new and important ones; and it is very desirable that the brethren should write more for this department. Write tracts filled with present truth; truths not held by the great mass; truths neglected by others. The Lord help us all, that we do our duty in this direction.

THE POOR FUND.

The amount received on this Fund the past year is very small, it being only $47.30. We are constantly receiving applications from those who very much desire the Crisis, but who are poor. Many of them are widows, who do not feel able to pay for the paper. It is hard to turn away from such, and we know the brethren and sisters would desire us to do all in our power to meet the wishes of those who really are unable to pay for the Crisis, and who yet are anxious to receive it. We feel it our duty to be as liberal in this direction as our circumstances will admit; yet we do not see how there can be much enlargement of the free list, unless the friends come forward with donations for the Poor Fund. Will not the brethren and sisters take hold in this matter, and thus help the Society to meet the wants of the poor among us?

THE EUROPEAN MISSION.

The amount received for this Mission the past year is $283.90; $217.30 of which has been paid over, or remitted according to the directions of Bro. Czechowski. $65.30 are remaining on hand for payment, as opportunity may afford.

Brethren, our prayer is that the blessing of our heavenly Father may rest upon and ever direct the Advent Christian Publication Society in all its efforts to scatter light and truth; truth due this generation, which we believe will witness the glorious advent of our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CRISIS OFFICE, BOSTON, Aug. 26th, 1869.

We, the undersigned, have examined the accounts of Geo. T. Adams, Agent of the Advent Christian Publication Society, as embodied in the foregoing Report, and find them correct, according to the best of our knowledge and belief.

HENRY V. DAVIS, } Auditing
J. G. HAMBLIN, } Committee.

The nominating committee for the A. C. A. reported the following nominations, which report was accepted.

NOMINATIONS FOR A. C. A.

For President.—S. G. MATHEWSON.
For Vice President.—M. BATCHELOR.
For Secretary.—HENRY PRATT.
For Treasurer.—GEO. T. ADAMS.
For Directors.—H. H. Dickinson, J. Couch, D. Mathewson, J. G. Hamblin, A. W. Sibley, Jonas Wendell, C. S. Sherman, W. H. Mitchell, H. V. Davis.
For Editor of Crisis.—MILES GRANT.

Brn. H. M. Hamblin, C. Pike and G. W. Denny were appointed a committee on ballots for the A. C. A. On motion, votes were cast for officers of the A. C. A. and for Editor at the same time, and ballots were received at the call of the roll. Adjourned till to-morrow at 9 A. M.

Wednesday, 9 o'clock A. M. After prayer by Eld. White, the committee on ballots for the A. C. A. reported the nominated list elected. The nominating committee for the A. C. P. S. reported their NOMINATIONS FOR A. C. P. S.

For President.—JOHN COUCH.
For Secretary.—WM. B. HERRON.
For Treasurer.—GEO. T. ADAMS.
For Editorial Committee.—S. G. Mathewson, Albion Ross, L. Boutell.
For Publishing Committee.—D. Mathewson, H. V. Davis, J. G. Hamblin, M. Batchelor, H. H. Dickinson.

Brn. Wm. Himes, L. C. McKinstry, and E. G. Kingsbury, were appointed a committee on ballots for the A. C. P. S. Remarks were made upon the nominations by several, but no action was reached, when ballots were called for and received at the call of the roll.

Promiscuous business was called for, when the question of liberty in the columns of the Crisis was introduced. In the discussion which followed, each speaker was limited to three minutes, and allowed but one speech, except by universal consent. The discussion resulted in no action.

The committee on ballots for the A. C. P. S. reported the nominations elected. Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three to nominate a Campmeeting Committee of seven, to be elected at the stand. Carried. The Chair appointed Brn. J. Couch, B. Hitchcock and L. T. Cunningham, said committee.

On motion, the question of a National Convention was considered, and it was Voted, That we approve the call made at Buchanan for a National Convention. It was also Voted, That we recommend to the committee on the National Convention the approval and acceptance of the invitation of the church at Rochester, N. Y., to hold the National meeting at that place.

Moved, That the report of the Board in the case of Eld. Taylor be published in the minutes of this meeting. Carried. Adjourned sine die. H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the A. C. Association, held Sept. 2nd, 1869, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:—

"That whereas doubts have arisen whether the action of the Association directing the publication of the report of the Board in regard to D. T. Taylor, covered the publishing of the charges and findings,

"Therefore, Resolved, That in our opinion the action of the Association demands the publishing of said charges and findings."

H. Pratt, Secretary.

Charges.

1st. "Writing love letters over the signature of 'Merton.'"

2nd. "Making improper proposals to Miss ——, now Mrs. ——."

3rd. "Misrepresentation of the matter connected with an exchange."

4th. "Too much familiarity with" "young ladies."

Verdict on the Charges.

1st. "Charge specified, sustained unanimously."

2nd. "Charge specified, received six ballots of the seven, sustaining it. One not clear."

3rd. "Charge specified. It is in the opinion of this council that it was a misunderstanding of the parties."

4th. "Charge specified. Six votes sustaining it, and one stating, 'satisfied with Eld. Taylor's confession of it.'"

J. Couch, President.
O. R. Fassett, Secretary.

Corrections.—In the Beport of the A. C. Association, first column, Treasurer's Report, for Aug. 16th, 1869, read Aug. 16th, 1868.

In second column, 22nd line, last word, for and, read not.

In the Business Agent's Report, under the head of Europeon Mission, for $217.30, read $217.20; and for $65.30, read $66.70.

ROCKLAND TENT MEETING.

We pitched the Maine Mission Tent in Rockland City, and commenced meetings Aug. 12th in the name of the Lord. Last year we held a tent meeting one week, one and a half miles out of the city, which was well attended by those in the outskirts of the city; many of whom were awakened, and some instructed in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the signs of the times. Bro. S. Hall followed up the interest there awakened, and has continued to labor in that vicinity the past year. Quite a number have been converted, and others awakened, who were anxious to hear more on the coming and kingdom of Christ. They accordingly invited us there again with the tent. We received many hearty greetings from those who thanked God that they ever saw the Mission tent, and heard the good news of Christ's coming, and learned the gospel hope which was preached last year.

Our meetings began with some three hundred or four hundred attendants, the numbers constantly increasing till Sunday, when the tent was literally packed with those who listened with the most profound attention. In the evening about one thousand attended. The second week it was manifest that the gospel of the kingdom of God was engaging the attention of many minds. The meetings became the topic of conversation and discussion among all classes in the city, many declaring they never heard the gospel in so clear a light before; never saw such harmony in the word; had never thought there was such a strong chain of truth in the Bible; they wished they could have such preaching in the churches, etc., etc. Members of the Methodist, Baptist, and Free Baptist churches came and united with us in the worship of God, and many thanked God for sending us there to preach the old-fashioned gospel. From four hundred to seven hundred were in attendance evenings, and on the second Sunday the tent would not contain the people. In the evening some twelve hundred were in attendance. Several hundred stood without, and listened attentively to the word. Several had arisen for prayers, and several others were seeking the Lord. New doors were opened for entertainment, and new and interesting cases were constantly coming to light. The third week the interest did not abate. Several were converted, and others sought for mercy. Our social meetings were of the most interesting character. The last one was attended by some seven hundred people, and during the evening some twelve hundred listened with special attention to the last discourse, among whom was the Mayor of the city, who expressed his gratification for the good effect our meetings were having on their people, and especially on a large class of persons over whom their churches exerted no influence.

Brn. L. F. Cole and S. Hall were with us to aid in the work. Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell came to our help just before the close of the last week. The truths preached have made a deep impression on the hearts of many, and at the close of our meeting we parted with many who had become very warmly attached to us. May God still bless and guide them and lead others to Christ and the truth. By conforming to gospel order, and laboring for the salvation of sinners, avoiding strange messages and false teachers, they will prosper. Thus closed the best meeting we have ever yet held under the Maine Mission Tent.

Our meetings were orderly, and the best attention manifested. The people treated us with great kindness and respect, and won our sympathies and affection. While there, we received an invitation to come to Mt. Vernon to hold another tent meeting, signed by fifty names, but we have all our time promised elsewhere. I. C. Wellcome.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 22, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, Geo. T. Adams.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to Geo. T. Adams, directing it to Miles Grant, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your Name and Post Office Address. Ag't.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in Plain Letters.

☞ J. BUTTON sends $1.50 for the Crisis, and wants the name changed to Benj. Hathaway. Please give us your P. O. address.

☞ SOME ONE sends us $1.50 for tracts, from Lewiston, Me., but does not sign any name. Who was it?

☞ Who sends us 50 cents from Stowe, Vt., for two copies of the "Nature of Man," without any name?

☞ J. T. HOWLAND—Received.

☞ ESTHER C. SMITH—We cannot tell you.

☞ Thanks to SR. L. DRAIN for the article sent.

☞ J. K. BELLOWS—It is $3.35.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. Ag't.

Correspondents.—If you have sent money and do not see it credited, be patient. It is because of an accumulation of business from campmeeting. It will be attended to soon.

WORK.

This is the hour when every friend of Jesus should be faithfully at work in the vineyard of the Lord, if he would hear him say at last, "Well done, good and faithful servant." The harvest is truly great, but the laborers are few. The cry for help comes from all directions. Let no one be idle in this critical moment of time, when all the powers of darkness are arrayed against the little flock of Christ. Let us be brave and bold for the right. The day of glory is rapidly advancing, and soon we must answer for the blessings and privileges we have enjoyed. Is the reader living so that he can give up his account with joy? Do not refuse to answer this question before laying down this paper.

ALTON BAY CAMPMEETING.

The campmeeting at Alton Bay this year was said to be the best that has been held at that place. It was a large meeting, and well conducted by its judicious committee. The ground is quite romantic in consequence of its varied scenery of hills and vales, covered by tents and camp houses on the banks of Lake Winnipiseogee [pronounced Winnipesock'ee,] a beautiful lake, some twenty-three miles long and about ten wide at its greatest width. It is quite irregular in its shape, interspersed by many islands. Its waters are deep and very pure. It is said to be fed principally by springs. Several steamers run between Alton Bay and the towns on the lake shore, connecting with a branch of the Boston and Maine R. R. running from Dover to the bay. The camp-ground is but a few rods from the terminus of the R. R. and the wharf for the boats. The lake is four hundred and seventy-two feet above the level of the sea, and affords delightful scenery for those who make summer excursions to the White Mountains. The rail road accommodations, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Merritt, the gentlemanly superintendent of the Boston and Maine road, were all that could be desired. He deserves much praise for his efforts in behalf of the interests of the meeting. The same may be said of Capt. Wiggin of the steamer Chocorua, and Capt. Sanborn of the Lady of the Lake. The R. R. and steamboat accommodations add much value to the Alton Bay camp-ground.

We did not arrive at the camp till Tuesday afternoon; but we learned that the meetings had been excellent from Sabbath up to that time. The preaching had been well calculated to comfort and strengthen the saints and awaken sinners and backsliders. The prayer and conference meetings had been seasons of refreshing. We found a healthy religious tone of feeling upon the ground. As said a Congregational minister who was present, they were "tremendously in earnest." The meeting was good from its beginning to its close. Some of the prayer-meetings were very good, especially those in the Lawrence and Concord tents. A goodly number were converted, many reclaimed from a backslidden state, and some thirty-five baptized. There was preaching by Brn. J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, J. Hemenway, H. L. Hastings, A. Ross, I. Damman, Sr. Benson (colored,) C. Goodrich, A. A. Phelps, W. Thurman, A. Simpson, M. Batchelor, N. Wheeler, and the writer.

There were two large tents on the ground. "The Bethel" and "The New Hampshire." A large number of houses have been built and several others are to be erected for next year. It is quite a camp village. The tents and houses this year were said to number two hundred and fifty. Several of the houses are well built, and of good size, affording agreeable accommodations.

Sabbath, the last day of the feast, was one of special interest. The first in order was the general love-feast at the stand, during which we had many excellent testimonies in favor of the christian religion. In about an hour and a quarter there were some three hundred and five who spoke of their love for Jesus. It was a joyful hour for the saints, and gave us some idea of the coming paradise. There was preaching in three places during the day, to accommodate the crowd of people present. Good order prevailed, so far as we know. In the evening we had a very pleasant communion season, when some seven hundred sat down to the table of the Lord. Thus ended another great and good meeting.

We are fully satisfied that the campmeetings this year have been seasons of special profit to the church of Christ. In all, so far as we know, there has been a deeper religious tone of feeling than for many years. This has been particularly true of the Springfield and Alton Bay meetings; and we hope to bear the same of the western meeting at De Kalb, Ill. It is high time that all, who purpose to be at "the marriage of the Lamb," were entirely consecrated to the Lord. Nothing short of this will fit us for the coming kingdom.

DISCUSSION AT NORWALK.

The following report of a discussion in Ohio was sent to the P. O. about the 31st of May, and has but just arrived at our office in Boston:

Our discussion at Norwalk, O., was one of special interest. Our opponent, Dr. M. H. Houghton of Wilson, O., conducted the debate with more than ordinary candor. He used less harsh expressions than the majority of the defenders of Spiritualism. He claims to have been a medium for a number of years. He made very little reference to the Bible, to prove his points, but often expressed a want of confidence in its teachings. The audiences were large, intelligent, and very attentive, observing excellent order. Our discussion began Tuesday evening, May 25th, and continued five evenings. We debated the following resolution:

Resolved, That the phenomena of Spiritism proceed from demons, and not from departed human spirits.

Our opponent presented but little evidence on the negative side; claiming he was under no "obligation to prove any thing." His rebutting arguments consisted mostly in simply denying the facts we produced. He admitted that if the Bible was of divine origin, we had sustained the resolution.

He asserted that, instead of our being "in the latter times" (1 Tim. 4: 1,) "the earth is in its babyhood;" that man came up from the lower order of animals; that science is our only guide; that clairvoyance gives the most satisfactory evidence of man's immortality; that Spiritualism is the most profoundly moral system ever taught; that spirits make up bodies for themselves out of the particles of matter floating in the atmosphere; etc., etc. He referred to only one passage of Scripture during the debate, and to that quite indifferently. He made frequent remarks, showing that a Bible statement had but little weight upon his mind; but was not so outspoken against the Scriptures as are most of the lecturers on Spiritualism. We think his defense of the subject was the weakest we have ever witnessed in a debate on that question. Assertions were plenty, but the proof was wanting.

The more we see and know of Spiritualism, the better we are satisfied that the whole system is utterly antichristian in all its features. It is Satan's crowning work, and last grand effort to overthrow the Bible and all the followers of Jesus.

While at Norwalk, we had much pleasure in the society of Bro. and Sr. G. W. Stetson, from Olena, O. His labors have been blest in this vicinity, and are appreciated by the churches which are favored with his preaching. His health has been rather poor, but is now improving.

We made pleasant visits with various families in Norwalk, and met several Brn. and Srs. from other towns. We spent Sabbath, May 30th, in N. and had a good day. We found the church had been much strengthened and comforted during the discussion. Those who had been perplexed with the phenomena of Spiritualism, are now satisfied that the whole system is of Satanic origin.

We closed our Sabbath meeting with an interesting communion season, commemorating the death and sufferings of our Savior.

THE PULPIT.

The following sensible remarks are from the Rainbow, a valuable monthly, published in England, and edited by Dr. Wm. Leask, 9 Newington Green, London. The writer says:

"One of the most humbling facts of the day, if our readers would think of it, is the criticism of the pulpit by the secular press. Not that we object to that criticism, severely cutting as it sometimes is, but to the lamentable truth that the pulpit so richly deserves it. It lays itself open to attack. It invites censure. It seems to study the art of stupidity. Its threadbare platitudes are not fit for intelligent children, far less grown men. In every other profession men try to rise to the level of the work before them; but the pulpit, with some splendid exceptions that reveal the surrounding desert, drawls and nods over its slovenly compositions, as if its work required neither heart nor head, neither brain nor energy. It goes its drowsy round as if there were some charm in its wooden box to arouse the conscience, to enlighten the mind, to pierce the heart, and to attract the steps to the paths of immortality. Its rebukes are faint, its warnings timid, its invitations lack earnestness, and its exhibitions of the gospel are woefully defective."

The Sunday Magazine.—Messrs. J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, announce that they are to publish in this country Dr. Guthrie's "Sunday Magazine," commencing in October next. This has been a popular English monthly, its circulation sometimes reaching to 140,000 copies per month. The object of the magazine is expressed by the Editor as follows:—

"My purpose, in one word, is to adopt the best and most varied means of calling off the mind from the secular subjects which necessity forces upon it during the week; to awaken from their torpor those feelings of gratitude and adoration which the divine greatness and goodness should excite; and to make the regular return of Sunday as healthful to society as the showers which soften, fertilise, and beautify the earth, bringing with them the influence of heaven. . . . To make the magazine interesting to cultivated minds without being unintelligible to men of ordinary education; to be read by people of all christian denominations; to be of no class, of no sect, of no party, but belonging to all and profitable to all,—such is its aim."

Terms.—Yearly subscription, $3.50; single number, 30 cts. Club rates, per annum: two copies for $6.25; three copies for $9; five copies for $14; ten copies for $25. Address J. B. Lippincott & Co., 715 Market Street, Philadelphia.

The Advance.—This journal, which Dr. Bushnell pronounces "one of the ablest, best, and most outspoken religious papers now published," enters upon its third volume this week, and celebrates the event by several marked improvements. It appears in a new dress of type, begins the regular publication of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's sermons, and adds several new names to its list of contributors, among them that of Hon. Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts, who in the current number discusses the problem of Chinese immigration from the standpoint of christian statesmanship. The publication of Beecher's sermons in the Advance will prove an admirable feature of an already admirable paper, and attract many readers. The Advance is published at $2.50 per year by the Advance Company, 25 Lombard Block, Chicago.

THOSE HEBREW BOOKS.

In the Crisis of March 10th, a call was made for funds to purchase the Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, and a Hebrew Lexicon, for a poor preacher in one of the western states. The books will cost about $30, and we have received but three. Now it must be evident that three dollars will not buy thirty dollars' worth of books; and unless we receive $27 more, the books can not be obtained. We hope the friends of Jesus, who have means to spare, will see to it that the necessary amount is raised at once, so that our brother's heart may be made glad, and his hands strengthened in the warfare against the powers of darkness. The following is from the call:—

"I know of a minister, who . . . needs the Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, and a Hebrew Lexicon; but he is utterly unable to buy them. He labors mostly in new fields, where the friends of truth, as we understand it, are few and isolated; and he thinks that he is doing well if he can manage to support his family with his own manual labor and pinching economy. Of course, he has no money to spare from his family."

We would add that his family consists of a wife, five children, the eldest ten years of age, and an aged mother. If the reader will turn to the Crisis of Sept. 1st, and read the article headed "The Savior's Mission," he will see our brother's name. Would it not be a pleasure to help him to the books he so much needs? We will gladly acknowledge the receipt of money sent us for this purpose.

THE UNCLEAN SPIRITS.

We see no room to doubt that the "unclean spirits," mentioned in Rev. 16: 13, are those associated with Spiritualism. Says a writer in the "The Signs of our Times":—

"In short, the conviction is hourly gaining strength among those who make 'the sure word of prophecy' their study, that the movement of Spiritualism is the initiatory fulfillment of the going forth of those 'unclean spirits' preparatory to the antichristian confederacy of the last days, 'to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty;' and it is only reasonable to expect that the 'going forth' of those 'unclean spirits' should precede that confederacy, by some, it may be considerable, space of time."

The Rainbow.—We learn that the price of the Rainbow is $5 a year. It can be obtained of C. S. Carmell, 826 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

FORESHADOWINGS OF COMING EVENTS.

There exists at the present moment a prevalent impression among God's people, that important events are at hand,—that a crisis greater than any which has appeared since the beginning of time, is fast approaching, and that however long or short its continuance, it will result in the discomfiture of the enemies of God, and the deliverance and enlargement of his people. We hear of this expectation from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south. It is a conviction which has forced itself upon their consideration—which has sprung up spontaneously in their minds. We find a definite expectation of events, great and terrible, coupled with most undefined conceptions respecting the particular forms they may assume,—a clear apprehension of their general character, bearing, and results, united with obscurity of vision in regard to their special attributes and accompaniments; a remarkable unity of sentiment as to characteristic features, with some diversity as to subordinate details. This state of mind which pervades the christian world is precisely that which we ought to expect on the eve of an era so momentous. It is sufficient to stimulate prayer and intelligent observation, whilst it neither interferes with freedom of action, nor with the due performance of public duty.

Whence comes a unanimity so marvellous—a consent almost universal? Doubtless the same reasons essentially have, at one time or other, entered the hearts of all, and determined their judgment. But few comparatively may have given themselves the trouble to trace their conviction to its source, to distinguish its several grounds, and to sum them up in order.—Signs of our Times.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise Three Thousand Dollars for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, directing to the Treasurer, Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass., or enclosing with remittances to the Crisis office, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal Giver. Wm. H. Herron, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

THE WORK OF THE HOUR.

What is the work of the hour? What the peculiar responsibility resting upon the servants of Christ at the present day? These queries may be, and doubtless are, variously answered. Some will reply, these are times of remarkable intelligence, consequently there should be a corresponding exhibition of intellectuality on the part of the gospel ministry. Again, the inventive faculties of the age are wonderful. New devices, deceptions, and allurements, are daily brought into requisition, for the purpose of leading men and women astray; therefore, the church and ministry should also exercise their wits in order to produce new counter attractions; hence palatial houses of worship, operatic choirs, religious concerts, pious oyster suppers, sanctified balls, holy fairs, and divine donations, to which all the world and his family are made welcome, provided they have the one thing needful (money.) Did the Founder of the Christian church design it to become a trap, into which people should be allured, by pandering to the pleasures and passions? Or, did he design that the gospel should be "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth"? This is not the legitimate work of the church and ministry; it is the natural outgrowth of that prevalent error and delusion—the world's ultimate evangelization by the church.

The work of the hour is to keep prominently before the people the evidences of a fast-approaching judgment; to discern and proclaim, without fear or favor, the existing "signs of the times," in all their varied details; those daily accumulating and fast culminating "signs" which portend the Savior's speedy advent. It is to faithfully testify against the follies and sins of a formal and pleasure-loving church; it is to warn the people against the deceptions and delusions of modern demonism; it is to combat faithfully, but kindly, all the theological errors of the day, especially those errors which blind men to the true issues of the gospel. Those hindrances must be carefully removed. Men who believe that they already possess immortality, can see no beauty, nor even necessity, in the Bible doctrine of Christ's coming to raise the dead, and to give immortality to his saints. It is not pleasant to be called infidels, but this heathen dogma and Satanic falsehood must be combated.

It is the work of the hour, also, to prepare a people for the coming crisis. The line of demarkation is to be distinctively drawn between Christianity on the one hand, and the world and Christianity on the other. The admonitions of the gospel are to be faithfully administered, the vices and sins of the professed followers of Jesus are to be faithfully condemned and rebuked, even though it be in those who are wealthy and influential in the church. Their eternal salvation perhaps depends upon the faithful admonitions of the ministry. How often it is that ministers are derelict in this respect, for fear of offending. O what a fearful responsibility rests upon the servants of Christ. The people are to be preached to; there is too much preaching for the people. The minister who preaches for God will try to please God; the one who preaches for the people, will try to please the people. O what a responsible work, to prepare a people for the coming judgment, and a home in the kingdom.

God is purifying unto himself a peculiar people. It is the duty of the ministry to instruct the people in those peculiarities, and to insist upon their maintenance. Here is the cross of Christianity. People like to live and do as their neighbors; but God demands an entire separation. He wants us to be peculiar in holiness, in simplicity in conversation, in holy zeal, in consecratedness. These are only hints to the servants of Christ. May the Lord qualify us for the work of our day; and when the Master comes, may we hear the welcome plaudit—"Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Geo. Thomson.

Disendowment in Turkey.—A curious sign of the times is afforded by the attitude of the Sultan towards the Mahomedan Established Church in Turkey. He proposes to disendow it; or, in other words to apply to State purposes the vast lands, estimated at one million sterling a year. Nothing but the stern necessity of satisfying the national creditor could have steeled the Sultan to such a bold step. The measure will be of immense benefit to the State indirectly, by placing in the hands of industrious and enterprising cultivators an immense area of most valuable land, which has for generations remained almost altogether unproductive. Thus the prophetical drying up of the mystical Euphrates (Rev. 16: 12) or decay of the Mahommedan power is hastening to its consummation.

For the World's Crisis.

GOOD COMING.

Bro. Grant:—Perhaps a few words relative to the late campmeeting at Springfield may not come amiss in the Crisis. I was there three days, attended as many of the social meetings as I could consistently with the business meetings that in duty we had to attend. The meeting while I staid was not so large as last year, but I do think it was much better,—more spiritual. It was blessed, indeed, to see the faces of the old veterans that you have seen in former years, when we were looking for Jesus, without a doubt that a few days would reveal him, and introduce the lovers of his coming to dominion, glory, and a kingdom;—to see those with whom you have been through the trials, and find them still faithful, and still looking, hopeful and joyous;—to shake the hand of these dear souls, brings a peculiar feeling that leaves a lasting pleasure. God bless with his richest blessings these dear old saints. The Lord has his mark upon them. Like Abraham, they have believed God, and it will be accounted righteousness unto them.

It is also heart-cheering to see the new convert to the faith, who can trust God and believe his blessed word, and look for the same "hope"—"blessed hope" of seeing Jesus and being made like him. I get well paid for all my trouble to meet with this expectant people, who delight to deny themselves and bear reproach for Christ, and believe in his speedy appearing. How cheering to see the disciples with heads uplifted, full of love to God and one another; no jealousy, no hatred, but love, perfect love; it is blessed,—all one in Christ; out from the world; not our own; bought by Christ; owned by him;—good enough. Amen. The worldly, covetous wanderer, unbeliever and sinner, is to be pitied. So near the judgment, and unprepared. O will they not hear this last call, and come to Jesus, and be saved with eternal life?

Dear Brn., old and young, let us see to it, as we are responsible in this matter. More faith, grace and patience, with a stick-to-itiveness that will hold fast to the word of life till Jesus comes. I am with you in this warfare till peace is declared, and the pension received.

WEST BETHEL TENT MEETING.

We pitched the Maine Mission tent in West Bethel, and commenced meetings Saturday evening, Sept. 4th. By change of arrangement, we had no time to give our appointment in the Crisis; but the people in the vicinity had some notice, and they came out readily to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Only one family of believers was known to us (that of Bro. Thomas Morrill, who had wished us to come), and they lived four miles away; but the people generally seemed at once interested, and gave attention to the word, being respectful and kind. It is a sparse settlement, and a busy time with them. Sunday (the 5th), they gathered from all the surrounding mountain passes, and from several towns, making a large audience of anxious hearers, the most of whom had never heard the gospel on this fashion before. Many expressed great surprise in finding us preaching so much Scripture. They had heard different things about us, but the preaching was so plain and scriptural they were delighted, and went home to bring others. The interest increased, and each afternoon and evening brought large numbers to hear. It was soon seen that the Lord was at work on the hearts of the people.

Wednesday was stormy, but they came. The storm increased, and became severe in the evening, so that we did not expect the people to come; but in this we were mistaken. They came, old men and women of eighty, and young men and women with babies, from three to five miles. It was an interesting scene. The rain fell in torrents upon the canvas; the winds blew and howled furiously upon the forest around us, which shielded the tent, while about a hundred, old and young, sat in the tent eagerly listening to the word of life, seemingly unconscious of the raging storm without. At the close of the sermon six rose for prayers—men of fifty years, and youth of twenty, also one aged woman of perhaps seventy-five years. Prayer followed, and the exercise closed. Several remained an hour later inquiring about the truth and the way of life. Subsequently, others rose for prayer, and several found peace in believing; and the work goes on. Blessed be the Lord.

Some wanderers were reclaimed, others became deeply serious. Christians of various orders were greatly blessed, and thanked God for the light they had received. Many said they had never heard so much gospel preached before. The two Elders in the place seemed very much troubled, and remained away, while they used words of bitterness about us. God pity them, and open their eyes.

The second Sunday, the audiences were very large, filling the tent. The word made many deep impressions, and was listened to with profound attention. At the close of the afternoon sermon, about one thousand repaired to the shore of the Androscoggin river, where four happy believers were buried in baptism. The services were very impressive, and several others just converted regretted they had not decided to obey their Lord in this ordinance. This was a great day to the people of West Bethel and vicinity. Several brethren and sisters came from the surrounding towns. We continued the meetings until Tuesday evening, the 14th, and closed our labors there, praising God for the saving grace manifested in converting some, and blessing so many. This meeting will never be forgotten by many there. Others will come to Christ as the result. Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell was my fellow helper in the work.

A WORD ON EXPENSES.

Who is ready to aid us in carrying on this mission? We are sowing the gospel of the kingdom in new fields continually, where we reach thousands who never heard before, and where there are but few believers, in some places not one to aid the cause. The few whom we do find in the places where we pitch the tent do well in sacrificing to aid in meeting the expenses, considering their means. But this is mission work indeed, and must be partially sustained by believers from other places. It accomplished vastly more, for the amount of expense, than any other plan of labor we have ever seen presented. Many are converted, very many are brought to see and embrace the blessed hope of the gospel, and thousands are awakened to look into and ultimately learn the true gospel of the kingdom of God, which will direct in the right way, and exert its general influence on society, and is thereby constantly opening new doors for our preaching, our papers, and our books, to produce their influence and gather souls to Christ.

At the tent-meetings held this season, we have gathered but little more than half enough to pay the expenses, yet we have had the largest gatherings, the best meetings, with the most important results we ever have had. I am constantly paying money out of my own pocket to meet expenses. I am now in debt and cannot advance more. Will our brethren who have the means, and the missionary spirit, replenish our treasury, and aid in carrying on this work? You will not allow us to devote all our time and energies, and wear out in the work, and use up all our means to pay expenses, while you enjoy "the blessed hope," and home society, and pleasant associations, and all your time to accumulate means. We also ask our brethren who have not paid their subscription on the old debt of the tent to do so, as we long ago advanced the money, and are now in pressing need of it. I. C. Wellcome.

For the World's Crisis.

A RAY OF LIGHT.

Bro. Grant:—I am sure that you and many of your readers will rejoice at a prospect of a pleasant change in my circumstances. I say a prospect, for it depends, under God, upon the degree of interest manifested in the case by our brethren; and it rests with them to decide whether the anticipation shall become a reality, and a success.

Now I will explain the matter. Bro. N. A. Angell proposes to establish a monthly religious periodical (magazine in form), and desires to employ me as associate editor. His offer was quite voluntary, and his terms are very favorable to me. The name of the magazine is to be "The Monitor." The first number is to be issued immediately, bearing date October, 1869. It is proposed to have thirty-two pages of the usual magazine size. The terms will be one dollar a year in advance. In regard to the sentiments, views and doctrines to be therein advocated, the articles that I have written for the Crisis and Voice of the West, may be taken as an exponent to indicate the character of the "Monitor."

Reader, brother or sister, do you feel interested in this work? And will you show that interest by writing to me, and forwarding your name as a subscriber, and the names of as many others as possible? Pray for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon me, and upon the work in which I am engaged.

BATH, ME.

Bro. Grant:—I am done at the Repository, and intend to labor in various localities in the western part of Maine this fall. I expect to be at Bath about once in four weeks, and any one wishing to write me can address me there, and the letter will be forwarded to me soon after I am away.

I have issued a new edition of my Admonitions on Church Fairs, Festivals, etc. I hope they may be widely scattered, for they are doing good. I will send them, postpaid, at 15 cts. per dozen, or 75 cts. per hundred.

I have also on hand two or three hundred copies of Spiritual Melodies, which I will sell cheap, as a new edition will be out ere long, with some corrections, and a considerable addition, making 453 hymns in all. Send to Bath, Me. I. K. Lombard.

The Berean's Casket and Repository.

COMPILED BY I. C. WELLCOME.

This work is now ready. It has cost much labor and money, and we hope may be found a work of much value. The book contains portions of the sacred word on a great variety of subjects, carefully arranged in sections, for the more ready comprehension of the chief points of doctrine contained in the Holy Scriptures. Many passages are given in various versions, all without comment. To which is added selections from history, records of events, chronology, statistics of population, of crimes, and the leading habits of evil of these days. Tables of the miracles and parables of our Lord, illustrations of prophetic figures, tables of mission work, and other reforms. Membership of churches contrasted with the heathen, and much matter bearing on the signs of the times.

The work was first advertised to be sold at $1.50 cloth, but while preparing it, we found it important to extend the work far beyond our first plan, to make it the work it should be. Therefore, on getting our bills for stereotyping, and finding that that part of the work costs about nine hundred dollars, we are obliged to put the price to $2 in extra cloth binding, postpaid; in leather, $2.50. Those who have subscribed and paid for it, will receive it at the price paid.

Sold at the Crisis office, and by I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.

Bro. Peter Mitson, Elliota, Minn., writes: "Dear brethren and sisters, let us nail our colors to the mast head, and walk up to the rule laid down by our blessed Captain; and then, let the winds blow high or low, he will carry us safely into the haven of rest. I can say that I feel determined, by the help of the Lord, come what will, to enter the kingdom."

— Fearlessly do what you believe is right.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Bro. Grant:—We are still striving for the kingdom. Bro. C. F. Sweet was with us and preached the word faithfully, and some through his instrumentality have been persuaded to seek an interest in the Savior, and a home in the kingdom. At the quarterly meeting in Blooming Valley last April, four were buried with Christ in baptism, and are trying to walk in him. Also at the quarterly meeting just closed, in Blooming Valley, two more were baptized, and others are almost persuaded to come out for Christ. The brethren and sisters here generally go to the quarterly meeting at B. V., distance twelve miles. I occupy the desk at B. V. once in four weeks, and endeavor in my weak way to enforce the practical parts of the gospel.

Father's health is on the decline, so much so that mother has to be confined to the house to take care of him. Yet his faith is strong in the Lord. They feel grateful to the friends that have sent them a little money to help them along, and hope they will be rewarded in the coming kingdom.

I would here say that in the statement made by me in the Crisis last spring, in relation to one of the reasons of my not preaching, was on account of my brother-in-law not being able to perform his part, and therefore I had to take the mill upon my hands. I would here say that sickness in his family was the great reason on his part, and not a design to wrong me, as some may have drawn from the way in which it was written.

To the scattered ones. In view of the coming King, let us be up and doing in the service of our Master. Soon it will be said, "Well done," or "Depart." O that we may hail him with joy. Yours in hope,

John T. Ongley.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—Since I last wrote, I have met my appointment at the new meeting-house on the Suwannee. There was a good turnout, and excellent attention. Three were baptized. Two others joined the covenant.

I was not well enough to preach to the people here in Jacksonville yesterday (Sept. 5th), but we had a most glorious prayer-meeting last night, and one whom Satan had well nigh ruined came out and started again, like Peter, who had stepped aside, and resolved to go with us to the kingdom. Another, who has been a steward in the Methodist church, has cast in his lot with us to take and bear the reproach, notwithstanding the desperate effort his minister has made for the past four or five weeks to preach against our blessed hope. The Lord will overrule and make the wrath of man praise him. Bless the Lord for the omens of good we see for this wicked city. Pray for us. P. A. Smith.

Obituaries.

Covell. Died at Sweetland Center, Muscatine County, Iowa, Aug. 21st, 1869, Jonathan Covell, aged seventy years, ten months and seven days.

Three months ago we lost a mother, now a father, and the family circle is broken up. Our dear and much loved parents sleep in Jesus.

The funeral sermon of father and mother were both preached at the same time by Eld. Wm. McCulloch, in the Methodist Chapel, to a large congregation of attentive hearers. Text Ps. 17: 15. May the Lord bless this sad bereavement to the good of the large circle of children and friends who mourn their loss. And may their mantle of earnestness, stability and piety, rest upon them all, that when the glad morning shall break, the whole family circle may again meet where there shall be no more parting, or tears, or death.

S. K. Gibson.

Hathaway. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Fair Haven, Mass., August 6th, 1869, Sister Clara, wife of Bro. Russell Hathaway, aged thirty-eight years.

Our sister was a member of the Christian Baptist Church, and a faithful laborer in the cause of Christ. A few years since she became interested in the Bible truths that we hold so dear,—the literal resurrection of the dead, unconscious state of the dead, and personal coming of Christ to reign on the new earth, and put an end to sin. These were themes that rejoiced her heart. The Bible became a new book to her, and she loved it more than ever before. Since she became interested in these truths, she has been laboring with the church in Fair Haven, together with her husband. She sleeps, but not forever. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Isaiah 25: 8.

E. R. Wood.

Rollin. Quietly fell asleep at Melvin Village, N. H., May 12th, 1869, after a lingering and painful sickness, Bro. James B. Rollin, aged sixty-seven years.

For many years our dear Bro. had been a firm believer in the near coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead; but the last two years of his pilgrimage were the most blessed of his life. He seemed to be doing his last work, which we believe is well done. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer. T. W. Piper.

Everson. Died in Castleton, Vt., June 23d, 1869, Harriet M., daughter of James and Harriet A. Everson, aged thirteen years and eleven months.

She was a favorite among her youthful companions, who deeply manifested their regards on the occasion of her funeral, which was attended on the 25th at the Christian Advent Chapel, by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, when we laid her down to sleep among the flowers until awakened by the archangel's trump. B. M.

Holt. Died in Augusta, Me., Aug. 21st, 1869, Sister Ann Holt, aged thirty-eight years.

Sister Holt was a firm believer in the second personal coming of Christ, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection at his appearing. The writer tried to comfort the family on the funeral occasion with the gospel assurance of a reunion again in the resurrection morning.

Thomas Rines.

Reed. Died in Richmond, Me., Aug. 23d, of typhoid fever, Sister Martha, wife of Eld. H. D. Reed, aged fifty-five years.

Sister Reed was a devoted wife and mother, and a faithful christian. Many of our ministers and brethren, who have been so cheerfully cared for and waited upon at the hospitable home of Bro. Reed, will lament the death of such a kind and faithful sister. She died in the full assurance of hope. A large assembly attended the funeral, to which the writer spoke from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

I. C. Wellcome.

Gunn. Died in New Preston, Conn., Aug. 21st, 1869, Sister Maria, wife of John S. Gunn, aged forty years.

Sister Gunn gave herself early in life to the service of the Lord, and now sleeps in Jesus.

M. A. Baldwin.

Kahari. Died in Cambridgeport, Mass., Aug. 30th, 1869, Sister Emma E., only daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. H. and H. S. Kahari, aged sixteen years and twenty-seven days.

Sister Emma was a great sufferer, but manifested that calm patience that is known only by those who have found that "Jesus can make a dying bed feel soft as downy pillows are." The occasion was improved by the writer, from words found in 1 Cor. 15: 54–57. B. P. Stevens.

Bishop. Fell asleep in Jesus, near Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, May 25th, 1869, Lewis Bishop, a brother-in-law of the writer, aged forty-three years and five days.

Some four years ago, he had a cancer cut off his neck, after which he began to fail in health, which toward the last took the form of consumption. Peter S. W. Deyo.

Wolcott. Died in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 26th, Sr. Catharine Wolcott, aged fifty-six years.

She embraced the faith of the soon coming of Christ in 1840, and lived it to the close of her life. Her bereaved husband sorrows not even as others who have no hope.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."

Voice, please copy. E. Owen.

Owen. Died in Belchertown, Sept. 16th, Artemas Owen, aged sixty-three years.

My father sleeps; his end was peace;
We sorrow, but with hope;
The believer's life doth never cease,
And Christ will raise him up. B. O.

Reed. Died in Westfield, Mass., Sept. 11th, Freddie, son of Bro. Otis R. and Fanny Reed, aged sixteen years.

May God sustain the afflicted parents.

E. Owen.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

Paris, Sept. 17. (New York Herald's Special) Gen. Prim's second and latest audience with the Emperor Napoleon was of an hour's duration, the subject matter of the conversation affording cause for a very considerable degree of anxious outside speculation. It has been pretty accurately ascertained to-day that the situation in Cuba, the revolution and the chances of its repression as well as the probable future of the Island as regards its form of government and the right of rule was discussed. The Emperor advised an amicable arrangement between the Spanish authorities and the Cabinet in Washington on the matter of the American desire for an acquisition of the territory by purchase, adtoward the close of his remarks his opinion to the effect that if the war continued with its present attendant barbarity President Grant would be compelled to interfere between the contending parties if only in behalf and for the cause of humanity.

General Prim replied that he was himself personally willing to negotiate with the American authorities in the direction indicated by the ruler of France, but that in Spain his fellow-countrymen at large remained opposed to any such course. Napoleon in reply advised Prim and the Spaniards to imitate in this case his own example and give up Cuba just as he had given up Mexico, before it was too late, with honor.

Madrid, Sept. 17. The candidature of the Duke of Geneva, son of King Victor Emanuel of Italy, for the throne of Spain continues to be discussed very earnestly. His accession to the throne is regarded as probable. Should the plan be carried into effect the youthful king will be assisted by a regency composed of the Duke de Montpensier, Marshal Serrano and Rivero.

Five war frigates, with other vessels of the navy, are about to be dispatched to Cuba. They will, it is said, sail at an early day.

London, Sept. 17. A rumor is current here this evening to the effect that Napoleon, on account of the precarious state of his health, will shortly abdicate in favor of his son, but will retain the Presidency of the Council.

DOMESTIC.

The Suez Canal.—The contractors for the excavation of the Suez Canal were bound by heavy penalties to complete their work by midnight on the 14th of August, and it appears had to make extraordinary exertions that day to fulfill their agreement and escape the penalties. A letter from Alexandria says the scene during the whole day, in a heat which must have approached the Plutonic, was marvelous. Seven thousand workmen toiled away with a zeal and an aptitude for their work which would have done a European collier or miner good to gaze at. If ever man earned his bread by the sweat of his brow, the motley assemblage of Wallachians, Albanians, Greeks and Arabs earned theirs. The magnitude of the work accomplished may be inferred from the fact that one thousand camels and three thousand five hundred donkeys were driven up and down the ridges all day long. At midnight nothing remained to be done.—Boston Journal.

Passing Events.

☞ It is said in a private letter from a Canadian gentleman that Prince Arthur, moved by the expressions of good will and friendship which the American newspapers have been pleased to utter, has resolved upon paying us a visit in the course of the winter. This intelligence will be the occasion of a marked stir in fashionable circles.

☞ De Stansberg, who is now the Prussian railway king, owning nearly half the railway lines in the kingdom, and being worth at least fifty million thalers, it is said lived in a London garret seven or eight years ago, penniless.

☞ The opening of the new edifice of the Northwestern University, at Evanston, north of Chicago, and the inauguration of Rev. E. O. Haven, D. D., LL. D., late Chancellor of the University of Michigan, its new President, was to take place Wednesday.

☞ There are, at this moment, 22,000 men, women and children starving in two English counties. They have been reduced to want by a strike among the nail-makers.

☞ A piece of mechanism for transferring railroad cars from one track to another without necessitating the running of the car several hundred feet back or forward, and without the use of switches, has just been patented. Its practical advantages are a saving of depot room and of time.

☞ A frightful case of the immolation of a human being in one of those Spanish bull fights patronized by the crown has occurred at Juras, in the Gard. On a recent Sunday one of the bulls tossed a man, killed him in an instant, and ran about the circus with his entrails twisted about the horns. Nobody thought of stopping the performance, which went on for three hours afterwards.

☞ The Holy Sepulchre, which furnished the ostensible pretext for the Crimean war, is again breeding trouble, the priests of the Latin Church declining to comply with the terms of the treaty, which guarantees to the Greek Church the sole possession of the new cupola, which has been recently enriched with a magnificent golden cross.

☞ The Jewish Record says that the Synod of Jewish Rabbis, which has just been held, has recognized three new principles. 1. Individual authority in religious matters. 2. The primary importance of free scientific investigation. 3. The rejection of the belief in Israel's restoration.

☞ The last freak of nature is in the possession of Adams Abbott of Troy, Vt. It consists of four kittens, all perfectly formed and all joined together, two black and two white. As joined, three are headed one way while the other will be compelled to walk backward at least three-fourths of the time. At last accounts all were alive.

☞ It is said to be a common practice in Paris to hire poor people to attend fashionable churches, so that the preachers may say that they always have crowded houses. Two or three sous pay for a worshipper.

☞ The President yesterday appointed Gen. Sherman to act as Secretary of War until the vacancy caused by the death of Gen. Rawlins shall be filled.

☞ Turtles are now shipped from the Gulf of Mexico over the Florida Railroad to Fernandina, Florida, and forwarded to the Charleston and New-York markets.

☞ Vast preparations are being made for the marriage of the Emperor of China this year. He is now fifteen. His destined wife was selected last year.

☞ One woman lost by the Avondale mining disaster her husband, her three sons, her father and three brothers.

☞ The Jews propose to establish an agricultural colony in Palestine.

☞ Three canning establishments at Bridgeton, N., will put up nearly two million cans of fruit this year.

☞ Murders are of almost daily occurrence in Philadelphia, that "city of brotherly love."

☞ A New York paper has employed a lady as reporter of the cattle market.

☞ It is said that there is not a vessel of any considerable size now building in New York.

☞ Prince Gortschakoff has arrived in Paris.

Notices.

Protracted Meeting.

There will be a protracted meeting held at Fayville, Mass., commencing Sept. 18th, under the Mass. Mission Tent, which will be pitched near the house of Bro. H. S. Woods. Let all the brethren and sisters from the surrounding towns come and labor for the perishing and lost.

S. W. Thurber.
C. Goodrich.

Conference.

The Massachusetts Advent Christian Conference will hold its quarterly session at Westfield, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 29th, and hold over the following Sunday. It is desirable that all the churches be represented by delegates. Those who cannot send delegates, we hope will report by letter, directing to the Secretary of Conference at Westfield, Mass.

S. W. Thurber, Pres.
P. S. Butler, Sec.

Delegates will be chosen for the National Convention at Rochester, N. Y.

General Campmeeting at Camp Brook, Vermont.

There will be a general campmeeting, commencing Tuesday, Sept. 21st, and hold over the following Sunday, at Camp Brook, Vt., on land owned by Jona. Washburn. The N. H. Mission Tent will be pitched on the ground, in which meetings will be held in case of rain. Those coming on the Vt. Central R. R. will stop at Bethel depot, where there will be teams to convey persons to the ground for reasonable compensation. Those coming with teams can get horse keeping at reasonable rates. A boarding tent will be on the ground for the accommodation of those who do not wish to board themselves, where meals can be had for reasonable prices. All who can bring tents are requested to do so, bringing bedding with them. Straw can be had on the ground. Elds. J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, and other able ministers, will be present to preach the gospel.

Come to this feast of tabernacles. Let no earthly consideration detain you from this important gathering of the disciples of Jesus. Let there be a rallying in the Green Mountain State to this encampment, where the banner of truth will be unfurled, and the word of God sounded out to perishing men.

Jona. Washburn.
Geo. W. Lewis.
Norman Lilley.
Clark Davis.
W Magiffany.

For the committee, J. A. Cleaveland.

Dear brethren, the committee of arrangements desire all those who intend to put up tents, to write and let us know the length and size of the poles you require. If your tent requires more than one pole, state the number. Please ascertain also the number, as nearly as you can, that will come from your several places in the cars, and let us know; so that we can arrange for teams. Should any of the brethren desire to send baggage in advance of themselves, it should be directed to the care of C. S. Davis, Bethel, Vt. All letters should be directed to Geo. W. Lewis, Bethel, Vt.

☞ Brethren coming over the Vt. Central R. R., will purchase tickets at Bethel, paying full fare, and receive free return checks on the ground.

Mr. Elliot, general ticket agent for the road [Vt. Central], will furnish blank return tickets, to be filled in favor of those who have paid full fare to the ground. We expect Bro. McAllister will be on the ground Friday with the tickets, and take charge of that branch of the business.

In behalf of the committee, Geo. W. Lewis.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Wyoming, at Brand's Iron Works, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 6th, at two o'clock P. M. This place needs our help. Let us come up to this meeting in full numbers, and in the fullness of Christ. At Scituate, the tide of our joy rose high. At Wyoming let it rise higher. At Scituate we had a good attendance of preachers. At Wyoming let us have preachers, and delegates from churches also. Let no church fail to send a delegate. If he is poor, pay his expenses, and thus bless him and yourselves too, and the conference besides. Attend to this at once. Shall we have one more general rally for God? Let Oct. 6th answer. I am resolved to be there at all costs.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Notice.

The annual session of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held, by invitation of the New Haven church, at their chapel, to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, 1869. It is very necessary that all churches should appoint delegates to attend this session, and that all preachers should make an effort to be present. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, and whatever business of importance may be before the conference will be attended to. The first business session will be Thursday P. M. Preaching Wednesday evening, at half past seven o'clock.

L. F. Moore, Secretary.

The Maine Mission Tent.

The Maine Mission Tent will be pitched in Bridgton Centre for meetings, to commence as early as Sept. 22d or 23d, and continue as long as thought duty. This is an entirely new place for our message, not a believer there that we know of. We hope our brethren from the surrounding country may come in with provision and bedding. We can furnish tent accommodations.

I. C. Wellcome.
W. H. Mitchell.

New York Mission Tent.

Our meeting now being held at Hemlock Lake will close, and the Tent will be pitched at East Randolph, Cattaraugus Co., Sept. 24th, and continue there as long as the weather will permit. Brn. Colegrove and Low are expected to be with me part of the time. J. Wendell.

Notice.

A quarterly conference will be held in Bristol, Me., Newharbor meeting-house, to commence on Thursday, 5 P. M., Oct. 7th, and hold over Sunday. Brn. and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. We hope the ministers will come to this new field of labor. There will be homes for all who will come. S. K. Partridge.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. Preble.

Tent Meeting in Connecticut.

If the Lord will, the Connecticut Mission Tent will be erected in the town of Sharon, as Bro. Lyman Mills may arrange, and meetings commence on Wednesday Sept. 22d, to continue over the following Sabbath, and as long as the interest may demand. It is earnestly desired that all interested persons living in the region should make special effort to attend, to do good in the name of the Lord. By Tent Committee.

Campmeeting Notice.

PLACE OF MEETING CHANGED FROM OLUSTEE TO LAKE CITY, FLA.

The meeting will commence Oct. 21st, and hold over the Sabbath. The camp-ground is about one mile from the depot. Teams will take passengers to the ground for 25 cents and back free; also trunks for the same price. The meeting will be held on Judge Long's Hammock, beside a running stream of spring water. Brethren coming from the North to visit Florida, who would like to attend the meeting, can start from New York on Saturday, the 16th, in one of the Savannah steamers, and be here in season. Purchase your ticket through to Jacksonville by the way of the Gulf Rail Road from Savannah, and inform the conductor when you change cars at Live Oak that you wish to stop at Lake City, and he will not punch the tickets for any further than that place. The others will then be good when you go aboard again for Jacksonville. Those who can come to assist in carrying on the meeting, and work for the Lord, we would like to see present; but loungers we think would do more harm than good. We expect some brethren from Georgia, and the church up on the Suwannee river, and from Jacksonville, Fla. Come, expecting a blessing.

P. A. Smith.

Take Notice.

Look here! who took ten dollars from my pocket-book, and did not return it, at Alton Bay campmeeting—two five dollar bills, from two separate packages? It was surely taken. It was counted and re-counted beforehand, and there can be no mistake. My coat hung up in the stairway in the Vermont and Canada tent. I hope the Lord will forgive. The one who took it will oblige me by inclosing the amount to Canaan, Vt., or Colebrook, N. H. D. N. Chadsey.

Tent Meeting at Ipswich, Mass.

The Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched near the Depot in Ipswich, Friday, Oct. 1st, 1869, when a protracted meeting will commence and continue over the two following Sundays, and through the week between. We intend, the Lord will, to have meetings after the first Sunday afternoons and evenings daily. We hope our brethren and friends from Newburyport, Haverhill, Salem, Lynn, and other places will come, and, if you can, bring tents and stay through the meeting. It is a new place for our Bible doctrine to be preached, and we want good done. Bro. A. Ross and other preachers will be with us. E. Burnham. L. Boutell.

Notice.

The new Advent Chapel, just completed, near the residence of Bro. O. M. Gilman, South Windsor, Ct., will be dedicated next Saturday, Sept. 25th, at 2.30 P. M. Sermon by H. L. Hastings, who will also be with us over the following Sabbath. Brethren and friends in this vicinity are invited to meet with us. For the brethren.

H. F. Hart.

Conference.

The Lord will, there will be a conference at Piermont, N. H., Clay meeting-house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brethren T. W. Piper, N. Wheeler, and others are expected to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the salvation of souls. For the brethren. Wm. H. Shaw.

Conference at Porter Village, Me.

There will be a conference at Porter Village commencing Sept. 23d, and continue over the following Sunday. Brn. A. Ross, and T. W. Piper are expected to be with us. We hope to see as many of our brethren and sisters with us as can make it convenient to come. For the brethren.

J. S. Moulton.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.

S. W. Thurber, Pres. of Conf.

Acknowledgment.

Bro. H. L. Hastings will please accept my heartfelt thanks for the Hebrew Bible and Hebrew Grammar he has so kindly given me. I will try to use them for the glory of God. May the Lord bless the donor now and evermore.

Remarks. Cattle.—The market for good, thick, likely steers was active, and closed out early on Wednesday, and some lots changed hands on Tuesday afternoon, leaving a poorish grade of Texas cattle in the market, that dealers were glad to dispose of at very near Albany prices. According to all accounts, we are to have a large share of ordinary cattle for some time to come. There is but slight demand at New York City markets for this kind of goods; and if much is shipped to this market, present prices will break down on common grades, and an advance on good cattle. This week there was no special change in prices until the close, when some lots were sold rather detrimental to owners' pockets.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts, 2468, mostly western, handled by Brighton butchers on commission.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75 to $4.25, or from 3¼ to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $0.00; Veal Calves, $0.00@$0.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 50 to 85 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

Remarks. Cattle.—The trains were all in on time, heavily loaded with cattle, sheep, and swine. We figure 1545 head of cattle, nearly twice the number of last week. There were probably from 200 to 300 head of store cattle. The demand for good cattle has been active, and were run out of the yard with fair promptness; but common steers, heifers and cows were sold from 50 to 75 cts. per cwt. lower. The trade was full as good as we expected with the large supply.

Sheep and Lambs.—Some 2400 head in excess of last week. The difficulty in closing out the poor lots was quite a prominent feature at market. Butchers desire the good grades, which found an easy sale at prices rendered equally as high as last week. Many of the common lots were closed out on commission.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

9. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

10. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."

Ye who have watched and waited long
For Jesus to appear,
Come forth with cymbal, harp and song,
The Master draweth near.
Proclaim the tidings east and west,
Rejoice O hills and plains,
Prepare ye for the Royal Guest,
Who breaks our captive chains.

Ye who have wandered from the fold,
And faltered by the way,
O, like the prodigal of old,
Return while yet 'tis day;
For lo, the bright and Morning Star
Now shineth in the East,
And countless voices from afar
Proclaim the marriage feast.

Look up, oh weary eyes that weep
For those whom death hath slain,
He will awake them from their sleep,
And bid them live again;
All tears will vanish at his word,
Death flee at his command,
No more shall Rachel's cry be heard
Throughout the happy land.

God will save Zion, and restore
The city of our King,
Where we shall dwell forevermore,
And all his praises sing;
Be therefore watchful through the night,
The hour draweth near;
Be ready at the dawning light,
For Jesus will be here.

LIFE AND DEATH.

We earnestly believe and maintain that the question of ruin and redemption to man, is not a question of misery and felicity in their proper and common use in this connection, but a question of life and death. Eternal life in no possible sense awaits the lost. No being that God has created and that is embraced in Adam's fall, will live at all without an interest in Christ after a resurrection to condemnation. No inherent immortality in man shall keep him fruitlessly alive and sinning forever, suffering and sinning together without remedy or end.

But there is another aspect to this subject. The time is undoubtedly near, O how much nearer than the incredulous and sanguine dreamers of this generation imagine, when this false dogma of natural immortality in man will become vitally connected with the question of life and death, in a way that will make the ears of millions tingle. For it is to be a question of towering and tremendous magnitude, and it cannot be evaded, nor crowded out of sight. This lie of Beelzebub is the very pillar of that edifice of apostasy now rearing day and night in the extremity of this age. And the myriad minions of the Arch Demon and his system of iniquity will proclaim the immortality of the soul as the question upon which yes or no will be demanded, and a negative will entail the loss of possessions, or of life, or of both; while an affirmative, though it may secure a momentary relief, will as surely invoke the judgments of heaven, and entail the second and eternal death, as the dreadful issue of acquiescence. For the worship of the beast will be in the interest of that pernicious theory which idolizes the deathless entity of a soul that can and does live without a body, as falsely alleged, and on which the demons erect their structures of darkness, alleging innumerable things, whose true solution is in the very demoniac zeal of infernal apostacies crowded toward the brink of an abyss, while forever perversion and concealment rule the hour.

O, how needful is an early, an immediate discovery of the truth. How needful a resolute heart to endure all for the truth's sake, and give up life, if need be, for the truth and glory of Christ. Wake! O sleeping world! Wake, O drowsy church! life and death is the question of the next hour.

BIBLE vs. THEORIES.

We have had "Bible vs. Tradition," and it has done, and is still doing, a good work in the world; but the one great demand of the times in which we live, above all others is, Bible vs. Theories, creeds, isms, ites, enties, istes, anters, and ranters. Bible against all pet notions, all schemes of human device, all dogmas of men, all ologies, odicies, and ages. Bible! plain, simple, pure, unadulterated and undiluted. Bible for warp and for filling, without doubling or twisting, spinning, carding, or dyeing.

It is most wonderful, the proficiency which some have made, and the skill attained, in evoking most uncertain sounds (inharmonized, too,) from that golden harp, whence most distinctive notes and sweetest strains of melody should come. Every hand that strikes that golden lyre, and every tongue that chants those angel anthems, should only give responding echoes from its silver chords of truth, or amen, hallelujahs, to those seraphic strains, divinely sung by heavenly choristers.

The tergiversations of some writers, even among us, are well calculated to remind one of Sir Robert Peel's "sliding scale:" when the price of bread went up, the price of corn must come down; and when the price of bread went down, the price of corn must come up. This is a fault among us, to be deplored, and should be corrected, if possible; and it would be well for christianity, well for truth, well for the cause of Christ, well for us, and well for the Bible, if we could have some fixed rule whereby to arrive at some fixed meaning of the Scriptures, and not be as Daniel Webster said of one of Ingersol's speeches: "We say of machinery, sometimes, when it does not work well, there is a screw loose somewhere; but in this speech, the screws are all loose, all over, everywhere, and the machine utterly worthless."

To my apprehension, a "yea and nay" Bible is no better. But where have we such a Bible, such a gospel? No-where. But we have plenty of mis-interpretations, and misconstructions, which, if but admitted, would make both, make anything, or make nothing (which, by the by, is the most common result,) just as the writer may please. For the general good of the brotherhood, allow me to present samples.

Take first, what opposers generally take, the thief on the cross, and when we desire truth, and want Bible vs. Theory, how simple and easy it is to show that the kingdom and paradise are one and the same; that, as yet, Christ has not come into his kingdom, but has gone to receive it, and on his return will come into it; and when "the kingdom under the whole heaven" is given him, then the saints take the kingdom, too; for they are joint heirs with him, and the malefactor will be among them; for they are to be glorified together, and they are to "reign with him." As yet Jesus has not come into his kingdom.

The Bible teaches that the Son of man is to set up his kingdom on the earth, at the end and in the place of the fourth universal earth monarchy, represented by the Nebuchadnezzar image of Daniel, and the beastly kingdoms of Daniel and John; when Gentile times end, and the times of the King of kings begin, and he is to judge and make war in righteousness as King of righteousness.

1. The End. But, lo, the scene shifts, and the mode changes; for theory is to take the principal seat, plan the campaigns, drill the companies, and lead the hosts to battle; and truth and Bible, with thief and cross, and kingdom and paradise, must be ignored, march to the war, and be kept out of sight. For "the end" is in view, and "the time" is come, and now Christ has the kingdom, and has been reigning ever since he said, "All power in heaven and in earth is given unto me;" and in a little while he is coming, not "to receive a kingdom," but to deliver one up to the Father.

My dear good brethren, do not be angry with me when I ask you if you do not know that there is not to be found in all the Bible such an expression as, the end of the world? Are not the saints to rule the world? and yet they are not of the world. Are not they to judge the world, and yet "judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come?" Is not he to rule in the midst of his enemies? Is not he, the Lord, at thy right hand (right hand of the Father), to strike through kings in the day of his wrath? Will he not cause his saints (as kings) to execute judgment upon the heathen, upon the people, kings and nobles, "the judgments written?" Will not this be the "gleaning time," and will not all this be done before He comes, before those that are his are made alive at his coming? And if so, are not we (Protestants) truly "the apostasy," and Rome, as she claims, the true church," reigning a thousand years" (in the past,) executing the judgments written? But, alas! alas! where is her Lord?

PEBBLES ON IMMORTALITY.

1. He who holds the doctrine of eternal torment believes in the natural immortality of the soul.

2. Belief in eternal torment neutralizes a man's better conceptions of God.

3. The passage in 1 Cor. 15: 42 should be rendered—"There is sown in corruption, there is raised in incorruption"; the pronoun "it" is not in the original.

4. If every animal body sown in corruption is to be raised in incorruption, all beasts will be so raised.

5. 1 Cor. 15: 44 should be rendered—"There is sown an animal body, there is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 2: 14 should be rendered—"The animal man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." Psuche in Greek corresponds to anima in Latin, and means breath.

6. In the Hebrew of 2 Kings 2: 11, it reads—"And Elijah went up in a whirlwind of heavens." The Septuagint renders it, "was taken up"; but the preposition "into" is not in the Hebrew of Hahn's edition.

7. The eternity of God is established by numerous passages of Scripture, without the necessity of giving to olam in Hebrew and eon in Greek the meaning of endless duration.

8. A man cannot conceive "for ever"; and the happiness of the saints in heaven will not consist in being independent of God for ever, but perpetually dependent upon him for every moment's consciousness.

9. The necessity of a creature praising and magnifying the true God is made more manifest from the existence of a false God.

10. Some of the last words of David were, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

11. In Psalm 73, David says it was not till he "went into the sanctuary of God that he understood the end of the wicked"; for he there saw ascending the smoke of victims.

12. When Parrhaseus, the painter, was tracing on canvas the agonies of Prometheus bound, he had for a copy an old wounded Macedonian captive bound; his wounds were probed to create the features of agony. The old man said, "Pity me." Parrhaseus replied, "Pity you! Does the priest falter because the victim suffers?"

13. Jesus, the great High Priest, will not falter when he inflicts everlasting punishment on the wicked.

14. The thief on the cross did not die the same day that he uttered his prayer to be remembered, for the day ended at sunset, and his legs were broken that he might not run away; for the next day was a high day with the Jews and called a Sabbath.

INER LAMB.

SERVICE.

True service begins with Christ, who is the head, and when Christ is forgotten, then the service is defective; it has lost its connection with the spring and fountain of all service, because it is from the head that all the body, by joints and bands, having nourishment ministered, increaseth. The body is of Christ, and he loves it as he loves himself; and every one who would serve it, will best learn to do so, by knowing his heart and purposes towards it. In a word, it is Christ who serves, though it may be through us. We are but "joints and bands." If we are not derivative and communicative from Christ, we are useless. To be useful, my eye and heart must be on Christ, and not on the issue of my service; though, if true to him, the end will vindicate me too, however disheartening the interval. He who judges of his service by present appearances will judge by the blossom, and not by the fruit; and, after all, the service is not for the sake of the church, but for the sake of Christ; and if he be served in the Church, though the church own it not, yet Christ being served, he will own it. Now the constant effort of Satan is to disconnect, in our minds, Christ from our service; and this, much more than any of us, perhaps, have fully discovered. Whether in reading, or praying, or speaking, how seldom, if we judge ourselves, do we find that we act simply as towards Christ, and him alone. How often may sentimentality and natural feeling affect us in our service, instead of simple love to him?

Our service should be connected with nothing but God, and his Christ, not with any particular set of persons. We may be comforted by fellowship, and our hearts refreshed; but we must work by our own individual faith and energy, without leaning on any one whatever; for if we do, we cannot be faithful servants. Service must ever be measured by faith, and one's own communion with God. Saul may be a prophet, when he gets among the prophets; but David was always the same, in the cave or any where. Whilst the choicest blessings given me here are in fellowship, yet a man's service must flow from himself, else there will be weakness. In every age the blessing has been from individual agency; and the moment it has ceased to be this, it has declined into the world; it is humbling, but it makes us feel that all comes immediately from God. The tendency of association is to make us lean upon one another.

When there are great arrangements for carrying on work, there is not the recognition of this inherent blessing which "tarrieth not for the sons of men." I don't tarry for man, if I have faith in God. I act upon the strength of that. Let a man act as the Lord leads him. The Spirit of God is not to be fettered by man.

All power arises from the direct authoritative energy of the Holy Ghost in the individual. He that had talent went and traded. Paul says, "Immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." Where there is a desire to act, accompanied by real energy, a man will rise up and walk; but, if he cannot do this, the energy is not there, and the attempt to move is only restlessness and weakness.

Love for Jesus sets one to work. I know no other way.—Times of Refreshing.

HARVESTING.

How this work has pressed our readers. Some of them, toiling early and late, have been weary and worn; have had no time to read papers, to write for them, to solicit subscriptions, or even to send what was due for their own. All this we know very well, for we have toiled many a month in the hay and harvest field in years gone by. We must take care of what God gives, and harvest time is a time of toil.

But now the press of this work is past. The barns are filled with plenty, and many hearts are glad. Let us praise the God of the seed-time and the harvest, who has again fulfilled his word to man. Let us also give of our plenty with a liberal hand, lest while pulling down our barns and building greater, God shall say, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee."

And let us remember now that there is another harvest work which is yet unfinished, and that harvest is great and the laborers are few. Souls are perishing; precious sheaves lie wasting all around. Shall we not enter into this field, and work with as much zeal as has been manifested in the harvest-field this year while laboring for the meat that perisheth?

While we labor with press and pen to spread the glad tidings of salvation, and while our co-workers go forth to their toils in the Southern field, we pray that our readers in their own neighborhoods, may be diligent and faithful in seeking to save souls from the wrath which is so soon to come. And in everything they can do, by way of the circulation of tracts, papers, etc., they shall have our most cordial and hearty co-operation.

This is harvest work. The labor is severe. The time is short. The Lord is at hand. Let us work while it is yet day, that in the gathering hour the joy of the harvest may fill our hearts with gladness, and our mouths with songs.—The Christian.

TO A METHODIST MINISTER.

Rev. D. W. Thurston, Syracuse, N. Y.—My dear Brother: The high regard and warm affection which I have cherished toward you for several years, occupy the same place in my heart to-day. Your intelligence, fervor of devotion, magnanimity of heart, and high sense of christian honor, invite me to open my heart to you with all the frankness of other days. Let us then commune with each other, at our common Master's feet.

Perhaps you have given me up as hopelessly lost. I would prefer that you should write opposite my name—"Gone, but not lost." Gone from the distinctive ranks of Methodism, but not lost to the blessed cause of God. Never was I more fully committed to stand up for Jesus than now. Never did I depend more fully upon his atoning blood. Never did I more heartily appreciate or more earnestly advocate a vital christianity. You have doubtless feared that I was drifting in a dangerous direction. Some of the views which I have been compelled to adopt have been rashly branded as "infidelity." Nothing is further from the truth. The Bible was never so full of interest as now. Many of its hitherto dark utterances are gloriously illuminated. I have found a key that solves some long-standing mysteries. A beautiful harmony is restored, and my burdened heart is made happy and free. Oh! I want you to find the same treasures of truth, and then, with all your fervid eloquence, sound out the glad tidings to despairing millions. I think I see how your sphere of usefulness could be greatly enlarged, and how your views of God and his wondrous plan of salvation could become more ravishing and satisfactory than ever before. You are crippled in your influence and hampered in your operations, because of the cruelty of prejudice, the prevalence of bigotry, and the power of human traditions.

Popular theology is terribly tortured and cramped. It looks through green glasses, and rushes to strange conclusions. Much of the current preaching is but a re-publication of Satan's lie in the garden of Eden. It is a libel on the Scriptures, and a dreadful dishonor to God. Is it not time that we cease "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," and that we plant ourselves squarely upon the plain word of inspiration? It has become a fashion in the religious world to spiritualize the Scriptures, until there is scarcely anything left except mysteries and metaphors! Instead of Biblical expositions, we have a continuous effort to prove that God does not mean exactly what he says. Thus the Bible is wrapped in a mantle of obscurity, and the faith of the people is staggered.

A correct view of man's nature and destiny would dissipate a world of theological fog, and produce blessed results. How do you account for the fact that religionists so generally believe and teach the doctrine of man's inherent immortality? Surely this doctrine cannot boast a divine origin. God taught exactly the reverse. Unfallen man had only a conditional immortality, at best, and by transgression he forfeited even that. Mortality is stamped upon the entire race. Immortality can be obtained only by a vital connection with Jesus, our Life-giver. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." How Satan feeds our pride by whispering in our ears the baneful lie which he first uttered in Paradise, that we have an immortal principle within us! The Bible teaches no such doctrine. Heathen theology early became impregnated with the Satanic poison, and the Jewish people, during the Egyptian and especially during the Babylonian captivity, imbibed some of the views of their heathen associates. Prominent among these were the doctrines of the immortality of souls, and the transmigration of souls. The one is just as Scriptural as the other. To examine, is to be convinced.

Thank God for giving me light, and grace and courage enough to discard this popular but heathenish dogma of man's natural immortality. I regard this as the key-stone to the arch of error. That gone, several other things share the same fate. I can now see how rewards and punishments are reserved till the decisions of the judgment are pronounced; and thus all is harmony there! I can also see how the Scriptures can be fulfilled in the final and total "destruction" of sinners, as well as the devil and all his works. The universe of God will yet be free from all contamination! The foul plague-spot shall be effectually wiped out. Everything that hath breath will praise the Lord. A perfect triumph of the cross will be achieved. Harmony will be restored, and purity and love forever reign. Uncounted millions of blood-washed saints, colonized on the shores of a coming Paradise, shall be the trophies of a Savior's dying love; and all who would not come into the plan will be accounted as useless rubbish, and "burnt up root and branch." They would not have "life" on God's terms, and they are reduced to their original non-existence. Oh! what glory and harmony and justice and love I thus see in God's character and administration. I praise him for being such a God! The last spot is removed from the glorious sun. Eternal torment is a myth. It will not, cannot be. A present hell of conscious misery, where the spirits of the wicked are tormented before the resurrection, and consequently before the judgment day, is also a figment of the imagination, and not a Scriptural fact. No sinner will receive his punishment till the final verdict is rendered. Then there will be "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish," ending in interminable darkness and eternal "death." This will be the sinners' "everlasting punishment." How good the Lord was in driving fallen man out of Eden, and cutting off all access to the "tree of life," lest he should "eat and live forever." But for that, man might have become immortal in misery. As it is, such a destiny will never be possible.

Admit the immortal soul theory, and either Universalism or eternal torment naturally follows. Rewards and punishments before the judgment also follow. Swedenborgianism, Shakerism Spiritualism, and Purgatory are all built upon this unscriptural doctrine. They all necessarily fall with it. There is but one short step between modern theology and Spiritualism. The latter is only the former "gone to seed."

The current teaching of the day supersedes the necessity of a resurrection; and hence many are logically and consistently giving up all idea of a literal resurrection. It also supercedes the necessity of a general judgment; for if the "real man" can go to a heaven of happiness or a hell of wretchedness at death, a day of judgment would be a stupendous farce. And it destroys the faith and interest of humanity in the personal coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. If the saints are to live in a "sky-kingdom" forever, and sinners are to writhe eternally in hell, beginning in both cases, at the hour of death, then there is nothing to be accomplished by Christ's coming!

Dear brother in Jesus, do subject this system to a rigid re-examination, and be willing to walk in all the light that shines. I would not, for any earthly consideration, retrace my steps to the position which I occupied in other years. I am sure I am moving more fully in harmony with God's will and word. May that Spirit, which you so dearly love to cherish, guide you in all these matters to scriptural conclusions, is the prayer of your affectionate brother,

A. A. PHELPS.—Voice.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

58. Man was created after the other animals.—"And God made the beasts of the earth after his kind, and the cattle after their kind . . . And God said, Let us make man. . . . So God created man in his own image." Gen. 1: 25, 26.

Man was created before the other animals.—"And the Lord God said it is not good that man should be alone; I will make a helpmeet for him. And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them." Gen. 2: 18, 19.

The latter part of Gen. 2: 18, 19, is simply a repetition of Gen. 1: 25-26. The idea from the original Hebrew would perhaps be more clearly expressed by the following: "The Lord God brought every beast of the field and every fowl of the air (which he had formed out of the ground,) unto Adam to see what he would call them." The mere redundancy of expression is a frivolous pretext for a cavil.

59. Seed time and harvest were never to cease.—"While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest . . . shall not cease." Gen. 8: 22.

Seed time and harvest did cease for seven years.—"And the seven years of dearth began to come. . . And the famine was over all the face of the earth." Gen. 41: 54, 56. "For these two years hath famine been in the land; and yet there are five years in which there shall neither be earing nor harvest."—Gen. 45: 6.

This "contradiction" (like many others,) has been manufactured by wresting a text from its connection. Gen. 8: 22 is simply a promise of the change of seasons. The true elipsis of the text is as follows: "Seed time and harvest time shall not cease." God has nowhere promised us a crop of grain every year, but simply that seed time and harvest time shall continue. This is evident not only from the grammatical construction of language, but from the whole connection. The verse reads as follows:—"While the earth remaineth, seed time and harvest (time) and cold and heat and summer and winter and day and night shall not cease."

60. God hardened Pharaoh's heart.—"But I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go." Ex. 4: 21. "And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh." Ex. 9: 12.

Pharaoh hardened his own heart.—"But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them." Ex. 8: 15.

This proposition admits of the most easy solution. Both texts are strictly true. God was the cause of hardening Pharaoh's heart, because he it was who offered mercies to the wicked king, upon conditions of obedience; and on the other hand it is equally true that Pharaoh hardened his own heart, because he resisted the kindness and mercy of God, and brought desolation and ruin upon himself and kingdom.

61. All the cattle and horses in Egypt died. "Behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep. . . And all the cattle of Egypt died." Ex. 9: 3, 6.

All the horses of Egypt did not die.—"But the Egyptians pursued after them (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army), and overtook them encamping by the sea." Ex. 14: 9.

The infidel here endeavors to prove first, that all the horses of Egypt were slain by God's judgment; and second, that they pursued the children of Israel with horses. But it is very evident their horses were not all killed (if indeed any of them were,) from the following facts:

1st. The threat simply includes the animals in the field, and the horses belonging to the royal service could not have been laboring in the field; and there were probably many others also that were not there.

2d. The record only says that "all the cattle of Egypt died." It does not say that the horses died also. And it will be noticed that the disease which was sent upon the cattle to destroy them, was the murrain—a disease not likely to attack horses!

3d. The words, both in the Hebrew and Greek, which are rendered "all" in our version in many instances, simply mean "many," or a "large proportion of," "a majority." For instance, "All Judea went out to be baptized of John in Jordan," still we have accounts of a certain class that did not go. See also the declaration that "death has passed upon all men," yet we have the history of two men who never died. Hence we may safely infer that the term is used in the same legitimate sense in the text before us.—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

SHE SLEEPS.

BY SR. SMALL.

Sister, thou art sweetly sleeping,
Free from pain and toil and care;
Dearest sister, how we miss thee—
Miss thee in the house of prayer.

Thou wilt sleep, but not forever;
Jesus died and rose again;
Soon he'll come in clouds of glory—
Thou wilt rise with him to reign.

Sister, then we hope to meet thee,
Then we'll take thee by the hand;
Then we'll twine our arms around thee,
In that bright and happy land.

FINDINGS AND EXPERIENCE OF A PILGRIM.

In our most happy and pleasurable moments there frequently occurs something saddening to shade our pathway; and its memory is often unpleasant, but the thought of the coming time of freedom from sin and temptation gives us yet courage to pursue our course. My memories of the past have many such shadows, and among them is the memory of events in Honeoye. One day while I was there, "Yankee Robinson's Show" pitched their tents for an exhibition, and while crowds of people came to behold the sights, I was pained to see among them men and women professing christianity, Now I know it is not an uncomman occurrence for professed christians in the country to attend such shows as these. But I did not expect to see such a general attendance of them as there was on this occasion. To see old men, one foot in the grave as it were, and ministers of the gospel, and persons who talk in prayer-meeting about consecrating themselves to Jesus, going after such a show, and giving their dollars to carry on the Devil's business, is painful to reflect upon. I feel that the church of Christ is not conscientious enough on this very point of going to shows. The show comes on, attractive in its outward features to the inclinations of the flesh, and men and women stifle the weak voice of the Spirit in their hearts, which bids them beware, and go with the tide to places where they would be ashamed to be seen if Jesus were here in their company. Think of it, dear child of God. I will not cast you out of my love, but I beg of you to repent of this your folly.

Do you suppose Jesus would have gone with you to that circus if he had been here? Would you have dared ask him to go? And would you have gone without him? And yet you have grieved him by going and patronizing Satan regardless of his company. I know the temptation was strong, and so much more the virtue of resisting it, if you would only do it. How much money do you suppose was paid out on that occasion, by men and women who believe in the near advent of Jesus? Suppose it had been used for mission purposes, would it not have been better than to have given it for such an ungodly purpose? But I am glad to know that all lovers of Jesus in and about Honeoye did not go to that circus. Some say it is no worse to go than to want to go and yet stay away. Sad mistake! Why, there is where the cross comes in, the overcoming, the victory. O, let us all be overcomers, and so sit with Jesus on his throne in glory by and by.

Another event transpired while I was in Honeoye which will greatly affect the progress of the truths of the Advent in that section. I refer to the destruction of the N. Y. State Mission Tent by a gale of wind in a storm on Wednesday, August 25th. The storm was quite severe, blowing down many orchard and forest trees, and doing other damage. A gust struck the side of the tent, and the cloth being weak from mildew and age, the gale burst through the side, and then the ropes gave way, and the tent was a wreck. Bro. Cotton was the only one in it at the time. The tent was sent to Bro. Fields at Rochester, but I fear is hardly worth repairing, it being so sadly mildewed. The tent might be exchanged, I think, for a smaller one of a circular form, and which would be fully as convenient, and would stand a gale of wind much better. The tent enterprise should not cease in N. Y., for it is a powerful means for spreading the truth.

Leaving the scenery of this beautiful country to be again a thing only of memory, I journeyed on, stopping in Rochester over night, and then to Albany, where I found a little handful of pilgrims who are trying to keep their light burning. Thence on to the Springfield campmeeting, at which I write these lines, and from which I shall again return to my western home to fall in rank again among those who are giving the trumpet a "certain sound" in that great harvest field. And while there, toiling in my Master's cause, the thoughts of meeting again those loved ones, whom I have seen in my eastern tour, in that fair clime where friendship's ties shall ne'er be broken, will inspire my heart with courage anew, to be faithful to Jesus' words and his cause, and occupy until He comes.

ALLY'S CONSCIENCE.

"Mother," little Ally said, as he came in from the garden, and stood, leaning his back against an open door,—"mother do you want I should tell you something?"

Ally's tone was a little different from usual; so his mother answered, "I don't know as I do."

"Mayn't I tell you something, mother?" Ally persisted.

"If you wish to, Ally, you may."

"Mother, don't you know you told me I mustn't have a peach unless there was one, on the ground?"

"Very likely I did, Ally; when was it?"

"Oh! a great while ago, when the yellow peaches were ripe; and I brought one in, and said I picked it up from the ground."

"Well, didn't you find it there, Ally?"

"Oh, yes, ma! I picked it up; but I knocked it off from the tree first; and that was just like a lie, wasn't it, ma?"

"Just like it, Ally; and I'm so sorry my little boy has kept a lie in his heart all this time, and has not told his mother, nor asked God to forgive him!"

Ally began to cry; his mother laid down her work, and took him upon her lap.

"I was sorry, ma; I don't love to play in the garden."

"Does the peach tree make you think of your sin, my child?"

"Yes, ma'am," sobbed Ally; "I put the peach under the currant bush, and I don't like the currant-bush, too! and I think about it when I go to bed, and the dark makes me cry about it."

This little circumstance occurred nearly a year before, when Ally was scarcely four years old, and the sin had been hurting his conscience ever since. His mother let him cry now, and put his arms round her neck, and say, "I'm sorry I so naughty to my dear mother!"

"But Ally, there is One who saw you knock the peach off, and knew all the wicked thoughts of your heart about it, when mother didn't know."

"Will God love me any more?" asked Ally.

"We'll go up stairs and kneel down, and ask God to forgive you, and help you never to do so any more."

They went up stairs; the mother told God all about Ally's sin, and begged him to forgive. And then Ally prayed in his own words: "O God! I so sorry I say just like a lie! Please to forgive me—I won't do so any more—for Christ's sake Amen."

Then his good mother talked with him about doing wrong, and how God always sees and knows, and how he can forgive sinners if they are truly sorry for their sin.

Ally looked grieved, and sobbed a long time after this; but his conscience was relieved by his confession; he could play under the peach tree now and be happy. But the best of all is, Ally's mother never knew him to tell a falsehood again; the sting of that sin stood by him a long time; and all the way up to the years of a man he was afraid of anything so wicked and shameful as a lie!

How much easier and better it is for children always to confess a sin, and be forgiven.

ANGER IS MURDER.

We may learn a lesson on the sixth commandment from a little girl named Alice. One evening her mother had company, and her elder sister, Sarah, took her up stairs to put her to bed.

As Sarah was undressing her, she noticed that she seemed very sad, and that tears were running down her cheeks. She asked her what was the matter; but Alice gave her no answer. "Tell me, child what ails you," said Sarah. Still Alice said nothing; only she sighed, and seemed greatly troubled. When it was time to kneel down by her little bed and pray, Alice knelt, and bowed her head; but no word came from her lips. Sarah thought this was very strange. Then Alice arose, and crept into her bed, so silent, so sad, so tearful that Sarah was frightened. She went down stairs and joined the company, but seized the opportunity of mentioning it to her mother.

"I will run up directly," said she, "and see what ails the child."

"She is not sick, mother," said her sister, "only it seems as if something were troubling her mind."

Presently the mother escaped from the parlor, and went up to the chamber of her little one. She trod very softly, and as she drew near, she heard low sobs and cries.

"My child," said her mother, tenderly, stooping down to her bedside, "what troubles you. Tell me."

"Oh, mother, I am so glad you have come?" cried Alice, uncovering her head, and seizing her mother's hand; "I can't say my prayers, and I can't go to sleep."

"Do tell me what's the matter with my dear daughter.

"Oh, mother, I killed cousin Ruth in my heart to day, I did!" and the tears flood afresh. "She got angry, and I wished her dead. That makes me a murderer. I can't ask God's forgiveness till I am friends with Ruth. He won't forgive me, for my heart has had anger and hatred in it.

"Oh, mother!" and the poor child wept as though her heart would break.

Her mother tried to comfort her; but there lay the cold heavy weight of sin upon her bosom, and she could take no comfort.

"Oh if I could only see Ruth, and ask her forgiveness, then I could pray, and go to sleep," she said, piteously.

"Mother, can't I go to Ruth's house?"

"Yes, my child, you shall go," she said.

Ah! if she had been one of those mothers who always send their children to bed in charge of servants, what a golden opportunity she would have lost of doing her child good for life!

Alice's father was called, who, wrapping his weeping child in a blanket, carried her into the next house, where her cousin Ruth lived. She was taken to Ruth's bedside. It was a melting scene to witness the confession, the entreaty for forgiveness, and the kiss of reconciliation. Then Alice wiped away her tears; and, laying her head on her father's shoulder, she asked to be carried home.

Once more in her own chamber, Alice knelt down and prayed God to forgive her for the sin of hating Ruth. "Give me love in my heart she cried, earnestly, "because 'God is love;' and because it was love which made Jesus die on the cross for us; and oh, keep me from hating and killing anybody in my heart!"

So did little Alice pray. Oh, what a prayer was that! Sin and conscience, love and hatred had been fighting in her heart. But love gained the victory. Can we not remember feeling toward somebody just as Alice felt toward Ruth? Let us learn from the example of Alice what to do. We should ask the forgiveness of those toward whom we have felt anger or hatred. Then we should ask God's forgiveness, and pray for His grace to take away all these wicked feelings from our hearts, and fill them with love.

TEMPERANCE.

My Dear Children, I will tell you a story about a little boy and girl I once knew, who had a kind father until he learned to drink rum and became a drunkard. I hope the sad story I have to tell will lead you all to resolve never to drink anything that can intoxicate.

I suppose the little girls who read this will think I do not mean them, because women do not often become intemperate; but I am sorry to say I have seen several drunken females. O, what a shameful sight! My little bright-eyed readers must all agree never to touch, taste or handle the poison that intoxicates. There is danger in its use.

But to my story. When little Frank and Lucy were quite small their father was kind and pleasant, loved his home, and his wife and children, and they were always ready to run and meet him at night when he came home from his work. But after a while he found a new place of labor where he could get more wages, but unfortunately for him, near to a rum-shop. It was so far from home he used to cross the river in a boat, taking his dinner with him; and as he had learned the filthy habit of using tobacco, he used to sit and smoke after he had taken his dinner, just in sight of the store. There were always loafers around this place, smoking their pipes and telling stories, and calling for their drams. They soon prevailed on him to join them, and he was induced to take the social glass with them. Thus he began his downward career.

His wife was not long finding out the danger her husband was in, for his cross answers to her and his innocent children told the story of his folly. The little ones soon had to run from their father instead of going to meet him, and he now drank so much that the man he worked for would employ him no longer; and as he had spent so much of his earnings for rum, his family suffered for the necessaries of life.

The poor mother tried hard to persuade him to do better, but was only answered by curses. He said it was a free country, and he would do as he pleased with his money. Do you call that freedom, children, to be bound fast in the chains of intemperance? I guess you think it is hard bondage. The poor mother did all she could to earn food for her little ones, until her health failed and she could not work any longer. Had it not been for the kind neighbors they would have almost starved. Often would the wretched husband and father come home and beat his poor wife and children until they had to run for their lives to escape his fury.

One morning the mother told her little ones she felt to ill to rise, (the father had already gone to catch a few fish to exchange for rum,) and told them to run to the nearest neighbor—about a quarter of a mile distant—and ask her to come over as soon as she could. They soon returned with their kind friend, to find their dear mother dying. She begged this friend to take her little ones home with her, and leave them in her sister's care, after her death. The neighbor promised to do so; and then the dying woman called the children to her, kissed them, bade them be kind to each other, love God and strive to meet her in heaven—and never, never touch anything that would intoxicate. The poor children with tears and sobs promised to do as their mother said; then laying her hand upon their little heads, she commended them to the care of the God of the orphan, and soon after breathed her last.

The children went to live with their aunt, who kindly cared for them, and not long after the wretched husband and father found a drunkard's grave in the deep blue waters which rolled past his once happy home.

Do you know, dear children, how all drunkards are made? Just by taking a little at first, once in a while, then a little oftener; then the appetite is formed, and there are but few who ever try to resist it. The safest way, and the only way, is not to touch it, not a single drop, if you would not become a drunkard. Will you remember this?—Zion's Herald.

"THEY WENT AND TOLD JESUS."

"They went and told Jesus": let us do the same,
If worldling and scoffer would sully your name,
Though heavy your burden, and grievous to bear,
Go tell it to Jesus, he'll list to your prayer.

"They went and told Jesus": then let us conceal
From hearts that are round us the sorrows we feel;
There's one that will never make light of your care
Go tell it to Jesus, your burden he'll bear.

"They went and told Jesus": 'tis blessed to know
We've a friend unchanging to whom we can go,
And freely unbosom our heart's every care,—
Go tell it to Jesus, and there, only there.

"They went and told Jesus": and thus we to-day
Our burden on Jesus' dear bosom may lay;
His lambs in his bosom he'll tenderly bear,
Then tell it to Jesus, and trust in his care.

"They went and told Jesus": if friends faithless prove,
You've a fountain unceasing, o'erflowing with love
Whatever your trial, your sorrow, or care,
Go tell it to Jesus, he answereth prayer.

"They went and told Jesus": soon time will be o'er,
And reigning immortal on Eden's fair shore,
His kingdom unfading in glory we'll share,
Nor have to tell Jesus a burden or care.

SCRIPTURE, OR POPULAR THEOLOGY.

WHICH SHALL WE ADOPT?

1st. Scripture says, "Behold, all souls are mine; . . . the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18: 4. Popular Theology says all souls are immortal, and can never die.

2nd. Scripture says, "All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Eccl. 3: 20. Popular Theology says all do not go to one place, but to two or three different places; nor are all made of the dust; neither does all of man turn to dust again.

3d. Scripture says, "All they that go down to the dust shall bow before him, and none can keep alive his own soul."—Ps. 22: 29. Popular Theology says the body goes down to the dust, but the soul, the real man, is immortal, and will live for ever; or, "Ye shall not surely die."

4th. Scripture says, "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."—Ps. 115: 17. Theology says they now are either praising God in heaven, or are wailing in hell.

5th. Scripture says, "The dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward."—Eccl. 9: 5. Theology says they now know more than when they were alive, and are now reaping their reward.

6th. Scripture says, "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner."—Ps. 11: 31. Theology says, The righteous shall be recompensed in heaven, and the wicked in a hell of endless torments.

7th. Scripture says, "The wicked is reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath."—Job 21: 30. Theology says, They, or their souls, drop immediately into the lake of fire at the time of their death (not reserved).

8th. Scripture says, "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then shall he reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 27. Theology says, the Son of man comes when people die, and then they enter on their reward.

9th. Scripture says, the "everlasting punishment" of the wicked will consist of "everlasting destruction." 2 Thess. 1: 9. Theology says it will consist of everlasting torture.

10th. Scripture says, "For our God is a consuming fire."—Heb. 12: 20. Theology says, or teaches, he is only torturing fire to the wicked.

11th. Scripture says, "Judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries."—Heb. 10: 27. Theology says they shall not be devoured, but eternally exist, or be preserved in endless torments.

12th. Scripture says, "He that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."—1 John 2: 17. Theology says that every one will abide for ever, whether they do the will of God or not.

13th. Scripture says, "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6: 23. Theology says the wages of sin is the death that never dies, and that all will eternally exist.

14th. Scripture says of the Son of man, "That through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." Heb. 2: 14. Theology says, The devil and his works will never be destroyed, but be for ever perpetuated in increasing misery and magnitude.

15th. Scripture says, "The hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."—John 5: 28, 29. Theology says they, or their souls, shall come from heaven and hell, and unite with their bodies at the resurrection.

16th. Scripture says, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you."—John 13: 33. Theology says that they do go immediately, when they die, where Christ has gone.

17th. Scripture says, "If the dead rise not, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—1 Cor. 15: 12–18. Theology says, They, or their souls, are in heaven. Query: if this be true, how could they have perished, even if there should be no resurrection of the dead? or what need would there be of a resurrection?

18th. Scripture says, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself."—John 14: 3. Theology says he comes at death to welcome believers home to glory. If this be true, then Paul must have been mistaken when he mentions his coming the second time.

19th. Scripture says, "Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."—Dan. 7: 22. Theology says, The saints are judged when they die, and then they enter the kingdom.

20th. Scripture says, "Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth."—Ps. 37: 9. "The meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace."—Ps. 37: 11. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."—Matt. 5: 5. "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever."—Ps. 37: 29. "Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land; when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it."—Ps. 37: 34. "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be."—Ps. 37: 10. Theology says, The wicked shall never cease to be, but shall exist for ever in misery, for ever sinning, and their misery for ever increasing; and that the righteous shall all ascend to heaven; shall have heaven for their everlasting inheritance.

21st. Scripture says, "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever."—Rev. 11: 15. "Thy kingdom come." Matt. 6: 10. Theology says, The kingdom has already come in the hearts of believers, or was set up more than eighteen hundred years ago; while they pray for its extension and enlargement.

22nd. Scripture says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Dan. 2: 44. Theology says, or teaches, that human instrumentalities, aided by earthly governments, are to accomplish this work; and that a thousand years must transpire before the Lord will come; while costly church edifices, highly decorated, with rented slips, and trained choirs aided by instrumental music, are the order of the day; while an occasional festival, picnic, or public supper, is resorted to, in which a fashionable church and gay worldlings may now both unite to help the cause along.

23d. Scripture says, "Then shall be great tribulation"; and "immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven. . . . So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it [he] is near, even at the doors."—Matt. 24: 30–33. Theology says that refers to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and was fulfilled at that time; and that no one knows anything about the time when Christ shall come.

24th. Scripture says, "And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven."—Luke 21: 11. "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring."—Luke 21: 25. Theology says, These things always have been (as much as to say, "All things continue as they were since the beginning of the creation"); and we should not pry into hidden mysteries, or trouble ourselves or others about these matters; and if we are prepared to die, that will be the coming of the Son of man to us.

25th. Scripture says, "Despise not prophesyings."—1 Thess. 5: 20. "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed."—2 Pet. 1: 19. "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein."—Rev. 1: 3. "Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book."—Rev. 22: 7. "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book; for the time is at hand."—Rev. 22: 6. Theology says, The Revelation is a book of mysteries, and we can know but little about its teachings, and we have no right to pry into hidden mysteries. But Jesus says, "When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into ALL TRUTH. . . . and he will show you things to come."—John 16: 13. Now in all christian courtesy, kindness and love, I would ask, By what right, authority, or prerogative, can any person or sect set aside the great truths and teachings of prophecy as of no account, or put a different construction on the plain and positive declarations of God's word, and substantiate in their place traditions and fables of men? "Thy word is truth," and we are sanctified through the truth, and not through contradictory creeds, traditions, and fables of men. Christ's words are to judge us in the last great day, and not Popular Theology. Now which shall we adopt?

MAN IN DANGER.

There are some men in danger; but to see them you would not think so. They are merry, jovial, feasting, chatty, pleasant fellows; and they do not even know themselves that they are in any imminent peril, although at times they have their fears. Ah! the fears of the wicked shall come upon them, but, of course, the reality will be much heavier and the reality more startling than the dream.

Here are the ways in which you may tell the men who are in danger.

I. They are those who secretly hope, when they hear of the coming of Christ, that he won't come just yet. Poor things! They think Jesus comes principally for their overthrow, and takes a great delight in destroying them. It's no such thing. He has no pleasure in the death of him that dieth; for he wills not the death of a sinner; on the other hand, he delights to see the sinner come to a knowledge of the truth that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Am I speaking to one who secretly desires the day of Christ put off? That can not be, dear one. But let me tell you, if you believe in Christ as God's gift to you, first to bear your punishment, and second to contain eternal life for you, you won't want him to stay away, but you will begin to pray, "My dear Master, come immediately; for I so love and long to see you." "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

II. They are those who would like him to stay where he is, and never come again. What, and let the world stay in its present sad state? What, and let the oppressor tread down the poor and needy for ever under his feet? What, and never deliver those fond ones of his who, amid tears and song, in sorrow and joy, are calling out for the strong arm to save them? Yes, all this they will bear with if he won't come. Ah! but he will come. I will show you they are selfish. Let the rest suffer, as long as they are at peace. Let Jesus just sit in heaven, where he is, and show himself there a propitiation for ever for such wretches, that they may reap the benefit to eternity of Divine forbearance and tolerance. All this they want; nor do they desire that Jesus should get anything as interest for his death and advocacy but the preservation of their lives, who not only desire no acquaintanceship with him, but also, disown that "through him" comes all their good. You who desire not the coming of Christ, say why? Let me warn you that those who wish his eternal absence, shall be eternally absent from his presence; those who wish not his eternal life, shall never have it.

III. They are those who hope in some way to escape justice. But they will get justice. All will get justice. The righteous will get it; the wicked will have it. Justice to the righteous; for God being just will yet be the justifier of those who believe in Jesus; for believers in Jesus are formed into one body, and the one body has paid the penalty of sin, and what more can be demanded? "Who is he that condemneth? it is Christ that died"; and if Christ has died, and "we are Christ's," then, if that one body is free, we are free. Sinner! man in danger! you will get justice. Justice as you never had it. Justice to perfection. Justice from God. There is no escaping the just sentence of death, unless you be in Christ; and if you are there, you are on the "no condemnation" side; on the "justified" side; on the "accepted" side.

IV. They are those who are unprepared to meet Christ. I like to see men consciously unprepared to meet Christ. It is a good sign. For I know when a man perceives his danger he will be wanting to get out of the reach of it, and that very quickly too. I'll tell you, dear reader, why I like to see you in danger. It is because I can show you the way by which coming out of danger you can come even to the Father—the God of all safety. I would not like to see you in danger if there were no "good way" that I could show you to walk in.

Unprepared one in yourself, I tell you on the authority of God,—and how dignified his veracity!—if you are in Christ, and if Christ is in you, you are perfectly ready to see the Lord himself. The lover's pulsations are for his love. And if the Lord be carried in your heart and mind as your lover, he surely carries you in his heart and mind as his love; and you have nothing to fear in his coming, but great cause for joy, that you shall be pressed to his heart, and receive the sweet kisses of his love.

V. They are those who are fearful. Those who have not faith enough to drop into the arms of Christ, and believe he will receive them. Those who are fearful—doubtful of a reception. Jesus Christ don't have doubters, but believers. They are those who are fearful as to their future. The future of doubters is, I fear, an extremely dark one. They never see a star, much less the Sun in their horizon, and that they will never have the light of one is pretty certain. They are doubtful of good, and they will look in vain for good. They never think highly enough of God's goodness to hope in his mercy in his appointed way, and God will show those who make him a liar the terrors of his indignation; for without the pale of salvation will be found the fearful.

VI. They are those who are impure livers. As they will have nothing to do with the holy and just One, God will have no grace for them. And to think that he would let them into his beautiful, pure home, is preposterous. What, let the man not cleansed of his leprosy into the abode of the healthy? What, let the vile in with the righteous? What, let the foul-mouthed in with the psalm-singers? What, let the devil in at the pearly gates? God must be impotent first. They shall never be admitted, unless they come by the Way, and wear the right robe; as a man in a burning house can never be saved, except he escapes by the only open way.

"Man in danger," there's the road—Jesus, the beloved of God. And Christian, awake! for men are in danger. If you have been as a single pointer before, let every finger now direct sinners to Jesus—the only hope set before us in the gospel. W. KELLAWAY.

REST.

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God."—HEB. 4: 9.

One of the most prominent attainments sought for by laboring humanity is rest. Nothing is sought for in a greater variety of ways. All are tired of this life of toil, care, anxiety, perplexity, wretchedness and misery. All are seeking rest. On account of sin, God had said, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground. . . . Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." Gen. 3: 18, 19. The penalty is unavoidable, in any of the ways of life.

Those who struggle on without reference to the unavoidable future, never obtain that which by the whole effort of their souls they have lusted after.

Alas! how few are willing to pause a moment and listen to God's plan for seeking rest. "Wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." Matt. 17: 13.

The farmer thinks to labor till he gets his farm well improved and stocked; house well furnished, and barns well filled, then take his rest, seeming to forget that "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." Ps. 90: 10. When this amount of property and goods is obtained, he is broken down in constitution, and unable to enjoy his plenty; or by sickness and death, he has lost one or more members of his family. It may be the wife of his youth. He is not at rest.

The merchant thinks by trading, to obtain such a competency that there can be nothing which his soul may not lust after, that he cannot have; and so he labors on inconsiderately as to the future life, till some sudden reverse of fortune deprives him of his wealth, or, by sickness, is prostrated on the bed of death, not having obtained the rest he sought.

The drunkard seeks his rest and comfort in the cup, till the demon of death drags him down to a den of scorpions, unmitigated wretchedness and misery, when destruction's gate shuts him up in the "land of darkness."

By deeds of violence, the highwayman thinks to secure largely of that which "answereth to all things" (money,) then takes up his abode in some remote part of the country, or in some foreign land, where he hopes to escape justice, and there enter into rest; but ere the object is reached, he lodges within the dark recesses of some lonely prison, or miserably ends his wretched life on the gallows, and is "reserved unto the day of judgment" to receive further punishment. It may be his body becomes the subject of experimenting anatomists. But we must refrain from this pen-picturing of mortal struggles for unlawful gains and unhallowed rest. "There is no peace to the wicked, saith my God."

The servants of the Most High, though few in number, a small company comparatively, a "little flock," are also struggling to enter into rest; but they do not, like the other class, expect to find it in this mortal life. They labor as faithfully in the vineyard of the Lord, as the ungodly labor in the service of the enemy of all righteousness. They know that when their Lord shall appear, they will appear with him in glory, and enter into "that rest that remains to the people of God." D. D. LATHROP.

THE ALARM BELL.

A GREAT CAUSE FOR ALARM.

This is a popular, ancient, and flagrant error of doctrine; we mean the allegation of Academic, or ante-resurrection immortality in man, otherwise denoted as immortality of the soul. Here is ground of alarm indeed, for by it the great master of artifice is riding and driving on to the abyss; the great mass of mankind are herded into his lane of palisades like an elephant or buffalo drive, and stalking and pitching on to the pitfall. Is it not enough that this pernicious error has dominated mankind for so many ages without giving it rope and room to dominate clear to the bitter end? Is it not enough? Startling and strange art of deception, that the seducer can blind so long to their bondage the victims around whom he has thrown his velvet lines. Strange quality of the falsehood, that it is so unseen. Singular indeed that it so fascinates and ensnares even the very conscience of men. Chosen with right subtle election among lies, that it is magnified as if it were truth, and so sensitively dear, that, if assailed, the very host ecclesiastic on earth are filled with mingled emotions of alarm and indignation, and a rallying pipe of danger will summon to the right and left squadrons and platoons of theological knights, to form a life-guard around the pet. But a pet error, and no truth,—and beyond cavil a pet error, nay, the pet error of Satan, and in which is a very paternity of mischief and lies, as truly as in Adam was the paternity of our race. Ground of alarm indeed, and all the more because in this fearful age of mighty rushing, millions are the less cautious, and that, with precipice and boiling maelstrom at the front. Ground of alarm indeed! And with precious rays of light shining from the word of God, men are willingly blind, and so tenacious of the darkness they call light, that it is coming to be a query whether their eyes are not fast sealing with worse than cataract-ic scales, that shall guard and preserve darkness up to the very sun-burst of Jesus' coming.

By this dogma of a soul immortal in man, the deceiver perverts and deforms the theology of the Bible, and manages to preserve a kind of highway open between man and the demon-world; a highway of intercourse, through the false hypothesis of life inherent surviving death, and spirits on wings or in chains, in glory or in fire, hived away in viewless prisons of infinitude, or thronging back to whisper and rattle with prodigies among the latter-day millions not yet disembodied. Genius of apostasy and delusion, this Satan, never tired of lying, and straining every point of craft and art of artifice to keep the links and chains long and large with which to clasp together earth and men with the demon herd. Genius of ink-black lying strategy, to belittle and put off into infinite mazy distance the return of Christ, and degrade or deny the resurrection of the dead, by flattering phases of the old root-fable, "thou shalt not die," and a sanctified lying dogmatism or fond hypothesis of entities arrowing their way with immortal speed into heaven at death. But since soul immortalities, volant to heaven or hell or purgatory at death, have served their day in the Romish or semi-Romish centuries of the past, behold now the Beelzebub of our day, the very same Beelzebub that glittered and flattered in Eden, if possibly waving away with his wand the obsolete doctrines of ages, bringing in the new and frothy glories of Spiritualism. O, poor, deceived, and unbelieving world! O, poor, deceived, and unbelieving church!

Though man appears to die, and Jehovah declared that he should die, and that man of the dust should to dust return, yet how great a delusion has the demon whisked around the mind and faith of the race, by saying the death is not real but seeming. Pride echoes the lie, and man exalts himself into immortality, which belongs and can belong to holy beings only. Pride denies the origin and basis of this immortality to be Satanic, and thinks it is divine. The fact and the teaching of it is imputed to God, whereas the fact is not a fact, but a falsehood, and the teaching of it is sub-mundane, diabolic, infernal. Man is mortal, and every man; and, when will the great men see it and embrace it, and lead their disciples out of the maze of error? We have called our column, and surmounted it with the caption of the "Alarm Bell," and there is need for ringing, long and loud, to wake the misinstructed hosts of our vaunted Protestantism. A great day, a mighty day, a day of trouble and judgment is coming—nay, is at the door. O, poor world, and oh, poor church, may our Lord in mercy send help and light, to warn and save a heedful, listening, eager, earnest few, at least, from the hurrying night and snare and curse of antichrist.

C. COLEGROVE.

PROPHECIES OF THE LAST DAYS.

"The Antichrist" may be even now already in existence! I do not say that he is: I assert nothing; I only say it may be so. Nay, if we are right as to the apostasy, and it has indeed had its commencement in those extraordinary "spirit manifestations" of Spiritualism, then it is highly probable that he is even now in being, and abiding the time for his public revelation. Nay, further, he may not only be in existence, but actually reigning as a sovereign prince.

From the very remarkable character, history, and actions of the present Emperor of the French, some have been led to conjecture that he will yet accomplish this very prophecy. It may be so, or it may not. All I do venture to affirm is, that Antichrist will surely come; the "Man of Sin" will surely be "revealed in his season;" and that when he does appear, his character and pretensions will be precisely as described in this prophecy of St. Paul. These, together with his awful doom, are unalterably fixed and certain, but the true individual, time only can unfold. It may be that the French Emperor will hereafter accomplish and come up to the terms of this inspired prediction; and it certainly is a significant fact that he is said to be a devoted disciple of this same "spirit," or rather "demon" movement; as are also other royal princes, some of whom are even reported to be themselves "mediums."

Nor, supposing the "Man of Sin" to be at this moment in existence, as it is quite possible he may be, is it at all necessary that he himself should be aware of the awful course he is destined to run, or the awful character he is to sustain? Nay, it is most unlikely that he should; although he may be even now revolving schemes of conquest and of universal empire in his silent breast.

Hazael, King of Syria, is a case in point. When the prophet met him, yet a private individual, and forewarned him of the great things which, as the future king, he should perform, and the atrocious cruelties of which he should be guilty, he most warmly repudiated the charge:—"Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing?" was his indignant answer. Nevertheless, he went straight home, treacherously murdered his master, usurped his throne, and afterwards fulfilled the prophet's prediction in every part thereof and to the very letter. (2 Kings 8: 12–15.)—Signs of our Times.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

62. Moses feared Pharaoh.—"And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known. Now, when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled before the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian. . . . And it came to pass, in process of time, that the king of Egypt died. . . And the Lord said unto Moses, in Midian, Go, return unto Egypt; for all the men are dead that sought thy life." Ex. 2: 14, 15; Ex. 23: Ex. 4: 19.

Moses did not fear Pharaoh.—"By faith he [Moses] forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king." Heb. 11: 27.

The texts quoted in Exodus refer to Moses' flight from Egypt at the time he slew the Egyptian, at which time it is very evident that he feared the wrath of Pharaoh. But Heb. 11: 57 refers explicitly to the time when Moses left Egypt with the children of Israel, and as at this time he was acting directly in harmony with the express commands of Jehovah, he had no cause to fear an earthly tyrant.

63. There died of the plague twenty-four thousand.—"And those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand." Num. 25: 9.

There died of the plague but twenty-three thousand.—"And fell in one day three and twenty thousand."—1 Cor. 10: 8.

This problem is clearly explained by Bagster's note upon the first text which we insert. "St. Paul reckons only 23,000, though some manuscripts and versions, particularly the latter, Syrian and Armenian have as here 24,000; allowing the 24,000 to be genuine [and none of the Hebrew manuscripts exhibit a various reading here], and the 23,000 of St. Paul to be also genuine, the two places may be reconciled by supposing, what is very probable, that Moses includes in the 24,000 the 1,000 men who were slain, in consequence of the judicial examination, (verse 4) as well as the 23,000 who died of the plague, while St. Paul only refers to the latter. Hence it is clear that the whole number of those who died of the plague was 24,000, while it is equally true, as Paul says, that "there fell, in one day, three and twenty thousand."

64. John the Baptist was Elias.—"This is Elias which was to come." Matt. 11: 14.

John the Baptist was not Elias. "And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? and he said I am not." John 1: 21.

Matt. 11: 14 reads, "If ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come."

The reader will see at once by the pronoun used in the foregoing text, that it does not refer to the person of Elias. It simply conveys the idea that John the Baptist was the forerunner, or the Elias of the first advent, as Elias himself is to be the forerunner of the second. If we should say that Abraham Lincoln was the Washington of the 19th century, no one would suppose that we intended to convey the idea that he was in fact George Washington. And although John was indeed the Elias, or forerunner of the first advent of the Messiah, yet in reply to the question "Art thou Elias,' (i. e. the veritable prophet), he truthfully answers, I am not. His position is easily explained by the text, which says, "He came in the spirit and power of Elias."

65. The father of Joseph, Mary's husband, was Jacob.—"And Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus.' Matt. 1: 16.

The father of Mary's husband was Heli.—"Being the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli."—Luke 3: 23.

This problem is easily solved by the following considerations: It is evident, from Matt. 1: 16, that Jacob was the natural father of Joseph, while Heli was the father of Mary, his wife; and as Mary was the only child and heiress of Heli (according to the Talmud) when Joseph married her, he became the only son and heir of Heli. The Jews often traced genealogy in this way. "For instance, in 1 Chron. 2: 22, Jair is reckoned among the posterity of Judah: because the grandfather of Jair (ver. 21) had married the daughter of Machir, of a noble house in the tribe of Manasseh, (Ch. 7: 14.) Therefore the same Jair is called the son of Manasseh, although he was only related to Manasseh by marriage." See Def. Dic.

NAPOLEON III.

Napoleon III. is truly "a man of wonder," and is attracting the attention of the whole civilized world. An English writer says of him:—

"We have seen already that he falls into the line of successional sovereignty, traced by prophetic history; that if we pursued that history, from Nebuchadnezzar downward, without reference to Louis Napoleon, we should, notwithstanding, arrive at him; the revived empire being the most obvious course.

You may remember it was said in Rev. 13: 'And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed, and all the world wondered after the wild beast.' It is at this time, that the false prophet makes an image to him. These heads [illegible] I do believe, that in the whole range of Roman history, there never was so striking a fulfillment of this as what has happened in his case. Napoleon's empire was completely destroyed at the battle of Waterloo: never was a more deadly wound with the sword. The world thought that dynasty had disappeared forever; yet now, as if by a miracle, it is restored, and men are astonished: the deadly wound is healed, and the world wonders after the wild-beast.

Next I would notice, the wild-beast (or his image) is to be worshiped, and that, too, as quite distinct from popery: and many can hardly conceive the possibility of such a thing coming to pass now. They say, we can comprehend the Pope's claiming divine honors, but not idolatry on any other ground. Against this we put the undeniable fact that the French did worship the goddess of reason. I believe, too, there are some among them who consider Napoleon a demi-god. I remember seeing a print to that effect. So that here again we have a special feature, although, perhaps, in an incipient state. Many others are beginning to appear. His co-operation with popery, and the revived activity of this latter are rising into distinctness as a sign. Now, Scripture says of the last days, 'And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the wild-beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet; for they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold, I come as a thief.' Of course, the manifestation of this will be increased activity and power. (Rev. 16: 13.)

Altogether, the character and position of Louis Napoleon seem to me as extraordinary as his progress has unquestionably been. A few years since, he was nobody; without even that last straw to which exiled princes cling, viz. hereditary title; or that which accounted for the rise of his uncle, viz., military opportunity. Yet he has made himself, perhaps, the most powerful man in the world. And how has he accomplished this? There have been singular circumstances, say many; but what circumstances? Surrounded by some of the cleverest statesmen in the world, and the favorite generals of a powerful army, he seemed a mere cipher in their hands; yet he overturned them all, and made himself absolute. It was one of the most daring and masterly things on record; and I can see no adequate cause, save what is to be found in his own character; I see no circumstances in the case antecedently favorable to that achievement of success.

Many years since, when in London, he wrote a book, to show that what France required, was the dynasty of Napoleon. Since that, he has kept steadily to the point, impelled, as he thinks, by a destiny, but certainly with an inflexibility of purpose which shows a remarkable mind; and, what is more remarkable, he has succeeded. He has now the whole power of France at his disposal; has managed to bend to his purpose, and centralize in himself, the antagonist powers of absolutism and democracy. We Englishmen laughed at the transparent fallacies with which he talked liberalism and acted despotism. We declared against the glaring absurdity of heading republicanism in France, and pulling it down for Papal tyranny in Italy; we considered the man who attempted to stand by three such opposite principles, an inconsistent fool; yet has he contrived to weave them into a threefold cord, which will not easily be broken.

What he may do next, it is utterly impossible, humanly speaking, to predict. The ordinary calculations of statesmen are completely at fault. Principle, he has none, and his interests he seems to master. We have really nothing to look to, save his own caprice, and that he resolves, and perhaps I too, into a destiny."

— An old Arabian proverb says: "It is the second blow which begins the quarrel."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 29, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ T. P. S. HAMPSON—"Debt and Grace" not to be had.

☞ C. KELLY—The $1.00 received.

☞ B. ROBERTS—Your paper goes free.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

NEW EFFORTS.

The time has come when we ought to make new efforts to spread the truth we love so well. We fear but few of our readers are aware of the worth of their "blessed hope." Were they asked, what will you take for it? they would answer, The whole world would be a meagre offering for a prize so valuable. Well, if it is worth so much to us, ought we not to take every possible means to cause others to see it? It will do others the same good it has us. It is our all. It is a priceless treasure. Shall we hide the light that pointed us to the way of life and glory eternal? All that is good cries against such a course.

We come now to ask the plain question of the reader, Are you making any effort to persuade others to seek for immortality through Jesus? If not, what will become of

TRACTS.

Notwithstanding all that has been said about the importance of scattering tracts, we fear but few are aware of the good that may be accomplished by a few dollars employed for this purpose. Let us make a new effort in this direction. Time is short, men and women are perishing for lack of the knowledge that might be sent them in a tract that would cost but a few cents. Shall we not make a little sacrifice for this noble object? Calls for tracts come from all directions. Many, who have no means to purchase, stand ready to scatter them judiciously among their neighbors. By this means a whole neighborhood may be aroused to search the Scriptures, who, otherwise, would remain in a slumbering condition. Those who have given to the tract fund have had great reason to rejoice over the happy results that have followed. We believe that the millions of pages of tracts circulated have been powerfully instrumental in producing the great increase of interest now felt in relation to the reasons of our hope. We have no doubt but that this interest may be doubled the coming year, if all of our readers would take hold of this work with a zeal in proportion to its importance. Let us have a shower of gifts for this good work. Some can only give a penny, others but a dime, while others can give from one to hundreds of dollars, and not feel it as much as the poor widow who gives the penny. Do not let the treasury of the tract fund be empty. We wish to keep the little silent messengers constantly flying in all directions, like autumnal leaves.

Come, dear Brn. and Srs., let us show that our religion is "pocket deep," and do all we can to save others from destruction. "The end of all things is at hand." Let us be noble in our efforts to bring men and women to Jesus. The present is a favored hour for those who have a mind to work. The day of rest is at hand, and the kingdom will soon be given to the faithful.

Again, we would urge that a special effort be made at once to scatter tracts more widely than ever before. Will you help?

FREE PAPER.

We sometimes hear it said that this or that is "not a free paper." We would like to have such individuals name one paper that is free according to their understanding of the matter. If by "free paper," they mean one in which every one can say what he pleases, we think there is not such a paper in the world; and that but very few would wish to have such a strange thing in their families. The infidel paper is free to publish whatever favors its principles, and the christian periodical that which will help forward the cause of Christ. But what good man wishes to have his paper partly filled with the arguments of Atheists, Deists, and other opposers of the christian religion? Those who take a christian paper do not wish to pay for infidel articles to poison the minds of the loved ones at home. They would not take the paper if such things were allowed. It would be a strange charge for the infidel to make, that such a paper was not free, because he could not have his articles published in it. So it would be equally improper for the christian to complain that the infidel paper was not free because he could not say what he pleased in its columns.

We have often heard it said at the beginning of a new paper, We are determined to have it free; but we have not yet known such a promise carried into effect; neither do we expect or desire it. As soon as the first article is rejected, or left out for want of room, the cry may begin, It is not a free paper. And as often as an article is omitted or rejected, a new voice may be added to help spread the cry, It is not a free paper. When this number becomes increased by the events of years, it is customary to start another free paper, whose history is just like the one about which they are complaining. The result is, a new party arises,—another division in the professed body of Christ, which causes many to stumble, and thus Satan's object is gained; for it is his chief purpose to divide the flock of God, if possible.

In these perilous times we need to be very watchful, lest we say or do something that shall in some way cause or promote discord among the disciples of Jesus. There is no danger of being too watchful, careful and prayerful in relation to this matter. "Blessed are the peacemakers." Let us have the blessing.

PRAY FOR US.

We wish to ask a special favor of those who are looking at our faults in relation to our official duties. No doubt many can see where we can do better. Will all such please ask the Lord to give us wisdom and courage to do all to his glory during the coming year? Of course it is impossible to please all; but if we can only please the Lord, our desires will be gratified. Dear Brn. and Srs., your editor not only requests, but he really needs, an interest in your daily prayers, that he may have heavenly wisdom to guide him in the work in which he is engaged. Please pray for him.

BRYANT'S POND CAMPMEETING.

We are not able to give a full report of the campmeeting at Bryant's Pond, as we did not arrive till Saturday afternoon. We found the meeting in good progress, on a pleasant island, about one third of a mile from the landing. It was a quiet, romantic spot, at the foot of a steep, high mountain, rising abruptly from the further shore of the pond, which was but a few rods from the camp island, and yet the water between was said to be a hundred feet. The island has been fitted up for celebrations and picnics. A small steamer, that would carry about one hundred and twenty-five passengers, conveyed the people to and from the island. The ride was a pleasant one, while the sweet songs of Zion were echoing around. The whole scenery about the pond and the island is specially pleasing; but we would not recommend to have another meeting at the same place, because of the necessary delay in conveying many passengers to and from the island.

The order was excellent. So far as we know, not the least disturbance was manifested. The location on the island gave great advantage in favor of good order, that could not be secured on the main land. There were about a dozen tents, besides two large ones. The preachers present were Brn. Wm. H. Mitchell, I. C. Wellcome, J. A. Libby, J. Gay, and T. Jordan. The meeting continued to increase in interest to its close. We had a good love-feast Sabbath morning, attentive audiences during the day, and a very good prayer and conference meeting in the evening. A number requested prayers, who felt backslidden in heart, and were richly blest. It was a heavenly place in Christ Jesus. Tears flowed freely from penitent souls, and the peace of God took the place of sorrow and remorse. We felt assured that lasting good would result from that meeting. Sabbath noon Bro. Libby baptized four happy souls in the clear waters of that beautiful pond. It was a pleasing sight.

When we look back upon the meeting, and all its associations, we find a very agreeable impression left upon the mind; such an one as we love to recall and review, when we would feast upon the past.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

It will be remembered that reference has been made to a National Convention of preachers and delegates, to be held during the present autumn. At the annual meeting of the A. C. A. at the Springfield camp-ground, Sept. 1st, this subject was considered, and in compliance with a request of the church at Rochester, N. Y.; it was decided by the National Convention committee to commence the National Conference in the Armory Hall, in Rochester, at 10 A. M., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, and continue over the following Lord's day. It is hoped there may be a full attendance.

CONFERENCES.

As the campmeeting season is now passed, arrangements should be made at once for conferences, which may be held for a week or more. A grand effort should be made the coming autumn and winter to arouse the people in all directions to prepare for the coming kingdom. This is a favored season for work. Special effort should be made to carry the light and truth to "the regions beyond." Much more good would be accomplished by a concentrated effort of several days, than by spending only one or two evenings in a place, or a single Sabbath.

STORM CLOUDS.

It is said, "There is a storm brewing in the East." This statement is made in reference to the course of the Sultan towards the Viceroy of Egypt. It is thought the letter of the Sultan to the Viceroy means "mischief," and "was intended to provoke resistance." The Sultan requests the Viceroy to "sell" or "transfer" to the Turkish government his iron-clads and breech-loaders ordered in Europe for his own protection; and "to abstain from negotiations with foreign governments, and not to contract loans without his consent." This is very arbitrary on the part of the Sultan, ISMAEL PASHA.

☞ If correspondents wish the proper names they send us to be published correctly, they will please write them so they can be understood by us.

THE MORALS OF DRESS.

It is well known that the present style of dressing has an immoral tendency. When we consider the fact that the harlots of Paris are the originators of many of the principal fashions, it is not to be wondered at that they should be decidedly immodest and immoral in their influence. Such indeed is the case. This is one of Satan's strong holds. Perhaps he has not a more powerful weapon for evil than fashion. But few are willing to be unfashionable in their apparel; hence it is the policy of the arch deceiver to have the fashions as far removed from christian modesty and simplicity as possible, in order to lead people step by step away from a pure christianity. In this way he has succeeded in neutralizing the power of those who profess the christian religion; and if professors continue to follow Satan's fashions, they will find their power for doing good becoming less, till they will be lost among the worldly rubbish of backsliders.

It is strange that more do not see the snare of the tempter, and cut loose from his seductive charms; but he creeps in so slily that his advance is not noticed till he has the chief control of the sympathies of his victims. Those under his influence do not see their danger till it is too late to escape. It is only those who have escaped his snares that can see the dangers of others; and when they cry an alarm, they are thought to be needlessly fearful, are often said to be "too particular," "superstitious," "bigoted," or even "fanatical." Rather than endure such names, many keep still, and dare not lift their voice against the corrupting tendency of the fashionable dressing at the present time. Some dare speak from a worldly stand-point.

The following from the New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune is worthy of candid attention:—

"Much of the careless morality of the present day is owing to the way in which women dress. There is no caviling at the fact nor pretending to ignore it, but the moderately dressed wife and mother is fast disappearing from our homes. The domestic daughter has long since become a myth, and in her place we have a creature of hair and humps—wasp-hips, Grecian-bends, high-heeled, chignoned young lady, who laughs loud and talks fast, and writes herself 'Mamie' or 'Julie' and who is a complete success in doing nothing, and knowing nothing, except the slang literature of the day.

I think the reason young men do not marry is because girls have ceased to be domestic, and spend a great deal of money upon dress. They are not contented to live in a quiet way and dress moderately; they must go out, dress and ride, and frequent places of amusement; have suppers and boquets, and receive adulation. It costs a great deal of money, which the young man furnishes, and he never gets ahead enough to marry; so they repent and try their luck over again. It is the easiest thing in the world to do with less luxury, but it involves a little self-sacrifice and economy, and these virtues are fast becoming exotics.

Fully one-half of the girls who are now filling situations in stores, offices, etc., go there in the first place in order to be able to dress better. They live in plain but comfortable homes, and must help with the housework or the children of their own kin; but they hear glowing accounts of the city; they want the finery that is denied them, and they want to go from those peaceful home lives; from the kind guardianship of parents, to the toil and temptations of the ten-hour sytsem.

They go plain country girls, with modest, blushing cheeks and smooth, shining hair. They stay there a year or two, and their cheeks are pale and their hair is frizzed. They have lost the gaucherie of blushing, and are bold at repartee. They dress somehow and live somehow; but they have hours of despondency that makes them old. It is one long struggle with labor and temptation, and how they preserve their integrity God only knows!

Now, would not these girls be happier as the wives of farmers and mechanics? Would not one word of genuine love outweigh a ton of admiration? Would not the smile of a little child be a thousand times better than the gaze of the libertine? Is it not easier to work for one's own than for strangers? to feel that you are king in your castle, if it is only a one-story cottage?"

SPIRITUALISTS.

In an article upon "Spiritualists," in the Catholic World, the views of the Catholic Church are given. The writer says:

The only immortality they offer is the immortality of evil demons or the angels who kept not their first estate. But even of such an immortality for the human soul they offer no proof. They are lying spirits, and their word is worthless, and their identity with human souls, once united to human bodies which they personate, is not, and cannot, be established. They deny the resurrection of the dead, which St Paul preached at Athens, and they give, as we have seen, no proofs that the soul does not die and perish with the body. Their doctrines are simply calculated to deceive the unwary, to draw them away from their allegiance to the Lord of Heaven, and to drag them down to the regions where dwell the angels that fell.

Satan and his hosts have rebelled against God, and in refusing to worship the incarnate Son as God, were cast out of heaven, and became the bitter enemies of him and the human race. Satan, as the chief of the fallen angels, evil demons, or devils, carries on incessant war against God, and seeks to draw men away from their allegiance to him, and to get himself worshipped by them in his place. Hence, he seeks by lying wonders to deceive them, by his prodigies to rival in their belief real miracles; and by his pretended revelations of the spirit world, to substitute belief in his pretended communications for faith in divine revelation, and thus re-establish, in lands redeemed by Christianity from his dominion, the devil-worship, which has never ceased to obtain in all heathen countries. The Holy Scriptures assure us that all the gods of the heathen are demons or devils. These took possession of the idols made of wood or stone, gold or silver, had their temples, their priests and priestesses, their service, and were worshiped as gods. They gave forth oracles, and were consulted, through their mediums, in all great affairs of state, and their omens and auguries, which the people consulted to learn the future, as the spirits do their mediums. Spiritism belongs to the same order. The spirits, as Mr. Grant well proves, are demons, and the whole thing has for its object to re-establish perhaps in a modified form, the devil-worship which formerly obtained among all nations but the Jews or chosen people of God, and still obtains among all nations not yet christianized. It began in the grand apostasy of the Gentiles from the patriarchal religion, which followed the confusion of tongues at Babel; and the spiritists are doing their best to revive it in the grand apostasy from the Christian church, which took place in the sixteenth century, and of which we have such clear and unmistakable predictions in the New Testament. So adroitly has Satan managed, that if it were possible, the very elect would be deceived. So much we say of the origin and cause of the spirit manifestations.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

THE HYMNS OF THE JUBILEE HARP.

For the convenience of those who wish to carry the hymns in their pockets, we have had a lot bound with flexible covers, the margins of the pages being trimmed close to the printed matter, making it very convenient for the pocket,—the most complete hymn book in use among us. Price 75 cts. per copy, postage 12 cts; $7.00 per dozen by express. AG'T.

ROCHESTER.

In visiting among the brethren, I called as usual upon a family who are much interested in the Sabbath question, especially the wife. We always talked freely upon the law and gospel with kindness. A blind brother sitting by, who has become a strong believer and an efficient laborer in the Advent cause, who had been boarding some months in this and another family who keep the seventh day, listened with much attention. When we were through he says,

"I want to tell my dream, if you will hear it."

"Very well," said I, "he that hath a dream let him tell a dream.

He says, "After hearing much upon the Sabbath, my mind became unsettled. I prayed the Lord to show me the truth. I said, 'Lord, you know I am blind, and can't read, so do, Lord, show me the truth about the Sabbath. I prayed three weeks [just as long as Daniel prayed] before I got an answer. When I got an answer it was in a dream, which has settled my mind forever. I dreamed that I had been into the city, and returning home, came down Broadway, [a street on which he lived], till I reached the gate leading up to the house. I saw in the path right before me the two covenants—the new and the old. I saw a line between them. The new covenant was next to me, the old was on the other side of the line. I was about to step over the line, when I heard a voice saying, 'Stop! if you step over that line you will get entangled.'

I turned aside and came up to the house. I awoke from sleep, and have had no more trouble about the Sabbath."

It seemed to me that no one could have listened to that simple narrative from that poor blind and godly brother, without exclaiming, "It is the Lord's doings." "Blessed be his holy name." H. PRATT.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal Giver.

ADDRESS OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Beloved Brethren and Sisters:—Being reelected by the Association to carry forward the missionary work another year, we would express our gratitude for the confidence reposed in us, and accept the trust committed to our hands. In doing so, we crave the sympathy and support of our brethren at large. We desire to act in their confidence, and to deserve their approbation.

It is known to all that we have but one Missionary Society for the East and West, and there has been harmonious action in its support.

Our Society is a legal one, and all its officers are amenable to the body for their doings. All monies received are publicly accounted for, and all monies are paid out by a vote of the Board, for which our Treasurer receives his vouchers, which places our finances beyond doubt or misconception.

The Board have from the first carried out what they have believed to be the wishes of the Society in the establishment of our missions. Their first attention was directed to the freedmen, for whose benefit most of the funds were given. They have not confined themselves to this class of persons, but have sent the gospel to the white people of the South as well as the black. The Board have arranged to carry forward the following Missions the coming year:

MEMPHIS, TENN.

This Mission and School are placed under the care of Eld. Louis F. Cole, who is the superintendent and principal teacher. He has associated with him Mrs. L. F. Cole, and Mrs. Mary P. Valle. We have two schools, which number about one hundred and fifty pupils. We also have a large Sabbath School, consisting of children and adults. The church is under the charge of Elder Cole, assisted by Eld. Ephraim Hedge, a freedman, and is in a prosperous condition.

Our schools have been received among the free schools of the city, and our teachers will be paid by the city Board of education this year, so that our expenses for this Mission will be light.

In connection with Memphis, we have churches in Osceola, Morgus Point, and elsewhere in Arkansas. These are mostly supplied with freedmen preachers, and sustain themselves. The freedmen's conference is carrying forward the good work among their brethren, and some help is needed to sustain this department of our work.

ST. LOUIS.

We have appointed Dr. Leslie to take charge of this Mission. The head-quarters of the Mission are located at Compton Hill, at the brick chapel. There is a debt of two hundred dollars on the chapel, which, when paid, Eld. Decatur, the Pastor, who owns the chapel, will deed to the Society. Dr. Leslie will have a school in this house. They have a church and Sabbath school, and one well sustained. We have a chapel, and also church, in East St. Louis, doing well.

There is a church, also, in Monroe Street, in the north part of St. Louis, with a Sabbath school, under the care of Arthur A. Waite. This is now mostly white. They pay their own rent and incidental expenses. There are five freedmen preachers, who preach at different points every Sabbath. And the freedmen's conference is making efforts to spread the truth among their brethren. This Mission is in good condition, and we expect, under the labors of Dr. Leslie, it will continue to prosper. We shall need help for this Mission, as our schools are not yet accepted by the city.

FLORIDA.

The Mission in Florida is under the care of Eld. P. A. Smith. He preaches in Jacksonville half the time, and has several other churches, which he supplies while he is opening new places in his missionary work. His labors are confined to the white people, by whom he is well received.

We have one freedmen preacher in the same region, who received the truth through the labors of Bro. Smith. He is doing a good work among the freedmen, and will need some help. Elder Smith will oversee this matter.

FOREIGN.

Bro. M. Czechowski is laboring in Hungary and elsewhere, and is doing what he can for his countrymen; but we have nothing definite as to the extent of his work.

Elder Bendixon, of Norway, has not reported himself of late. The Mission there has not prospered as we had hoped.

The Board propose to enlarge their work among the white and colored people at the South, as they shall have the means. Also, to send the gospel of the kingdom to any other part of our country, or to foreign lands, as doors may open and the means be given to sustain them in the work. May we not ask of the churches a liberal support for our Missions this year? A good foundation is laid, and our work is well begun. Shall we not sustain and carry it forward? It is but little that we can do at most, but God requires this of us. In time past our people have done nobly, and we trust they will not grow weary in well doing.

We ought to raise two thousand dollars, at least, this year. Of this we have already raised about six hundred. Let every friend of our missions make up their minds to help us. Do what you can, or as the Lord has prospered you. We shall look to you for help, and trust we shall not be disappointed.

As we have no salaried agents to go out to collect funds, we depend on our ministers to present the claims of this Society, and stir up the friends in this good work of giving. But let none wait for the appeal of ministers. Make up your mind as to how much you will give, and send your pledge, or the money, to the Treasurer, without delay. Direct to Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

L. BOUTELL, Chairman of the Board.

OUR SPECIAL WORK.

BRO. GRANT:—The great campmeetings have passed. The memory of them will be delightful to many who, with new consecrations and strong determinations to improve in the future, received a great blessing; so also will it be to those reclaimed and converted. The meeting will be beneficial to the cause of Christ and truth at large, as well as to individuals. The blessings of heaven have attended them. To God be all the glory forever. Amen.

The great doctrine, divinely inspired, which brought us out and gave us our identity, and which still holds us together as a church and people, should be perseveringly adhered to, and persistently proclaimed.

The personal advent of the Messiah must be kept prominent. It must be the same Jesus. For in the time we live there are Lords many, Gods many, and Saviors many, and as many kinds of comings of them, all turning the people from the true Christ, consequently turning them to fables; so that the great multitude are drifting on to destruction, without chart or compass.

We must preach and teach Christ, the babe of Bethlehem; Christ, the victim of Calvary, slain for us; Christ dead and buried; Christ risen from the dead, thus becoming the first-fruits of them that slept; Christ ascending to the right hand of the Father; the same Christ Jesus coming again the second time, to redeem and reward his chosen, peculiar people. This is to be kept before the people. The good news must be proclaimed still. It must be heard. And who will tell the pleasing story and sound the tocsin of alarm? We that have been looking with joyful expectation, still anticipating our heart's desire in seeing the King in his beauty, we must and shall keep the sound ringing, as with an angel's voice, "Behold He cometh!" We are in the generation that must give heed to it, or suffer loss.

Brethren, this gospel of the kingdom must be preached in all nations "as a witness"; and shall we be negligent or dilatory in doing our part in this last godlike work? Heaven calls upon us to sanctify ourselves anew to the self-denying work, and not account our lives dear unto ourselves, if we may but save men.

The gates of the enemy are hoisted, the floods of error are let loose, and a standard must be raised in the strength of the Lord God of hosts. The doctrine of the Bible, with its truthful principles, is the only reliable weapon that can be successfully used in this warfare. Life and death are set before us in the gospel; not a happy life on the one hand, and an eternally miserable life in torment on the other; no, no, never; but life eternal, as the gift of God, on the right hand. What on the other? The wages of sin, which is death; a cessation of life; "destruction from the presence of the Lord"; eternal punishment; eternal death; eternally a dead man.

Say, shall we not gird ourselves for this last conflict, and do all we can, under God, to save our fellow men from that death that is inevitable, unless they make Christ their refuge and lay hold on eternal life? Then let it be our special work to preach the gospel of Christ, of which Paul was not ashamed, because it is the power of God to save poor mortal man from sin here, and give him, through a resurrection from the dead, eternal life, and the new earth for an inheritance, wherein to enjoy that rest that remains for the people of God.

Stand up! dearly beloved; we are called to be the light of this generation. The woe is upon us. The Lord is coming. The signs compel the conclusion. Give the trumpet the certain sound. Be kind, but fearless. Stand fast. Do your duty. Put all on the altar, and amid the perils save all you can. No time to lose. The unbelieving will soon be lost—lost!

O, what can be done? The Lord is still good, and willing to save and bless his children. Let us fight manfully the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE U. F. M. ASSOCIATION.

The Union Female Missionary Association held its annual meeting at Springfield, Mass., Aug. 31st, 1869. The President in the chair. Meeting opened in due form. Secretary's report was read and adopted, after which the Association listened to reports from laboring Sisters.

The following Sisters reported: M. L. Durand, H. B. Hastings. Their reports were listened to with interest, and accepted by the Association. Adjourned.

3 o'clock P. M. Prayer by Sr. Hastings. The President stated the object of this Association. Proceeded with the reports of laborers. The following Sisters reported: H. R. Tatro, L. M. Stoddard, Srs. Holden and M. McKinstry. Reports accepted. Adjourned.

Sept. 1st, one o'clock P. M. Meeting being opened, voted to listen to the remaining reports. Srs. S. Warren, Childs, A. E. Smith, E. S. Jennings, J. Benson, and S. J. Boyd, reported their labors, also Sr. Hastings reported the labors of Srs. Judkins, Pease and E. Escrene. Reports were accepted, after which the President made some remarks with reference to slanderous reports, and urged the necessity of the members of this Association standing together and sympathizing with each other.

The meeting being open for business, the following resolution was offered and adopted:

Whereas, We as laboring Sisters are often exposed to slanderous reports from those who would injure our influence, and feeling the need of sympathy from each other, Therefore,

Resolved, In the name of the Lord, that we will stand by each other in every time of trial, and never believe any report until we find it to be true, and then not to expose the one in fault, but in love and with the spirit of Jesus follow the gospel rule in the matter, and never publish it to the world unless the cause of Christ demands it.

Treasurer's report read, accepted and adopted. (For particulars, see "Woman and her Work.")

A committe of three was appointed by the President to take the names of those who wished to join this Association. The following names, with the required fees, were presented: Mrs. Brewster, $5. J. U. Packard, $5. Eliza Wheeler, $1. Jennie Streeter, $1. R. S. Robinson, $1. H. Thraw, $1. Anthony Deering, $1. Kate N. Chaffee, $1. Cora C. Smith, $1.00. Bro. Hudson, $1.50. A. A. Dickenson, $1. Wm. B. Perry, $2. Mrs. O. D. Woodruff, $1. M. D. Smith, 50 cts. Mrs. L. D. Merrill, $1. A. D. Sharp, $1. P. W. Johns, $1. P. B. Fitch, $1. H. Dana, $1. M. L. Searles, $1. E. E. Miles, $1. Amos Scripture, $1. R. E. Evans, $1. M. A. McPherson, $1. L. E. Newell, $1.

Srs. D. C. Carvin and R. Evans were received as laborers.

Proceeded to elect the officers for the ensuing year. President, Sr. E. S. Jennings. Vice President, Sr. A. E. Smith. Secretary and Treasurer, M. McKinstry. Asst. Secretary, M. L. Durand. Voted, That Sr. Stoddard be added to the "Relief Committee." Adjourned to meet at the call of the Secretary. M. MCKINSTRY, Sec.

Alton Bay, Sept. 10th, 1869.

Met in special meeting at the call of the Secretary. President in the chair. Meeting opened in due form. The object of the meeting being stated, the "Constitution," "By-Laws" and "Covenant" were read, after which the names of Srs. L. E. Saulpaugh and M. E. Otis were presented for membership, and were accepted. Proceeded to take the names of those who wished to aid this Association. The following names were given, with the amount paid: Z. Foster, $5. C. G. Reed, $5. Jacob Woods, $1. H. O. Straffin, $1. E. P. Doane, $1; also pledged $5. R. Tozier, $1. E. S. Tozier, $1. M. J. Pierce, $1. Mary A. Allen, $1. M. B. Stone, $1.

On motion, proceeded to listen to remarks from laboring sisters, after which a collection was taken to aid the Association. Voted to adjourn, to meet at the call of the Secretary.

M. MCKINSTRY, Secretary.

NATIONAL ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

According to notice published in the Crisis and Voice, the committee appointed to superintend the calling and holding of a National Advent Christian Conference met at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 1st, 1869, and made the following decisions:

1. That the proposed Conference be called.
2. That said Conference meet at Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, at ten o'clock A. M.

The committee are earnestly solicitous that each State Conference may be represented by three delegates, as proposed; and that churches in States and Provinces where there are no conferences may send a delegate to represent them in said Conference. The committee also extend an invitation to any and all of our brethren and sisters, who may esteem it a privilege or duty to attend the Conference, to do so; believing that the Conference will extend an invitation to all such to take part in its deliberations.

We also say, in behalf of the church at Rochester, that it has extended a most cordial invitation to the Conference, and all friends who may desire to enjoy its deliberations, to meet with them and occupy their very commodious Hall; and also to enjoy their hospitalities while they may tarry in their city.

For the Committee, J. COUCH.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. B. Sevey.

BRN. AND SRS.:—Since my last letter for the Crisis (April), I have had three regular appointments; one in Jay (Kennedy's Corner), where the Lord has been pleased to pour out his Spirit. A goodly number have found peace in believing the truth, and are rejoicing in hope of soon seeing Jesus. I had the privilege of baptizing seven in the likeness of Jesus' death. Bro. Morse, of the Free Baptists, baptized three the same day. It was truly pleasant to unite with others in worship and work, to see brethren dwell together in unity. Many said it was the best celebration they ever attended (it was on the fourth of July).

I spent one Sunday in Carthage, in grove meeting, which commenced Thursday evening. Brn. N. G. Reed, Jesse Gay, E. M. Haggett, and A. Abbott were present to preach the word. Our meeting was of deep interest. The labor of the meeting was to get right, and keep ready for the coming of Jesus, and help others. Such a meeting will prove to others that our faith and works go together. There was harmony and union in all our meetings. The brethren and sisters of the place did all they could to make the meeting interesting and others happy. How blessed to find such a band of children in this wicked world. One can feel at home with them. May we all so live here that we may meet in the world to come.

Every fourth Sabbath I spend in Belgrade (Depot), a new place comparatively; a few brethren and sisters in the vicinity. The friends of the place are ready to help by their attendance and means. We have a candid and intelligent congregation. Pray for us at Belgrade, that the Lord may revive his work and save some of the dear sinners for whom Jesus died, and that others who love the truth may be enabled to follow Jesus in all his requirements.

Every fourth Sabbath we spend with the church in South Livermore. Our meetings in that place have increased in numbers and interest. The brethren have a Sabbath School, and the fruits seem to be manifest in bringing several to the truth. One has found peace in believing this summer. Our grove meeting in that place was a good one. It commenced Aug. 26th. Brn. N. F. Nason, Jesse Gay, and L. Rhodes, were present to preach the word. Many came from abroad filled with faith and the Holy Ghost. From forty to sixty would take part in social meetings. "It seemed like an old-fashioned meeting," was the remark of many. The cause of truth in this vicinity is in a good condition.

I spent one Sabbath in Chesterville (Burrough's school-house), and baptized one lady, who made a start for the kingdom some two years ago. It was a solemn scene at the water.

In company with Bro. Gay, we held a protracted meeting in Jay (Bean's Corner), Sept. 2nd, and continued over Sunday. Here there are but two families of the Advent faith, and much prejudice exists in the minds of many. Bro. Lewis Bean has lately embraced the glorious light; says he has laid all on the altar; wishes to spend all in his Master's cause; has once preached with the Free-Will Baptists. He is much interested for the people in his place, that they may see the light. Few came out, mostly outsiders. Some Universalists were interested for our meeting, and kindly let us have the Union house on their day. Our meetings increased, as brethren came from other places to help. Sunday the house was well filled. We presented the signs which were to precede Jesus' coming to this earth. The impression was deep. May it be lasting. Some asked questions at the close of the evening meeting, which was the means of showing more light. Bro. Gay held one meeting the next week, and our meeting closed. May He who gave the word bless it to the good of some in that place.

I look back upon the past few months, and rejoice in what the Lord has done in opening the understanding of so many to receive the truth. Bless the Lord, oh, my soul. Dear brethren and sisters, work while the day lasts. The night cometh when no man can work. Let your light shine. Awake! no time for sleeping. Jesus soon is coming.

H. B. Sevey.

From Sr. S. B. Mitchell.

Bro. Grant:—I have just read the 18th chapter of Matthew, and am an advocate of the truth. I thought it might be duty to express a wish or a hope that all would heed the doctrine taught in that chapter, especially the fifteenth and sixteenth verses. I believe it would save a great deal of trouble, and some would show a different spirit from what some manifest.

The true christian will manifest a love which worketh no ill to his neighbor or his neighbor's children. A good tree will bring forth good fruit, and a corrupt tree corrupt fruit. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Christians will manifest the spirit of Jesus. He loved the poor. They were his especial care, and he exhorted others to remember them, by saying they would always have them. I believe we should love the poor, especially poor children. And I do love them, thank God. They are the ones I expect to meet, which will have come up out of "great tribulation" on the "evergreen shore."

Your sister, S. B. Mitchell.

Casco, Me.

Bro. T. L. Saltonstall writes:—"In 1842 I came to the conclusion that God had revealed the time when the blessed Redeemer would return to the earth, and his children would not be in darkness in relation to the event. I believed that the Savior would come in October, 1844, to raise the dead saints and change the living ones, but since that passed I have had no light on the time until a few weeks since. I believed then, and believe now, that the 1260 days commenced in 538 by the acts of Justinian, and ended in 1798, when Gen. Berthier took the Pope prisoner and carried him to France where he died. Our mistake was, that we thought the 1290 days ended with the 1260; but it is now very plain that the 1290 must all expire, and then the 1335 will bring us to 1873. 'If the vision tarry, wait for it; it will surely come, it will not tarry.' I believe that we shall get the inheritance at the end of the 1335 days; if so, the dead saints will be raised before 1873.

Dear brethren and sisters, there is light but a little in the future. Glory be to God."

Obituaries.

Libby. Died in West Poland, Me., Aug. 18th, 1869, Sarah O., wife of Edwin A. Libby, and daughter of Eld. J. T. and Harriet Jordan, aged twenty-four years and six days.

The subject of this notice from her earliest years was marked for her native goodness by her many friends. Seven years ago she sought and found the Savior, the only hope of life, since which time she has tried to live by the faith of the Son of God. Growing up under the instruction of her pious and devoted parents, she knew well the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus; hence her views of God's arrangement to save mankind were quite correct.

She did not expect at death to meet with God, Christ and the angels, to receive a crown of unfading glory, but a peaceful sleep, and quiet rest she longed for, till the trump of resurrection shall revive the waking dust.

The death of our sister brings deep bereavement to her family friends, especially the dear husband with whom she had lived some nineteen months. Never did two seem more united and happy, and never did a companion watch more faithfully beside a sick one than did our afflicted brother. His solicitude for her recovery, as that of her father's household, was of the most earnest kind. Yet, despite every effort made, every prayer offered in her behalf, she has gone to the grave.

Turf of the shaded churchyard,
Warden of the clay,
Watch the toil-worn sleeper
Till the awaking day.

We were called to attend the funeral at West Poland Chapel, where, assisted by other ministers, we endeavored to comfort the large circle of mourners with our blessed gospel hope. Text, Ps. 116: 15.

May God bless the dear ones, and bring them at last to the eternal kingdom. W. H. Mitchell.

Langley. Died in Barnstead, N. H., July 3d, of consumption, Sister Mary J. Langley, daughter of Bro. Samuel N. Langley, aged nineteen years.

Sister L. was a beautiful flower in the family group, promising much happiness to father, mother, and an only brother; when the gnawing worm cut the tender root as the sun was rising, and the day of life had just commenced; but the dawning hour was wisely spent in securing a place in the garden of the Lord, to re-bloom in unfading beauty amidst the glories of Paradise restored.

J. Couch.

Baxter. Died in Lake Village, N. H., Sept. 13th, 1869, Frank Alson, only child of Bro. John and Sr. Miriam Baxter, aged one year, two months, twenty-one days.

The parents' hearts are almost broken, but they are comforted with the christian's hope, and the assurance that still the promise made to weeping Rachel waits its fulfillment, and then Allie "shall come again from the land of the enemy." Words of comfort by the writer. L. C. McKinstry.

Prentice. Died in Danbury, Conn., Aug. 6th, of scrofulous consumption, Fannie J., wife of John I. Prentice, and daughter of V. R. and A. R. Fenn, aged twenty-four years.

Sister Fannie believed she should sleep, and her only hope was in Christ, through a resurrection. Her last words were to her husband: "Raise me up"; and with both arms around his neck, said, "I love Jesus, and Jesus love me too. Won't you love him too?"

The funeral was attended on the Sabbath, in the Baptist church, by the writer, assisted by the Pastor. Text, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

G. L. Teeple.

Pettibone. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Salmon Brook, Granby, Sept. 15th, Sister S. G. Pettibone, wife of Allen Pettibone, aged forty-nine years.

Sister P. came to our place last fall to be baptized, and since that time has lived a devoted christian life. Sister P. sleeps in Jesus. Bro. P. sorrows, but not as those who have no hope. May the children of the deceased be kept by the power of God from the evils of this wicked world.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from John 11: 25, 26. S. Woodruff.

Davis. Fell asleep in Holderness, Aug. 25th, after a long and very distressing sickness of four years with consumption, Bro. Davis.

We expect to see him in the morning, when Jesus comes to remove the curse, and raise the dead. The funeral was attended by D. Batchelder, who spoke words of comfort from Rev. 14: 13.

Frank Mudgett.

Marsh. Bro. J. E. Marsh died recently in Holyoke, after a short illness, in the triumphs of faith.

Bro. Marsh has long been a believer in the Advent doctrine. Funeral sermon by E. Burnham.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, Sept. 22. The Times this morning says: "The Spanish have found their advantage in a bold display of patriotism and national courage. They met an imagined affront with immediate defiance, though their threatened adversary is ten times more powerful than themselves.

Sickles is manifestly alarmed at the result of his proceedings, and has requested further instructions. Pending a reply from Washington he desires to withdraw his note. If this is actually the position of the case, Spain owes it to her own fearlessness, which may savor of unreason, but does not partake of the nature of bravado. She has declared that if driven to extremity she will fight. No doubt she will. For her to gain advantage by doing so is out of the question, but as matters stand she would lose less by war than her adversary. America may fairly decline an easy victory on such onerous and partial terms. The people and Government of Spain are resolved not to part with Cuba without a struggle. A contest could only result in the sacrifice of Cuba coupled with other but slighter losses. Sickles expected no such resistance as his note has provoked. Possibly in the face of such opposition his proceedings may be qualified or repudiated by his Government. It is believed that he has exceeded his authority and that America is not responsible for his act."

Madrid, Sept. 22. Gen. Pierrad arrived at Tarragona on Tuesday, and the Republicans made a great demonstration in his honor. Much excitement prevailed and there was some disturbance in the streets, during which the Secretary of the Governor was killed. The Government authorities then took vigorous steps to restore order. Many persons were arrested. The Republican clubs were dispersed and Volunteers of Liberty disarmed. An order has been issued for the arrest of Pierrad.

Madrid, Sept. 22. Gen. Prim has returned from France. Soon after his arrival a Cabinet Council was held, at which it was resolved to use every effort to save Cuba and to dispatch more troops to that island. The Tarragona affair was also discussed, and strong measures were proposed for the preservation of public order. Prince Napoleon is spoken of as a candidate for the throne.

London, Sept. 23. The Times to-day has an editorial on the present situation of affairs in France. It says: "If the Emperor is now recovered, his conduct cannot easily be accounted for. The new Constitution may be regarded as already virtually in vigor. The granting of amnesty, the tolerance extended to the press, every circumstance contributes to foster the conviction that a new era has dawned. Yet the Emperor remains inactive as if he considered everything done. Meanwhile, public opinion demands a convocation of the Legislative body. The uneasiness at the delay causes some members to contemplate an invasion of their own premises next month with a view of deliberating without the consent of the Executive. No one, however, expects a resort to such extremes. The legality of the Emperor's conduct in allowing six months to elapse between the dissolution and re-convocation of the Chambers depends on a technical quibble. Although the Legislative body separated before it was constituted, still it had given formal signs of its existence by several divisions.

London, Sept. 21. The Ritualists—clerical and lay—are just now deeply and very generally excited over the contents of the letter or rescript of Pope Pius IX, in which his Holiness repudiates the idea of non-catholics, or persons not in full communion with the catholic church, attending at the Ecumenical Council in Rome and taking part in the proceedings. Puseyism or Ritualism will not do. The delegates must belong to the Holy Mother by profession and baptism. Rev. Dr. Cummings will not consequently have an opportunity of an oral discussion with the assembled prelates.

Paris, Sept. 21. The papers of this city publish a letter from the preacher monk, Father Hyacinthe, addressed to the Father General of his Order at Rome, announcing that he abandons his convent, and ceases henceforth to preach in the church of Notre Dame at Paris. As a reason for this radical step he declares that he cannot obey the orders of the Holy See. He protests before the Pope and the Council against the doctrines and practices of the Romish Church, which, as he contends, are not in accordance with the principles of Christianity.

Paris, Sept. 22. The Journal Des Debats looks upon the religious situation as one fraught with serious consequences. It is said the coming Council at Rome will meet only to ratify the decisions of the most ultramontane-character, but the attitude of certain German and American Bishops, and the complaints of illustrious French ecclesiastics, show that the labors of the Council will not be so easy and direct as was anticipated. If the syllabus triumphs it will be with a struggle, and the triumph can only be ephemeral.

London, Sept. 22. The Daily Telegraph estimates the declaration of Father Hyacinthe as merely one of the many manifestations revealing a commotion in the Roman Catholic Church which promises to make the Ecumenical Council an occasion of anything but spiritual peace.

Paris, Sept. 22. The La Temps says: "The noble and courageous answer of Pere Hyacinthe will create an immense effect. Appearing as it has, on the eve of a great council, it is truly a sign of the times.

The La Siecle is of the opinion that the attitude of the eloquent and earnest preacher Monk must exercise a great influence in the present crisis of the church.

London, Sept. 21. The Pope has sent a communication to Cardinal Manning, in reference to the proposal of Dr. Cummings to appear at the Ecumenical Council. The Pope refers Dr. Cummings to the terms of the letter of invitation addressed to Protestants, and says he will find it an invitation not to discussion, but only to profit by the opportunity to return to the church. The Pope says, in conclusion, that there is no room at the Council for the defence of errors which have already been condemned.

Paris, Sept. 23. The religious journals express grief at the letter of Father Hyacinthe.

The Monde says the letter justifies the fears which have been long entertained in regard to him. No such language has been heard in a French church since the middle ages.

The Patrie declares that the independent language and courageous tones of his sermons demand attention, and have drawn on the preacher the condemnation of the Papacy and of his superiors.

Paris, Sept. 23. The Prince De La Tour d'Auvergne the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Burlingame of the Chinese Embassy, have made arrangements for establishing improved relations between France and China on the basis of mutual conciliation, and the French Government has sent out instructions to its representatives in China to act in accordance with this policy.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 22. A universal Peace Congress is now in session here. Yesterday a banquet was given the delegates. Victor Hugo was present and offered a toast, "To the Republic of the United States." He said he felt sure that in imitating the example of America, Europe would eventually become a federal Republic.

Paris, Sept. 21. The party of the Left will soon send out a manifesto calling for an early convention of the Senate and Corps Legislatif. The preparations for the voyage of the Empress to the East have commenced. The French journals regard the letter of Pere Hyacinthe as a great religious and political event.

Paris, Sept. 21. The Empress Eugenie purposes to leave St. Cloud during the ensuing week on a tour to Turkey—her trip, if completed, extending to Constantinople.

Madrid, Sept. 22. A treaty of commerce, between England and Spain, will soon be completed.

Paris, Sept. 24. The Gaulois asserts that France has sent a note to Prussia and Baden declaring that she regards the annexation of the Grand Duchy by Prussia as casus belli.

Berlin, Sept. 24. The Ministerial Journal announces that the Crown Prince of Prussia is about to visit Vienna on invitation from the Emperor. This fact shows that a desire is generally entertained at Vienna for the establishment of the most friendly relations with Prussia.

Vienna, Sept. 24. It is stated on authority of the United States Legation here, that there is no foundation for the rumor which has prevailed that the Austrian Government has proposed to join with that of France for the purpose of mediating between Spain and the United States on the Cuban question.

Paris, Sept. 24. Pere Hyacinthe has left his convent and gone to the home of his parents, where he will await the decision of the Council.

DOMESTIC.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 24. A most melancholy accident occurred on the Canada shore of the Niagara river in the vicinity of the falls at about noon to-day. A party consisting of one gentleman and four ladies, all belonging in Providence, R. I., stopped over here while on their way home from Buffalo, and after viewing the sights on this side crossed over to the Canada side. While their carriage was passing the curve opposite the precipice in front of the Clifton House, the horses became unmanageable, and as it was evident they would go over the bank, the driver and Mr. Tillinghast, the Providence gentleman, jumped off the seat and escaped with slight injury. The horses and carriage, together with the four ladies, went down the bank, a distance of some fifty feet. Mrs. Mahala Smith, one of the party, was horribly mangled and instantly killed, and Mrs. Mary Ann Ballou was so dangerously injured that she cannot possibly recover. Mrs. Tillinghast and a Mrs. Fisher were badly bruised, but their wounds are not dangerous.

The Welch Fasting Girl.—The London Times has an account of the Welsh fasting girl, written by Dr. Robert Fowler, District Medical Officer of the East London Union, who recently visited her. He says the child, who is thirteen years of age and very pretty, was lying in bed decorated as a bride, having around her head a wreath of flowers. Her face was plump, and her cheeks and lips of a beautiful rosy color. Her eyes were bright and sparkling. There was that restless movement and frequent looking out of the corners of the eyes so characteristic of simulated disease. Her parents positively declared that, save a fortnightly moistening of her lips with cold water, the child had neither ate nor drank anything for the last twenty-three months. Her mental faculties and special senses are perfectly healthy. The doctor's conclusions in regard to the case are as follows:

"The whole case is in fact one of simulative hysteria in a young girl having the propensity to deceive very strongly developed. Therewith may be probably associated the power or habit of prolonged fasting. The only apparent difficulty about the case is the means of the obtainment of food. I am informed that the parents are very respectable people, and have no particular pecuniary need above the class to which they belong. The most suspicious evidence of their collusion is the circumstances of their making the patient a complete show-child, receiving money and presents from the hundreds of visitors to the farm.

From my observation and examination of the girl, from my acquaintance with analogous cases, and from my long experience as a public medical officer of various forms of malingering, I am inclined to believe that Sarah Jacob in reality deceives her own parents. The construction of the bed and the surrounding old Welsh cupboards and drawers in the room are all favorable to the concealment of food. The cunning stratagems and deceptions sometimes practiced by young girls afflicted with this form of hysteria are well known to medical men, though not so generally credited by non-professionals. I can, therefore, quite understand these poor simple parents being easily deceived by their own child, the more especially as in their ignorance they seem to implicitly believe that there is a miracle and something superhuman in the case. Admitted into a London Hospital, or into the Carmarthenshire Infirmary, this poor child would, doubtless, be quickly relieved from a malady which in a year or so may not only become chronic, but also be the forerunner of some physical or some more severe form of mental disease."

Gen. Prim and the Spanish Republicans.—A Washington dispatch says that letters received there from Spanish Republicans at Madrid state that Gen. Prim is doing all he can to encourage feelings of hostility toward the United States, because he thinks in this way he will be able to get a foreign prince placed upon the throne. The Republicans are said to be willing to accept Cuban independence, and Prim hopes by talking of war with the United States to consolidate the people in favor of prosecuting the war against Cuba, and also against all thoughts of Republicanism or a Republican government.

Notices.

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

Whereas, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

Whereas, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

John Couch, New Hampshire; Miles Grant, Massachusetts; S. G. Mathewson, Vermont; Joshua V. Himes, Michigan; Wm. Sheldon, Wisconsin; O. R. Fassett, Minnesota; John Porter, Canada, National Conference Committee.

Notice.

The New Hampshire Mission Tent will be pitched in Dover, N. H., to commence meetings Oct. 2nd, 1869. Brethren D. M. Leavitt, J. G. Hook, and other able and faithful laborers, are expected to preach the word. By the Brethren.

Quarterly Conference.

The Church Quarterly Conference of South Danville will commence Oct. 9th (evening), and continue onward as the interest may demand. Come to this feast, all who can. D. Cogswell.

Sr. E. S. Jennings.

Tent Meeting at Ipswich, Mass.

The Mass. Mission Tent will be pitched near the Depot in Ipswich, Friday, Oct. 1st, 1869, when a protracted meeting will commence and continue over the two following Sundays, and through the week between. We intend, the Lord will, to have meetings after the first Sunday afternoons and evenings daily. We hope our brethren and friends from Newburyport, Haverhill, Salem, Lynn, and other places will come, and, if you can, bring tents and stay through the meeting. It is a new place for our Bible doctrine to be preached, and we want good done. Bro. A. Ross and other preachers will be with us. E. Burnham.

L. Boutell.

Conference.

The Lord will, there will be a conference at Piermont, N. H., Clay meeting-house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brethren T. W. Piper, N. Wheeler, and others are expected to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the salvation of souls. For the brethren. Wm. H. Shaw.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Wyoming, at Brand's Iron Works, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 6th, at two o'clock P. M. This place needs our help. Let us come up to this meeting in full numbers, and in the fullness of Christ. At Scituate, the tide of our joy rose high. At Wyoming let it rise higher. At Scituate we had a good attendance of preachers. At Wyoming let us have preachers, and delegates from churches also. Let no church fail to send a delegate. If he is poor, pay his expenses, and thus bless him and yourselves too, and the conference besides. Attend to this at once. Shall we have one more general rally for God? Let Oct. 6th answer. I am resolved to be there at all costs.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Notice.

The annual session of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held, by invitation of the New Haven church, at their chapel, to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, 1869. It is very necessary that all churches should appoint delegates to attend this session, and that all preachers should make an effort to be present. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, and whatever business of importance may be before the conference will be attended to. The first business session will be Thursday P. M. Preaching Wednesday evening, at half past seven o'clock.

L. F. Moore, Secretary.

Notice.

A quarterly conference will be held in Bristol, Me., Newharbor meeting-house, to commence on Thursday, 5 P. M., Oct. 7th, and hold over Sunday. Brn. and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. We hope the ministers will come to this new field of labor. There will be homes for all who will come. S. K. Partridge.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. Preble.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the Branch Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 21st, to continue over the following Sabbath. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord. There are homes for all who will come.

S. K. Partridge.

One pillow, three comfortables, two shawls, two handkerchiefs, two veils, two sacks, one umbrella, one parasol, one fan, one pair of spectacles and case, three pairs of gloves, and a lot of odd ones, one Social Hymns, one New Testament, gentleman's gown; one letter, addressed to Mrs. Ira M. Colby.

Those sending for articles please describe, and address me at New Durham, N. H. J. G. Smith.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.

Remarks. Cattle.—The cattle market this week is full to overflowing. From all sections the supply came in bountifully. We find, including both this and Cambridge Market, between 4800 and 4900 head, which is from 1200 to 1500 head more than really needed. There were in the above receipts some 350 head of store cattle. The balance must go into the hands of butchers at some price. From our best calculation, the bulk of the cattle were sold $1 per cwt. lower. Some lots of very choice steers commanded $13.00 to $13.25 per cwt., and a few steers were sold at $13.50 per cwt. From common to medium grades was where the change was felt; and at the close butchers bought cattle at almost their own figures, paying but little regard to the dealers' tender feelings.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts, 2964. 1800 head were Western, commissioned to Brighton butchers, and over one half of the Eastern were brought in by G. W. Hollis of Stoughton.

Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 50 to 85 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

Remarks. Cattle.—About one half as many cattle from the Northern States as arrived last week. With less cattle, and favorable weather for the beef market, sales were made with fair prospects and at ½ cent per lb. better prices than paid last week. There were some Northern left over from last week; after taking them to Brighton and disposing of them, had them pastured in the vicinity until to-day, with better prospects.

Sheep and Lambs.—The sheep market has not met with much change since last week. Poor sheep seem to be the order of the day. Not that they are wanted, but find their way to market and change hands at low figures; and it would pay full as well for the farmers to keep them back in the pastures, until we can find some flesh. Good lots sell quick, at best prices.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

9. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

10. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 5 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

THE BLESSED STORY.

I love the blessed story,
So old and yet so new,
Of Jesus and the glory
Purchased for me and you;
How he left his home in heaven,
His Father's bright abode,
And the glory he had with him
Before the world was made;

And in this world of sorrow
Wandered lone and sad,
Often without a shelter,
Or where to lay his head;
Scorned by the unbelieving,
Rejected by his own;
Few heeded the wise teachings
Of the just and holy One.

And yet, in works of mercy
A glorious life he led,
While earth's suffering children
Pour blessings on his head.
A few fond hearts clung to him,
And shared his heart's pure love;
By general ministrations
Their deep affection prove.

And when his work was ended,
His earthly mission done,
They nailed him to the shameful cross—
God's precious, holy Son!
Oh earth! though blood of martyrs
Hath oft been drunk by thee,
Never such precious drops as dyed
Thy brow, oh Calvary!

But, oh! that blessed morning,
When from death's dark domain,
Bursting the chains that bound him
He rose to life again;
And to heaven ascending,
Upon his Father's throne,
He offers free salvation
Till he again shall come,—

Come the great work to finish,
Which he on earth began,
Destroy the works of Satan,
Finish redemption's plan:
No more the cruel scourging,
Or garment dyed in gore;
But he shall reign a conquering king
O'er earth forevermore.

BIBLE vs. THEORIES.—No. 2.

Every imperfect brick or stone, every unsound timber, that is put into the building when constructed, will only weaken it eventually: so every passage of Scripture, inappropriately applied to sustain a theory, will only tend to subvert and prove the ruin of that theory, when taken away and put in its proper place. It is a brick or stone out of the wall, a timber taken out of the frame, a brace gone from the structure.

Take for an illustration Isa. 9: 13;—"Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate; and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it." Now if any writer should be so unwise as to apply that scripture to any time yet future, in support of some particular view or theory, because "day of the Lord" is found in it, he would only weaken his own position with every good Bible student; for every such one would know at once (from or by vers. 17–22 of chapter 12, and vers. 4–6, 16–25 of chapter 14, when collated with the scriptures referring to the captivity, and the fall of Babylon by the Medes and Persians under Cyrus), that Isa. 13: 9 had its fulfillment then and there; and the Lord God, who hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets, never fulfills the same specific prophecy twice; consequently the theorist would lose his brick, leave a hole in the wall, and find his plan defective.

Another very good sample of theory in place of Bible is found in Isa. 17: 12, 13;—"Woe to the multitude of many people, which make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of mighty waters. The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters; but God shall rebuke them, and they shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like a rolling thing [or thistle-down] before the whirlwind."

This scripture is quoted, not unfrequently, to prove the destruction of nations at the coming of Christ. We do not propose the discussion of that question here, whether true or false; but the point in issue is, does that scripture support such a theory? If the prophecy was made and the scripture given with any special reference to the closing up of Gentile times, then such quotation and application is legitimate and correct; the premise is sustained and the position proven. But the prophet was speaking with special reference to those nations referred to in Ex. 23; Deut. 2; Judg. 11; 2 Chron. 26 and 27; Jer. 9: 25, 26; 12: 14, 15; 25: 15–33; 47; and 48; of which the last verse reads thus—"Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the Lord. Thus far is the judgment of Moab"; chap. 49 entire, ver. 39 reading thus—"But it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the Lord." Finally, in chaps. 50 and 51 is given the closing scene of that which Isaiah, the son of Amos, began to see and enunciate in chap. 13, but which the prophet Jeremiah more particularly describes in his twenty-fifth chapter, where it was foretold that the king of Sheshach should be the last one, in the catalogue of nations given, to drink of the wine of his fury; and if you carefully and patiently consult your Bible and examine the scriptures referred to in the order given, you will find that those nations did drink in the order named by the prophet. Then compare vers. 33–35 with the two members of the sentence in verse 41 of chap. 51, and you will also find that the king of Sheshach did drink after the others; for Sheshach and Babylon are synonymous—"How is Sheshach taken! and how is the praise of the whole earth surprised! how is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations." The Lord began to bring evil upon the city called by his name (Jerusalem) when the incipient steps to "the captivity" began. See Jer. 25: 1–11. And then, as it was in Egypt, so in the land of the Chaldees—retribution! See Jer. 25: 12–14.

Thus by a critical examination of the prophetic Scriptures, and a careful comparison with the historic record, both sacred and profane, we find that Isa. [illegible] was literally fulfilled some centuries prior to the first advent. The subjoined passages were also fulfilled in the accomplishment of the foregoing. Isa. 13: 10, 13, 14;—"For the stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof, shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger. And it shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up; they shall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land." And ver. 17 proves it—"Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver; and as for gold, they shall not delight in it."

The question may be asked, Did the stars withhold their light, and were the sun and moon darkened literally? I answer, no. How, then, can we tell whether similar language has a literal meaning or not in Matt. 24: 29; Rev. 6: 12–14, and other places? I answer, the context and accompanying circumstances can alone and only determine. In Isa. 13, the language is highly figurative, and drawn from customs prevailing among those Gentile nations, concerning whom the prophet spoke.

Whoever, therefore, quotes and applies these and parallel fulfilled scriptures to the future, in support of a theory, does it to the immense injury of a good cause injudiciously handled, and also weakens his own position, besides the incalculable mischief done by destroying confidence in unfulfilled prophecy in the minds of those who have been misled by such wrong applications of scripture. This is one of the fruitful sources of skepticism and infidelity, in our country and in others, in reference to the Bible.

May the Lord aid us in our researches after truth, and enable us to rightly divide the word of truth, and help us to give to each a portion of truth in due season, and also save us from changing that truth into a fallacy.

"THINGS NEW AND OLD,"

IN TESTIMONY FOR THE SAVIOR'S SECOND COMING.

"O that thou wouldest rend the heavens; that thou wouldest come down; that the . . . nations may tremble at thy presence. When thou didst terrible things we looked not for, thou camest down. . . For since the beginning of the world, men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear; neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."—ISA. 64: 1–4; 1 COR. 2: 9–16.

In this passage we find the hope and prayer of God's people, with a reason for cherishing the hope and urging the prayer.

I. The prayer is inspired by the hope that God would bow the heavens and come down. In the New Testament this takes the form of "the blessed hope, and the appearing of the glory of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus 2: 11–14. It is not the Lord's coming in the way of the child born, and son given in the form of a servant; but the glorious appearing the second time unto salvation.

II. The illustration of this coming is found in the fact, that when God had done wonderful things in righteousness (Ps. 65: 5; 72: 18), he had come down. He had done "terrible things that they looked not for"—at their coming out from Egypt, and at Sinai, and the passage of the Jordan.

The grand stages in their enlightenment and exaltation as the people of God, were not the result of human but divine endeavors. Thus the Psalmist sang, "Let God arise; let his enemies be scattered; let them that hate him flee before him. As smoke is driven away, so drive them away; but let the righteous rejoice, . . . for he that is our God is the God of salvation." Ps. 68: 1–20. (The word is plural in Hebrew.) God had interposed often for their deliverance. Now in view of their prevailing foes, their hope centered in God's further intervention for their ultimate deliverance.

III. The reason for the Lord's coming down again here urged is, that the good things provided for his waiting people transcend all that eye hath seen, or ear heard, or the heart imagined; and hence these good things to come are altogether above all human achievement.

The prophet prayed and waited only on God, for his expectation was from him. He saw that iniquity would abound; that their holy and beautiful house would be burned with fire, and all their pleasant things would be laid waste; and hence there was no trust in any arm of flesh, nor any ground of hope save that God would come down for their deliverance. All human idea and agency was to his view utterly below the mighty achievement. The great Author must be the finisher of our faith; for "salvation is of the Lord." Hence, he must come down to accomplish the expectation of his waiting people.

Now we see that Babylon and the beast of prophetic vision, death on the pale horse, and the old dragon, the devil, fill the horizon, and overshadow our age with the darkness and shadow of death. Thus our hope is the prophet's hope; our prayer is the inspired prayer,—"O that thou wouldest come down!"

The promised salvation demands the Savior. The deliverance demands that the Deliverer shall come to Zion. "The restitution of all things spoken" requires the Restorer's return. Such is the relation that Christ's coming the second time bears to the hopes and prayers of God's people in every age. Amen.

Both Testaments concur in placing this coming down at the close of "the times of the Gentiles." Dan. 7: 14–18; Luke 21: 24; Rev. 11: 15–18. The Spirit that reveals God's loving will to end evil, and fill the world with blessing, is given to us that we may know the things graciously given us by God." 1 Cor. 2: 9–12.

The saints' standing in Christ, their titles of honor and the glories of their kingdom, their entire official and dispensational relation to the new covenant blessing, to be dispensed according to the oath and promise to Abraham, are given. The primal, personal seed is Christ; and they who believe and are baptized into his name, are also embraced as "the seed of Abraham and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3: 16, 29; 1 Cor. 12: 12; Rom. 8: 29; John 17: 20–24; Eph. 1 to 5, 32.

What, then, are the good things which so transcend all human sense or imagination? They pertain to the saints as the called, the chosen, and the faithful; who share with Christ the honors and the heirship of the kingdom in the world restored. "They shall be kings and priests unto God, and reign with him a thousand years." Nay, they are the blessed in Christ, who shall display the exceeding riches of God's grace in the ages to come. Eph. 2: 4–7. This seed has a glorious mission. Gen. 21: 18.

The more of this spirit, or mind of Christ, we drink in, the more we shall know of these deep things of God. Let us, then, be filled with this Spirit. It is the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him.

INTERESTING FROM ENGLAND.

Interesting intelligence is being received from England relative to the spread of the truth on the doctrine of no eternal life out of Christ. Men of talent and devotion are taking hold of the subject with a strong hand. The following, from the June number of the Rainbow, will be read with interest by all who love the blessed hope.—ED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE RAINBOW:—Sir: Permit me to express my great thankfulness that God has, after so many years of expectation, raised up advocates of the doctrine of life in Christ, who seem every way fitted to commend it to the attention of the public. It is now twenty-five years since Mr. Dobney published his work on "Future Punishment," and I accompanied him in testimony in my "Four Discourses on the Scripture Doctrine of Immortality." Those deliverances of an early manhood have cost us both the serious sacrifices of a lifetime in discredit, loss, and the suspicion of the orthodox churches—evils only of late years surmounted by either of us; but I believe that the gravest review of what we did aforetime, now that we are beginning to be reckoned among the elders, only leads us to the conclusion that a thousand, yes, ten thousand lifetimes of rejection and disrepute would have been a cheap price to pay for the honor of serving God and man in testimony against the errors which were at that time almost wholly unassailed among believers.

Allow me to express my admiration of the judgment, courage, and candor which mark the writings of some of your leading contributors. Mr. Maude's paper in your March number deserves to be reprinted and circulated by thousands. He seems never to have heard of the earlier battles fought in this cause, but I can assure him that the old soldiers look upon his mode of fighting almost with envy, wishing that in their youth they had known how to put the case as well as he puts it now. What, moreover, can be more complete, more judicial in tone, than Mr. Prebendary Constable's articles? I am sorry that necessity compels him to oppose our old friend, Mr. Henry Dunn; but although I differ from Mr. Dunn, let me mention a good deed of his, which I shall never cease to remember. At the very outset of my career, when a savage and deceitful article in the Eclectic was put forth in attempt to stifle both me and my then recently published book on "Life in Christ," Mr. Dunn, at his own expense, printed a long reply to this article, and had it stitched into every number of the following Eclectic, with signally good effect. And whatever we may think of his doctrines now, this has been a sample of the man in real life all through.

We have seen some courageous avowals of conviction during the last few years Mr. Minton has shown an example of all-sacrificing honesty, which is highly inspiriting and exemplary, quite apart from its bearing on this immediate controversy. During the next few years the public will be startled with other unexpected confessions of belief. Some of the very foremost men among the Congregationalists, the best scholars, the "chief priests" of that sect, will, I doubt not, before long, edify the public with their candid expressions of faith in these much abused doctrines. It is my firm belief that the old doctrine is losing its hold on nearly all the best minds, and that many are in that transition state in which any fine morning may witness their open avowal of sympathy with the truth. What we need, and must pray for, is more "boldness." For my own part, I purpose to deliver a series of discourses on the Theology of our Missionary Societies, during the present month, of which, if agreeable, I will send one to the Rainbow for July, on "The hindrance to belief in the gospel, both at home and abroad, caused by the doctrine of the endless misery of the idolatrous nations of past and present times." Let all who have been favored to learn the truth, in God's gift of eternal life, now work at its promulgation with a will, and we may venture to predict a material alteration of public opinion during the next ten years. I feel all Mr. Constable's persuasion that Universalism cannot stand in a fair and vigorous conflict with the doctrines to which you have addicted yourself; and that not even Mr. Jukes' fascinating mysticism will enable him to make head against the truth.

The controversy is narrowing itself by degrees and becoming concentrated around its real centres. The question cannot be evaded much longer, whether the absolute rule of interpretation for all public documents is not—that the plain unvarnished sense of the general current of its expressions on any topic shall be taken as the ruling sense; so that all real or imagined exceptions to that sense, founded on interpretation of isolated passages, must give way before the meaning deduced from the literal interpretation of the words chiefly employed. It is by the application of this rule that we deduce from Scripture the doctrine of the deity of Christ, of the atonement effected by his death, of justification by faith, of the person and work of the Holy Spirit, and indeed all other doctrines generally accounted "orthodox." In dealing with these topics, we steadfastly resist the attempt to form doctrines, or articles of faith, on the apparent or possible meanings of single expressions, if their meanings contradict the plain sense of the general testimony. A Unitarian might enlarge till doomsday, on the force of the statement that "the Son of man knew not the hour" of his second advent, but we should not, I trust, for a moment, be turned aside from the general current of testimonies which teach that Christ was an incarnation of the eternal logos of God. It is this principle which we seek to apply to the language of Scripture, on life and death; and orthodoxy on this question acts on the worst principles of heterodoxy; on such principles indeed, that you might undertake thereby, if leave be given, to apply them to overthrow the whole structure of christianity.

We see what comes of departing from this rule, by observing the hermeneutical operations of the two opposed schools of Orthodoxy and Universalism. Allow Universalism to teach, with Mr. Jukes, that death, destruction, perishing, being slain, being killed, are forms of speech to denote a moral and physical process of recreation, reformation, renewal, and then you will have little ground on which to deny to orthodoxy the gratification of making the very same words stand for endless sin and misery. Meantime, it is somewhat curious to see the same words, and those the words constantly used in Scripture to denote future punishment, by one school of interpreters made to stand for everlasting sin and torment, and by the other, the Universalist reformers, with equal unreason, made to stand for a process resulting in eternal purity and joy. But this is, in both cases, I think, to trifle with language and with Scripture, not to interpret it. Mr. Constable's argument in his pamphlet on "Punishment," is to me simply irresistible. The New Testament employs to signify future punishment the words which Plato uses to signify that the soul of man shall not die, perish, or be destroyed. The question is, Who is right; Plato or the New Testament? but there ought to be no question as to the meaning of the leading terms employed. The New Testament teaches that men shall die in hell; Plato, that they shall not; and the word in both cases must be taken in the plain sense of the Greek, which both employ.

As for the superficial criticism, to be found in Mr. Jukes' book, in Dr. McDonald's novels, and partially in Mr. Dunn's treatises, it appears to me to be precisely on a par with that of a son whose father had left in his will orders for the equal distribution of his property among all his children; adding the exception and proviso, that if any of them behaved in such a manner as, in the judgment of the executors, to render themselves by fraud, murder, or selfishness unworthy of participation, such children should be disinherited; and such an evil son (or in this case, we must, I suppose, say one of his better brethren, on his behalf,) should allege against the executors the general statement at the opening of the will, that all should share alike, imagining that the statement nullified the following proviso, instead of receiving a melancholy qualification from it. Mr. Jukes in quoting "God so loved the world," etc., to nullify the threat of everlasting destruction, or such fearful words as that "they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God," seems to me to be guilty of precisely similar perverseness. And when we consider the danger of deluding wicked men into vain hopes during their brief "to-day," one cannot but regard such a style of criticism with the gravest reprehension and the deepest sorrow. If ever a christian, honored and beloved, earned the affectionate but solemn rebuke of his brethren, I believe Mr. Jukes has earned it; for great talents and high religious repute only aggravate the critical sins of such interpreters as he; and a mystical turn of mind is not sufficient excuse for systematic wresting of the Scriptures. I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

EDWARD WHITE.

CHIDE MILDLY THE ERRING.

Chide mildly the erring!
Kind language endears;
Grief follows the sinful—
Add not to their tears.
Avoid with reproaches
Fresh pain to bestow;
The heart which is stricken
Needs never a blow.

Chide mildly the erring,
Jeer not at their fall;
If strength were but human,
How weakly were all!
What marvel that footsteps
Should wander astray,
When tempests so shadow
Life's wearisome way.

Chide mildly the erring!
Entreat them with care—
Their natures are mortal,
They need not despair;
We all have some frailty,
We all are unwise,
And the grace which redeems us
Must shine from the skies.

"LOVE NOT THE WORLD."

"And truly if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned."—HEB. 11: 15.

As the children of Israel literally might have left the journey and gone back into Egypt, had they been so disposed, and had their minds filled with Egypt; so we, that are pursuing the journey toward the heavenly country, if we have our minds filled with the vain things of this world, shall not only find opportunity to return, but shall find our progress to the kingdom greatly retarded, and ourselves, ere we are aware, of it, weighed down with the weights of the world. Yes, if we would advance in our journey, we must drop the world from our affections. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 15.

THE NAPOLEONIC POLICY.

Napoleon has resolved to pursue a wise and sensible policy—that of transferring the government of France into a "Free Empire," similar in many important particulars to that which the friends of the Imperial movement in the United States are seeking to build on the ruins of our present caucus system of Government. As far as Napoleon is concerned, we see in the adoption of such a liberal policy no "surrender" to the will of the mob, and no evidence of weakness or timidity on the part of the sagacious and prudent Emperor to whom France is indebted for her present status among the great powers of Europe. The concessions are only such as are needed to adapt the government to the improved and elevated condition of the French people. The rule of an autocratic sovereign has accomplished great things for France. It has brought order out of chaos, given peace and prosperity to the people, and crushed out the spirit of strife and discord that threatened the very existence of the nation; but with the improvements it has wrought and the good it has accomplished, the necessity for it has passed away. To use a familiar term, France is "reconstructed," and the stern rule of an irresponsible autocracy may safely give place to the milder and more convenient forms of constitutional government.

Those who imagine this course to have been adopted by Napoleon because of the recent election disturbances in Paris are mistaken. With the foresight of a true statesman, he has long since appreciated the fact that the necessity for just such a change in the form of his government as he now proposes was beginning to be felt throughout France, and he is fully prepared to meet and master the situation. Those who would write the epitaph of the Napoleonic dynasty in France need not be in a hurry to do so.—Imperialist.

CONVERSATION.

"For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ."—Phil. 3: 20.

This text may, perhaps, by some be considered as having a wider signification than merely referring to the words of our lips. Be this as it may, these latter are doubtless included.

Here in this world, we are but as "strangers" and "sojourners"; a "peculiar people"; "chosen out of the world." Our treasure is in heaven, our hearts will be there also. Yes, and our words will be there (if we speak at all), for the Great Teacher himself, who "spake as never man spake," and "cannot lie," has declared, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

How strange that many who profess to be the Lord's will talk about anything and everything, just as the world do. When you hear their incessant gabble, their "chit-chat" and "table-talk," you are compelled to think—what? that they are spiritually minded? nay, verily; but that they are "carnally minded," which is "death." For, if the words are vain and frivolous, according to the Savior's rule, the heart is so likewise.

But the darkest side of the picture is, that some who have stood high as examples of piety, who have for Christ's sake endured trials long and sore, who have "walked with God" as sanctified, holy souls, have seemed to turn again, like a "dog to his vomit, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." Alas! in the language of the weeping prophet—"How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed!" O, let me entreat all such to return to their "first love." "Remember, therefore, from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works"; lest the fearful woe that follows be pronounced upon you, viz., "I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent."—Rev. 2: 5.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

The Bible account of the power of prayer is the best we have, or can have.

Abraham's servant prays—Rebecca appears.

Jacob prays—the angel is conquered; Esau's revenge is changed to fraternal love.

Joseph prays—he is delivered from the prison of Egypt.

Moses prays—Amelek is discomfited; Israel triumphs.

Joshua prays—the sun stands still; victory is gained.

Hannah prays—the prophet Samuel is born.

David prays—Ahithophel goes out and hangs himself.

Asa prays—Israel gains a glorious victory.

Jehosophat prays—God turns away his anger and smiles.

Elijah prays—the little cloud appears; the rain descends upon the earth.

Elisha prays—the waters of the Jordan are divided; a child is restored to life.

Isaiah prays—one hundred and eighty and four thousand Assyrians are dead.

Hezekiah prays—the sun-dial is turned back; his life is prolonged

Mordecai prays—Haman is hanged;—Israel is free.

Nehemiah prays—the king's heart is softened in a minute.

Ezra prays—The walls of Jerusalem begin to rise.

The church prays—the Holy Ghost is poured out.

The church prays again—Peter is delivered by an angel.

Paul and Silas pray—the prison shakes—the doors open, every man's bands are loosed.

CHRIST'S PREACHING.

How did Christ preach the gospel? He forbade family quarrels. He warned his hearers against the evil practices of the Scribes and Pharisees. He bade no one dare to come up to the Temple to worship until he had paid his just debts. He not only enjoined upon them not to commit adultery, but told them what the first step in adultery was, that they might shun it. He talked to them about their families, and their lawsuits, and their habit of borrowing. He told them how they should accost people in the streets, when they should give away, and how they should give it; how they should keep fast-day. He told them just how religion bore upon their business and their associations. He bade them not to backbite or slander. He warned them against preachers, who came preaching false doctrine. Common things he discussed in common language, enlivening his discourse with pungent questioning, illustrating it by numerous stories, and garnishing it with vivid and beautiful pictures, drawn from summer fields and humble homes. Through it all sang the tender tone of love—pity for the suffering, strength for the weak, trust and comfort for the poor. No wonder the people were astonished at his doctrines, and when he came down from the mountain great multitudes followed him.—Church Organ.

— A hidden light soon becomes dim; and if it be entirely covered up, will expire for want of air. So it is with hidden religion. It must go out. There cannot be a Christian whose light in some aspect does not shine.

ABOUND IN LOVE.

How often we are exhorted to love one another. Our Lord says, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13: 34, 35.

Peter also uses these words: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." 1 Pet. 22.

Unless we have this spirit of love, we are deceiving ourselves, and are not what we profess to be. May the Lord help us to be filled with all the fruits of the Spirit, especially this last and noblest fruit, even love.

And may we walk in the strait and narrow way, and walk uprightly that our hearts may be established unblamable in holiness, before God even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints. "And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you." 1 Thess. 3: 12. And "ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another."

DO NOT GET DISCOURAGED.

Jesus says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." What a precious promise is this. How good it is to know that we have such a dear Savior, who is always ready to do for us, and to bear our burdens; and we know these promises are true, for we find them in God's holy word. How can we doubt them when temptations surround us, and we feel almost discouraged?

How good it is to know that we have One above all others, to whom we can carry all our cares and troubles, who will take the burden off, and make the cross lighter.

He will never leave us nor forsake us. All that come to him he will in no wise cast out. Let us draw near to the Lord with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, trusting wholly in him. He is able and willing to receive all that will come to him.

GREAT VIRTUES.—Do not be troubled because you have no great virtues. God made a million spires of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but grass. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a saint nor a hero.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

SLEEP.

The following sensible remarks on sleep are from the Aug. No. of "Good Health," a valuable monthly devoted to physical and mental culture, published at 21 Franklin Street, Boston:—

The immediate cause of sleep,—that is, the mechanism in the body by which it is produced,—was until recently quite misunderstood. It was formerly supposed that pressure on the brain afforded the explanation. Most writers on the subject have adopted this view, and some of the facts by which it is supported are very striking. Aploplexy is caused either from unnatural fulness of the vessels in the brain, or from the rupture of one of them. This affection is attended by drowsiness, or by complete unconsciousness, according to the degree of pressure thus exerted. From this fact it has been inferred that sleep is caused by accumulation of blood in the head; and in support of this view certain other facts have been advanced, such as, that full-blooded people are usually the best sleepers, and that the recumbent position which promotes the flow of blood to the brain, induces sleep.

It has now been determined, that so far from containing more blood than usual, the brain during sleep contains much less blood. We are told on very high authority, that "the blood is the life" of the body, and the tendency of modern physiology is to regard the blood as the origin of all force, and of all the functions in the system. Now when the circulation in the brain is diminished, it becomes deprived of the proper stimulus by which its state of activity is maintained; its vitality, in fact, becomes lowered, and it sinks into a state of quiesence. It now obtains rest, which during our waking hours it never has for a single instant. And it is doubtless during sleep that the waste it has previously undergone is chiefly repaired, and that the injuries inflicted upon it by over exertion are made good. For it must be borne in mind that every act of life, whether it be the motion of the hand which guides the pen in writing this sentence, or the action in the brain which conceives it, is accompanied by waste.

The proofs that sleep depends on a comparatively bloodless state of the brain, have been chiefly derived from experiments on the lower animals. And here we must at once meet an objection that has been raised on the score of cruelty, and that such proceedings are unjustifiable. First it must be remembered that the operative portions of all experiments of the kind are conducted while the animals are under the influence of chloroform, by the benign effects of which all pain is annihilated. Secondly, while we regard with abhorrence the unnecessary mutilation of any creature, we are as decidedly of opinion that it is proper and justifiable under certain circumstances. The close analogy in structure which in certain instances exists between man and the lower animals, has, by means of experiments on the latter, led to a greatly extended knowledge of the human functions. There has been so much lately of what we regard as a mistaken advocacy of the lower animals in this matter, that we have been tempted to digress thus much in order to state plainly our own convictions before the experiments to be now mentioned are brought before the reader.

Portions of the skull have been removed from living dogs, by experimentalists in England, Germany, in France, and in America. By this means the brain has been laid open to accurate observation. It has been determined that when the dog sleeps the exposed brain collapses, that it sinks with the skull; when, on the other hand, the animal is awake, and especially if excited, the exposed brain swells out, and sometimes even protrudes beyond the aperture in the skull.

These observations are supported by what may be easily verified, but in a less evident degree, in the human subject. There exists in the infant, for a considerable time after birth, at the top of the head, where the angles of the separate portions of which the skull is composed afterwards meet, a small space as yet unclosed by bone, and only covered by the proper membranes of the brain and the outside skin. When the infant is pleasurably excited, or when it screams from passion or from pain, this part may be observed to swell out, and when asleep it will be seen to sink below the level which it assumes in the tranquil state while he is awake.

It is certain that sleep, or at least an intermitted cessation of functional activity, is a necessity of life throughout nature. Every one is familiar with the mode in which many plants close their flowers at the approach of night; and some, as the trefoil, sleep with their leaflets folded together.

In perfect sleep there is no consciousness. It has been therefore called with truth the image of death. It is a temporary death, as far as concerns all action and motion which lie under the power of our will. But although the brain is at rest, the heart and lungs continue their tasks, because they are presided over by a department of the nervous system, which acts independently of the brain. The brain is the seat of consciousness, and from it all the nerves which originate and control voluntary motions more or less directly take their rise.

PRESERVING FRUIT.

CANNING.

The best method to preserve fruit with all its original flavor, is by hermetically sealing it from the air in cans prepared for the purpose; and these should be of glass or stone ware, as the acids of fruit act chemically on tin and other metals, often destroying the flavor of the fruit, and sometimes rendering it very unwholesome. Either self-sealing cans, or those which require wax, may be used successfully, but probably the former are better for those of little experience, and they are unquestionably more convenient. Of these, there are several claimants for public favor, all of them highly recommended, and doubtless all of them good.

THE SELECTION OF FRUIT.

This should be done with the greatest care. Some varieties cannot be preserved at all, unless canned when perfectly fresh, and success is more certain with all kinds if this particular is regarded. The fruit should be nearly or quite ripe, but not over-ripe, and any which bears signs of decay, must be carefully excluded.

COOKING THE FRUIT.

Nearly all varieties are better steamed than stewed or boiled, and this for three reasons: 1. The fruit is not so badly broken and mashed; 2. It retains more of its original flavor; and 3. Little or no water is required to be added, and it is therefore cooked in its own juice.

Almost every family has conveniences for steaming on a small scale, either with the common tin steamer, or the elevated platform, which can be used in a common kettle. To those who wish for more ample facilities, we would recommend the following cheap and simple method; Take a common wash-boiler, and have fitted into it a horizontal platform of sheet-iron, perforated freely with half-inch holes, so as to allow the free passage of steam. Have it mounted upon legs, so it will stand clear from the water, which should be only a few inches deep in the bottom of the boiler.

Have your fruit carefully picked over and placed in a clean tin or earthen dish, with a cover over it to prevent the condensed steam from dropping into it. No sugar is required with any kind of fruit. We are informed by one who is always successful in this business, that the flavor of the fruit is better preserved without sugar, and she never lost a can. If sugar must be used, it can be added when the cans are opened for the table.

Place your dish of fruit on the platform of your steamer, having sufficient water in the bottom, but not too much. Then cover the whole closely, and steam until thoroughly scalded. Some kinds of fruit require a longer time than others, and judgment must be exercised in regard to the matter. It should not be cooked so as to fall to pieces, but care should be taken to have it thoroughly scalded.

While the fruit is cooking the cans should be prepared. Have them thoroughly cleaned, and when ready to fill them place the can upon a folded towel, wet in cold water.

The fruit may now be poured into the cans. Peaches, pears, or other large fruit, may be tastily arranged in the cans with a fork, piece by piece, and the boiling juice added afterward to cover them. When the can is full, shake it, and incline it back and forth, so as to cause the air to rise to the top, if any should be among the fruit. Be sure that the can is full to the brim, and then screw on the cover, or if not a self-sealing can, put in the cork, and cover with melted sealing-wax. The following recipe makes good wax: One pound of rosin, two ounces of beeswax, one and a half ounces of mutton tallow. Melt and mix.

While placing the fruit in the cans, be careful to protect them from currents of air, as they are frequently broken by a simple draught of cold air.

All the above work should be performed expeditiously. The cans may then be set away to cool, and should be kept in a cool, dark place, and closely watched for a few days to see that the sealing is perfect. If the fruit shows signs of not being perfectly sealed, it should be at once taken out, scalded, and sealed again.

Tomatoes, berries, and small fruits, may be preserved in stone jugs. Observe the same rules in preparation, heating the jugs thoroughly before putting in the fruit. When filled, place one or two thicknesses of cloth over the mouth, and then put in the cork, covering the whole with wax.

By close attention to particulars, and the exercise of good judgment, success is almost certain.—Health Reformer.

THE GREATEST BLESSING.—There is no greater blessing for a man than to have acquired that healthy and happy instinct which leads him to take delight in his work for his work's sake; not slurring it over, not thinking how soon it will be done and got rid of, not troubling himself greatly about what men will say of it when it is done (I suspect the best kind of workers think as little of that as Newton did when he hesitated whether to publish his discoveries or not,) but putting his whole heart and mind into it, feeling that he is master of it, feeling that the thing that he has turned out, be it a legal argument, or a book, or a picture, or anything else, is conscientiously and honestly perfected to the best of his power.—Lord Stanley.

CHRIST KNOWS IT ALL.

Christ knows it all; deep in the heart's recesses
Lies many a grief concealed from human eyes,
But known to Him who sees each thought and purpose,
Who reads the heart and hears its bitter cries.

Christ knows it all; for he has borne our sorrows,
And been acquainted with all human woes;
He too has shared in all the ills we suffer,
And well the weakness of our nature knows.

Christ knows it all; though earthly friends may grieve us,
And we from mortal sight the wound conceal,
His heart is touched with tender pity for us,
With stronger love than friend or brother feels.

Christ knows it all; perchance by evil tempted,
Some dangerous path looks pleasant to our eyes;
But he is watching lest our feet should wander,
He watches, and the needed strength supplies.

Christ knows it all; in poverty and sickness,
He will be with us and his arm sustain;
How sweet to know that he can feel compassion,
For he has passed through weariness and pain.

Christ knows it all; O weeping, suffering pilgrim,
Fainting beneath some burden carried long,
Remember Jesus loves us, and be patient,
He'll bring us soon to sing redemption's song.

THE SACRIFICIAL OFFERING.

The separate existence of the Father and Son appears to be a scriptural doctrine; for, says the apostle (1 John 2: 22), "He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son." Their oneness consists in the perfect and harmonious blending of will, for the Son possessed a will distinctive from his Father's. John 6: 38; Luke 22: 42. "I came not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me"; "Nevertheless not my will, but thine be done," is the language of the Son himself.

His own will alone was susceptible to temptation, for God cannot be tempted with evil (James 1: 13); were not this the fact, he could not have accomplished his mission; and we are led to inquire, What kind of a sacrifice was required for sin, and how was it obtained?

We know no son or daughter of Adam except as identified by a material organism; and such is our composition and nature, that we can neither conceive nor have evidence of life, except in connection with materiality. The earth, the air, our meat and drink, all we see and hear, are evidence of this fact. Call to our aid the telescope, stretch our vision far among the heavenly orbs, and the evidence is of corresponding character.

Bring to our assistance revelation, and from the far distant unseen, angelic messengers of material form appear (Dan. 10: 6; Rev. 22: 8), while material bodies of Adamic origin to the distant unseen are borne. Gen. 5: 24; 2 Kings 2: 11, 12.

The more its pages are unfolded by the Spirit, the stronger the evidence that a glorified, sinless materiality is indispensable to the future. We now inquire the cause of a sacrifice for sin.

Go to the garden where sinless humanity, with all above, beneath and around pronounced good, proved its inability to perpetuate existence, by breaking a single prohibition through the weakness of the flesh, involving the guilty in sin and death. To see whether under any circumstances, man can recover himself, God now tries him without law; but the earth is filled with violence, and terminates with the flood. He is then tried under restraint of human authority: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed" (Gen. 9: 6), and wide-spread idolatry is the result.

Again he is given a perfect law, but of this they made a righteousness, stoning, beating, and shamefully entreating the servants sent to them, and at last killing the Son of God himself. Tried without law, by restraint of human authority, and at last aided by the daily ministering and offering of sacrifices under a perfect law, the failure of the flesh is established; and God looking down saw that there was no intercessor, therefore his arm brought salvation unto him. Isa. 59: 16.

The law will accept no sacrifice for sin, but the life of a victim which has rendered perfect obedience to it, after subjection to its demands. An angel, though sinless, will not suffice, for his nature is exalted above law. Heb. 2: 7. Nothing less than One made of a woman, made under the law (Gal. 4: 4, 5), taking part of flesh and blood (Heb. 2; 14), can redeem them that are under the law. Such was the Son of God. He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin (Heb. 4: 15), and learned obedience by the things he suffered. Heb. 5: 8. His experience of deprivation, temptation, and suffering, is evidence of his affiliation with the lost race, hence by maintaining spotless purity and holiness through his entire trial, he becomes an acceptable offering.

The question now arises, Did the sacrifice consist of the flesh of the Son of God, or of the life of his flesh? Let us look at the position that it was his body.

Some who take this position assume a distinction between Jesus and Christ; that Jesus was the body, and died; that Christ was a part of God, and did not die. Such a distinction is wholly unwarranted from the word of God, and, more than this, its falsity is clearly proved.

Paul preached to the Jews that this Jesus is Christ. Acts 17: 3; 18: 5. One Apollos, a converted Jew, mighty in the Scriptures, fervent in Spirit, mightily convinced the Jews that Jesus was Christ (Acts 18: 28); and if this testimony is insufficient, we can only rest the subject with the testimony of the beloved disciple (1 John 2: 22): "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?" And again it is written (1 Cor. 15: 3), that "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures."

The sacrifice made by Jesus Christ for sin was once and for ever (Heb. 10: 12); therefore, if the body of Jesus constitutes the sacrifice, then the legitimate result is, his body can not be raised from the dead without annulling the sacrifice, and destroying the doctrine of his personal coming the second time. This opens a door to all who wish to personate Christ.

Furthermore, to deny the resurrection of the identical body of Jesus Christ, is to assume the blasphemous position of laying the charge of sin at its door; for, to hold it in death, is to admit that the law has a just claim on it, because the law can hold only the guilty; and if the identical body of the Holy One is unworthy a resurrection, certainly none, of whom it is said—"All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," stand the slightest chance, and we are thus landed in the vagaries of mature Spiritism.

Again, to the position that the Christ part did not die. That he held no communication with his Father for three days, his own testimony is sufficient proof. John 20: 17. On the morning of his resurrection he says, "I am not yet ascended to my Father," having been forsaken by him for three days (Matt. 27: 46), that the terrible debt for sin might be paid. Hear his testimony after his ascension to his Father (Rev. 1: 18): "I am he that liveth and was dead." We here call to our aid those who assume that the Christ never died, and the Jesus was never raised from the dead.

If the Christ never died, who was it that declared from the throne of God, "I am he that liveth and was dead"? and if the Jesus was never raised from the dead, how could he have uttered those words? Here is a dilemma, which faith in the Scriptures alone can obviate. Only believe (Eph. 4: 9, 10) that Christ descended first into the lower parts of the earth (Ps. 16: 10),—died, and that he that descended is the same that ascended up far above all heavens, and all is plain. Eph. 1: 19–21.

We next inquire if the sacrifice consisted of the life of the flesh of the Son of God? As in the other case the sacrifice being once and forever, to again take the life so sacrificed would be to annul the sacrifice and leave the sinner without hope, as if it had never been made. The blood of Jesus was shed for the remission of sins (Matt. 26: 28); his flesh was given for the life of the world. John 6: 51.

As the sacrifice was for sin, and without shedding of blood there is no remission of sins (Heb. 9: 22), it is evident that his blood (life) constituted the sacrifice; for the blood is the life of the flesh (Gen. 9: 4), and it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul. Lev. 17: 11. Therefore Jesus took part of flesh and blood. Heb. 2: 14. At the decisive point had he refused to give his flesh, by saying, My will, instead of Thine (Luke 22: 42), he would have retained the blood-life and been wholly incapacitated to confer any other on the believer. To give the law his blood-life, preserve his flesh from corruption (Acts 26–32), to be quickened and raised by the Spirit of God (Rom. 8: 11), to die no more (Rom. 6: 9), is the process by which his flesh is given for the life of the world; for, if his flesh is suffered to see corruption, the first fruit (1 Cor. 15: 20) is nipped in the bud and blighted; his flesh would thus be given to death, instead of for life, and the fruits which should follow would be forever perished in the silence of death. 1 Cor. 15: 12–18.

It may be asked, Why was a body prepared for him? Heb. 10: 5. Because in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren (Heb. 2: 17), and the life required as a sacrifice can only be recognized in a body; therefore, the preservation of his body is all the security the believer has for future life; for we can conceive of no life, present or future, only as connected with material organism.

For confirmation of this point already noticed, we come to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Born of a woman, cradled in lowliness and humility, he increased in wisdom, stature, and in favor with God and man (Lk. 2: 52), surrounded like a mantle by the earnest of an ever-present Divinity, and an immeasurable fulness of the Spirit dwelling in him (John 3: 34), he passes the fiery ordeal, spotless and pure. As the time of sacrifice drew nigh, in the stillness of that lone night, sweating in his agony great drops of blood, he cries, O, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me. Matt. 26: 39. From thence roughly hurried to the rugged tree, where his intense and excruciating sufferings forced him to cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Mark 15: 34), he pours out his life-blood, and as he exclaims, "It is finished!" the sacrifice is offered, and remission for sins obtained.

Must we lose his material organism here? Hark! one Joseph begs his body; lays it in his own new tomb; a stone is rolled to the door; a Roman guard attend. Centuries before it was written (Ps. 16: 10), "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." All nature is in suspense. The veracity of Inspiration is at stake. The appointed hour makes haste, and bright angels roll the stone away, saying, "He is not here, he is risen." Matt. 28: 6.

Was he holy before? he is holy now. Had he flesh and bones before? he has them now. Had he the blood-life before? it is gone now, the grave was its receptacle, it has been sacrificed; but he can well afford to lose it; associated with it was death, but now animated by the Spirit in its stead, he can say—"Behold, I am alive forevermore."—Rev. 1: 13.

To the wondering disciples he appears after his resurrection, and shows them his hands and feet. "Handle me," he says, "and see that it is I myself." Luke 24: 39, 40; John 20: 25, 27. True, there are the prints of the nails, and mark of the spear, which, when doubting Thomas had handled, he exclaimed, "My Lord and my God!" John 20: 28. Would that many more who have not seen could believe, and receive the blessing.

Having now proved his identity beyond all doubt to every child of faith, he is taken up into heaven. Again bright angels (for aught we know the same present at his resurrection) announce that this same Jesus shall return from heaven (Acts 1: 9–11), and the one who saw him last (1 Cor. 15: 8) testifies that he will change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his glorious body (Phil. 3: 20, 21); which, together with the declaration, "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth" (Isa. 65: 17), "and there shall be no more curse" (Rev. 22: 3), because "As truly as the Lord lives, the whole earth shall be filled with his glory" (Num. 14: 31), establishes the fact that a glorified and sinless materiality is indispensable to the future, as corrupt materiality is to the present.

Are we accused of being materialistic in our views? We shrink not from the charge. The dealings of the Creator with his creatures in the present, together with the assurance from Inspiration for the world to come, furnish the basis of our hope. If, however, we are charged with denying the presence and operation of the Spirit of God in this world, or the world to come, we give our unqualified dissent to the charge.

Since the ascension of Christ to the right hand of his Father, the Holy Spirit has been the only medium through which his will has been revealed to man. To guide into all truth it was sent (John 16: 13), yet how few appreciate its value. In the beginning, the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters (Gen. 1: 2), and chaotic darkness became light; but for the new creature (Rev. 21: 5) is reserved the exhibition of the glory and power of God, before which flesh and blood in its purest state is palsied with fear (Matt. 17: 6), and, when the saints with bodies of flesh and bones, by resurrection (Ezek. 37: 1–14) like their Head shall be (Col. 1: 18, John 6: 39, 40, 44, 54, Rom. 8: 11), the Spirit's importance will be manifest through a countless host of spiritual bodies (1 Cor. 15: 44), to die no more.

Deny the resurrection of the body of Christ, and we at once drift into the mists of spiritualism. With this denial follows the denial of the personal coming of Christ; and however tenaciously those holding this position may cling to their bodies, the position will ultimately leave them in the grave, as they argue it did Jesus; for as is the first fruit, so will be the fruit that follows.

May we be taught of the Lord, and guided by his Spirit into an agreement with his word. Amen. O. D. Woodruff.

BIBLE vs. THEORIES.—No. 2.

Can the Bible settle anything? That is to say, Are there any Bible subjects, sometimes coming up in form of Bible questions, that can be solved by the Bible so as to be fixed, at rest, Biblically settled, be a finality? We think so, and we believe there are some Bible themes, commonly received among all professing christians as definitely settled. For instance, "Jesus died,"—died compassionately in behalf of poor sinners; and multitudes are ready and willing to say, "died for me," and glad to say so.

1. Because the Scriptures teach it explicitly, and "the Scripture cannot be broken."

2. They say it, because the witnesses chosen before of God testify to it, and they believe their testimony.

3. They say it, because his enemies testify to the same declarations, and agree in their testimony.

4. They say it, because they feel it true that as sinners they had need that some one should die on account of sin; for they have learned that sin is exceedingly malignant.

5. They say so because, in conformity with with the Scripture promise, "they have the witness in themselves"; or, if you please, they themselves have experimentally come to a knowledge of the previously testified-to truth, "that whosoever believeth into his name should receive remission of sins"; so that they, too, now testify to the same truth, having witnessed the truth of the Spirit's prophetic declaration in their own persons.

The same is primarily true of his burial, resurrection, and abode with mortal men after his resurrection, a resurrected immortal, dwelling among and eating and drinking with mortals for forty days, and teaching those mortals in things pertaining to the kingdom of God, expounding the Scriptures and enlarging their apprehension of them; true of his ascension, and of his personal manifestation subsequently to Paul when on his way to Damascus, and also to John at a still later period in Patmos.

The same is equally true of that glorious pentecostal outpouring of the promised Holy Spirit, of which every true child of God becomes a partaker here, and by which he or she is "sealed [as an heir of God, i. e., one of God's heirs, and a joint-heir of Christ], until the redemption of the purchased possession."

Then follows our confidence in the credibility of the witness, in relation to the official position of, and work assigned to, that risen, ascended, and (no-more-to-die, but ever-living and forevermore-to-be-a) living Redeemer; an high priest of good things to come, mediating the new covenant in the presence of God for us; ever ready to mediate a covenant between every repentant man and God the Father, by the blood of that accepted offering, Jesus crucified, the Lamb of God's providing; a provision so abounding, so extensive, so full, so overflowing, that none, however poor, however low, however miserable, however sinful, need stay away, for want of an offering, that will be at any time ever ready, and acceptable to God for sin. For Jesus died! and "he is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."

Come, then, to Jesus as your sin-offering, your propitiatory sacrifice, your high-priest, your mediator, that he may enable you to enter into covenant with God for the remission of all your sins; that the covenant blood of his Son may absolve you from all sin; that you may be made every whit whole. For he that is washed from his sins needeth not to be washed save his feet only, but is every whit clean. This is God's covenant by the blood of the cross, to take away our sins. And then, when you have done this, Jesus becomes your advocate with the Father, to make intercession for the saints, should we be so unfortunate as to defile our feet while walking by faith toward the celestial city. If we (believers in Christ) sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. Blessed be God! this is no theory. This is Bible vs. all Theories.

WHAT IS YOUR CREED?

To some men, it is of little interest or importance what they believe. The faith of the Protestant and the Catholic are equally good in their eyes; or, at least, if not exactly on a par for excellence, are admissable as creeds both worthy not only of respect but profession. They, poor silly souls! who take such a view of things, would find some satisfaction in the liberality of their thoughts, and pride themselves on large mindedness, while those who admit the truth, and will not countenance what is less or more than truth, are narrow-minded bigots, or something else fully as bad.

But out upon such latitudinarianism! out upon it, as a falsity, a sham. It is not real charity or settled truth that allows such diversion from the truth; it is rather human weakness and ignorance, combined with indifference, that will give license to any and every profession of faith. These, not being able to give a decided opinion on anything, say they are good; but truth and wisdom declare in the singular, "This is the way, walk ye in it."

Truth is in the book of God; and whatever the book countenances and enforces is worthy of all attention and acceptation. And as it is not in a man to say what is to be tolerated or looked upon as legal who has not learned and does not know the laws of the realm; so it is impossible for any man to say what particular profession or creed is specially truth, till the book of God has been hid in the secret of his mind, to spring forth as a fountain in right judgment in things of lasting interest.

Say not, oh reader, "It is of light importance what creed I adopt"; for it is most grave what you give countenance to. Say not, "It is a trivial thing what I embrace; for God will see the intent of my heart to please him." You will never get off in this way. What would you plead, supposing he should tell you that he sent messengers early and late to proclaim his word; and he caused that word to be written, that you should look therein for yourself, and believe, and receive, and judge righteous judgment.

He gave the word to be a lamp to your feet, and a light to your path, and a sun for your day, and a star for the world's night; and you did not trouble to study it with care, read it with diligence, receive it with meekness. A culpable indifference will flush your face, and burn in your temples; and a consciousness of shame, if not of guilt, will burden you.

But while the day of mercy lingers, ere it depart never more to return in its present aspect, read carefully the Holy Scriptures. Admit the everlasting truths written in them; though they burn with intensest fury in your mind, though they make ashes of your magnificent thoughts or splendid parts. Admit them, that they may be to you the germ of immortality, embodying as they do the glorious provision of the rich and gracious God.

Allow all to be truth—shame upon the thought! Let foolishness be written upon all our thoughts that are so indifferent to right! As well admit all roads, crooked or straight, to be straight, if we knew positively that only one could lay claim to straightness, and wish for praise for this short-sightedness, blindness, or wilfulness. As well say that there were many ways to the kingdom of God; and this is what it is saying, in fact.

There is only one truth, and He is Christ. He is filled with the Spirit of truth. The Bible is a book of utterances or words of that one Spirit, which is of God. If we give credit to that book; if we are lovers of God and Christ; if we are jealous for the honor of God; then we will not give all the palm for truthfulness, but search to see if what we hear is from the book, or of human origin.

There is only one way to be saved; that is by the knowledge of God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent. There is only one way of getting the saving knowledge. There are the words of the Savior for us to listen to and prize. With this we have the Spirit's voice from the world's foundation. All this we may emphatically declare as truth. We may trust to it. There is no rock comparable to it for solidity. There is no truth outside the book that it has not directly or indirectly suggested or enforced. It is the parent of all wisdom. But man is a liar—a very liar, a notable liar, a guilty liar, an intentional liar. Even the renewed man often lies unintentionally. He fathers a creed, and sets it rolling; but God's word is only worthy of notice.

Now, "He that hath ears to hear let him hear." "He that is of God heareth God's words." And God says to you, speaking of Christ, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." "Hear, and your souls shall live."

OUR DELIVERANCE.

The deliverance of Israel from Egyptian bondage was certainly typical of the final and glorious deliverance of the saints of God. Then the sorcerers and magicians of Egypt were permitted by the power of Satan, to deceive Pharaoh and his people by their enchantments.

So it is at the present time, just before the final triumph of the saints, we see the manifestation of spiritual deceptions, deceiving, if possible, the very elect.

One great object of the unclean spirits is, to gather the kings of the earth and the whole world to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Rev. 16: 14. The real object of Satan is to deceive mankind; and we believe he is very successful at the present time. But the announcement is made in the following verse,—"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth."

We are on the eve of deliverance, final and everlasting deliverance. O, how many have gone to sleep, overcharged with the cares of this life. They have forgotten the command of the blessed Master—"Watch."

In a few more days or months at most, the last struggle with the power and prince of the air, and the last trial and affliction will have passed forever, and deliverance come at last. Welcome the morning, the resurrection morning! Saints rising from their graves, the living righteous changed, and all caught away to meet their Lord in the air, forever beyond the grasp of Satan, beyond the sorrows of this sinful state, forever with the Lord. No need of the sun or of the moon, for the "Lamb is the light thereof."

Seek, my brother, seek to save your soul in this last hour of battle. All the forces of hell are arrayed against you, but keep awake! Remember, it is just before deliverance.

The mighty storm rages. The waves roll high. The wind whistles. All appears to be in danger. Ah, brother, hold fast! The port is just ahead. Remember, if you are faithful you will soon be delivered. J. E. Clark.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE TIMES.

Our days resemble the days of Sodom prior to her doom, and so give token of approximating judgment.

In the present lull in the history of the world, and the cessation of startling and exciting events, such as earthquakes, famines, tornadoes, ominous sights in the heavens, and national commotions, those of little faith among us are almost ready to say: "My Lord delayeth his coming." But our attention has been specially directed to evidence of a different nature and coming within the immediate sphere of our own observation. This testimony is as striking and conclusive as that of a bolder and more prominent character, and is quite as strong a proof of nearing judgment, if we will only weigh it properly. Notice.

1. The great wickedness of the world, exemplified more particularly in our own country. Christ has said (Matt. 24: 37:) "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be" in the period of his second coming. He also predicts (Luke 17: 28) that there will be a resemblance between the last times and the days of Sodom anterior to her doom.

Previous to the flood, "every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was only evil continually;" and surely the same may be said of the largest portion of the human race at the present day. How frequently are we startled at the bold, reckless, and even blasphemous expressions used in ordinary conversation! What an obliviousness of self-respect and disregard for the opinions of the more pious and prudent are evinced! The same is also evidence of the exceedingly feeble influence exerted by professing christians, and is to be accounted for in the want of consistency and faithfulness on the part of church people. We can remember when christians were regarded with respect and admiration; when the vicious and irreligious were constrained by the power of a holy walk and conversation to preserve at least the semblance of propriety, and were guarded in the manifestation of impiety even to those of kindred tastes and habits. But now they seem to "glory in their shame," and worldlings and christians are so commingled in social life that want of reverence for religion meets with but feeble rebuke. Indeed, it has become difficult to distinguish between them.

"The iniquity of Sodom was pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness in her sons and daughters, neither did she strengthen the hands of the poor and needy." Ezekiel 16: 49.

Who can deny the prevalence of these sins, in a very marked manner, in this highly favored land of luxury, extravagance, and self-indulgence? Greater luxury and extravagance may have at times distinguished certain classes and individuals, but when have these sins prevailed so widely, irrespective of position or means? Recklessness in expenditure seems to characterize all classes and conditions, and, as an inevitable consequence, the hands of the poor and the needy are not strengthened.

The daughters of Sodom are particularly mentioned, and as the privileges of women in this country are great, we would expect a corresponding exaltation of character and demeanor. Are these expectations realized?

Look at the public prints; look around in your own social circle; survey minutely your own locality; and see if there is not cause for deep humiliation and self-condemnation among women.

These less conspicuous things may be overlooked by those whose attention is not particularly directed to them, but the shocking and unprecedented crimes daily perpetrated are patent to all. Many of these crimes are unprecedented, and one has constant occasion to wonder at the depravity which has developed such fruits. The demoralizing effects of the war may partially account for this, but only in part, whilst the fact is clear. Nor is this wickedness confined to this country. We need only refer to the daily journals in corroboration of the truth of the assertion that vice and crime are fearfully on the increase.

2. Another evidence of the corrupt state of the times, is the worldliness of professing christians. The prediction is that many will be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," having "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." (2 Tim. 3: 4, 5.) Is it harsh or uncharitable to assert that this prophecy is emphatically fulfilled at this time? Whilst we would presume to judge no individual, we yet feel it to be true of the mass of professing christians; and the difficulty we experience in resisting the pernicious influences around us, causes us sadly to feel that these influences are insidiously destroying the piety of very, very many. "Iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold."

We remember when ministers did not hesitate to give an unqualified and unequivocal expression of opinion in regard to the amusements and pleasures of the world, and when those whose tastes had undergone a transformation by divine grace felt no reluctance in crucifying themselves unto the world, and had no doubts as to the necessity of entire renunciation of what was then considered worldly conformity. But now many ministers think a denunciation of such things gloomy asceticism; such sombre views of life render religion unpopular to the gay and pleasure-seeking generation of the present age; and so their skillful diplomacy recommends the expedient of a compromise,—meet the world half way,—let the church abandon some of her rigid requirements; widen the "strait and narrow way" into a "broad and easy path;" assure poor sinners that it is not "through much tribulation" that they must enter the kingdom,—and they will readily be lured by this captivating speech. All they ask is the world and heaven too! And the result is the introduction of many into the church who have but the "form of godliness," whose conduct is enfeebling its influence and bringing it into disrepute. Thus a close and harmonious alliance exists between the world and the church.

Some time ago a large proportion of the members of an orthodox church attended a very questionable place of amusement, and no notice was taken of it by the church, and no reproof came from the pastor. Meeting a member of another denomination, we asked him if he had participated in this amusement, not supposing for an instant that we should receive an affirmative reply. He made a very tart answer, admitted that he had, and justified his conduct. In very great sorrow (for we did not expect it of him,) we replied: "Twelve years ago not one professor of religion in this place would have been found there." He answered, in the same spirit, that the progress of enlightened sentiment quite displaced such narrow-minded and contracted views. We spoke of the disreputable character of persons connected with such scenes, and expressed our opinion that it was not right for christians to patronize iniquity. He thought it very uncharitable thus to judge, and that it was very wrong to undulge in such sweeping condemnations. We merely replied that he would find much stronger and severer ones in the Bible, that we had no ambition to be more charitable than God, and so closed the conversation. He had been most carefully trained, and the influence of a pious mother, both by precept and example, had ever been strenuously exerted against such ungodly pleasures.

A lady not long ago pettishly remarked, "that she wished her minister would not be always preaching about our sinfulness and our duties. That Sunday was a day of rest, and she did not wish to be disturbed and annoyed by such things all the time." Yes, truly, they have "itching ears," and if they do not hear the mere empty sentimentality that characterizes much of the preaching of the present day, they are dissatisfied. And, unfortunately, they have too many to minister to these vitiated tastes.

Not long since we heard a clergyman confess, from whom we expected better things, that solid gospel preaching failed to give satisfaction in his congregation; and he spoke as if he thought a minister could not do otherwise than fall in with the prevailing tastes of the day. Another, with whom we were conversing, and who does not believe in the premillenial coming of Christ, and, who, of course, finds the present condition of things perplexing and unaccountable, made some very strong statements in reference to the unequalled state of affairs in the church and the world. He saw only disintegration, crime, chaos in the tendencies of society. And though he could not solve the problem, he drew some dark pictures of the moral state of the church and the world.—Prophetic Times.

(To be concluded.)

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

66. The father of Salah was Arphaxad.—"And Arphaxad lived five and thirty years, and begat Salah." Gen. 11: 12.

The father of Salah was Cainan.—"Which was the Son of Salah, which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Arphaxad." Luke 3: 35, 36.

Some authors state that Cainan was the surname of Sala, and that the names should read thus: "The son of Heber which was the son of Salacainan, the son of Arphaxad." This is the more probable as the words the son are supplied by the translators in order to make it more intelligible to us, for the genealogies, as they stand in the Jewish records, are simply a series of names. Hence, the translator, who was unacquainted with the names, might easily make a division as above.

67. There were fourteen generations from Abraham to David.—"So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations." Matt. 1: 17.

There were but thirteen generations from Abraham to David.—"Abraham begat Isaac, Jacob, Judas, Phares, Esrom, Aram, Aminidab, Naason, Salmon, Booz, Obed, Jesse, David." [13]. Matt. 1: 2–6.

Generation is a term applied either to a regular descent from father to son, or to a number of years. It is in this latter sense Matthew makes use of the word generation: "So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations," etc., not fourteen regular successions of father and sons; for he proves he never meant any such thing by giving, in the same paragraph, the names of a number of persons, sufficient to constitute the chain of progenitors up to Abraham, but not sufficient to make fourteen progenitors between David and Abraham. The term generation, even at the present day, is applied to a number of years.

In the English Court of Chancery, it has varied from sixty to twenty years. Among the Jews it has also varied from one hundred to thirty years, so that the number of years constituting the term generation, has varied at different periods of the world. Matthew took his account from the Jewish records, and just copied what he found therein recorded. Hence, the number of years constituting fourteen generations, from Abraham to David, until the Babylonish captivity; and again from the latter event to the coming of Christ. Thus we find that so far from being any evidence of error in Matthew's statement, the error is in the mind of the skeptic. See Dr. Sleigh.

68. There were fourteen generations from the Babylonish captivity to Christ.—"And from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations." Matt. 1: 17.

There were but thirteen generations from the Babylonish captivity to Christ.—"And after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel, Zerobabel, Abiud, Eliakim, Azor, Sadoc, Achim, Eliud, Eleazur, Matthan, Jacob, Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus." [13.] Matt. 1: 12, 16.

This has been explained under the foregoing proposition. It is evident that Matthew's term generations, signifies a certain number of years which were recognized as generations, according to the Hebrew standard.—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

GRACE AT TABLE.

A correspondent requests our opinion respecting asking a blessing at table, a duty which he finds somewhat extensively neglected. In reply we would say, that the essential character of christianity is its spirituality as opposed to ceremonialism. It is the free worship of the heart, rather than enforced subjection to an outward yoke; the service of love instead of the service of law. The Old Testament abounds in carnal commandments, regulating with minute detail the whole routine of obedience; the New Testament seeks mainly to secure right inward character. It asks for no service that is not of choice; it accepts none which one would withhold if he dared.

Hence all tithing died with Judaism, leaving only the offerings of "the willing mind." Hence no prescribed modes of public worship. Hence no commands respecting family prayer. Christian duties are left resting less on absolute requirement than on their inherent fitness. Household worship is a christian duty not because exacted by Christ, but because every one whose heart is right Christward will wish to bring to the family altar his free-will offerings of penitence, gratitude, love, and trust.

So with asking a blessing at table. There is a fitness in it which the christian heart always recognizes. It is the grateful and devout acknowledgment of the only true source of good. It takes from the hand of the divine giver his gifts with thanksgiving. It helps to throw the charm of religion over the whole domestic life, and to bring its sanctifying influence down even amid our appetites, thus strengthening our high relationships with our heavenly Father, while descending into the low plane on which we move in common with the brutes around us. The following passages: John: 6: 11; Luke 24: 30; and Acts 27: 35, show the practice of Christ and Paul on certain occasions. This practice, there is reason to believe, was conformed to common pious usage. Rom. 14: 6; doubtless refers to the same usage. Here the apostle seems to say that both those who ate what had been offered to an idol, and those who, as a matter of scruple, refused it, alike showed by the thanks which preceded their meal, their equal recognition of God as the source of all good and all obligation. 1 Tim. 4: 3–4 probably relates to the same usage.

In this appropriate and beautiful duty, as well as in others of a similar character, let every christian father and mother feel it a privilege, even more than a duty, to say, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Watchman and Reflector.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 6, 1869.

☞ Take Notice!

☞ All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ Money Orders.

☞ Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

☞ THOMAS SMITH—Your money order received.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

CHICAGO.

We are again in this great and wicked city. The "Christian Mission Tent" is pitched on the same lot where we held our meetings last year, on the corner of W. Lake and May streets. It is near the centre of the city, surrounded by a quiet neighborhood. Our prospect is good. We began last evening, Sept. 27th. The tent was well filled, though no notice of the meeting had been given in the papers, as it was uncertain when we should be ready to begin.

We found Bro. Ramsey faithfully and actively engaged in the vineyard of our heavenly Master. He is ready for every good word and work. Sr. Ramsey has been quite out of health all summer, and is now confined to her bed. She is calmly trusting in the Lord.

The church in Chicago, with Bro. Ramsey, their faithful and esteemed pastor, have been untiring in their efforts to get the glad tidings before the people. The Lord has blest their efforts, and they feel encouraged to continue their labors. The "Christian Mission Tent" has been purchased by the Chicago church for missionary work in the city. It is now pitched for the first time.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

All nations are looking forward to the Pope's Ecumenical Council with much interest. It will be a very important gathering. Some new issues must result from its decisions. It is to commence on the eighth of next December. It is the first Ecumenical Council since the beginning of the Reformation, and is probably the last before the great judgment day of the Lord.

Ecumenical means "belonging to the whole inhabited world." All the bishops in the world are required to be present. The time was when such a council would have made kings and emperors tremble on their thrones; but that day is past. Yet the Ecumenical Council will exert an influence, that will be felt beyond the "seven hills." It is evident that Napoleon has concluded not to make any special move till after the Council has done its work. In the coming Council we may expect to witness the last decisions of the Papal power. It will be the last will and testament of the Roman woman. Her end is at hand. Her mene tekel is already written.

THE JEWS.

It has become an established fact that the Jews are giving up their belief in the personal coming of the Messiah, as held by that people for more than two thousand years. We know it has been believed that this would be the case just before the second coming of Christ; and that Jesus would not appear till after the Jews were ready to accept a false Messiah, coming in his own name, as their political restorer.

SPIRIT DWELLINGS.

Those at all acquainted with Spiritualism know that the spirits claim that they have beautiful farms, gardens, groves, fruits and flowers im what they call "the spirit," or "summer-land." But when these lying spirits, called "demons" in the Bible, are requested to describe the fruits, flowers, etc., in the "spirit-land," they inform us that these things exist only as "beautiful thoughts," and not as real, tangible objects.

In the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," of Aug. 28th, 1869, we find some questions put to the spirits, relative to these things, and the following answer returned:—

"If spirits desire beautiful grounds and dwellings, they come, we have told you repeatedly, with the desire for them. You have with them, unlike their possession upon earth, an entire absence of care and anxiety. The desire is the creative power upon the spiritual plane." "When you desire to visit any locality on the material plane, you can visit it in your mind. How much time does it take? Does it take any at all? So when you are in spirit, you can traverse space in no time."

Hence, according to the teaching of the spirits, the "spirit-land," with all its beautiful things, exists only as thoughts, or desires, just as we may now think of an Eden-like spot, when we see it with the mind's eye, but not as a real object. We very much prefer the real, tangible, beautiful new earth, promised by the Lord, rather than the ideal, visionary, nonentity described by the lying demons, who are endeavoring to seduce their followers from the blessed hope of the gospel.

THE INCREASE OF CRIME.

The increase of crime has become an alarming fact. The secular papers are continually referring to it; while some sleepy watchmen are crying "peace and safety," on the very brink of destruction. How vain the delusion that the world is growing better. If it were so, the Scriptures would be broken, for they declare the opposite. The facts are now so abundant to prove that dark crimes are rapidly increasing, we think he must be asleep or dreaming, who thinks the world is improving in its moral tone.

When speaking on this subject, and the political corruption of these times, the Philadelphia Ledger of Sept. 6th, says:

"What were once the posts of honor, in the Legislature and in the guardianship of the law, are now thought of only to be avoided by men who choose to preserve their reputations unsullied."

We can see no hope of reform. Until Jesus comes, wickedness will increase and abound more and more.

A California writer has well inquired, "What is the world coming to?" After learning the condition of things in one of our large cities—said to be the most moral of any of its size,—this same writer from California goes on to say:—

"But is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no remedy for the evil? Are the wives, daughters and children of respectability in this great emporium of literature, to be more unsafe on your public grounds, than are the maids of the Western plains, in wandering through the camps of savages?"

It is a sad picture; but where is the advantage of hiding the true state of things? Is it well to call evil good? to cry peace, when there is no peace? to call the seducer virtuous? the liar a man of truth? to defend the vile, and thus deceive the good? Will it please the Lord to pursue such a course? Nay, verily. We dare not do it in this perilous hour. Let every watchman sound an alarm.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Some of our brethren and sisters did nobly last year getting new subscribers for the Crisis. Bro. John G. Hook reported the largest number. He is the one referred to in the "Report" as having obtained eighty; but he got one hundred, in full. He now sends two more new subscribers, and says, "This is the beginning of my new column for another year—two hundred. Shall I succeed?" Who else will see how many he or she can get?

QUERIES.

BRO. GRANT:—In the Crisis of June 2nd is an article on "Materialism," which contains the following quotation from Prof. Huxley: "Matter and life are inseparably connected." This statement I conceive to be true in regard to this world; but has God a "material" form? or the angels? Christ says "God is a Spirit"; and again, "A Spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." Please reconcile these with Prof. Huxley's statement.

While I am writing, I would like to inquire in regard to Christ. Where was his divine nature, while he was under the power of death? Did he sleep in the grave, or did his divine nature ascend to heaven? It is said God is immortal, and cannot die.

AN INQUIRER.

We believe Prof. Huxley's statement is true in all cases. If our heavenly Father has not a material form, then he has no form; and what has no form, is not an intelligent being. Christ had a material form. Paul says of him, that he was "in the form of God." Phil. 2: 6. How could this statement be true if God had no form? Again, Paul says, when comparing Jesus with the Father, that he is "the express image of his person." Heb. 1: 3. How can this be true if the Father has no personal form? When Stephen was about to be stoned, the apostle says: "He being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God." How could this be true if God has no material form?

It is true we read that "God is a spirit." John 4: 24. So is each angel called a spirit. But the angels have material forms, resembling men. A being may be a spirit, have a material form, and not be made of dust, like man.

When Christ says in Luke 24: 39, "a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have," we do not understand him to say that a spirit, or an angel, has no form at all; but that he is not made of dust, or has not the nature of man. Christ took human nature. In Hebrew 2: 16, we read of Christ, "He took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham." If the angels had our nature, then they would be "flesh and bones." But because they have not our nature, it does not follow that they have no nature at all. The angels are spirits, but they have material organisms. We read of their visit to Lot in Sodom, and of his proposal to wash their feet, and that "he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat." Gen. 19: 3–4. No language can more clearly express the fact that angels are spirits; and that they have material organisms, resembling the human system in form. So God is a spirit, but he has a form. Man was not made in the "likeness" (Gen. 1: 26) of something that had no form at all. Such an idea is absurd. While God and the angels are spirits, they have material forms; but we have no revelation as to the nature of those forms; but we know that man was made of dust in the "likeness" of his Creator. This looks consistent, as the christians are adopted sons and daughters, and are to be made joint heirs with God's only begotten Son Jesus. Why should there not be a resemblance in form between the Father, his own dear Son, and those whom he has adopted?

2. We believe Christ slept in the grave three days and nights according to the Scriptures. Said Jesus in his last revelation: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for ever more." Rev. 1: 18. It is not proper to speak of the divine nature of Jesus as an entity, or being, that could live as such while he was dead; any more than it would be proper to speak of human nature as something that lives by itself when the man is dead. The simple Bible story reads "that Jesus died and rose again," and this Paul requires us to believe. 1 Thess. 4: 14. If only his physical organism died, then we have in him only a human sacrifice. It was Jesus Christ that died, and he was raised again by the Father. On this point the apostles are harmonious. We think no other view will harmonize the Scriptures or be consistent with facts and common sense. God did not die, but his Son did. We can see no room for doubt on this point, if we follow the Scriptures. Shall they be our standard?

WHERE ARE THEY?

BRO. GRANT:—Will you explain Matthew 27: 52, 53? Where are those that arose "and appeared unto many"?

SIMEON ROBY.

We cannot go beyond what is written. All we find on the subject is contained in the verses named, as follows:—"And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." There is no doubt but that "the holy city" refers to Jerusalem. In Matt. 4: 5, we read: "Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple." In Nehemiah we read:—"The rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem; the rest of the people also cast lots, to bring one often to dwell in Jerusalem, the holy city." Neh. 11: 1. "All the Levites in the holy city were two hundred fourscore and four." Neh. 11: 18.

All beyond this is mere conjecture. We must leave those raised after the resurrection of Christ, where the Bible leaves them. Some think those resurrected ones constituted the "first fruits" of the harvest—the wave sheaf, and were taken up by Jesus when he returned to the Father. This may be true.

PLANCHETTE'S BIOGRAPHY.

The above is the title of a new work by Sr. M. D. Wellcome, of 22 pp., giving a history of Planchette. We are pleased with the work, and commend it to our readers. It shows that Planchette is used by the demons as an instrument to introduce their diabolical teachings into thousands of families who would not go to an ordinary spiritual circle. As expressed by the Spiritualists, "It is a flank movement" to introduce their system everywhere. For sale at the Crisis office. Price, 10 cts. post paid; two copies, 15 cts.

"THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH."
By Henry Dana Ward.

A most eloquent, interesting, and profitable work. A history of the doctrine of the Millennium. Price 25 cts. By mail, 30 cts.

"ADVENTISM.—Its Relation to Theology."
By William Sheldon.

This considers the relation of Adventism to Theology, omitting the portion of the original work treating on prophecy. Price 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal Giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

ALTON BAY CAMP.

BRO. GRANT:—Being one of the first settlers, and having helped prepare for the first meeting, assisting in laying the corner-stone of that sanctuary, and having been in camp every year since at their annual gatherings, and from personal observation the past year, I deem it a privilege to report progress.

At first, the erection of wooden buildings was not contemplated. The place was found to be one of charming facilities for the meeting; no sooner than the seats were filled, the speaker found it easy to speak to them, and they found it as easy to hear. Beside this, there was a variety of attractions; pleasant excursions on the lake, with delightful scenery among the dottings of the islands. The meeting, from its infancy to childhood, and even on to manhood, has been favored of the Lord. This gives it strong attractions to the disciples of Jesus looking for his speedy return.

"This gospel of the kingdom" has been "preached here as a witness" to the nations attending. "Behold He cometh!" has been heard in this thrice sacred spot from year to year. Many have been cheered and their hearts made glad in listening to the living testimony coming from loving hearts, and a response, Amen, hallelujah, glory to God in the highest, the very trees bending and bowing assent.

The meetings have been growing rapidly, till it has got to be a great meeting. The last one the present year has seemed to be the best. Dear Camp Alton! many will recall thy scenes with sweet recollections,—the first religious impressions that you could not rid yourself of, till they resulted in your conversion to Christ, and you found a new song in your mouth, praising the Lord for deliverance. Memory will linger around that blissful oasis in the wilderness.

Many prayers have ascended in faith from this spot. Many answers also have been received, and truth has been magnified, and God glorified. Many tears of gratitude have fallen for the benefits and mercies bestowed. If time continues, more will be drawn there another year.

The first wooden building was devised and put up by the brethren at Lawrence, for their accommodations, also for meetings. This was so much preferred to cloth tents, or houses, that others soon followed the example, and buildings of all kinds and sizes have been going up from year to year, till it is hard to find a convenient spot upon which to locate.

The place is thickly inhabited camp week; tents and wood buildings in every direction; but tents must give place to wood; the mania increases; the rainy weather shows the preference, and many have decided to build another year. But there is danger of extravagance, even in this direction; as in all worldly operations, the last must be the best. Now it is to be hoped that convenience and economy will be strictly adhered to in this village—Camp Alton. Do not let it be the motto of each that builds to outdo his neighbor, but remember the near approach of coming redemption, and let every act square in harmony with that faith.

Campmeetings are being more fully attended among us. I do hope and pray they may not grow more popular at the expense of the truth adapted to these times. How important that we give the key-note a sharper pitch. I see brethren at campmeetings who at home, where reproach has to be borne among the few for Christ and his coming, hardly ever are seen at their post; but they rush to campmeeting. How is it? I would not have them stay from camp, but let them first show their faith at home, where most needed. Stand up there for Jesus, then you would feel better in camp. O, the danger of being deceived and of being left out when the kingdom comes!

The help of the Lord is needed, and there is an ample supply with the great Head of the church. Be faithful to him, without shame, and the grace is ours. L. BOUTELL.

LISTEN.

"He that is of God heareth God's words."—JOHN 8: 47.

Those who will not hear God's words have great reason to doubt if they are of God, or going to God. He that is of God is not a picker and chooser from God's word; but he hears God's words collectively, whether his thoughts are opposed or no; and he hears them to the belief of them, and the entire rejection of all his own that do not accord therewith. There are many who have heard God's words on the mortality of man by birth, and the immortality that is provided in Jesus, the Nazarene. But how have they heard? How, my soul, hast thou heard? Hast thou heard and received? Have they led thee to spurn heathen dreams of natural immortality, and to embrace the truth of immortality only by Jesus Christ? Will the reader think on the verse that heads this article, and read 1 John 5: 11–13? Learn the words of God, and it will compel you to bury many a brilliant thought of flesh, for the real beauty of truth. Lord, incline the reader to hear Thy words. Amen. W. KELLAWAY.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—The following is from the Rochester Chronicle of Friday, Sept. 24th, 1869:—

THE SPIRIT OF PROPHECY.

Some weeks ago there appeared in the Post the following paragraph, relating to a singular rock which had been discovered at Jacksonville, Alabama:

"There is a rock in Jacksonville, discovered two years ago, that has plain ciphers of 1870 in large figures upon its face, and the ciphers are evidently formed there by the same hand that formed the rock; for it is plain that it is no device of man. And, equally mysterious, the discoverer was directed to it by a voice from a person that he could not see, and the voice said the ciphers were a living witness of a new era in the world's history, and the terrible day spoken of, soon to come."

This announcement excited the curiosity of a lady residing at Northville, in this state, and she addressed a note of inquiry to the postmaster at Jacksonville. In due time she received a reply, and with it a statement from the discoverer himself. These papers are herewith given in substance, but will perhaps be said by incredulous persons to shed more light upon the characters of the writers than upon the characters on the rock. The postmaster avers that there was such a stone as described found in that place, and that it really bears the Arabic characters 1870, "which have the appearance of growing with the rock, or rather being worn by time, and have evidently not been cut by a tool." Of the discoverer, William C. Land, he writes: "He is an old citizen of the county, and a regular member in the M. E. church south, in good standing," and adds that he made many predictions during the war, which he (Land) says have been fulfilled to the letter.

The following is Mr. Land's account of the matter.

"In the year 1864, in the tenth month, I was called by a voice, and the voice called me by name, and no one was near in bodily form, and I asked, in the name of the Lord, who called me. And the voice spoke both within me and without side in my ear, that it was Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and ordered me to make ready my house for he must needs come and dwell with me and also sup. I answered, 'thy will be done, O Lord.' Then he said that there was a work for me to do, and I would never be able to do it, yet it would be done through me. That this generation must be warned of the terrible day to come, the last judgment that would be upon earth, for there are no judgments in heaven, and all judgments must have and will be upon earth. And I was directed to build an altar to God in a green place and to prepare pen and ink, and from that until now I have not ceased to write, both day and night, to ministers both west and east, north and south, and also to Europe, warning them of the terrible day soon to come; that all had gone out of the way and none were found of the spirit of truth, who does not bear hate, for the Lord is love and his kingdom is love, and without him none can know forgiveness of sins; and I continued both day and night up to 1866. In the fourth month, when I was communing with God and was grieved to think how hard it was for mankind to believe the truth from the pen or mouth of man, the voices said that at my door, near my house, there was a rock that had the ciphers of 1870 upon its face, and I could show this rock and ciphers, and it should speak for itself to the hearts and consciences of mankind, and in this year, 1869, in the sixth month, I was directed to publish it in the paper here, and in all I have written over sixty hundred pages of large paper, to what is called ministerial talent, and not one response has come back to me as yet. This same voice has, or two voices rather, told me of what things are now, and what will shortly come, and as Christ said with his own lips, eighteen hundred years ago, he says now by the same word, watch and pray, for ye know not when the Lord doth come, for when he cometh with majesty and power of the Father, for he cometh in a manner in the twinkling of an eye, then will all mankind be judged; for there must needs be a new heaven and a new earth in (man's body) which righteousness shall dwell; then all who are permitted to remain, the few (of the great number) they ever will know the Lord as he is within themselves. None will have occasion after this terrible day to say, know ye the Lord; and blessed are they now that hold out faithful to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. Not many more days will I write now."

Besides the above, Bro. James E. Wells, of this place, made further inquiries, writing to a Baptist minister of that place. The following is a copy of the reply:—

"Jacksonville, Ala., July 20th, 1869.

JAS. E. WELLS, Esq., Rochester, N. Y.—My Dear Sir:—In reply to your note of the 11th inst., which came to hand a few days since, I have to say I have been delayed in calling upon Mr. Land to see the rock, etc., etc. I this morning, in company with others, looked at this rock about which public attention is being directed. It would weigh about twenty pounds. Its face is about ten or twelve inches, and there is dimly indented eighteen hundred and seventy. If this is intended for a date, it is equally obvious that they are natural and not artificial figures. This rock is in Mr. Land's shop, for he is by profession a jeweller, a member of the Methodist church of this place, and, so far as I know, in good standing as such. In reference to the manner in which Mr. Land was directed to this rock, he must speak for himself. I have asked him to write that out and give it to me, that I might send it to you herewith. Public opinion in matters of this kind is worth but little. Many believe the truth when too late. I will below give you a copy of the manner the figures appear to stand on the rock: 1870. I shall enclose herewith Mr. Land's statement.

Very respectfully your most obedient servant,

E. T. READ."

FROM MR. LAND.

"Jacksonville, Ala., July 2d, 1869.

In the year 1864, in the eighth month, I was called by a voice within and without, all around me, and called me by name, and I asked who it was Lord; he told me that it was Jesus Christ the Son of God the Father, and that I was called to a work that I could never do, yet through me the work must be done. I was directed to erect an altar in a place named, for he said he must needs come and dwell with me, and sup with me, and from that day till now the voice has not failed to speak within, and also outside in my ears; and the outside voice in great anger often; yet from that day of the abiding within of the Holy Spirit by Father and Son, I have ceased not to write the words that have come unto me to write. And these letters have been sent to New York, and all the principal cities in North America and Europe, and persons whom to send to were designated to me by name; as for instance, H. W. Beecher, and no response has ever come back. Now for fifty-eight months have I written according to the word. In February, 1857 [I think he intended sixty-seven], while seated at my fireside, and no mortal near, two voices came to me while I was dwelling upon the unwillingness of man to believe God by the voice of man. These voices told me to look out of my front door, and I would see a rock with the cyphers 1870 formed there by the hand that formed the rock, and show that to man, and that rock would speak, if men would not believe the word of God by men appointed of God in Christ Jesus the Son.

W. COLEMAN LAND.

P. S. I was and am directed to keep some copies of these letters that have been sent abroad, and have several hundred on hand, which I am plainly told to preserve and keep, as they will refer to a terrible day not many days after."

I have before me some twenty pages of Mr. Land's writing, which he sent to Bro. Wells. He is a ready writer, writes mostly on the apostasy of nominal Christianity, the love of God, and the coming of Christ. The following is a brief specimen:

"Christ's second coming is in majesty and power of the Father and Holy Spirit, and he will not only shake earth, but heaven also, and it will be the third and last dispensation of God's grace and mercy; but to the ungodly and the wicked it will be a day of judgment, such as never was or ever will be any more; for all jugdments must be on earth. There are no judgments in heaven to mar the everlasting happiness of the saints at rest. Jesus told the thief upon the cross, 'This day shalt thou be with me in paradise.' When the day hath come, there will be a new earth and a new heaven to possess by the faithful in Christ, in which righteousness shall dwell, for all will know the Lord as he is, in themselves, and the wicked will have ceased to trouble any more. And now to know the Lord is love, and his way and pathway is so easy, a wayfaring man or a fool need not err."

Though we have a more "sure word of prophecy," we do thank God that the stones are made to cry out to alarm this generation, who can only be startled from their slumbers by the roaring sea, the flaming wind, or the earthquake's tread. The wisdom of wise men is perishing; the understanding of the prudent is failing, but the deaf are hearing, and the blind are seeing. The meek are increasing their joy in the Lord, and the poor are rejoicing in the holy One of Israel; and in a little while Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be extended as a forest, or park, even as the Mt. Zion of God. Amen. H. PRATT.

TRUTH SPREADING.

A Sister writes:—"I was present the last three days of the Springfield campmeeting; an eager listener to all the precious truths there discussed. I was a stranger. I came to see, to hear, and decide; and being 'in the way,' the Lord met me and blessed me, oh! so richly. I have no words adequate to tell you of the rapt attention with which I listened to the discourse that last Sabbath afternoon. It was just what I was wishing most to hear. I have had vague and disconnected ideas on the subject, but they were then brought out each in its proper connection, joining them symmetrically, while conviction deepened upon my mind with every word, and at the close of the meeting, I was ready to embrace what I felt was indeed God's truth. I wanted to say 'thy people shall be my people.' But I am hampered by the current and popular notions of 'man's immortality.' Though seeing plainly what appears to be a correct view of the matter, as held by yourself and others, I yet do not feel strong upon it, and past experience has made me cautious about adopting any theory I am not able to defend.

And now I am really troubled at the thought of continuing to let my name stand enrolled upon the records of a Congregational church; one, too, of the straightest sect. Dear brother, what shall I do? What ought I to do? Perhaps nothing different at present. Then will you not help me to be strong, so that at the proper time I may not fail to do what is right. . . . I came away as I went, a stranger, but feeling that all were mine in Christ." C. W.

VERMONT ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

According to a proposition published in the World's Crisis, the brethren present at Camp Brook meeting met Sept. 24th, 1869, to contemplate the propriety of organizing a State Conference; when Bro. S. G. Mathewson was called to the Chair, and Bro. R. N. Stetson as Secretary pro tem. Prayer was offered by Bro. J. A. Cleaveland. The object of the meeting was then stated by Bro. Mathewson, after which Brn. J. Couch and J. A. Cleaveland made remarks advocating the duty and propriety of forming such a conference; when it was voted unanimously to organize such a conference.

Voted, That a committee of three be chosen to draft and report to the meeting a Constitution for the government of said Conference. J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson and J. A. Cleaveland were chosen said committee. Adjourned.

Saturday, 7½ o'clock A. M. Prayer by Bro. Wood. Bro. Couch, for the Com., reported, and the following Constitution was adopted:

CONSTITUTION.

Art. 1. This Conference shall be called the Vermont Advent Christian Conference.

Art. 2. Its object shall be the promulgation of the gospel of Christ, the establishment of gospel order among believers in Christ, and the saving of the perishing by all scriptural means.

Art. 3. It shall be composed of all who love God and wait for his Son from heaven, who can co-operate together for the accomplishment of the above object.

Art. 4. The officers of the Conference shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary, a Ministerial Committee of three, and a committee of five on State meetings.

Art. 5. Its officers shall be chosen annually by ballot.

Art. 6. The committee on State meetings shall appoint and superintend the holding of all its sessions, conferences, protracted meetings, and campmeetings, which it shall vote to hold at its annual conference.

Adjourned.

One P. M. Prayer by Bro. J. A. Cleaveland. Proceeded to ballot for officers, with the following results: For President, S. G. Mathewson. Vice President, J. A. Cleaveland. Secretary, R. N. Stetson. For Ministerial Committee: S. G. Mathewson, J. A. Cleaveland, W. H. Dow. For State Meeting committee: J. A. Cleaveland, J. Wiswell, Jona. Washburne, Wm. M. McAllister, Wm. C. Bugbee.

Delegates chosen to represent this Conference at the National Conference to meet at Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 17th, 1869: D. Mathewson, J. A. Cleaveland, Enos Dole. Three alternates: J. Dinsmore, J. Wiswell, Solomon Cook.

Voted, That the proceedings of this Conference be published in the World's Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—Most heartily wishing the promotion of truth in every department of Theology, allow me to say, I believe the "First Day Sabbath," by Eld. T. M. VERMONT ADV. MISSION TENT.

In connection with the Conference at Camp Brook, Bethel, it was thought best by the Brn., for the promulgation of the gospel of Christ, the glorious truths we advocate, and the salvation of the perishing, to have a Vt. Advent Mission Tent, which will cost about $300. Pledges received amount to $136.50. Let all who are interested in this glorious cause send in their names and what they will pay for the above object. Ministers are requested to receive names and forward the same to me. The money will be wanted by the first of April or May next. Come, brethren and sisters, into this field of labor, and save some by these means.

ROCHESTER.—The impression has gone abroad that the proposed National Conference at this place is to be altogether ministerial, greatly to the prejudices of some. I have not so understood it; but rather to be composed of such delegates as the churches or State Conferences should appoint. That such is the fact, please refer to last Crisis.

Correspondence.

From Bro. E. Cotton.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I write to inform you of my labors since the first of April. I have preached in Little Cooly, Blooming Valley, Edenboro, Franklin, Compton's Corners, Pa., Yorkshire, Springville, Sardinia, Baptist Hill, Honeoye Falls, Napoli, N. Y. Part of the time I have been in company with Brn. Wendell, Fenn, Colegrove, Hobbs, Newell, Grant, Burr, and others.

In these meetings some have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, God's children edified.

August 27th I started for Springfield, to attend the annual campmeeting. I fell in company with Bro. E. Morrill, who wished me to assist him in holding meetings in the Mass. Mission Tent. We had very interesting meetings. Most every meeting quite a number were forward for prayers. Some of them come out very happy in the Lord. I should think some forty, or more, made a start for the kingdom.

I left Springfield for Alton Bay, in company with Bro. Morrill, with the large Bethel tent. We had some very good meetings under the tent. A number came forward most every meeting for prayer. The Spirit of the Lord rested down upon us. We were blessed with some very good preaching under the tent by Brn. Hastings, Phelps, Simpson, Cleaveland, A. Damon, J. Kimball, and Srs. Benson and Stoddard, and others.

I left Alton Bay for Deerfield, to hold a protracted meeting, in company with others. A number of preachers were present; Brn. Morrill, Bryant, Randall, Quimby, and Srs. Benson and Saulpaugh. Five arose for prayers. I left there for Concord, to preach next Sunday at the Bethel house. I have attended a number of social meetings in the Bethel. I find them doing very well as far as I have seen.

Since the first of April I have been very much blessed. I have had almost a constant joy flowing into my soul. My heart burns with love to God and man; and I am ready to exclaim, If the streams are so sweet, what must the fountain be?

"Joyfully, joyfully, onward I roam, Bound for the land of the bright world to come."

I have had almost a complete victory over the devil since 1865. When he comes round to tempt me, I tell him to get behind me, and he very quickly flees. I have the shield of faith, that quenches all of the fiery darts of the wicked. "He that is begotten of Him, keepeth himself, and the wicked one toucheth him not." The fire burns in my heart. Bless the Lord, now and ever more, for his wonderful works to the children of men.

Now, you who are weak in the faith, wait on the Lord, and you will become steadfast, and strong to overcome. Your affectionate brother, E. COTTON.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 25th.

From Bro. H. Fink.

BRO. GRANT:—Your correspondent has been a preacher in the M. E. and U. B. churches nearly fifty years; and thought he was prepared to give all the whys and wherefores on all points of doctrines in orthodoxy; but your debate with the Rev. Mr. Clayton aroused his slumbering powers. He appealed to a "thus saith the Lord," and found that the eye of his mind had been fixed on creeds instead of "thus saith the Lord." The next step a reaction took place, and not only untwisted his (my) strong, two-fold cord (immortality and eternal misery), but is gradually smoothing, compacting, and winding every fibre into a strong cord just the reverse of orthodoxy. And now he holds the Advent doctrine true until a "thus saith the Lord" proves it otherwise.

Abuse will not be received as proof; an exhibition of which has just passed off; a detail of which I forbear relating, only that it resulted in the expulsion of two of our best members in the U. B. church, by mob law, for refusing to renounce the above doctrine. And with them will walk out more than a dozen more. I withdrew at the same time, protesting against the corruptions of the church, without the least thought of ever attaching myself to another church; but now feel it my duty, as well as a privilege, to defend the rights of those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, which I feel fully prepared to do by the help of God; as the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds. By the grace of God, we will never quit the field until by pure christian love the last enemy is killed. Yours in the love of Christ,

DR. H. FINK.

Rockbridge, O., Sept. 18th, 1869.

Extracts from Letters.

A SISTER writes:—"Though personally a stranger, I feel sure that you will extend to me the hand of fellowship in Christ, when you know the earnest longing of my heart to be led into all truth; having been brought, nine years since, out of nature's darkness into the marvelous light which has been growing more and more marvelous to me, till now there is shed around me such a flood of radiant glory as leads me with rapture to exclaim, 'Surely, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh'; the glad hour when, beholding him in his beauty, we shall say, 'Lo! this is our God, we have waited for him.'

And yet, beloved, it is but a few months since, in the blessed providence of God, I became acquainted with the precious doctrine of the second advent of our divine Redeemer, as declared and maintained by yourselves. I have always believed that Christ must come again; that he would destroy his enemies, take the saints to himself, and, purifying and renewing the earth, thereafter make it the abode of all such as loved his appearing; verifying his promise that 'God himself shall be with them and be their God.' But my belief grew out of the reading of God's own word.

All the religious teaching I have received has been such as left out of sight all those points of doctrine whereby you are distinguished from other and self-styled 'evangelical' christians; and I never could get any satisfaction in my endeavors after light and knowledge on those passages of Scripture which I now take to my heart just as they are, lovingly and trustingly, thanking God they do not need explaining, and twisting, and turning, until I might just as well be told they did not mean anything at all.

Praise the Lord! Now I know they do mean something; mean just what the Lord has said; and henceforth I live in the blessed hope that ere long the seventh trumpet will sound and there will be voices in heaven, saying, 'The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.'

'Trusting in the literal word,
We look for Christ on earth again;
Come, our everlasting Lord,
With all thy saints to reign."

How does the thought of the millennial blessedness animate us, when, oppressed by the world, the flesh and the devil, weary and faint, we seem to ourselves ready to fall by the way. Let us gird ourselves anew, and so run that we may obtain the prize."

Bro. W. C. White, Watkins, N. Y., writes: "I cannot do without your excellent paper. I take one Christian paper, but that is no comparison to your paper. I never saw any paper that suited me like yours. It comes so full of wisdom and the Holy Ghost, that I love it, and I must have it as long as I live, pay or no pay. I am not really able to take it, but I cannot do without it. I must eat less and save money to pay for it.

I belong to the Christian Church, or the conference, but I never saw the truth as I now see it. I was always taught that man had an immortal soul to be happy, or go to eternal torment; but when I got one of your papers, my eyes were opened. I preached over twenty years before I saw the truth. How I could be so long in the dark I cannot tell; but as I was once blind, I know I now see."

Bro. H. K. Flagg writes, Sept. 25th:—"I am now preaching in Camden, N. J. Sunday mornings I preach at 9th and Spring Garden Sts., Phila.; afternoons and evenings at Camden. We have engaged a large hall, sixty by forty, corner of 4th and Plum Sts., and we have an excellent attendance, the people manifesting a deep interest in the Bible truths presented them. To-morrow evening we expect to organize a new church, the Lord willing.

They are having good meetings at Moorestown, eight miles from here. Bro. Burbank and others are presenting the word of life. Invitations have come in to me from some new places within a circle of fifteen miles from here, to go and hold protracted meetings. As soon as we can find a convenient place, we intend to hold evening meetings here. Pray for us."

Bro. J. F. Day, Pittston, Me., writes:—"Brn. Somes, Weeks, and myself, commenced meetings at Georgetown, Me., Monday, Aug. 30th, and held over the Sabbath. Our meetings were excellent. The Spirit of the Lord pervaded every meeting, and we enjoyed blessed seasons. The meetings increased more and more until the close. At the first meeting six stood up as witnesses for God and his truth, and at the last meeting between thirty and forty spoke of the goodness of God. The Lord made many deep impressions on their hearts. Some were revived and greatly blest; some saw the truth in a much clearer light than ever before; some confessed to have learned more truth in the few days than ever before. And we pray that much good may come from the labors of Brn. Somes and Weeks."

Bro. L. Mills writes:—"The Ct. Mission tent is pitched in Sharon, according to appointment in Crisis. Brn. Woodruff, Hitchcock and Elliott are laboring, and the prospect is that their labors are not in vain. Much interest is manifest, and excellent order prevails. All is as quiet as at our homes. May God bless the effort, and crown it with the salvation of many souls."

Characteristics of Luther.—Men of Luther's stature are like the violent forces of nature herself,—terrible when roused; and in repose, majestic and beautiful. Of vanity he had not a trace. "Do not call yourselves Lutherans," he said; "call yourselves Christians. Who and what is Luther? Has Luther been crucified for the world?" I mentioned his love of music. His songs and hymns were the expression of the very inmost heart of the German peoples. "Music" he called "the grandest and sweetest gift of God to man." "Satan hates music," he said; "he knows how it drives the evil spirit out of us." He was extremely interested in all natural things. Before the science of botany was dreamed of Luther had divined the principles of vegetable life. "The principle of marriage runs through all creation," he said: "and flowers as well as animals are male and female." A garden called out bursts of eloquence from him; beautiful, sometimes, as a finished piece of poetry.—Froude's Short Studies.

"A Beautiful River."—Sabbath-day is the beautiful river in the week of time. The other days are troubled streams, whose angry waters are disturbed by the countless craft that float upon them; but the pure river Sabbath flows on to eternal rest, chanting the sublime music of the silent, throbbing spheres and timed by the pulsations of the everlasting life. Beautiful river Sabbath, glide on! Bear forth on thy bosom the poor, tired spirit to the rest which it seeks, and the weary, watching soul, to endless bliss.

At Sandy Hill, N. Y., Sept. 20th, 1869, by D. Mathewson, Mr. James Alexander and Mrs. Fanny Shephard, all of Sandy Hill.

In Worcester, Mass., Sept. 25th, 1869, by Elder T. M. Preble, Mr. Charles A. Higgins, of Worcester, and Miss Mary C. Caswell, of Keene, N. H.

Obituaries.

Spencer. Died in Syracuse, Sept. 25th, 1869, of paralysis, my brother-in-law, D. Spencer, aged fifty-four years.

For fourteen years he has been a great sufferer, but his faith remained unshaken. He was a firm believer in, and a strong advocate of, the doctrines of Christ, and with a bright hope he looked forward to a resurrection to immortality and eternal life. His last words were, "I want to sleep in Jesus." He leaves an affectionate companion, three children, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. He selected the funeral text from Job 14: 14, 15. Mrs. C. B. Turner.

Call. Died in Keene, N. H., Aug. 21st, 1869, Sister Rachel Call, aged fifty years.

She died at the residence of her cousin's sister, Ira Merrill's, but was carried back to Salisbury for burial among her friends.

Thus has one faithful sister in Christ had to yield to the enemy death, after having struggled hard with sickness for the last few years. Many will remember her devotion to her Savior's cause, and feel joyful that she rests in hope of a glorious resurrection at the last day. T. M. Preble.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

London, Sept. 28. The Times, in an article on the situation in France, says: "The coincidence of the Emperor's sickness and the reconstruction of his Government is a serious misfortune. The energies of the Emperor cannot be well spared at such a crisis. The reforms come unfortunately while the Emperor is incapacitated, and a time when he is most required. The speculations of the people on the uncertainties and opportunities of the future are so encouraged as to augment the public disquietude. If the crisis had occurred ten years ago the Emperor would have brought to work the energies he carried into the Italian campaign. If the experiment had then succeeded, France would now possess a generation of statesmen with some parliamentary experience. The only question is, was the prospect of success so clear then as to justify precipitating instead of postponing it? The present peril, serious in any case, is aggravated by the Emperor's enfeebled health. But peril of some kind has been the prospect of the Government for the past two generations."

Sept. 29. Later advices have been received from the seat of war in South America. The news from Rio Janeiro fully confirms the flight of Lopez.

Paris, Sept. 28. It is said to-day that Father Hyacinthe will be defended in the Council by the Bishops of Avignon, Rheims, Chalons and Bayeux.

The troubles at Barcelona have been quelled and the city is tranquil. One hundred and twenty-six persons were arrested for complicity. Many escaped. The fugitives destroyed the telegraph wires and railroad track to prevent capture. Troops have been sent in pursuit and to protect the laborers engaged in repairing the telegraphs and railroads.

Reinforcements for the Spanish army in Cuba sailed from Cadiz to-day.

Sept. 29. At a council of Ministers held here to-day, Marshal Serrano presiding, it was agreed to propose to the Cortes the election of the Duke of Genoa as King of Spain.

Florence, Sept 25. King Victor Emanuel and the Diplomatic Body at Florence, will go to Venice to receive the Empress of the French on her way to the East.

Paris, 29. The Prince and Princess of Wales arrived here to-day. They were received by the Emperor.

Sept. 30. The Empress left Paris at half-past five o'clock this afternoon on her Eastern tour.

Alexandria, Sept. 30. A dispatch from Suez announces that the barriers against the passage waters of the bitter lakes have been removed, and M. Lessep has passed through the canal in the steamer from Port Said to Suez in fifteen hours.

Madrid, 3. The insurrectionary movement is maintained at different points.

Vienna, 3. The Vienna Presse, which is generally recognized as an official organ of the Austrian Government, publishes this morning advices from Paris to the effect that the Emperor Napoleon hopes to open the coming session of the Legislative body of France by announcing to the members, among other matters, the fact that an agreement has been arrived at between the European powers for a general simultaneous disarmament.

DOMESTIC

Cincinnati, Sept. 28. There was a large meeting of citizens to-night at Pike's Opera House to take action against the exclusion of the Bible from the public schools. There were 3000 persons present.

Resolutions favoring the Bible in the schools, and asking the School Board not to act on the matter until after the spring election, were passed unanimously.

Washington, D. C., 29. Governor Campbell of Wyoming Territory reports to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs from Cheyenne, that on the 14th inst., while Company D of the Second Cavalry were in pursuit of eight Sioux Indians who had appeared below the military camp at Papo Ogee River, after they had gone a short distance they were attacked by about one hundred warriors. The fight was severe. Five Indians are known to have been killed and a considerable number wounded. They were in full war dress, well armed, and had an abundance of ammunition. Some of them spoke English, and called themselves the Orgallalas.

Chicago, Ill., Oct 1. The following communication has been received at Gen. Sherman's headquarters:

Headquarters Camp Supply, Sept. 11. I have the honor to report that the Indians who crossed the railroad at Grenel's Station, on Kansas Pacific Railway, on the 9th of August, have arrived at this camp and asked for peace. They number about one hundred and thirty. They report sixty hostile Indians killed, thirty-two of whom were Cheyennes, and the balance Sioux. They say they have enough of fighting. All of the stock they captured belonged to the Cheyennes, as the Sioux had all their stock in camp.

Slavery in Cuba.—M. Lemus, the agent of the Cuban revolutionists in this country, denies the report that the insurgent leaders have promulgated a constitution in this country differing from the one published in Cuba, the former abolishing slavery, and the latter upholding it. He declares that but one constitution exists in Cuba, and that contemplates nothing but absolute and unequivocal freedom of the slaves of the island. The Republican leaders, long before the adoption of the constitution, emancipated their slaves, and wherever the army of the republic marches, freedom is proclaimed to all of every color.

The Recent Gold Panic.—New York papers continue to give much space to reports relative to the recent gold panic. The leading bankers and stock brokers have been "interviewed" by the reporters, and their opinions of the causes and results of the panic vary greatly. Some of the bankers say that the panic was engineered for the purpose of ruining the banking interest of the city, and there is general indignation among that class of men against the operators who are believed to have planned the panic, and to have pocketed their millions by it.

Immense Rain.—A Washington (Kansas) paper of the 20th says that on the preceding Friday twenty-four inches of rain fell. The destruction of property was immense. The rain fell in torrents, and swept away everything before it.

Passing Events.

☞ Jeff. Davis sailed from England for the United States Sept. 25th.

☞ Mount Ætna is again in a state of violent eruption.

☞ This year's potato crop in England will be one of the best ever raised there.

☞ Four hundred men are now employed upon the new Post Office at New York.

☞ The Workingmen's Congress at Basle, Switzerland, has been a great success.

☞ It is stated that dead trees have been set on fire by the rays of the sun in Georgia this year.

☞ Prisoners in Ludlow street jail in New York contributed about $18 in aid of the Avondale sufferers.

☞ It is stated that not enough wheat will be raised in Great Britain this year by 75,000,000 bushels for home consumption.

☞ The Baptist church at Avondale lost all its male members but three by the terrible mine disaster.

☞ The Emperor of Russia has ordered 60,000,000 cartridges, a fact which the Europeans take to indicate decided intention to act on the defensive.

☞ The population of the city of Rochester, N. Y., is 69,208, according to a recent census taken by order of the Common Council.

☞ The newspaper organ of the Grand Vizier of Turkey recommends the instant dismissal of Ismael Pasha as Viceroy of Egypt, and the appointment of Mustapha Tazil Pasha in his place.

☞ A dispatch from St. Johns, N. F., contains intelligence of the return of the expedition of Dr. Hayes from the Arctic regions. It was successful in every object.

☞ During the Emperor's recent illness the Chief of the Police consulted with him daily on the best plan of suppressing a riot in case one should suddenly arise.

☞ The anti-Prussian newspapers of North Germany are hoping that there will be a war between France and Prussia, and they think it is sure to come when Napoleon dies, if not before.

☞ A class has recently been organized in one of the public night schools at New York, for the purpose of teaching the English language to foreigners.

☞ Professor Davidson's scientific party has returned from Alaska. The result of the expedition is satisfactory. The party visited a region of country never penetrated by white men.

☞ In Chicago, the other day, the workmen engaged in putting down a sewer, struck a cedar swamp at a depth of eleven feet below the surface.

☞ At the recent fete in the forest of Saint Germain, in France, 180,000 bottles of ordinary wine, 1000 bottles of champagne, and 500 hogsheads of beer were drank in a little less than two days.

☞ A man ran through one of the principal streets of Paris the other evening, saying that he wished to kill the Emperor; and perhaps he might have tried, as, when arrested, he was found perfectly insane.

☞ Henry Ward Beecher once said: "The man that would shoot a robin, except in the fall, and then really and conscientiously for food, has in him the blood of a cannibal; and would, if born in Otaheite, have eaten ministers and digested them too."

☞ Old Indian traders on the Plains express great fears of a general Indian outbreak. They say that the Indians never showed as much hostility as they do at the present time, and everything indicates an Indian war.

☞ Ledru Rollin recently wrote to a French paper that at once after the Imperial amnesty was granted, orders were transmitted to the different seaports to arrest him in case he should endeavor to return to France.

☞ Mr. Milburn, the blind preacher, has returned from his visit to Graeffe, the celebrated Prussian occulist—the operation gone through for the restoration of his eyesight not having succeeded.

☞ The rumor that Napoleon meditates abdication has no actual ground. It is only certain that he is willing to give up much of his personal power rather than have bloodshed, and the uprisal of all the old parties in the country.

☞ A letter from Florence says: "The news from Sicily is again very alarming. Both in the parliamentary and municipal elections all the successful candidates are either Garibaldians or clerical reactionists, and another insurrection, similar to that of 1866, is talked of."

☞ Tom King, late of the London prize ring, is now the Rev. Thomas King of Wales; instead of pounding, he now preaches, and only wrestles in prayer. Notice is made in one of the Welch newspapers of his exhortations, and his style is stated to be very forcible, bold, and earnest.

☞ During her recent trip through France, Eugenie endured thirty-one speeches, twenty-three receptions and presentations, eight grand dinners and banquets, two reviews, about two hundred and thirty gun salutes from the fleet alone, four displays of fireworks, and over eight thousand petitions.

☞ A tornado at New Braunfels, Texas, on the 12th, which did not last more than sixty seconds, killed two persons, fatally injured three, and more or less hurt thirty or forty others, besides tearing thirty or forty houses nearly to atoms. Animals of all kinds were killed, and fowls had their necks wrung on the roost.

☞ When Prince Napoleon, after making his recent democratic speech, went to see the Emperor, the latter, instead of rebuking him, as the French people generally expected he would do, remarked in a very friendly way: "I should not have said all that you said, but, after all, it is as well it should be known that all that is possible with the Empire." And so he revised the report and ordered it to be published in the official journal.

☞ The contest in Canada is no longer between loyalty to the British Crown and independence, but between independence and annexation. The party of independence is now much the stronger of the two, but the annexationists are gaining. They argue that it will do no good to the Canadas to become independent of Great Britain unless they can also enjoy the advantages of free trade with the United States.

☞ Rothschild and the Archbishop of Paris met at a public dinner some time since and arrived at the same moment at the door. Neither wished to enter first—the Jew showing respect, the Catholic tolerance. Finally the Archbishop cried out: "M. Rothschild, you are the son of Moses; I am the servant of Jesus; you have the precedence of age. The Old Testament is more venerable than the New." And the banker went in first.

☞ Garibaldi said in reply to an invitation to attend the fetes in honor of the memory of Huss: "Sons of antique Bohemia, accept my greeting to the memory of the sublime John Huss, who, like our Savonarola, sealed with his martyrdom at the stake his love for the religion of truth. These two heroic martyrs have been the victims of the most horrible of human institutions. May your proud patriots at the grand fete that you are about to celebrate, renew in the bonds of truth the memory of your great predecessors."

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

Whereas, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

Whereas, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

John Couch, New Hampshire; Miles Grant, Massachusetts; S. G. Mathewson, Vermont; Joshua V. Himes, Michigan; Wm. Sheldon, Wisconsin; O. R. Fassett, Minnesota; John Porter, Canada, National Conference Committee.

Quarterly Conference.

The Church Quarterly Conference of South Dansville will commence Oct. 9th (evening), and continue onward as the interest may demand. Come to this feast, all who can. D. Cogswell.
Sr. E. S. Jennings

Protracted Meeting.

I will commence a series of meetings at West Randolph, Vt., in the Christian meeting-house, Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, to continue evenings through the week, and over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as it may seem duty. There will be meetings week days if thought best. We hope the brethren in the vicinity will try and get out to this meeting. J. A. Cleaveland.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Brown Co., N. Y., will be held Nov. 27th and 28th. Bro. and Sr. Hitchcock, of Kirkwood, N. Y., will be there to assist. All are invited to attend. For the brethren,
J. W. Taylor.

Notice.

There will be a meeting at the church in Wilmot Settlement, commencing Oct. 12th, and hold over Sunday. Bro. C. F. Sweet will be there to preach the word. In behalf of the church,
J. D. Chamberlain.

Meetings in Cambridgeport.

Change of place of worship, from Buckley's Hall to Washington Hall, No. 459 Main Street, a few doors distant, opposite Pearl Street. Meetings will continue as usual on Sundays, at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M. W. H. Kahahl, Sec.

Conference.

The Lord will, there will be a conference at Piermont, N. H., Clay meeting-house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brethren T. W. Piper, N. Wheeler, and others are expected to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the salvation of souls. For the brethren. Wm. H. Shaw.

R. I. and E. Ct.

Our next conference will be held at Wyoming, at Brand's Iron Works, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 6th, at two o'clock P. M. This place needs our help. Let us come up to this meeting in full numbers, and in the fullness of Christ. At Scituate, the tide of our joy rose high. At Wyoming let it rise higher. At Scituate we had a good attendance of preachers. At Wyoming let us have preachers, and delegates from churches also. Let no church fail to send a delegate. If he is poor, pay his expenses, and thus bless him and yourselves too, and the conference besides. Attend to this at once. Shall we have one more general rally for God? Let Oct. 6th answer. I am resolved to be there at all costs.
H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Notice.

The annual session of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held, by invitation of the New Haven church, at their chapel, to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, 1869. It is very necessary that all churches should appoint delegates to attend this session, and that all preachers should make an effort to be present. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, and whatever business of importance may be before the conference will be attended to. The first business session will be Thursday P. M. Preaching Wednesday evening, at half past seven o'clock.
L. F. Moore, Secretary.

Notice.

A quarterly conference will be held in Bristol, Me., Newharbor meeting-house, to commence on Thursday, 5 P. M., Oct. 7th, and hold over Sunday. Brn. and sisters are invited to come and work for the Lord. We hope the ministers will come to this new field of labor. There will be homes for all who will come. S. K. Partridge.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.
In behalf of the brethren, T. M. Preble.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the Branch Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 21st, to continue over the following Sabbath. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord. There are homes for all who will come.
S. K. Partridge.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.
S. W. Thurber, Pres. of Conf.

Seeds remain at same prices, with the exception of 25 cts. off on Herds Grass. Apples $1.00 lower, with wider range. Pork unchanged; inclined lower. Butter only moderate sale; upon receipts of Sept. butter a better feeling will be experienced. Fruits firm.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by Geo. J. Fox, for the week ending Oct. 5th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	150	1,974	3,300
Last week	739	9,730	4,198

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $12.50@13.00; first quality, $11.50@12.00; second quality, $10.00@11.00; third quality, $8.00@9.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $65, $75, to $100@115; Yearlings, $17 to $26; Two years old, $28 to $40; Three years old, $42 to $65.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75 to $4.25, or from 3½ to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $4.50; Veal Calves, $0.00@$0.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

Remarks. Cattle.—The late storm in the country has made sad havoc with the railroads through the Northern States. Between Fitchburg and Bellows Falls the road was seriously damaged in twelve places. Some of the bridges were washed away, detaining the live stock trains, and up to the middle of the forenoon there were no arrivals from the North, with no certainty when they would arrive. There were several lots of cattle driven over on foot from the Northern part of this State, and also from Maine. Trade very quiet, considerably more so than it would be were there fifty loads.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts of sheep during the week, 1979. These were nearly all sent in by dealers, having been previously contracted for, at prices unchanged from last week. They were generally of good quality. G. W. Hollis had some six loads from Canada, a very nice lot. The demand for sheep has been good during the week.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, my mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. HERE IS MY HEART.

Here is my heart; my God, I give it thee;
I heard thee call and say,
"Not to the world, my child, but unto me"—
I heard and will obey.
Here is love's offering to my King,
Which in glad sacrifice I bring—
Here is my heart!

Here is my heart; surely the gift, though poor,
My God will not despise;
Vainly and long I sought to make it pure,
To meet thy searching eyes;
Corrupted once in Adam's fall,
The stains of sin pollute it all—
My guilty heart!

Here is my heart; my heart so sad before,
Now by thy grace made meet;
Yet bruised and weary, it can only pour
Its anguish at thy feet;
It groans against the weight of sin,
It sighs salvation's joys to win—
My mourning heart!

Here is my heart; in Christ its longings end,
Near to the cross it draws;
It says, "Thou art my portion, O my friend!
Thy blood my ransom was."
And in the Savior it has found
What blessedness and peace abound—
My trusting heart!

Here is my heart; ah! Holy Spirit, come,
Its nature to renew,
And consecrate it wholly as thy home,
A temple fair and true.
Teach it to love and serve thee more,
To fear thee, trust thee, and adore—
My cleansed heart!

Here is my heart; it trembles to draw near
The glory of thy throne;
Give it the shining robes thy servants wear,
Of righteousness thine own;
Its pride and folly chase away,
Thy righteous will e'er to obey—
My waiting heart!

Here is my heart; O, Friend of friends, be near
And make the tempter fly;
And when my latest foe I wait with fear,
Give me the victory!
Gladly on thy love reposing,
Let me say, when life is closing—
"Here is my heart!"

For the World's Crisis.

"HOW LONG HALT YE BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS?"

All who wish to enjoy deep and abiding peace in their own hearts, and be useful in the world in laboring for the salvation of others, must not be halting, wavering, or vacillating in their minds, but come out boldly and decidedly for God and his blessed truth. Many are convinced in their hearts that we are living in the last days of this world's history, when we may look for the Son of God from heaven at no distant period, and that in view of these things they ought to be less conformed to the world and more devoted to God; yet they remain in an undecided condition, and continue to live day after day between hope and fear, not knowing in their hearts that they are the Lord's, but hoping they are not of the world.

This is indeed a miserable state of mind. An individual in this condition cannot enjoy solid peace and comfort in his own heart, and of course is powerless to lead sinners to the Lamb of God. We must know the love of Christ ourselves, and be filled with all the fullness of God, if we would bear effectual testimony to the ears of perishing men.

It is the lack of this experimental knowledge of the grace of God, which renders the well-intended efforts of many fruitless and vain. It is not by might, nor by power, "but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." The secret of abiding power is in living close with God. To live half-hearted and careless in such a grand and noble cause is wicked. It is dishonoring to God, detrimental to our own peace and happiness, and ruinous to our fellow-men. We should live so holy, and walk so humbly with our God, and exhibit such sincerity in our deportment, that our lives would be a standing influence in the world for God and his precious truth.

Decision of character and firmness of principle are demanded in these perilous times. It costs something to be a child of God; but it pays well. If we adhere firmly to the principles of righteousness, and live out our faith, we must expect to meet with rebuffs and trials. The wicked will sometimes frown upon us for doing right; but it is far better to do right and have the frowns of God. To have God for our portion, and know for ourselves that we are heirs to the kingdom of glory, is worth more than the applause of men, or the honor, riches, or emoluments of the world; but in order to share the pleasures of religion here, and enjoy the glories of the kingdom to come, we must be whole-hearted christians.

There are a great many who seem to think they can take the pleasures of the world in one hand and religion in the other, and still please God. This is a sad mistake. There is no middle ground for the christian to occupy. We must be either on one side or the other. We are either the Lord's or we are not. Many are halting between two opinions, but they will die unless they decide to obey God.

I know from experience that indecision produces doubt and misery, and leads on to greater darkness. The only way I have ever found to enjoy salvation, is to obey in all things. I must not take conscience for a guide, and say that I will not obey certain precepts because my conscience does not condemn me; but I must take the Bible, and whatever I find written therein, for the regulation of my conduct. I must obey it. It is not the hearers, the admirers, or well-wishers of the law, that are justified, but the doers of the word. It is not those who say "Lord, Lord," that shall inherit the kingdom, but those who do the will of God.

Jesus told the truth, and there is a depth of meaning in his words, when he says, "No man can serve two masters; for he will either hate the one and love the other, or hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." How much mammon-serving there is in these days. How much compromising with the world for selfish interests. How strange it is that notwithstanding all the plain declarations of Scripture, and the great motives presented to lead us to holiness and purity of life, multitudes overlook them, and indulge in the pleasures, follies, and fashions of the world, as if God were indifferent to how people regarded his word.

It is high time every individual, who expects to meet the coming King with gladness, should be aroused to consider these things. It is the minister's duty to warn people of their danger. We must save sinners by pulling them out of the fire, hating even the garment spotted by the flesh. The ancient prophets were commanded to "cry aloud and spare not." It was a grief to them to see God's own peculiar people going after other gods, and departing from the commandments of the Lord. They often wept for the slain of the daughter of God's people, and he was so interested for their welfare, bent over their erring pathway, and by his servant exclaimed, "O, that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments, for then would thy peace have been as a river, and thy righteousness like the waves of the sea."

God has always required his children to be obedient, and whenever they have obeyed his voice his blessing has been upon them. He has always required his servants to proclaim his truth without reserve, or equivocation, whether the people would hear or forbear. If a minister preaches only a part of the truth because he thinks it will please the hearers, and conceals another part of it because he thinks it will displease them, he is guilty before God, and is not fit for the position he occupies. It is dangerous work to trifle with the word of God, and a fearful responsibility rests upon those who are called to stand upon the walls of Zion.

Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, could say that he had not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God. He kept back nothing that was profitable, but labored night and day with tears, warning every man, and teaching every man, that he might present them perfect in Christ Jesus. He could not see sin and idolatry abounding without lifting up his voice in earnest warning and entreaty. Whenever he saw the converts declining in spirituality and conforming to the world, it was a great grief to him, and his pen was busily employed in writing words of caution and instruction, telling how they ought to walk and please God. In his letter to the Romans I hear him speaking with great earnestness in language like this:

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good, acceptable, and perfect will of God." Again I hear him talking as a father to his children, pointing out the danger, and drawing the line of separation between them and the world: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of God, as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

O, who would not come out from the world if they could have the privilege of being sons and daughters of God? Where can we look for greater honor than this? How safe and happy are we when we know that He who made and upholds all things is our Father; that we are adopted into his family, and are heirs to the whole world. Paul was willing to count all things else but loss and dross, if he could only attain to that glorious immortality in the resurrection morning.

In his letter to Timothy we hear him giving some more blessed instruction in regard to dress. He says,

"I will, therefore, that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting. In like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works."

We often see women professing godliness, but their adorning is far from being such as "becometh" women making that profession. O, what snares the devil has set in these days in the form of fashions, and how many there are falling into his fatal trap. There are some who are halting between two opinions in this particular. They have a desire to be the Lord's, and yet it is hard work to leave the world with its vanity behind, and come out boldly for the truth of the gospel.

The times demand reformers among women as well as among men. Who dares come out and take a stand for truth and right, and set an example to the world? We can never enter the kingdom and shine in glory with all the redeemed, unless we are willing to forsake all and follow Christ. God's true children are but sojourners in this world; they declare plainly that they seek a better country. I pity those who are so entangled in the world that it seems almost impossible for them to break away.

It needs fathers and mothers in Israel, who shall gently guide the lambs, and care for the weak and tender ones of the flock. When we see young converts conforming to the world, and manifesting pride, it is our duty who see the light to caution and instruct them. The times are perilous. We must watch and pray, and resist every temptation to sin. God will give us grace and strength sufficient for our day, if we only trust him.

I know of many young men and ladies who could do much good in the world if they would only be humble, and give up to God. As long as we wait and dally, and hesitate to go forward, we shall grow weaker and weaker. The devil will wind his coils around us, and we shall only awake to find how much we have lost by not coming out boldly and decidedly for Christ. O reader, let me exhort you to take the right course. If you wish to be free in Christ and enjoy peace with God; if you want to grow in grace and become more and more heavenly minded; if you want to shine as a light in the world, and be ready to receive the crown of glory when Jesus comes, then obey the Lord in all things, and stand for him everywhere.

Pride will kill out all the vital religion an individual possesses. When souls are first converted they are humble, and it is their delight to serve Jesus; they can speak for him anywhere without being ashamed; but how often do they let pride creep into their hearts; they yield to temptations, and in a little while they are all entangled in the world, and you hear from them no more in the prayer meeting.

O, my christian friend, if you are in any measure a backslider, come back to the fold with a contrite heart, and the good Shepherd will receive you. O sinner, will you not be persuaded to give up your sinful course, and become a follower of Jesus? You will want a friend in a dying hour and at the judgment. Seek that friend now, and you will be safe beneath his gracious care. God is not willing that any should perish. He is anxious that all should come to the gospel terms and be saved. Halt no longer. Decide whom you will serve. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life."

THE TEN HORNS OF REV. 17.

Without controversy, the ten horns of the scarlet colored beast of Rev. 17 symbolize the last feature of the Roman government, known as "the Church States," and are ten in number. They form an important item in that great chain of prophecy. Such being the case, we as Bible readers and teachers, in order to give "meat in due season," should ever keep an eye turned towards that government which has been the especial waymark of this age. It has been and is yet the great prophetic chain, or measuring-rod, down to the end of time. And now, after following that great, God-given waymark down to the present time, and seeing all its cardinal points duly fulfilled, can we not yet depend upon God that he will fulfill the balance? After seeing the different heads developed, viz., France, Saxony, Franconia, Arabia, Spain, Austria, France, which came out of the bottomless pit, shall we not, as consistent followers of Christ, look for a change which will constitute "the eighth" head (v. 11), "which is of the seventh, and goeth into perdition"?

My purpose is, to show how this eighth head may be brought into existence. Inasmuch as the eighth head "'is of the seventh" (France), we may look for some radical change or covenant between France and the Papal States, symbolized by "the ten horns," for the beast (not the seventh head) had "ten horns," representing ten divisions of that government, which are now in existence; therefore we look for a consolidation of those ten Papal or Church States with the seventh head, or France, in order to develop the eighth head, according to the revealed word of God.

We have been looking for this change for the last eighteen months, and we feel almost sure now that it is about to take place.

1. It may be accomplished in various ways. But we have been looking for it to be done by the great Council which has been so long talked of, and is to assemble this year.

2. It may be brought about by the death of Pope Pius IX., and the Church States choosing Napoleon in his stead.

3. It may be brought about by force of circumstances. It is a well known fact that the Pope is in straitened circumstances; that he would not have dominion over the Papal State as a civil ruler another month, were it not for France. He merely exists, as it were, under the wing of Napoleon. Garibaldi stands ready to leap upon him in a moment, were Napoleon to raise his wing from over him; or, in other words, say to the Pope that he must look out for himself. When the Pope becomes satisfied that he can no longer stand among the nations of Europe, he will quietly yield his power to his best and only friend, the seventh head, or France; thus forming an alliance between "the ten horns" and the "seventh head," which will constitute the "eighth" head, and it will be "of the seventh."

Let us examine the event the angel wished to show to John. Verse 1,—"Come hither, I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters." He wished to show him "the judgment" that was to befall the apostate church, or union of Church and State, which took place about A.D. 1793–4, while Austria, the sixth head, was taking the lead; therefore there is but little said in this chapter about the first five heads. He simply said, "Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh he must continue a short space." "And the beast that was [France] and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seventh, and goeth into perdition." Therefore the seventh is to be the eighth, or, at least, embodied in the eighth. But John only saw seven heads in reality, for the angel said, "The seven heads are seven mountains [governments] on which the woman [church] sitteth." Therefore she will never sit upon another government.

But there must be a change in the seventh government; even France must have an addition to it in order to become the eighth head. And what that addition or change is, let the word of God decide, V. 12,—"And the ten horns [ten Church States] which thou sawest, are ten kings [or kingdoms], which have received no kingdom as yet [for they did not exist at the time of the judgment 1793–4], but receive power as kings one hour with the beast." What beast?" The last one spoken of in the previous verse, the eighth head, which is of the seventh, which is France. Verse 13,—"These have one mind [or ruler], and shall give their power and strength unto the beast," or France; and no other can have it; for other governments have already offered to receive it, and have met with a frank refusal. Verse 17,—"For God hath put it in their hearts to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God be fulfilled, which will not be until the consummation or "restitution of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began."

For this eighth head is of short duration, and must "go into perdition." Or, as Daniel says, "I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame." Ver. 16,—"And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast [of verse 3], these shall hate the whore [union of Church and State], and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." The symbols in this verse seem to be of easy comprehension. The Papal State "shall hate the" union of ecclesiastical and civil powers. They have no particular objection to the Pope's having the ecclesiastical power, but they are determined that he shall not have the civil power; hence the war that took place there in 1867.

This is what caused Garabaldi to march against Rome. This struggle took place within those ten Papal States; for as soon as Garabaldi attempted to form his army on the Italian shore, Victor Emanuel issued his mandate against it. So he crossed the line, and formed his army within the Papal States, and commenced his work to "make her desolate." But just as he was about to pounce upon Rome, the beast from the bottomless pit (France) interfered, and drove him back, and still holds him at bay.

By this and other acts of kindness to the Pope, France has gained the favor and good will of the Pope, and will eventually be consolidated into the one government, which will form the eighth head of the scarlet-colored beast. And from the time that that consolidation takes place, to the end of time, it will be, prophetically speaking, "just one hour," the last hour of this age. "Watch, therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." "If, therefore, thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." Rev. 3: 3.

The ten horns of Rev. 17 synchronize with the ten toes of the metallic image of Dan. 2, but not with the ten horns of Dan. 7. Any one wishing to study my views of this subject further, can do so by sending a stamp to me for my tract on the Kingdom, which will be sent free on receipt of stamp.

SELF-DENIAL.

Many persons say, "I ought to deny myself." They are going along in life very happily, and do not perceive any particular reason for changing their course; but they have read that a man must deny himself, and they say to themselves, "What shall I deny myself in? I wish I knew how I could deny myself." And they go to work and invent modes of self-denial. One person says, "I will not eat any butter." So he denies himself. Another person says, "I enjoy a good coat as well as any body else; but, being a christian, my duty is to deny myself, so I will get linsey woolsey and let the broadcloth go." That is his self-denial. Men have no idea what self-denial is. They are floundering after something, they do not know what. They are searching after an opportunity for self-denial, not understanding that to deny one's self is simply to put down a lower feeling, in order to give a higher feeling ascendancy.

You have an opportunity for self-denial every time you see a man. If you see a man that you dislike, put down that hateful enmity of soul. That will be self-denial. Every time you see a person in misery and you shrink from relieving him, then relieve him. That will be self-denial. Do not say, "I am so busy I cannot stop to see that little curmudgeon in the street;" but stop. God says, you are all "brethren;" and ragged and dirty as that child is, it is related to you in the larger relationship of the world; and you must not be so busy as not to have time to care for him. If your selfishness says, "I cannot stop; I do not want to be plagued with these little ruffians of the street," and a diviner element of the soul says, stop! neither business or pleasure has any right here; religion, humanity, and duty must rule here; and if you obey the dictates of the divine element, then you deny yourself.

"In honor preferring one another." This injunction suggests an ample field for self-denial. You that invent sackcloth and hair mittens to rub yourself with, so as to get up self-denial and suffering; when you sit and hear your brother in law, of the next office to yours, praised, what is it that makes you hold your breath? "Oh, you say, "that is envy; I ought not to feel so." There is a blessed struggle. What is born of it? If you rise superior to that comparison between yourself and him and say, I thank God that he is esteemed more than I am; I love and honor him, and I am glad to see his name go up, and it does not hurt me to have his name go above mine," then there is a glorious self-denial. What are the elements of it? Why, putting down your own selfishness and putting up the brotherhood feeling.

No man, then, need hunt among hair shirts; no man need ask for blankets too short at the bottom and too short at the top; no man need resort to iron seats and cushionless; no man need stand on the top of towers or columns, in order to deny himself. There is an abundant opportunity for self-denial. If a man is going to place the higher part of his nature uppermost, he will have business enough on hand.—H. W. Beecher.

Gems.

— If those who sneer at practical religion would only seek it for themselves, and make a fair trial of it, their lips would be sealed to scoffs, and only opened in grateful praise. I never heard of a sincere christian who pronounced christianity an imposture or a failure. Have you?

— The man who never failed is a myth. Such a one never lived, and is never likely to. All success is a series of efforts, in which, when closely viewed, are seen more or less failures. If you fail now and then don't be discouraged. Bear in mind it is only the part and experience of every successful man; and the most successful men often have the most failures.

— Christianity is essentially the discipleship of the heart, met by a presence and communication as divinely suited to an inward connection as the visible presence and external communications of our blessed Lord were proportioned to the outward discipleship of his followers during his ministry on earth.

— When you see an old man amiable, mild, equable, contented, and good humored, be sure that in his youth he was just, generous and forbearing. In his end he does not lament the past or dread the future. He is like the evening of a fine day.

— Many men are very entertaining at a first interview, but then they are exhausted; at a second meeting we find them flat and monotonous. Like hand-organs, we have heard all their tunes, and, unlike those instruments, they are not readily new barreled.

— A christian hath so much opposition in his way to glory, that he had need be well locked into the saddle of his profession, or he'll be soon dismounted.

— Enemies are as necessary to the proper development of a full-grown man as friends. When lived that man that amounted to anything but could count his enemies by the scores?

— A noble anger at wrong makes all our softer feelings warmer, as a warm climate adds strength to poisons and spices.

— There are many persons that, as religious reformers, are impertinent, intrusive, void of good judgment, annoying, provoking. Moral mosquitoes, gnats, fleas, vermin they are.

— If you have performed an act of great and disinterested virtue, conceal it; if you publish it, you will neither be believed here nor rewarded hereafter.

— Theology is a divine chemistry which can be understood only by being studied in the laboratory of the heart.

— Superficial knowledge is like oil upon water—it shines deceitfully, but can easily be skimmed off.

— The tendency of all science and art to a higher, more ennobling civilization.

— The cloth of humility should always be worn on the back of christianity.

FAMILY BIBLE READING.—A gentleman told me that he was in business and not then a religious man; but he occasionally visited the home of a religious man. One morning he was at family worship, and the eleventh chapter of Proverbs was read. He proceeded to his office. During the day he was strongly urged to become security for a large amount for a neighbor. He remembered the words read in the morning: "He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it," and declined. A friend of his consented and was ruined in a few months. Byron kept the Bible on his table for the grand images of the Old Testament. O for the day when our christian men, our business men, will keep it near them for its practical wisdom in all that affects man's interests here and hereafter.—Hall.

IDOLATRY.

"Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry."—1 COR. 10: 14.

Idolatry is one of the great sins of the world. People have worshiped idols more or less, from the early history of the world down to the present day. Many people have objects of worship, little thinking they are idolators; but upon looking the matter over candidly and squarely, in the light of divine truth, they find that this is really the case.

There is one great object of worship which should engage the attention of every person; an object worthy of all our admiration and love. That object is God, the Creator of the universe and all contained therein. God has placed in our keeping many things, which he has given us for our comfort and convenience, but not as objects of worship; and yet men hold these things uppermost in their minds, thus making them idols. Other things fall into men's hands, which of themselves have no real value, or usefulness, yet of them they make idols.

How is it with us, dear brethren and sisters? Have we any thing of a worldly nature to which we cling? Have we no objects which we hold in admiration above what we ought? Have we any thing that engrosses all our thoughts and time? If so, what is this but idolatry?

There is a wide difference between using and taking proper care of what God has placed in our hands, and rendering all praise and glory to him for it, realizing that we are accountable to him—and holding on to what we have, as though we were sole possessors, using all our energies to enlarge and gain additions to it, having them first and last in our minds.

Let us look well to ourselves, and see that we allow no object, however dear or valuable, to step in between us and God, but render all praise, glory, and honor, to God and his Christ; having his worship in our minds first and last, and all the way through. Then when Jesus comes we shall be admitted through the gates into the city. "Little children, keep yourselves from idols."

Gilmanton, N. H. N. B. McMURPHY.

A SEVERE TEST.

Towards the close of the revolutionary war, an officer in the army had occasion to transact some business with General Washington, and repaired to Philadelphia for that purpose. Before leaving, he received an invitation to dine with the General, which was accepted, and upon entering the room he found himself in the company of a large number of ladies and gentlemen. As they were mostly strangers to him, and he was of a naturally modest and unassuming disposition, he took a seat near the foot of the table, and refrained from taking an active part in the conversation. Just before the dinner was concluded, General Washington called him by name and requested him to drink a glass of wine with him.

"You will have the goodness to excuse me, General," was the reply, "as I have made it a rule not to drink wine."

All eyes were instantly turned upon the young officer, and a murmur of surprise and horror ran around the room. That a person should be unsocial and so mean as to never drink wine, was really too bad; but that he should abstain from it on an occasion like that, and even when offered to him by Washington himself, was perfectly intolerable!

Washington saw at once the feelings of his guests, and promptly addressed them:—"Gentlemen," said he, "Mr.—— is right. I do not wish any of my guests to partake of anything against their inclinations, and I certainly do not wish them to violate any established principle in their social intercourse with me. I honor Mr.—— for his frankness, for his consistency in thus adhering to an established rule which can never do him harm and for the adoption of which, I have no doubt, he has good and sufficient reasons."

SALVATION.

A man who had been led to see his sinfulness and his tearful doom, being surprised that he was allowed to go on quietly in impenitence, exclaimed, "No one ever spoke to me of my salvation." There were in the place many christians who professed to long for the conversion of souls. If he had been sick, some one would have sent for a physician. If he had been starving, some one would have given him bread. If he had been naked, some one would have clothed him. But his soul was wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked, yet no one pitied him.

Is there any one living near you that can say, "No one ever spoke to me of my salvation?" You talk about the weather, and the crops, and births, accidents and deaths; do you ever affectionately tell any to flee from the wrath to come? If not, is it kind? is it faithful? is it honest to your christian profession? does it accord with your prayers? can you consistently pray for a revival of religion? can you have any compassion for souls or any love for Christ? Never let any one die in your neighborhood, or even live there long, and be able to say, "No one ever spoke to me of my salvation." A tear, a sigh, a kind word, a pressure of the hand of christian sympathy, a verse of the Bible, a page of pious reading, with the blessing of the Holy Spirit, may save a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins.

HOW MUCH OWEST THOU MY LORD?

Have you kept a debt and credit? You can tell the income of your farm and its expense. You know to a mill the worth of your merchandise, or bank stock. Pray, how much owest thou my Lord? Perhaps you have not had time; let me assist you. Does it run thus?

A sound mind in a healthy body.
So much early religious instruction.
So many Sabbaths.
So many gospel sermons.
So many public warnings.
So many private warnings, by sickness or death of friends.
So many admonitions by christians, and the remonstrances of an outraged conscience.
So many thousands of wealth.
So many excellent books.
Come, give an account of your stewardship.
What have you done?
Have you used your intellect and health in his service?
Have you kept his Sabbaths?
Have you profited by those sermons—by those warnings and admonitions?
Have you used your wealth as being but God's steward, for the extension of his kingdom, and in feeding the hungry and clothing the naked?
How stands your account; for your Lord will shortly summon you.—Morning Star.

MANY think that God takes no thought for anything less than a star or a mountain, and is unmindful of the little things of life; but when I go abroad, the first thing which I see is the grass beneath my feet, and nestling in that, flowers smaller yet, and, lower still, the mosses with their inconspicuous blooms, which beneath the microscope glow with beauty. And if God so cares for "the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven," shall he not much more care for the minutest things of your life, "O ye of little faith?"

A GOOD NAME.

In the school of Dr. Woods, none were allowed to enter the conservatory without leave; but a boy's handkerchief, with his name upon it, had been found there. Just at the close of school, the doctor called the name of James Howard. The whole school became silent with suspense. "James Howard, what has he done?—such a noble boy, such a good boy!" all thought. Dr. Woods himself believed he must have been sent into the conservatory by the teacher of botany: so he asked,—

"James Howard, have you been into the conservatory to-day?"

"I have not, sir," replied James in a clear, calm tone.

"I believe you, James," said Dr. Woods, "although your handkerchief has been found there. You are not the boy to tell an untruth."

So James sat in his seat unmoved. Every boy in the school believed him, and almost envied him his good name.

Dr. Woods said no more on this subject, except these few words: "Let every boy learn from this incident the worth of a good name, especially when appearances are against him."

How came James' handkerchief in the conservatory? for, as I have said, it was contrary to the rules of the school for a boy to enter there unbidden. James had loaned it to a small boy, named John Rand, to tie up some nuts, the day before, when they had a little ramble together. The boy forgot to return it. He also forgot the rule of the school against entering the conservatory, but seeing the door open, rushed in to look at some rare flowers. The handkerchief, being partly out of his pocket, dropped upon the ground.

See here the evils of heedless forgetfulness. The boy had exposed a schoolmate to censure; and, had it not been for James Howard's good name, his teacher would have surely thought him to be the offender. At least, so thought John Rand.

How ashamed he felt when Dr. Woods said those words about a good name! The words kept ringing in his ears. He had broken a rule of the school, and was afraid to own it. He thought the doctor would despise him if he knew, and so would the boys. All that day, all that night, he had no peace. At length, he went to James. He was not afraid to tell him all about it.

"I did forget it, James, truly, honestly, I did," said the child; "but I'm afraid the doctor won't believe me as he does you."

"Yes, he will," replied James. "You have been so short a time in school, there's some excuse for you. Go at once, and own up; for, the longer you put it off, the harder it will be. Always own a fault at once. Don't be afraid: the doctor will forgive you."

Thus encouraged, the boy went to Dr. Woods, confessed his fault, and was forgiven; but he learned a lesson against forgetfulness which he always remembered.—Youth's Visitor.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY.

A LESSON FROM THE FLOWERS.

A little boy named George Smith had lived all his life in a narrow court in London, and had scarcely ever seen a garden or a field. When his father moved a little way out of the great city, there was a pretty little garden at the back of the house. A piece of this ground was given to George to be his own garden. His father gave him some seeds to be sown in it, and told him that by and by these would come up, and bear bright blue flowers. The little boy thought that very strange; but he believed it because his father said it. So the seeds were put into the ground. George watched his plot of earth, and was anxious about seeing the blue flowers. A few days after, he raked up one of the seeds, and took it to his father.

"Father," said he, "those seeds will not grow to anything. See, here is one of them: it is quite dead and rotten."

"No, no," said his father, "let them alone: wait, my boy." So George waited and watched. Week after week passed away, and it was a great trial to his patience. But one morning he came running to his father, and said, "There are little things coming out of the ground, like the point of your penknife, only green. They are coming up where we put in the seed."

"Wait a little longer," said the father, "and you will see the flowers."

The green blades grew higher and higher, leaves broke out around them, and at last there came the blue flowers. The boy was astonished. He could not tell how it was that those decayed seeds had turned to these beautiful flowers. His father told him it was the same with the corn they had seen when they went into the country; that all seeds had to go through this process.

Now, what took place with those seeds is an illustration of the resurrection. The bodies of men are laid in the grave, and there appears no sign of their rising again; but we must have faith in God, as George had in his father. We must trust our heavenly Father; for his word is sure to be fulfilled. This is the very illustration of this great subject used by the apostle Paul: "That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die.

MAKE ME A CHRISTIAN.

I well recollect, in the course of my labors, a poor Hindoo youth, who followed me about the garden at the school, asking me to make him a christian.

I said, "It is impossible, my boy. If it is possible at all, it is possible only through the Lord Jesus Christ to make you a christian. Pray to him."

How well I recollect the sweet voice of that boy when he soon after came to me, and said, "The Lord Jesus Christ has taken his place in my heart."

I asked, "How is that?"

He replied, "I prayed, and said, O Lord Jesus Christ, if you please, make me a christian! and he was so kind that he came down from heaven, and has lived in my heart ever since."

How simple and how touching! "Lord Jesus Christ, if you please, make me a christian!"

Can you say that you have made a similar appeal in your spirit as this poor Hindoo boy? And can you say, my young friends, that Jesus Christ has come down from heaven to live in your hearts?—Rev. Dr. Boaz.

OBEDIENCE TO PARENTS.—It has sometimes been said that disobedience to parents is the beginning of all crime. If this is true, and to a great extent it undoubtedly is, how important that the habit of disobedience should never be formed! Beware, young reader, how you disobey the slightest command of your parents, for it will lead you to disobey others, and then to disobey the laws of your country and the laws of God.

LEISURE HOURS.—It was a beautiful observation of the late William Hazlitt, that "There is room enough in human life to crowd almost every art and science in it. If we pass no day without a line—visit no place without the company of books—we may with ease fill libraries or empty them of their contents. The more we do, the more we can do; the more busy we are, the more leisure we have.

WHAT TO HATE.—"I hate to learn my lesson," cried a little fellow, shoving back his book as if he never wanted to see it again.

"Hate, my boy, hate! Do you know what a terrible word that is? Never hate anything but sin; and you may hate that as much as you please."

— Nobody takes a reproof so kindly as he that deserves most to be commended.

IMMORTALITY BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

"By all that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live."—Deut. 8: 3.

Oh, felt in signs that from afar
Touch the cold heart within,
How beautiful Thy mercies are
Beside Thy children's sin!

On the steep paths that homeward rise,
What gladdening lights we meet!
What tokens fix the wandering eyes,
And speed the lingering feet!

When at our heart's blind exodus
From shame and bonds we flee—
Not heeding what Thou art to us,
Or what we are to Thee—

We struggle on with hopes confined,
We fight for ends impure,
While heaven before and earth behind
Alike are insecure.

But angels on Thy face intent
With love we do not know—
Glad searchers of Thy will—are sent
To watch the way we go.

And things we have not power to miss
Their gentle witness bear,
That he who calls us to his bliss,
Our Lord himself, is there.

Then while his saving name we trace,
Though yet in outline dim,
What deserts of our heart's disgrace
Confess themselves to him!

And as his glory from its height
Dawns on the humbled eye,
And we take refuge in the light
That leads us forth to die,

How blessed in the wearing strife,
Amid strongholds undone,
So to be taught that light and life—
That light and love are one!

We pass through sundry kinds of death
With only Him in view;
And lo! we breathe undying breath,
And earth and heaven are new.

The secret of our Master's joy
Unfolding more and more,
Thy word grows sharper to destroy,
And quicker to restore.

For, Lord, we trust it—as we can
When deed and word agree,
Revealing what thou art to man,
And what man is to thee.

For the World's Crisis.

JOHN 5: 28, 29.

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

This passage stands directly in the way of the theory of no resurrection of the wicked dead. Many are the efforts put forth to try to get it out of the way, but still it stands impregnable. It is the language of Him who spake as never man spake before or since. It is the highest authority.

Those who deny that those who have died in their sins will be raised from the dead, and be brought to judgment for their iniquity, have a great variety of interpretations of this scripture, and no two of the leaders hardly that agree. Among the different expositions and efforts to get it out of the way are the following:

1. That it has no reference to the resurrection of the dead literally; it is to be applied to the Jews. Those of them that believed came forth to life, and those who did not believe came forth to condemnation.

2. Others admit that the twenty-fifth verse teaches a literal resurrection, as in the case of the widow's son, of Lazarus, and others whom Jesus raised from the dead; but deny that the twenty-eigth and twenty-ninth verses have any reference to the literal resurrection whatever, but are to be taken figuratively.

3. Others admit that the language so plainly teaches the resurrection of two classes that it cannot be misunderstood; but claim that both classes are christians, and will finally be saved. One class are christians who have done good; and the other are christians who have done evil, but will be saved.

To sustain this, they refer to Acts 24: 15, where Paul speaks of the resurrection of the just and the unjust, as being two classes of christians. An unjust christian would be about as hard to find as a white blackbird.

4. Others admit that a literal resurrection of both righteous and wicked is taught; but claim that the righteous only will be raised to life,—that the wicked will come forth and stand before the judgment-seat, but have no life in them,—will stand up a mass of dead carcasses,—I suppose like the mummies that were thrown out by the earthquake in South America last year.

5. Others claim that the coming forth in the text has no reference to the resurrection in any sense whatever. That all men, good and bad, are brought before Christ to be judged, and that the judgment is now going on.

6. Others claim that the word translated "graves" is not hades, and therefore can not mean literally graves, but must be figurative. Many are free to admit that John 5: 28, 29, stands directly opposed to the theory of no resurrection for the wicked; yet they say the general tenor of Scripture is on their side, and hence this passage must be made to bend to their views.

Notwithstanding all the above expositions and interpretations, the passage reads—"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation"; and needs rather to be BELIEVED than to be interpreted, or figured away.

The word translated "graves" in the text is mneemion, and is found forty-nine times in the Bible. It is translated "tomb" and "tombs" seven times, and was the place where Jesus was buried. Joseph took the body of Jesus, "and laid it in his own new tomb [mneemion], which he had hewn in the rock."

It is translated "grave" and "graves" nine times. Four times applied to the grave of Lazarus, and twice to the "graves" that were opened when Christ arose, and with him the many bodies of the saints, as the first fruits. Then in the text—"All that are in the mneemion (graves) shall hear his voice." Once, where Christ said to the hypocrites that they were as "graves" which appear not; and in Rev. 11: 9, where the two witnesses were not allowed to be buried after they were slain. Thirty-three times it is translated "sepulchre" and "sepulchres." It is used twenty-eight times to show the place where Jesus was buried, and once where Abraham was buried, and once the place where David was buried; which Peter said was with them till that day; and three times as the graves of the prophets. In all of the thirty-three places it is used to designate the burial place of those literally dead. All that are in the mneemion, whether graves, tombs, or sepulchres, shall hear his voice, and come forth.

Men may be lulled to sleep by the idea that they never will be raised from the dead and be brought to judgment; but they will find at the last, when it is too late, that there is no way to "escape the damnation of gehenna." If the wicked dead are not raised out of hades and mneemion, they escape the damnation of gehenna. They are to be "burned up root and branch," and be consumed like the fat of lambs, and all be destroyed together, which cannot be true if they are not raised from the dead. People may argue, and argue, and suppose, and reason, and figure, but the fire of gehenna,—"the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone,"—stares the ungodly in the face. I know they do not like to hear it, but if they reject God's offered mercy, and love, and pardon, and tread under foot God's Son, they will have to experience the "sorer punishment," the "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish," in the furnace of fire, where there is "wailing and gnashing of teeth."

These things are not to be made light of, or figured away. They are as immutable as their Author. The Lord Jesus Christ is the great Teacher sent from God. To him must we listen. Him must we hear, or be destroyed. If there is any thing that would seem to conflict with his words in the Bible, it must be explained by him, and not his words be made to bend to any other expressions in the Bible. I say seeming contradiction, for there is nothing in all the rest of the Bible but what harmonizes with Jesus in John 5: 28, 29, unless it be wrested from its legitimate meaning.

When Jesus uttered these words, he well knew the doctrine of the resurrection was denied and disbelieved. The Sadducees denied the resurrection of any, and the Pharisees denied the resurrection of the wicked, and only admitted the resurrection of the righteous. So Jesus put in this authoritative language for the Sadducees and Pharisees of all time to come. "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation"; or, as Campbell's translation reads, "Wonder not at this; for the time cometh, when all that are in the graves shall come forth; they that have done good, shall arise to enjoy life; they that have done evil, shall arise to suffer punishment."

If Jesus does not mean what he says, he certainly ought to have told us what he did mean, or have told us who had the authority to tell what he meant. A. P. Moore.

For the World's Crisis.

A BRAND FOR PERDITION.

It is a most terrible thought that some of the readers of the Crisis may be brands for perdition. Dreadful it is to think that it will find some fuel, and what if the reader should be fed on by the flames of divine indignation and just retribution. How appalling to the stoutest heart if he knew that he was to writhe in gehenna fire, and be "burnt up" soul and body there. Reader, think! The things that you so often read are realities.

Christianity is a real thing. Christ is a real, living Savior; but, having nothing to do with him, you will certainly come to the receptacle of all things that offend, to endure the scorching, consuming blaze of a holy and insulted God. And you will find all real. Thrust your hand into the flame—is it real? A cry of anguish, a shriek of pain, answers the question. Real? Of course it is real. You see the real fire; you feel it real; you hear its real hiss; there can be no deception. If that be real, so is the fire that shall burn and devour; and oh! the thought alone—tell me how repugnant—to be cast there, without chance of deliverance, and without being able to prevent or avert the doom.

Some among men we know must be there. Art thou the man? Let me tell you the class, and you will soon know if you are the man journeying to the sulphurous cavern of the damned. They are men who do not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the sacrifice for their sins, and accept him as such, finding liberty and life by his death. They are men who are the servants of sin, and are earning wages. What wages? The wages of sin, which is death. They are men who are heaping up something—"wrath against the day of wrath." They are men who are destroying themselves by beastly, vicious, and unholy passions. They are men who can live on under the gracious beaming of Divine mercy, and are so ungrateful as never to acknowledge his grace and ask pardon for their ingratitude. Now, art thou the man? Don't shirk the question. I know it is repulsive. I know it is humiliating. I know it is disagreeable to flesh and blood.

Sinner, shall I say for you as I once said for myself, "I am the man! it is true; God knows me; God has pictured me; it is no use to disown what is said; Paul said to Agrippa, 'I know that thou believest'; and I do believe, I am forced to believe that I am now only fit to be a brand of perdition"?

This conclusion, then, would shut you up to despair if there was no "redemption" provided. But there is a "redemption in Christ Jesus"; for God has provided him as the Ransom. Now believe in him, self-condemned one, and—it is a real fact—you go free. God has provided, and God has accepted him for all who believe; and in order that the just, who live by faith, might be eternally saved from the fire, they are built up in Christ; they are formed into his body.

Will God cast Jesus away? Never! never! Impossible! Will God cast me away if I am a believer in Jesus? Never. Will God cast me away if I am without—outside of Jesus? Yes. To be outside the Ark is to be presently deluged in the seething fires of judgment; is to be—oh! tell me what the meaning of it—a lost soul!

A lost soul! A lost soul! But "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." It is real—real as the fire; "shall be saved." Are you not concerned?

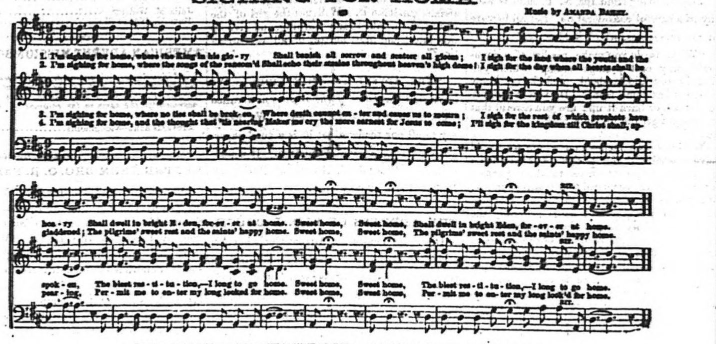
SIGHING FOR HOME.

Music by Amanda Bailey.



Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 18[illegible], by AMANDA BAILEY, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts.

A GOOD PRAYER-MEETING.

There are several conditions indispensable to a good prayer-meeting. Concentration of mind on God and the object of the meeting are essential to its success. This should be accompanied with emotion such as makes sensible of the divine presence, bringing us into communion with God, and begetting in us a lively faith in his promises, and at the same time imposing a burden on the spirits which will lead us to yearning for deliverance—an earnest seeking that we may find the blessing which God stands ready to confer upon us and upon others in answer to prayer. Such a meeting should be pre-eminently free and social; unless it is, it will fail to be a good meeting. There should be the largest liberty and the least possible embarrassment. Hearts should come into as close approximation with God and each other as they are susceptible, and all with equal privilege try to do something to contribute to the interest and efficiency of the meeting. The nearer the approach to an agonized spirit the better. Christ agonized for us in the garden, and he would have us agonize for the Spirit and for the salvation of souls.

The prayer-meeting should have a leader, and that not always the minister. The deacons should lead in turn, or some persons selected for that purpose who will prepare themselves for the work, and begin and close the meeting at the appropriate time, never delaying the commencement, or allowing the meeting to drag or to be spun out to weariness, and thus lead to dissatisfaction.

The prayer-meeting should have before it some specific object. The members should adopt the general rule, not to talk and pray about everything that can be thought of. This has a tendency to distract the mind and scatter the thoughts instead of concentrating them. In such cases nothing, or at most, but little is accomplished. Prayers are offered without point or object, and consequently without faith; and of course they will not be answered. The petitioners themselves do not expect them to be answered; they would be very much surprised if they were. But if the prayer-meeting has before it some specific object, as the revival of God's work about which thought is busy and for which fervent prayer is offered by those who feel that they must see it, it will not be useless. Who ever knew such prayers offered in vain? Such a prayer-meeting is a success. It is just what every lover of Jesus sincerely and ardently desires.

We have very often been astonished to see leading members of the church throw off all personal responsibility in this matter and imagine that it all belongs to the pastor. This is a great mistake. The prayer-meeting is emphatically a meeting of the church on which its own existence, prosperity and spirituality largely depend—a meeting to be sustained whether there is a pastor or not. It cannot be neglected with impunity. The penalty will most assuredly be felt. Then support the prayer-meeting, not only by your presence but by your co-operation. Do all you can to make it good and profitable to your own soul as well as to the souls of others.—Morning Star.

ARE YOU WAITING?

O say, are you waiting, dear brethren, to-day,
With lamps trimmed and burning for Jesus to come?
Or saying, my Lord doth his coming delay?
Bold, true faithful servants, I feel he has some.
O say, have you on the whole armor of God?
Your loins girt about with his glorious truth?
Your feet with the gospel of peace ever shod?
Let no man despise us, dear friends, for our youth,
For an helmet the hope of salvation's ours;
Above all, let us take the bright shield of faith
To quench all the darts of the enemy's powers,
And love not our lives even unto death.
And when the Chief Shepherd in glory appears,
With crowns pure, unfading, for you and for me,
He'll wipe from all faces grief's sorrowing tears,
And lead us to fountains pure, living and free.

THE TIME WE LIVE IN.

It is believed by christians generally, that after 6000 years from the creation, another thousand years will follow, as "the day of the Lord." And as God required man to "labor six days, and rest the seventh," as the Lord's day; so, after six thousand years, in which sin, sorrow, and sin abound, the seventh thousand will be a new dispensation; the "day of the Lord;" when Satan will be restrained from "going about, like a roaring lion" (1 Pet. 5: 8), and deceiving mankind, and the "kingdom of God" will be established "under the whole heaven" (Dan. 2: 44;) and the "saints will possess the kingdom" (Dan. 7: 27,) or "reign with Christ a thousand years." Rev. 20: 6. Now the question arises, When will the six thousand years end?

We have a chronology of the Bible history, prepared by Abp. Usher, and adopted by King James, at the time of the translation of the common version of the Bible. And according to that chronology, Christ was born in Bethlehem, in the year of the world, 4004. Since that time, 1869 years have passed. Now add 1869 to 4004, and we have 5873, which falls 127 short of 6000. Now we read in Acts 13 concerning God's dealings with the children of Israel; how "he brought them out of Egypt," through the wilderness and into the land of Canaan, and then divided to them their land by lot (Josh. ch. 15), and then "gave to them judges about the space of 450 years, till Samuel the prophet." Now take the date, according to Usher's chronology, of the time this land was divided (B. C. 1444,) then pass on to the time Samuel gathered the children of Israel together at Mizpeh (1 Sam. 7: 5,) which he places B. C. 1120; and then subtract 1120 from 1444 and we find that instead of its being 450 years, as Paul said, Usher makes it but 324; falling short of Paul's statement 126 years. Now if Paul's was correct, and there be no other error in Usher's chronology, to get the true time this 126 years must be added to the 5873; which makes the present age of the world, from the creation of Adam, 5999 years, showing that A. D. 1870 ends the 6000 years of the world's history.

But we may suppose this to be not fully correct; for many have recently made a critical examination of the chronology of the world, as drawn from the Old Testament; examining the dates of the different events, and they have generally come to the conclusion that the 6000 years end in 1875.

The question now arises, Will the next thousand years be the great Sabbath, or great "day of the Lord," when "Satan shall be bound for a thousand years" (Rev. ch. 20); and "the prince of the power of the air;" "the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience," to be cast out? Eph. 2: 2. Is it not the time of "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began?" Acts 3: 21. Is it not the time spoken of, when the Lord shall have "the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession?" and to obtain this possession, will "break them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel?" Ps. 2: 8, 9. Is it not the time of the harvest of the "wheat and tares," and consequently the harvest of the world; when the "Son of man will be revealed?"

Should it be asked, Is there not to be a thousand years millennium, when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11: 9,) before the harvest? The answer must be, No; for Christ said the wheat and tares should "both grow together till the harvest;" that "the harvest is the end of the world." "The good seed are the children of the kingdom," and the "tares of the wicked one." Matt. 13: 38. So there is no chance for a millennium till Christ comes in person.

But will not the time have come, that Christ spoke of, when he said to his disciples, "If I go away, I will come again and receive you to myself; that where I am, there ye may be also?" John 14: 3. Will it not be the time the angel spoke of, who said, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go up into heaven?" Acts 1: 11. Will it not be the time when Jesus will take possession of his throne, that he referred to when he said, "He that overcometh shall sit with me in my throne, even as I have overcome, and am sit down with my Father in his throne?" Rev. 3: 21. Will it not be the time when the twelve apostles of the Lamb will "sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel?" Matt. 19: 28. Is it not the time Paul referred to, when he said: "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, and fashion it like to his glorious body?" Phil. 3: 20, 21. And also, when he said: "The Lord himself shall descend with a shout, with the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. And, again, Paul said: "We shall not all sleep; but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye; at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, incorruptible." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.

Christ said: As it was in the days of Noah, and Lot, "so shall it be when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17: 26. Though warned, very few who were interested believed thas the things threatened would take place. So it will be in relation to the coming of Christ.

It is said in Revelation under the sound of the sixth trumpet, an angel appeared and "set his right foot on the sea and his left foot upon the earth, and sware by him that liveth forever and ever, that time shall be no longer." Rev. 10: 6. The present is believed to be that time; and many of God's servants have been sounding the cry for the last twenty-seven years, that the end is at hand, and have been fulfilling this prophecy. Now mark! This declaration was to be made under the sixth trumpet; yet the end was not to be until the seventh angel should begin to sound.

God in his goodness has been pleased to give to man this admonition and warning, that every one may choose his own position; and if not right, none shall have excuse.

Another prophecy, to be fulfilled at the same time, is: "There shall be scoffers in the last days, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Pet. 3: 34. Again, Paul says to his brethren: "Yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night; for when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them. . . . But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief; ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night." 1 Thess. 5: 2–7.

Now, dear reader, if the Lord shall soon appear, will he find you one of "the children of light, and of the day?" or will he come to you as a "thief in the night?" Is your "conversation in heaven," and are you looking for the Lord Jesus to "come and change your vile body and fashion it like to his own glorious body?" Phil. 3: 21. Or are you one of the class Paul said were "the enemies of the cross, whose end is destruction, . . . whose glory is in their shame who mind earthly things." v. 18.

Near the close of Paul's life he said: "Henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me in that day, and not to me only, but to all those that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 8. Will any that love this appearing of the Lord be found scoffing at those who are looking for that appearing? No. Noah had been in the ark seven days before it began to rain. The people outside had an opportunity to exhibit their mirth over what they regarded as his folly. And from what we now see of persons making mirth over the article of ascension robes (an utter fiction,) and the mistakes which some foolish ones have made in setting specified time for the Lord to appear, after Noah had been shut in the ark five or six days, should we not suppose some would surround the ark and attempt to tantalize him, by crying: "Ho, old Noah! Will you tell us when you expect to sail? There are no clouds in sight yet. Perhaps you have made a mistake in the time. Suppose you come outside awhile, and enjoy the fresh air with us!" The wise ones of that day did not believe there would be a flood. They scoffed at the man of God. And as it was then, so shall it be when the Son of man is revealed. The flood came; so will also the Lord Jesus come.

And when he comes, as surely as Noah and his family were saved, so surely will his jewels all be found and be taken care of; while the careless, and scoffers, will be left. How many will then say: If I had studied my Bible and taken that for my counsellor instead of following false teachers, I might have been saved; but now it is too late! How many teachers will then say: If I had followed the teachings of the Bible, as my conscience told me, and followed the example of Christ, and his apostles, and preached the true gospel to the poor as they did, it would now have been well with me! But instead of that I have regarded popularity, and sought the praise of man more than the praise of God. I have sought the applause of the rich, and worldly, more than the welfare and salvation of the poor. And now my reward, and doom, is that of a blind leader of the blind. There is now no hope for me in Christ; for he has said of such as me, "Many shall say to me in that day, Have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" And the answer must be, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity." Matt. 7: 22, 23.

Reader, do you love the appearing of the Lord? Do you love Jesus with such love that it would be a pleasure at any time to meet him personally? If not, you are not prepared to meet him in peace; and in this preparation make no delay!

BIBLE vs. THEORIES.—No. 4.

The Bible gives us the succeeding events as they will transpire in their order, and as Jesus will introduce and successively and officially fulfill them, on and after his departure from the "true tabernacle," in which he is now ministering, with as much distinctive clearness, as little ambiguity, and as much precision and definiteness, as it gives us his birth, sorrows, teachings, betrayal, death, burial, resurrection, ascension, and tabernacle employment.

Let one rule be always paramount; viz., every positive, unequivocal declaration of the Scriptures must be received and believed. Illustration: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1: 11.

The connected circumstances in relation to this "same Jesus" present this scripture to us without any circumlocution. This Jesus was the one of Nazareth, born of a virgin, in Bethlehem of Judea, of Jewish extraction according to the flesh; a teacher in Israel, pointed out by John the baptizer as "the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world"; the promised Messias, on whom they should believe, in whom they should trust, to whom they should give heed; who went about doing good, healing their sicknesses, raising their dead to life again, preaching the good news of the kingdom of God at hand; who was seen and known throughout all the courts of Judea; was daily in the temple at Jerusalem, giving instruction; was betrayed by Judas Iscariot, tried by Pilate and Herod, condemned to die, and publicly executed, his death certified to by the Roman centurion, his dead body begged of Pilate, the Roman governor, by Joseph; who was buried, his tomb closed up and sealed with the Roman signet, and closely watched and guarded by a company of Roman soldiers for three days and nights; and yet he was raised to life from the dead.

And these same soldiers certified the fact to his betrayers and murderers, and they paid those same soldiers a large sum of money as a bribe, to induce them to falsify themselves, and deny their own statement of truth; for subsequently it proved to be truth; for this same Jesus was afterwards seen alive at several different times, and on one occasion by over five hundred witnesses; and he was with some of them, going in and out and eating and drinking with them (after he rose to life, prior to his ascension), for the space of forty days. "These things were not done in a corner," as one of his avowed as well as most implacable enemies afterwards testified.

And now in open daylight, in the presence of them all, he is just as visibly, bodily, and actually taken up,—corporeally translated, as he had been corporeally born of flesh, lived and died in the flesh, and had had a resurrection of the flesh, and declared himself to be "flesh and bones" after that resurrection.

These are some of the attendant circumstances in which the Scripture declaration comes to us, in the most positive terms, that this same Jesus shall so come as he was seen to go; and I do not hesitate to say that it must be received and believed, or there is just as positive a denial of a plain Bible truth as there is a plain declaration in the Bible of that truth; and all attempts to theorize away such a simple, unequivocal declaration of Bible, would only lay the foundation, carry up the walls, and put on the cap-stone, for spiritualizing all the Bible, Jesus, heaven, and God, and leave us nothing, not even the shadow of an immaterial myth.

What is true of this passage is equally so of every other positive declaration contained in holy writ; and that which is true of those who endeavor to fritter away the plain declaration in relation to Jesus' second, personal coming, by reducing its proportions to a spiritual manifestation, is just as unquestionably true of any and all who undertake in like manner to fritter away the clear, emphatic, and literal promises of God to Abraham and his seed in relation to the future blessings of this world. This seed Paul (Gal. 3) declares to be Christ and those that have put on Christ. The Lamb of God and the Lamb's wife, "one seed," and "one flesh"; for he that is joined unto the Lord is one Spirit.

Olena, O. G. W. Stetson.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

69. The infant Christ was taken into Egypt. "When he arose he took the young child and his mother by night and departed into Egypt, and was there until the death of Herod. . . But when Herod was dead . . . he took the young child and his mother and came . . . and dwelt in a city called Nazareth."—Matt. 1: 14, 15, 19, 23.

The infant Christ was not taken into Egypt. "And when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord. . . And when they had performed all things, according to the law of the Lord, they returned . . . to their own city, Nazareth."—Luke 2: 21, 29.

The skeptic's only difficulty on this point appears to be that he has got his chronology badly mixed. Luke writes on this subject of an event which took place a year previous to that recorded by Matthew. He says, "And when the days of her purification were accomplished (i.e. thirty three days, according to the law of Moses,) they brought him [the child] to Jerusalem to present him to the Lord, [please read the beautiful law recorded in Ex: 13: 2, Ex. 22: 29] and to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord—a pair of turtle doves or two young pigeons. And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee—to their own city, Nazareth."

And according to the best chronology it was a year after this event, that Joseph being warned of God in a dream, took the young child and his mother by night and fled into Egypt, where they remained until the death of Herod.

Before leaving this subject we ought to remark, for the information (?) of the infidel, that the events recorded in the Bible are not always arranged in the precise order in which they occurred. It is by no means necessary, in order for the Bible to be true, that all the events recorded by Matthew must chronologically precede those recorded by Mark and Luke. We see, therefore, in conclusion, that after the days of her (Mary's) purification, they returned to their own city Nazareth, and dwelt there a year, after which the infant Christ was taken into Egypt. Any ordinary mind can see the harmony between Matthew and Luke on this subject.

70. Christ was tempted in the wilderness.—"And immediately [after Christ's baptism] the spirit driveth him into the wilderness. And he was there in the wilderness forty days tempted of Satan."—Mark 1: 12, 13

Christ was not tempted in the wilderness.—"And the third day [after Christ's baptism] there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee. . . . Both Jesus was called and his disciples to the marriage." John 2: 1, 2.

This contradiction (?) was manufactured by the three words, after Christ's baptism, which had been inserted by the infidel in the last text. This statement inclosed in brackets is simply false. And had the skeptic read the previous chapter with any attention, he might have known it to be such, for it gives no account whatever of Christ's baptism.

The subjects of the chapter are, 1. The position and office of Christ, and, 2. The testimony of John that he was the Christ; and this he proves by a statement of what occurred four years previous, when he immersed the Messiah in the Jordan. And the next day after this, it appears he was with the same persons (or other unbelievers) again, for seeing Jesus coming unto him he said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," and adds, "This is he of whom I said, (at the time of the baptism, see Matt. 3: 11,) "After me cometh a man which is preferred before me." He then continues his testimony with the words, "And I knew him not, but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining upon him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God."

In John 2: 1, we find the skeptic's quotation, "And on the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee," etc. The third day after what? Not the third day after Christ's baptism as the infidel states, for that took place four years previous (as is easily seen by noticing the chronology at the head of the chapters) but the third day after the events recorded in the foregoing chapter, that is, after John thus testifies to others that Jesus was the Christ, and proves his testimony by a statement of what he himself witnessed.

This proposition exhibits a dishonesty so bold and shameless that none but an infidel would have the assurance to hold it up before a civilized world.—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

CHICAGO.

The meetings in Chicago are seasons of special interest. The light and truth are spreading in all directions. Some fifteen or twenty have requested prayers, and the saints are rejoicing in the Lord. Last Sabbath, (Oct. 3d), was a most precious day. The love-feast in the morning was a feast indeed. We have a variety of nations in the meetings, but they all speak the same language in Christ. Many new ones are becoming interested in the great truths of the Bible that have been long buried up by traditions. Prominent men in society begin to see and feel that these things demand their serious attention. Those who have looked upon our meetinge with contempt are now very attentive, and anxious to hear all they can about the reasons of our hope. They listen with the best attention, and are honestly inquiring, Are these things so? They are tired of listening to the popular fables of these times, and inquiring for the "old paths." Some have found them and are rejoicing greatly. They are truly new creatures. Those who had been professors before, invariably testify that their joy and peace, faith, hope and love, have been greatly increased since believing this, that some are pleased to call "infidelity."

We are holding meetings a part of the time in Farwell Hall, which is the largest and best in the city. It will hold some three thousand people. It is the best hall in which we have ever spoken. Notwithstanding its size, it is so constructed that it may be easily filled with an ordinary voice. Some fifteen hundred have been present, and given the very best attention. Quite a number have asked questions, which has helped to make the truth shine. Spiritualism has taken strong hold in Chicago, and its supporters are bold in its defence. We have commenced an attack upon this enemy of God, Christ and the Bible, and felt in a special manner the sustaining hand of the Most High. We purpose, in the name of the Lord, to press the battle to the gates of the enemy.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

I would like to ask a few questions, which, if you deem worthy, I would like to have you answer through the Crisis.

(1) Do you believe that "times" are to grow any worse before the Lord will come than they are at the present time?

(2) There is a passage in Rev. 20: 4, where it speaks as though there was, or is to be, a "beast" which some would "worship" and receive his mark in their hands. To what period does it refer?

(3) Why is it that the church of Christ is not more united?

(4) Why is it that the church was in error so long, and how did it get into it?

(5) Millions of christians have died who were in error in regard to their future state. Are they to be destroyed for their error?

(6) Do we hazard our interests by laboring with those who are in error? There are many in the churches, of divers denominations, who believe that Christ's appearing is at hand.

Yours in hope of a glorious immortality through Jesus Christ our Redeemer.

READER.

(1) The Scriptures plainly teach that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse." 2 Tim. 3: 13. The apostle expressly says this state of things will prevail "in the last days." The Savior compares the condition of society at the time of his second coming with that in the days of Noah and Lot. Facts are abundant to prove that there has been a great increase of wickedness in the last few years; but we may expect a continued increase of crime and infidelity from now till Jesus comes.

(2.) We think the "beast" and "image" spoken of in Rev. 20: 4 are the same as we find described in Rev. 13: 11-18. We do not see sufficient evidence to convince us that this is all fulfilled. We believe its full accomplishment is just at hand; and that its fulfilment will close the present dispensation.

(3.) The lack of union in the professed church of Christ is in consequence of a lack of the Holy Spirit; and the reason why so many are destitute of that, is because they are continually doing, saying, or thinking something which grieves away the Spirit of God. There can be no christian union without the aid of the Holy Spirit. The real christians have always loved each other, because such are "filled with the Spirit."

(4.) The church was "in error so long" because its members chose to follow popular creeds instead of the word of the Lord—great men instead of Christ. The church got into error in the same way it kept in it; by following some popular teacher, like Origen, who departed from the literal interpretation of the Scriptures.

(5.) One is not condemned for being in error till he has seen the truth and rejected it; or had an opportunity to come to the light and refused. Men may be in error and be christians; but cannot be innocent when they hold fast to a popular error and reject an unpopular truth.

(6.) If we refuse to labor with all who are in error, we might refuse to labor with every one, turn bigot, and perish in self-righteousness. Work every where, and do all the good possible.

THE RAINBOW.

We have just received a note from Dr. Leask, Editor of the Rainbow, London, informing us that its subscription price in America is $2.50 in gold, or its equivalent. If those who wish this valuable monthly will send us their address and the money, we will cheerfully act as agent for them without charge, as we feel anxious that the truth should be sustained in England.

In his letter the Dr. says:—

"I greatly appreciate the sympathy of American brethren with my difficult labor in this country. My heart is cheered by your kind thoughts and purposes. If the Rainbow is sustained, I anticipate a theological revolution in England, which will clear God's precious truth from the accumulated errors of centuries. Oh that this anticipation may be realized. Christ has done a great work for us; let gratitude prompt us to consecrate all we are and have to him.

Those who are wedded to popular theology are doing much to crush Bro. Leask, and, if possible, oblige him to suspend the publication of the Rainbow, in case he allows it to contain articles on the mortal nature of man, and the final destruction of the wicked. We hope our brethren in America will lend him a helping hand.

PURE THOUGHTS.

But few realize the importance of keeping the thoughts pure. Thoughts are as the fountain to the stream. If we would have a pure stream, the fountain must be kept pure; so if we would be holy in conversation, the thoughts must be kept pure. Says Jesus:—"The pure in heart . . . shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. The Scriptures inform us that "wicked imaginations" "are an abomination" to the Lord. It would be well for each reader to ask, Do I allow "wicked imaginations?" If so, then the heart is not pure.

The following is from the Advance:—

"It has been said that the man who governs his thoughts when alone can control his tongue when in company. It is just as true and far more important that the man who keeps his thoughts pure will keep his hands from sin. Now and then society is startled by a crime which explodes the reputation of some one who had stood high in its esteem. But such explosions are no spontaneous affairs of an instant. The train of powder was slowly laid. No man commits embezzlement or adultery who has not allowed himself unself-rebuked to think embezzlement or adultery. Over how many young men, like a sword hung by a hair, are poised these searching words of Christ: "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery already with her in his heart."

DISHONESTY.

The dishonesty, deception, and swindling in trade at the present day is alarming. Covetousness—one of the signs of the last days—is the mainspring that moves men to cheat and lie in order to get more money than an article is worth.

The following article from an ex-dealer is to the point. It was published in the Boston Daily Times, of Aug. 31st, 1869. The writer says:—

Only the initiated understand the system, and few of them are willing to admit the extent of the frauds practised on the unsuspecting. We belong to the class of the uninitiated, and we are heartily ashamed of our connection with the business, although we take the credit to ourself of never having willingly deceived any one. Our separation from the business was therefore a necessity. The sellers, are, as a rule, in each others' confidence, and many carry the system of extortion to an alarming extent to show their smartness. It is a fine boast to be able to say, "I charged a hundred per cent on a set of jewelry, and got it."

When a buyer enters one of these stores, he or she is received with marked politeness. The proprietor or clerk, who serves the customer, commences the duty by remarking the weather, the dullness of the times, the struggle poor people have to make in order to live, etc., all of which is listened to by most customers with pleasure. Thus the seller wins the buyer's confidence and half of the work of getting a large price is accomplished. If the article asked for requires to be measured, the seller keeps up the conversation while he is engaged in measuring, thereby taking the attention of the buyer from the work, and enabling himself to shorten his yards at pleasure. After the article is done up and paid for, the usual question, "Anything else, miss?" or "ma'am," is asked, in a tone as soft as the sewing-silk they retail over the counter. The customer departs in ecstasies at the polite treatment she has received from the seller.

The method adopted to lure customers into stores by posting outside an article marked very low, is becoming very common; very few of the dealers have a duplicate of the article, however, but something of the same kind which comes a little higher, is brought out to the customer. Once inside, people do not care to come out without buying something; the object is accomplished, and the seller laughs at his ingenuity.

The articles on which the largest profits are charged are usually small articles, and can the more easily be put off at a large per centage of profit. Buttons which cost no more than from thirty to fifty cents a gross, are retailed at from five to twelve cents a dozen. Cent per cent, and sometimes more, is got on these articles. Silk, crochet, Marseilles, and jet buttons also bring large profits, from seventy-five to one hundred per cent. An extensive fancy goods dealer said recently, "I wouldn't be afraid of making a fortune in a few years by confining myself solely to the sale of thread and buttons."

Our space will not allow us to enter into a full detail, or enumerate the various articles on which such monstrously large profits are made. Suffice it to say, that the whole system, from beginning to end, is one which demands a radical change. It is full of fraud, and many of the dealers are themselves disgusted with it. But the love of money is greater than the love of honor, and they still practise it.

This is not the only business in which dishonesty is found. All trades have their fraud, and we feel it our duty to expose them, as far as our knowledge of the various systems will enable us to do so.

ARE YOU INNOCENT?

The following from the N. Y. Mail is worthy of a careful consideration. Let all beware of "covetousness, which is idolatry."

"What use do you make, reader, of a counterfeit fifty cent postage 'stamp' which you find in your pocket-book, and do not know where it has come from? Do you invariably tear it up, or burn it up; are you careful that it does not get out of your pocket, into circulation?

We have seen men—men whom we would have trusted with our pocket book—return a counterfeit fifty-cent piece to their pockets after they were convinced that it was spurious. What does such an action mean—provided that the man is ignorant, as is generally the case, as to where he got the counterfeit? It means that he is not ready to bear the loss of fifty cents like an honest man. The action is a dishonest action. He has no right to put a counterfeit where there is any possibility of his passing it into circulation again. The honorable proceeding is to burn it or tear it up the very moment its worthlessness becomes evident. Do not hesitate a second. If you have not this habit fixed upon you, cultivate it! Without it you are in league with counterfeiters. You are one of the 'gang'—you are not an honest man. Let this rule apply to a ten cent 'stamp' and to a ten dollar greenback equally and rigidly. There are only two questions to be asked: Is this a counterfeit? Yes. Do I know who gave it to me? No. Burn it—tear it up—do not return it to your pocket, as you value your honesty!

There is a law compelling every bank to stamp the word 'counterfeit,' in large black letters, across every spurious pill presented at its counter, for whatever purpose it may be presented, under any circumstances, and upon whatever bank in the United States it may be counterfeit. We once saw an apparently respectable man present a twenty dollar bill to the teller of the Michigan Insurance Bank, in Detroit. He merely wished to know if it was a counterfeit. The teller made no answer, but simply brought a powerful stamp across its face, and handed it back with the word 'counterfeit' staring its astonished proprietor in the face. We never saw a darker cloud pass over a human countenance. Oath followed oath in an ineffectual effort to express the man's indignation. Every oath stamped 'counterfeit' upon that man's character in letters as large and plain as those upon the bill. Not that he would have acted as a direct accomplice of professional counterfeiters; but he was not prepared to do what common honesty demanded—destroy the spurious bank note and meet his own loss honestly."

DIVORCES AND INFANTICIDE.

At a meeting of the Old School General Assembly, Mr. Beer offered the following:—

"Whereas, It is well known that unscriptural views of the marriage relations are becoming prevalent in some portions of our land, so that its obligations are disregarded by many, and separations of husband and wife, and divorces for slight and unwarrantable reasons are becoming frequent every year, and whereas, the horrible crime of infanticide is also on the increase; and whereas, the evils which these errors and crimes have already brought upon the church and country, and the worse evils which they threaten in the near future, make it imperative that the whole power of the ministry and church of Jesus Christ should be put forth in maintenance of truth or of virtue in regard to these things;

Therefore, resolved, First, that we urge upon all ministers of our church the duty of giving instruction to the people of their respective charges, as to the Scriptural doctrine concerning the marriage relation, and we warn them against joining in wedlock any who may have been divorced upon the three Scriptural grounds, and that we also exhort church sessions to the exercise of due discipline in the cases of those members who may be guilty of violating the law of Christ in this particular.

That we regard the destruction by parents of their own offspring, before birth, with abhorrence as a crime against God and against nature, and that as there are many influences at work in public and in secret to corrupt the minds of the people, until the frequency of such murders is no longer sought to be concealed, we hereby warn those that are guilty of the crime, that they cannot inherit eternal life, and that it is hypocrisy for such persons to remain in connection with the visible church of Christ, and that we exhort those who have been called to preach the gospel, and all who love purity and the truth, and who would avert the just judgments of Almighty God from the State and Nation, that they be no longer silent or tolerant of these things—but that they take a bold stand, that the floods of impurity and cruelty may be stayed."

DEPARTED SPIRITS.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please explain Luke 24: 37-39? If there is no such thing as seeing departed spirits, why did Christ say, "a spirit hath not flesh and bones"? Why did he not correct them for believing they could see a spirit? The language seems to imply the existence of departed spirits.

D. W. BOWLES.

The Scripture to which reference is made, reads as follows:—

"But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have."

We do not understand that the word "spirit" in this passage refers to a departed human spirit, but to an angel. The angels are called spirits. Says Paul:—"Are they [the angels] not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" —Heb. 1: 14. Angels have real, personal organisms, for Lot washed their feet, and made unleavened cakes, "and they did eat." Gen. 19: They are not made of dust, as we are. Jesus took on him the seed of Abraham, and not the nature of angels; therefore they did not have flesh and bones like him.

The tent meetings in Dover, N. H., are fully attended. Three meetings daily, and much interest. Two baptized Sunday. The meetings are to continue this week, and over next Sunday.

QUITE SENSIBLE.

The following sensible remarks are from the Daily (English) Telegraph:

"Young ladies! your fuzzy heads and preposterous chignons were and are absurd enough. A girl with two heads is a monster, whatever she may think of herself; and the modern practice of rigging up behind a second head of false hair had, and has, nothing to recommend it. The manifold bundles of petticoats and the huge balloons of crinoline were absurd enough, but they did not positively injure health. Nor can much be said in favor of the little pegs under the heels, which are intended to give height. For the tight lacing there is not a word to be said. How can a stooping, braced-up girl be graceful? If she has not full command of her respiration, how can she move about in that enchanting way which is natural with girls when they leave nature to herself? It is positively dreadful to see our flattened, tightened, ill-proportioned girls, stooping painfully and tripping awkwardly about the streets. Artists dislike this fashion of tight-lacing, and physicians condemn it. Will not the girl of the period, then, take timely warning, and give up this latest and most hurtful of all eccentricities?"

"THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES."—We learn that the Voice of the West is now called "The Advent Christian Times." We would say to all our readers that it is a good paper, and deserving a wide circulation. It is published by Elder J. V. Himes, at Buchanan, Mich. Price $2.00 a year.

THE ADDRESS OF ELD. J. COUCH,

Delivered before the Advent Christian Association at its late meeting, published in tract form, is now ready, which the friends can procure free at the Crisis office. When ordered to be sent by mail, please enclose stamps to pay postage. AG'T.

"THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH."

By Henry Dana Ward.

A most eloquent, interesting, and profitable work. A history of the doctrine of the Millennium. Price 25 cts. By mail, 30 cts.

"ADVENTISM.—Its Relation to Theology."

By William Sheldon.

This considers the relation of Adventism to Theology, omitting the portion of the original work treating on prophecy. Price 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

The above works are published by the W. A. C. P. Association. For sale at this office. AG'T.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

Westfield, Mass., Sept. 29th, 1869.

The conference was addressed by Eld. S. W. Thurber with his usual earnestness and spirit. There being but little business to transact, the session has been mainly devoted to reports from preachers and delegates, who represented the cause generally as being in a hopeful condition; the truth of the second coming of Christ, and kindred doctrines, as gaining ground steadily. Several new fields have been opened, and the usual joy experienced by those who believe and are baptized. Also to preaching the word, which was attended by the Holy Ghost to those who heard. Some fruit was apparent. To God be all the glory. Our numbers were not large, but our meetings were excellent.

Our beloved Secretary was detained by illness from attending, but reported by letter, as did several others. Bro. C. P. Greenman, from Lockport, N. Y., was admitted a member.

Considerable interest was reported in several places. Good results had been apparent from recent tent meetings in East Weymouth, Fayville, and elsewhere. The following persons were chosen to attend the National Conference at Rochester: S. W. Thurber, James Hemenway, E. Owen, with L. Boutell, G. A. Streeter, E. McCullock, as substitutes. It was recommended to the churches in the State that they contribute to defray the expense of those delegates who may attend, and that they forward such contributions to Eld. S. W. Thurber, Chelsea, Mass.

The thanks of the Conference were voted the church in Westfield for their hospitality to its members. Adjourned to call of President. E. OWEN, Clerk, pro tem.

P. S. $10.50 was received for the protracted meeting cause, from persons in Worcester, and A. M. Higgins; also, $1.00 for the Tract Fund. E. O.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 3d, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

LETTER FROM BRO. O. R. FASSETT.

BRO. GRANT:—I am on my return from our family campmeeting at Sparta, Wis., in the neighborhood and field of labor of our devoted and beloved Bro. Hough. We had a good and profitable meeting, though the season is somewhat too far advanced for comfort at outdoor meetings. It has been a very unfavorable summer for camp and tent and grove meetings in the Northwest, on account of the abundant rains which have visited this region.

Bro. Hough intends to labor in the South this coming winter. His labors in this field will be greatly missed as a preacher and organizer in our body, yet he will do the cause great service South, and I am glad that he feels it duty to go in that direction. In the spring he returns to run the new family tent in Wisconsin. Let our prayers follow our brother in his indefatigable labors.

While absent, I held a five hours' discussion with the presiding elder of that district, of the M. E. church—Eld. Bronson. The account has been sent to the "Advent Christian Times." Yesterday I replied to a discourse delivered by Rev. Wm. McKinley, of the M. E. church, recently preached in this city, from the text, Eccl. 12: 7. The division of his subject was this:

1. "The moral or philosophical argument."
2. "The scriptural."

After expending much time and labor, giving a whole evening to the discussion of the first form of proof, he remarks: "Science neither proves nor disproves the immortality of the soul. Spirit existence is beyond science," etc.;—thus subverting and overturning his whole argument of the evening, which may well be termed, "oppositions of science falsely so called."

In the scriptural argument, which was defective in every point from beginning to the end, he brings forward the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, to prove that the dead are in conscious rewards, and the good in "Abraham's bosom"; the thief on the cross, and Christ's language to him, that they are in "paradise"; Wesley's language in the dying hour, that they are not dead; who, though he believed in a conscious existence of the departed in an ante-chamber, said, in his discourse on Luke 16, that "souls going to heaven at death, has no foundation in the oracles of God"; and his own grandmother's (McKinley's) dying exclamations, with those of other saints, that they go "immediately into heaven"!

This reminds me of Bro. Munger's surprise on hearing a minister preach a funeral sermon of a child, in which the clergyman said: "God had taken the child to himself; Jesus had come and taken the child; angels had borne it away; death had taken it," etc. "My Lord," exclaims Bro. Munger, "who has got the child!!"

So where are the faithful dead? Are they in "Abraham's bosom" literally, as that parable teaches if taken as a narrative? Or in "Abraham's bosom" in a subterraneous region in the earth, as believed by the Pharisees, to whom Jesus was addressing the parable (see Josephus on hades)? Or are they in "paradise," somewhere in the universe? Or in an ante-chamber, as Wesley believed? Or in "heaven above," as our grandmothers and grandfathers believed? Where are they?

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The eighth annual gathering of the people of God of Darien, together with the quarterly Advent Christian Conference of N. Y. State, met at the Advent church in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., on Friday evening, Sept. 17th, 1869. The meeting opened with earnest prayer for the outpouring of the Spirit upon us during the conference, after which Bro. H. Pratt gave us a sweet and timely discourse on the necessity of our reflecting the light of truth and especially present truth.

Saturday A. M. Met at nine o'clock for business, the particulars of which, see another part of this report. At half past ten o'clock the brethren and sisters began to come in, and the business meeting was adjourned until 3 P. M., and the time until noon spent in prayer and conference. This truly was a blessed meeting, such as only those enjoy who are earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and who to some extent live isolated and have met together to exhort each other to continued faithfulness.

Met at 2 P. M., and listened to a discourse from Bro. J. W. Taylor, of Pa., from Heb. 2: 1-3. When the services were about half through, we were interrupted for a moment by the arrival of brethren and sisters on the P. M. train from Rochester and other parts of the State, which, with the number present, made probably the largest gathering of brethren and sisters to a quarterly conference we have had in a number of years.

BUSINESS MEETING.

About half past three o'clock, business meeting commenced again. The conference voted to invite all the brethren present to take part in our deliberations. The first business before the meeting was a report from Bro. J. Wendell of his labors with the tent, which report was accepted. The length of the report forbids an insertion here. About $80 were raised for repairs on the tent, and the following resolution passed:

Resolved, That the finances of our conference demand an effort on the part of our churches; and we recommend that the officers of every church within the limits of this conference take a monthly collection, to be sent to B. C. Simonds, Treasurer of the Conf., to aid the tent and mission enterprise. The following brethren were then chosen delegates to attend the coming National Conference at Rochester: W. J. Hobbs, Wm. A. Fenn, B. P. Stevens, or D. Cogswell as substitute. In the evening preaching by Sr. E. S. Jennings.

Sabbath morning, clear and beautiful; met at nine o'clock for love feast, which truly was so, after which a very good discourse from Bro. C. W. Low. At the close of this service we repaired to the water to attend to the ordinance of baptism. P. M., preaching by Bro. C. Colegrove, a discourse rich in thought and full of faith, after which the Lord's Supper was administered, when about a hundred and seventy-five partook of the emblems of Christ's broken body and spilled blood. In the evening preaching by Bro. B. P. Stevens, which was the closing service of one of our best quarterly conferences.

The brethren and sisters of Darien made us very welcome to their homes, and treated us with christian kindness. May they and we be kept by the power of God until the Deliverer comes to reward all the faithful.

Preachers present: D. Cogswell, C. F. Sweet, C. W. Low, B. P. Stevens, C. Colegrove, M. R. Miles, A. C. Newell, Wm. A. Fenn, H. Pratt, W. J. Hobbs, J. W. Taylor, and Sr. E. S. Jennings.

For the World's Crisis.

WONDERFUL PHENOMENON.

The world is evidently rapidly progressing toward that state which shall usher in the great day of God. Read the following from an eye witness of scenes in the vicinity of the Rocky Mountains, and compare the description with Joel 2: 30, 31. L. C. M'K.

THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS IN A SECOND TWILIGHT OF CHROMATIC SHADES—SUPERSTITIONS OF THE MOUNTAINEERS.

Your paper having recently taken quite an interest in all that pertains to the growth of the agricultural and mineral resources of Wyoming, will not, I presume, refuse a little space to the feeble description of a meteorological phenomenon that is now transpiring each evening in the skies above the Rocky in that romantic territory.

Since the recent solar eclipse they have, upon the summit of the Rocky mountain chain, what the inhabitants call a "second twilight," so brilliant with colors of mist, shade, and fire lights, as to pain the eye in its steady gaze upon them, and to leave an impression on the mind that will never be obliterated.

Just as the sun is about to set a heavy mist gathers on the mountain, and growing denser and denser, it shuts out entirely the last expiring ray of that luminous body; then all is darkness, or nearly so, for almost thirty minutes, when all at once the heavens become lit up from the horizon all around, far up to a small circle in the centre, with a livid glare of the most dazzling chromatic colors, seeming as though a tremendous bonfire was ablaze below, throwing its glare in clear and steady flame above.

This gorgeous and fearfully beautiful scene lasts for nearly an hour, then steals quietly away; and the moon therefore dimmed by its fiery lustre regains its ascendancy, and lights up the balance of the night in pale shadows as it is wont to do in every other clime.

Now, what causes these chromatic twilights? They were never before witnessed by any of the oldest mountaineers. I was in that section at this season last year, and I have never seen so grand and so thrilling twilights, and these have only occurred since the great solar eclipse of the 7th. What does it mean? What does it portend? How does it originate?

Old Sarshay—the learned Ute chief—stands in silence each night gazing at this wonderful phenomenon, and when asked what he thinks about it, replies slowly and sadly: "Ugh, the great Spirit is mad! He blows fire! His wigwam is in trouble! White man and red man better feel afraid for the Great Spirit is mad—he is heap angry!"

French Pete, the old trapper and miner, says: "It is now twenty-five years since I have seen the states. I have been eleven years in these mountains, and I never saw such fiery nights. The winds are damper; they blow milder and the air grows heavier. I don't know how to account for it. It has all happened since the eclipse of the sun. Something dreadful is going to happen. There will be a dreadful fire some of these days that all the water in the world will never drown out, and those days are coming rapidly."

If it be true, as one of the professors of the Cincinnati Observatory says, that immense volumes of hydrogen gas were thrown out from the centre of the sun to the surface, during the recent solar eclipse, how long will it be before the oxygen will be thrown out, and the carbon become the ruling and destroying element?

I give these particulars by request, and there are numbers of people in this city who on last Sabbath and Monday nights, witnessed, with me, this wonderful phenomenon on the summit of the Rocky Mountain chain, eight thousand two hundred and sixty-two feet above the level of the sea. The Cheyenne and Laramie papers will indorse the description.—Cor. Omaha Herald.

MAGIC FINGERS AND FANTASTIC TOES.

The following is too good to be lost, and so we help to keep it afloat:

The youngest child of Ralph Chandler, commander of the "Tallapoosa," was recently baptized. The vessel and ladies were gaily decorated. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press says that the "Rev. Dr. Nelson performed the ceremony in his very impressive and feeling manner, and, after the little one was made regenerate, a child of God, all adjoined to the spacious decks of the 'Tallapoosa,' where, to the music of the Academy Band (which was most tastefully and kindly provided by Capt. Greer, of the yard,) the younger portion of the party 'tripped the light fantastic toe' for two hours."

Two things are noticeable here; one is what remarkable magic there is in the tips of Dr. Nelson's fingers. He touches with them, after dipping them in the font, the forehead of this child, and at once the little creature, al unawares, and with no participation by thought, will, or any consciousness, however dim, is "regenerated," made a "child of God." Dr. Nelson has a power not granted to the first apostles, for to them it was said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." He can bestow privileges which Paul could not; for that great apostle wrote to those whom he regarded as fruits of his ministry: "Ye are all the children of God by faith which is in Christ." Happy Dr. Nelson! Happy this little child, which in such an "impressive and feeling manner," though with neither impression or feeling of its own, has been "regenerated" before it has even come to know that it needs regeneration, and is made a child of God even before it knows its own earthly father and mother! O blessed infant "baptism!"

Another thing which one cannot but admire, in this instance, is the winding up of the "baptism" with a dance. Was it Sunday, we wonder? It seems curious that such a solemn ordinance as the sprinkling of a baby should take place on any day beside Sunday; and yet, we were not aware that our Pedobaptist friends had adopted dancing as a Sunday exercise, or as a part of the baptismal ceremony. The "Academy" spoken of, we conclude, is the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis. The "Tallapoosa" we take to be one of Uncle Sam's vessels of war. Dr. Nelson, the chaplain apparently, is an Episcopalian, since the appointment of any but an Episcopalian to a naval chaplaincy is an "irregularity" in the service seldom permitted. The whole thing, therefore, is an indication of the sort of religion given to our sailors. If, however, it was not upon Sunday, we are upon the whole glad that they wound up the baptism with a dance, for that is the true way to end a farce. After the magic finger appropriately comes "the light fantastic toe."—Standard.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

The following sums have been received by me within two months:—By mail, Joseph T. Howland, $10; C. W. Morse, $3; Sr. Roter, $1; "a friend" in northern N. Y., $2; F. A. Roter, $2; brethren in Dansville, N. Y., $16; F. Granbom, $2; Sr. Henley, through A. P. Moore, $3. Donations: Eld. Grant, $5; L. Reimer, $5; J. F. Busch, $3.50; Sr. Helginson, $5. Sales of books from library, $3. Received where I have preached, $6. Total, for the two months, $66.50.

In my last report my receipts by mail for five weeks should have been $1, and not $100; by a mistake, the latter sum was reported. Very many thanks to all the above named brethren and sisters for their kind remembrance of me. I have been boarding at my aunt's since my return to Philadelphia—nearly three months and a half. I pay $6.50 per week for my room, board, washing and mending. In the mission field I am trying to do good, and the Lord blesses my efforts. Pray for me, that I may be preserved blameless amid the perils of these last days.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. E. M. B., Swanton, Vt., writes:—"I have thought many times, when reading letters from the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, I should like to write a few lines, to tell of the goodness of God to me. I have been a reader of the Crisis for years, and think it the best paper I ever saw. Before, I knew but very little about the Adventists, and believed in the natural immortality of man. I began to search the Scriptures to see if they taught such a doctrine as the Crisis stated. Was very sure they did not, but after careful search, and hearing preaching on the other side of the question for two years, I came to the unavoidable conclusion that they nowhere taught that man is immortal, only through Christ, at his second coming.

I am also confident that the time is not far distant when He whose right it is to reign will come and set up his kingdom on the earth, and I rejoice in the expectation of meeting him, and loved ones who have long been sleeping in death. I have been a lover of Jesus for nine years, but can truly say that for the two years past I have had more real, solid enjoyment than ever before. The Bible is like a new book to me. God seems nearer and dearer than ever. He makes me feel his love and goodness more and more. My Savior is more precious, now that I see tokens of his coming so soon.

For a year past I have had the blessed privilege of hearing Advent preaching, the first in my life; and it has been blest to my good, and the good of many others. May God bless all the weary, waiting ones, and bring all into his glorious kingdom at last."

BRO. N. H. BERRY writes:—"We are getting along well here in Farmington. The Lord is with us. We are having some very good evening meetings, and sinners tremble. We have been driven from place to place to hold meetings, and the Lord has been with us all the time. One year ago I went to the Lord and asked him for a house to worship him in, and this spring the Lord sent the tent here, and some of his faithful servants to labor with us. Five have been buried in the name of the Lord. Bro. Smith started a paper for a chapel here in Farmington, and it was circulated, and we have eight hundred dollars on the paper. We have the lumber for the house, and the house is up, and partly boarded; but we lack three hundred dollars. We have done all we can, and the house is the Lord's, and I think he will finish it.

Brethren and sisters who love the Lord and his cause, and have the means to help, I would humbly ask you to help us here in Farmington, so that God's blessed truth may be preached in this place."

A YOUNG CONVERT writes:—"Can it be that I have been a heathen in a land which is overflowing with Bibles? A false teacher I have been, teaching in Sabbath School class what the Bible now belies me in. Thanks to God that I am no longer a heathen. For twenty years I have been without the true knowledge of the Bible. Can it be that while I repeated those sacred words, 'Thy kingdom come,' I was going against my own belief? Then I was waiting and preparing for death, that I might go and dwell with God. But now I wait and prepare for my Lord to come to me. Then I lived what I now call a three-cornered christian. Then the fashions of the world troubled me; but now I am troubled in regard to sinners. O that those out of the fold of Christ had the joy I have.

The world seems like a new one to me; a new life have I commenced. I take no minister's words, but the Holy Bible, for my foundation. Friends out of Christ, read the Bible as it is, take it as it reads, if you wish to see the true light. My prayer is for you, unconverted friends, that you may embrace the true light, and be found in the kingdom to come. Will you come? Do not wait. Now is the accepted time. The kingdom is near, and when it is come, where will you be found?"

SR. R. M. FOWLES writes:—"I was a wanderer from the fold of God some ten years ago. I felt the strivings of the Spirit of God in my heart. I yielded to its power, and felt that my sins were forgiven. But, alas! the influences for evil around me were strong. I was not willing to give up all for Christ, and come out from the world and be separate. Like too many, I wanted to carry the world in one hand and Christ in the other. I made a sad mistake. But God knows how to deal with his children; he knows when to lay the afflicting hand, and how to humble the proud heart. Once death entered our family circle, and snatched the tender bud. Still I would not yield. In ten short months death again took another, the darling of our home. I could only cry in the bitterness of grief, 'Father, let this affliction be for our good; take me back to thy bosom, and I will be a humble, obedient child.' The Lord heard and answered. Our little family have found Jesus, and he is precious to our souls.

'Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.'"

Obituaries.

BROOKS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in New Britain, Conn., Sept. 27th, 1869, Captain Martin J. Brooks, in the fifty-third year of his age.

He leaves a wife and only child to mourn his loss. In his last sickness (which continued only six days), patience had her perfect work. When asked if his hope sustained him while suffering so much, he answered, "Yes; my hope is big with immortality." He calmly gave directions concerning his funeral, and then took leave of his family, falling asleep in the glorious hope of awaking in the morning of the resurrection, clothed with immortality.

The untiring zeal of Bro. Brooks in the cause of truth, the sacrifices he made to sustain those who were proclaiming it, and the hospitalities which he at all times extended to preachers and others, will be held in grateful remembrance by them. May the Lord sustain and strengthen Sr. B. in this her day of trial.

The gospel hope was presented by the writer, to a large and attentive audience, in the Scotch Chapel at Middletown, where the interment took place. WM. STUART.

FELLOWS. Died in Fayette, Sept. 19th, of quick consumption, Sr. Mary Fellows, aged twenty-eight years.

Sr. Fellows embraced the blessed hope of life through Christ at his appearing and kingdom some ten years since, and has lived a christian. She sleeps in Jesus. The church has lost a faithful member. She leaves two sisters of like precious faith, a christian brother and widowed mother, to mourn her loss. At her request, the writer preached her funeral sermon. She selected the hymns to be sung, such as expressed her faith.

H. B. SEVEY.

EMERY. Died in Allenstown, Sept. 25th, 1869, Charles F. Emery, aged twenty-one years.

He leaves a wife and a large circle of friends to mourn. May God sustain the afflicted ones, and help those who love him to love him more, and those that know him not, not to forget that this life is a brittle thread, and prepare to live forever when Jesus comes.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 26. J. PINKHAM.

Married.

In Vienna, Sept. 27th, by H. B. Sevey, Mr. CHARLES R. FLETCHER and Miss LIZZIE TOWLE, both of Rome.

In Westfield, Mass., Oct. 6th, by Eld. E. Owen, Mr. CARLO CLEAVELAND and Miss ELIZA A. LANGLEY, all of W.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

LONDON, Oct. 6. A missionary has arrived here from Zanzibar who brings the welcome intelligence that Mr. Kirk had received a letter from Dr. Livingston, dated February, 1869. The Doctor was then on Lake Tanganyika. He was in good health but short of provisions.

It is thought that the Government at Madrid conceals the real state of affairs in the provinces. The fact has come out that the insurgents evacuated Itens to avoid a premature collision with the troops.

Some of the Republican deputies have left Madrid to raise the northern and central provinces, and arrangements were to be made for a simultaneous rising in Santander, Sernel, Alava, Lerida, and Huescar. The Republicans propose to raise the provinces, and then attempt a coup de main against Madrid. Fresh bands have appeared in the Province of Sarragossa.

A Republic has been proclaimed in Lajuingera, and a rising is feared at Valladolid. Deputy Paul, it is said, was threatened with death if he did not join the insurgents. The latter are reported to be guilty of indiscriminate pillage, vandalism and assassination. The Cortes has passed a bill to suspend individual rights. The situation is bad, but if the army remains faithful, it need not be considered desperate.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 7. The Great Powers have withdrawn from interference in the affairs of Egypt and leave the Sultan and Khedive to settle their disputes themselvee.

VIENNA, Oct. 7. A large meeting was held at Gratz, to-day, to protest against the clerical interference in the questions affecting the workingmen.

An address to the people of Austria, embodying the sentiments of the meeting, was voted by acclamation.

MADRID, Oct. 7. The Cortes passed a bill suspending the constitutional guaranties during the insurrection. The Republican deputies refuse to participate any longer in deliberations of the Chamber.

The insurgents who retreated from Rius were defeated by Gen. Baldrick, with a loss of eighty killed and three hundred wounded, and many prisoners. The troops lost twenty-three killed and wounded.

It is officially stated that combats have taken place between the national troops and the Republican insurgents in Catalonia, Aragon, Old Castile and Andalusia, and that so far the troops have been victorious. At La Carolina and Grenada the Republicans destroyed the barracks and made prisoners of the civil guards. The reports in regard to embarkation of troops for Cuba are contradictory. Some say it continues notwithstanding the troubles at home, and others have it that orders have been secured at Cadiz suspending for the present preparations for the departure of reinforcements.

PARIS, Oct. 7. The Rappel assures its readers to-day that the deputies of the left will proceed on the 26th of October to the Bureau of the Corps Legislatif and sign a protest, declaring that the Emperor has violated the constitution, and that they consider themselves absolved thereby from their oaths of fidelity to him. Deputy Keraty publicly announces that he will go to the Legislatif Chamber on the 24th inst.

VIENNA, Oct. 8. It is rumored that the Emperor Francis Joseph intends to visit Constantinople, and to proceed thence to Suez to attend the inauguration of the canal.

Official reports from Madrid, at Paris, represent that the Spanish insurgents are everywhere defeated.

The Levant Times says the Turko-Egyptian controversy is suspended. It is reported that the Viceroy of Egypt will come to Constantinople during the visit of the Empress Eugenie, and that the Sultan will probably go to Egypt to be present at the opening of the Suez Canal.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 5. A Lima letter states that on August 20, 21 and 24 there were tremendous shocks of earthquakes in the lower provinces. On the latter day they were the heaviest. Walls and houses were tumbled down, and at Iquique and Arica a tidal wave carried away many boats and other property. The inhabitants fled and are living in tents. All the goods in the custom house have been transferred to Tacna to escape a recurrence of the wave. Pisaqua and other places have also suffered. There have been earthquakes all through August in the whole southern portion of the country. Lima and Callao have not suffered as yet, but many people are leaving both places, and business is generally impeded.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 6. On Monday morning the Eastman tunnel, half a mile long, now being excavated for the purpose of making the water power on Nicollet Island, pierced a sunken water cavern on the island below the level of the river gates. The heads of the tunnel were closed, but the rush of the water could not be arrested. Early on Tuesday morning a large whirlpool was discovered near the shore of the island, which discovered the mouth of the cavern. All the efforts made yesterday to close up this hole by rafts, cribs, trees, bales of hay, etc., prove fruitless, and the river is making tremendous efforts to cut a new channel for itself. The mills on Hennepen Island are in danger, as the ground is caving in from the passage of water beneath. Thousands of men are at work night and day constructing a coffer dam around the mouth of the whirlpool. If necessary a section of the dam will be blown out to lower the water, which is very high. Danger of a new channel is imminent.

Bryan, Wyoming Territory, Oct. 8. Vice President Colfax addressed an immense crowd in front of the Townsend House, in the course of which he gave his views at length on the subject of polygamy. He quoted from a book of Mormon, and proved at least to the satisfaction of his Gentile auditors, that the whole thing was unwise and illegal, and ought to be abolished. He was followed by Gov. Bross of Illinois, who fully indorsed the arguments of the Vice President. Such freedom of speech as never been exercised in that city before.

STATE OF EUROPE.—The Times, in an article on the state of Europe, says: "Little notice has been taken of the paragraph which recently appeared in the Vienna Presse, hinting at a probable disarmament. The news is too good to be true. We will not undertake to say what the diplomatic contrivances of the past few weeks have had toward improving Napoleon's position with respect to foreign affairs so as to enable him to meet his home difficulties with sufficient confidence of success. If it is true that General Lebouef intends to drop the scheme of a Garde Mobile, and proposes the suppression of general commands, that might be taken as an earnest of the Emperor's pacific and economical intentions. The interchange of civilities between Sovereigns and statesmen augurs well for the chances of tranquility. At the present moment there is no apprehension of a warlike outbreak; no cause of offence, no pretext for dispute exists; old alliances have been broken up and the balance of power is a question of the past. It may be said that peace now rests on a sounder basis than ever.

THE PONTIFICAL ARMY.—The Pope at present has under his direct control an army of 15,250 soldiers, nearly all Swiss and German mercenaries. This number is to be quite largely increased during the coming council, as a frontier outbreak is feared. Nothing would suit the Neapolitans better than to get into Rome on such an occasion and strangle a few hundred priests. But there will hardly be a soldier to a priest, and the army is proverbially in a contemptible state of disorganization. Since Dr. Cumming's rebuff, the convention has lost much of its interest in the eyes of the Italians, who are generally intelligent enough to know that a discussion between a smart Protestant of any grade and the most noted Catholics would afford an excellent chance for a row.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK TIDAL WAVE.—The extraordinary, unprecedented tidal wave, on the coast of New Brunswick on Monday night, fulfilling the predictions made months ago, will excite curiosity as to the happening of the same phenomenon elsewhere. It is true the New Brunswick coast is famous for its high tides, but such an exceptional demonstration as that of Monday, due to no local disturbance, could hardly occur without its being a link in a regular series of oceanic movements, though they may have reached their climax there.

SOMETHING OF A WAVE.—The Portsmouth (N. H.) Chronicle says that two residents of Newcastle report that they were on the beach at ten o'clock Monday night, and that there was but one tidal wave, which was eighteen feet high. As they saw it coming they fled; one being somewhat fleshy got away slower than the other and fell among rocks, to which he clung, the wave going over him. It ran 125 feet above high water mark, and in three minutes after there was no trace of it.—Journal.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES IN TURKEY.—Since the subject of the Empress Eugenie's visit to Constantinople and the East has been agitated, the French papers have published a great many details relative to Turkey. Some of them are especially interesting. A Paris liberal journal affirms that Turkey shows a decided leaning to Catholicism, and instances the fact that a Catholic chapel has been built in the interior of the Sultan's private palace. Nothing could be more singular in the history of the theologies than to see a Mussulman turning Catholic. May we expect to see Abdul-Azis represented in the Ecumenical Council by one of the black-stoled priests?

THE CRACOW CONVENT CASE.—Advices received from Vienna state that the Cracow Convent case is likely to come before the tribunals shortly. The Superior of the convent and the two sisters accused with her of ill treating Barbara Ubryk by confining her in a dungeon for twenty years, stated, it will be remembered, that they had acted under the orders of the General of the Order in Rome. It is now announced that the General declares, on his oath, this statement to be false, and alleges that he knew nothing whatever of the condition of the imprisoned nun.

The Great Storm.

IN DIFFERENT LOCALITIES.

At Fitchburg, communication with all the towns lying west and north was almost entirely cut off. The damage to both public and private property is immense. At least one hundred thousand dollars will be required to repair the damage to roads and bridges in the town of Fitchburg alone.

At the Isle of Shoals, off the coast at Portsmouth, about ten o'clock Monday night, at high tide, six hours after the conclusion of the storm, a series of tidal waves swept over Gosport, Isle of Shoals, submerging a large part of the town and doing extensive damage, especially to boating. It swept inward, and the keeper of Whale's Back Lighthouse feared that it would be carried away. The plastering tumbled down about his ears, and he took refuge outside his castle, lest he should be buried in its ruins. The waves are reported as immensely high and powerful, dashing everything before them, and it seems providential no lives were lost.

BANGOR, Me. Oct. 8. A letter from Mr. Black, operator at Calais, to Mr. Bliss, Manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in this city, states as follows: "We are in a terrible state here. The lines both way are flat on the ground and covered with trees and buildings. The damage to buildings and vessels is very great. Easport is reported as nearly demolished."

The water in the Penobscot has risen to its highest spring pitch. Rooms are broken and millions of feet of logs have gone by the city. It is hoped most of them may be picked up below, where large gangs of men have been sent down.

HARTFORD, Oct. 5. Reports of damage by the storm continue to come in. The damage in all parts of the State is very great.

SARATOGA, N. Y., October 5. According to accounts from the surrounding country, the storm Sunday night and Monday morning, did more damage than any before known. Scarcely a bridge, on the country roads about here, has been left in good condition. Bridges that have been sufficient for all floods heretofore, could not withstand that of Monday. Only one train arrived.

CALAIS, Me., Oct. 5. The gale here last night was terrific, and the damage exceeds the damage by the gale of September 8th by thousands of dollars.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 5. The most lamentable result of the flood in this vicinity is the giving way of the great dam over the Housatonic River at Birmingham. Two weeks work would have completed the structure. Three hundred feet have been destroyed, and more than one-half of the labor of two years has been swept away in a single night.

The Republican says that at Wilbraham, under the embankment at Twelve Mile brook, is a culvert, which became choked up by debris from the dams at Calkins' sawmill, Ellis' woolen mill and a store house, and the flood began eating its way into the embankment behind the stone walls of the culvert. This process was carried on with fearful rapidity, and it was not long before the north track settled, gave way, and went off by rods, and soon the whole south track followed. The force of the torrent was tremendous, and tore out the immense masses of earth, and scattered them as chaff before the whirlwind. The terrible work of destruction did not cease until an excavation at least 200 feet long had been made, extending the whole size of the embankment, 200 feet wide at the bottom, 30 at the top, and fully 70 feet deep. The stones of the culvert were whirled and scattered like bubbles, the highway and bridge below, on the Wilbraham and Palmer road, were swept into the Chicopee river, and the devastation was complete and fearful.

At South Wilbraham great damage was done. The river rose above its banks at noon on Monday, and in less than an hour the streets were flooded to an alarming extent. Families were compelled to leave their tenements, take up their carpets and remove their furniture, or leave all to be submerged by the flood. Horses had to be removed from their stables and hogs turned loose in the streets. In a number of instances houses were fastened by strong chains to trees, that they might not be moved from their foundations. Whole fields of corn and potatoes, cords of wood and all the outbuildings along its banks were swept away.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Oct. 7. On Monday night this place was visited by a tremendous gale and the highest tide ever known. The marshes were completely covered. Thousands of tons of hay were destroyed, and thousands of cattle and sheep drowned. The dykes on the marshes are all gone, and the bridges all through the country swept away.

The Eastern Extension Railroad track was torn up eight or ten miles, and the telegraph line connecting with the cable and with Halifax obliterated. As far as can be ascertained the tidal wave has caused great destruction on the Bay of Fundy and in and around St. John.

Columns could be filled with the details of disaster and loss, which are thus summed up by the Springfield Republican as applying to the western part of the State, but are equally applicable to every section over which the storm passed: "Thousands of farmers have seen all this year's profits, and many of them considerable portions of their farms, also, go down stream in this week's freshet. The manufacturers have also suffered heavily, and many months and much money will be required to put them back where they were; while the loss to towns in the washing of roads and the carrying away of bridges will be appreciated when next year's taxes come to be assessed, if not at present. The railroads are mostly in shape for temporary use now, but it will take a long time to get them in as good shape as before; and when to the cost of repairing damages is added the loss from delay of traffic, the bill will be found a large one."

Passing Events.

☞ Miss Middy Morgan, an Irish lady, reports the cattle market and agricultural matters for the New York Times, and does as well as her male cotemporaries in the same line. She has always had a passion for domestic animals. She is a woman of learning and cultivation, and speaks several languages.

☞ An immense crop of grapes is reported in Nevada county, California. On the first of August two-thirds of a crop had been taken from the Black Hamburgs, and they still seemed full. The Isabellas were loaded to their utmost capacity.

☞ It is reported that the Rev. Charles Rogers of England is about to get up a subscription for the erection of a monument to Adam, the father of mankind! to be erected on the supposed site of the garden of Eden in Mesopotamia.

☞ The Rutland Railroad has twelve bridges destroyed between Proctorsville and Bellows Falls, while chasms, little and large, checker the whole distance of the road bed.

☞ The storm of Sunday and Monday last, and the freshet of Monday afternoon and evening, were the severest ever known in Vermont.

☞ Ex-President Pierce died this morning, Oct. 8th, at Concord, N. H.

☞ President Grant has issued a proclamation appointing Thursday, the 18th of November, as a National Thanksgiving Day. The proclamation is most appropriately and thoughtfully worded, and in its purpose will accord completely with the sentiment of the American people.

☞ One of the latest items from Spain in the announcement that all the landed proprietors of Cuban estates are offering 10,000 francs for every volunteer who will at once set out to defend the ever faithful island.

☞ The members of the National Woman's Suffrage Association have resolved to go to the polls at the next fall election and demand to have their votes recorded.

☞ In McHenry county, Illinois, there are eleven cheese factories, which use the milk of about 3400 cows, and the past season have made about 1,600,000 pounds of cheese. In addition there are a number of private dairies.

☞ The New York papers say that at no time since the collapse of the Confederacy have so many workmen been busy in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, or so many first class vessels been making ready for active service.

☞ Mrs. Abraham Lincoln is still at Frankfort, Germany, living in great retirement, and in very unpretending quarters. She sees but few persons, and these generally American ladies whom she knew during Mr. Lincoln's administration.

☞ The revolution in Nicaragua still continues, notwithstanding the attempts made by the other Central American Governments to bring about some peaceable solution of the difficult.

☞ A temperance lecturer has started from Kansas with the declared intention of walking to Augusta, Me., and delivering a lecture on temperance every evening while on his way.

☞ The Philadelphia papers have long lists of losses by the storm in that city, where it appears to have been very destructive.

☞ Senator Sumner has appointed a son of Dr. O. W. Holmes his private secretary.

☞ The proportion of women voters in some English parishes is now about 300 in every 3000 persons.

☞ Two young men of Berlin have died of eating trichina pork, and the dealer has been sent to prison for two months.

☞ Not less than 150,000 bushels of apples, it is thought, will be gathered in Minnesota this year.

☞ The storm was very severe throughout Nova Scotia.

☞ Millions of blackbirds are destroying the corn in Boone county, Mo.

☞ Eugenie wears the engagement ring that belonged to the Empress Josephine.

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

WHEREAS, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

WHEREAS, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

JOHN COUCH, New Hampshire; MILES GRANT, Massachusetts; S. G. MATHEWSON, Vermont; JOSHUA V. HIMES, Michigan; WM. SHELDON, Wisconsin; O. R. FASSETT, Minnesota; JOHN PORTER, Canada, National Conference Committee.

Protracted Meeting.

I will commence a series of meetings at West Randolph, Vt., in the Christian meeting-house, Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, to continue evenings through the week, and over the following Sabbath, and as much longer as it may seem duty. There will be meetings week days if thought best. We hope the brethren in the vicinity will try and get out to this meeting. J. A. CLEAVELAND.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Brown Co., N. Y., will be held Nov. 27th and 28th. Bro. and Sr. Hitchcock, of Kirkwood, N. Y., will be there to assist. All are invited to attend. For the brethren,

J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

The Conn. Mission Tent was pitched at Bloomfield, Conn., on Tuesday, Oct. 12th, to remain as the interest may require. Per Tent Committee.

Notice.

A protracted meeting will commence in Weld, Me., Friday, Oct. 22d, holding over Sunday, and longer if thought best. J. T. JORDAN.

Information Wanted.

Will any one inform me where I can address Eld. B. S. Emery, to receive an answer?

C. D. HIBBARD, Mechanic Falls, Me.

Conference.

The Lord will, there will be a conference at Piermont, N. H., Clay meeting-house, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 14th, and continue over the following Sabbath. Brethren T. W. Piper, N. Wheeler, and others are expected to preach the word. Brethren and sisters are invited to come and work for the salvation of souls. For the brethren. WM. H. SHAW.

Notice.

The annual session of the Conn. A. C. Conference will be held, by invitation of the New Haven church, at their chapel, to commence Wednesday evening, Oct. 13th, 1869. It is very necessary that all churches should appoint delegates to attend this session, and that all preachers should make an effort to be present. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, and whatever business of importance may be before the conference will be attended to. The first business session will be Thursday P. M. Preaching Wednesday evening, at half past seven o'clock.

L. F. MOORE, Secretary.

Conference in Addison, Vt.

During my labors in Addison, as elsewhere noticed in the Crisis, there will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 12th and 13th; and on Thursday, the 14th, a conference will commence, to continue through the week and over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

In behalf of the brethren, T. M. PREBLE.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the Branch Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 21st, to continue over the following Sabbath. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord. There are homes for all who will come.

S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.

S. W. THURBER, Pres. of Conf.

Notice.

A meeting will be held at Centre Falls, Washington County, N. Y., commencing on Thursday, Oct. 4th, to continue over the following Sunday. Bro. Dubois Baird will be ordained to the work of the gospel ministry. Bros. S. G. Mathewson and C. Pike will be present to preach the word.

D. MATHEWSON.

Notice.

At the last church meeting of the Second Advent Christian Church at Rochester, N. Y., Bro. S. L. Manley was chosen Recording and Corresponding Secretary. J. E. Wells resigned.

[Times, please copy. J. E. WELLS, Sec.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Mission Tent will remain at Dover over Sunday, Oct. 17th. As the interest is such that it demands the tent should remain, our prayer is that the Lord will send faithful laborers.

J. C. SHOREY, Tent Master.

Columbia Co., N. Y., Spring Pigs, 00 to 00 cts. per lb.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.25, $3.50, each; Extra, $3.75@4.25, or from 3½ to 7 cts. per lb; Spring Lambs, $3.00 to 4.50; Veal Calves, $0.00 to 00.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow and Skins.

Brighton Hides, 9¼ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7@7½ cts. per lb; Country Hides, 9 to 9¼ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb; Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each; Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—Were it not for the cattle from the East, over the Eastern road, the yards would be nearly deserted. Dealers that had anything decent for beef sold out early upon arrival, and seeing how matters stood took the earliest return train, and if we are not very much mistaken will be in to-morrow or next day with an additional supply, and will obtain advanced prices for good cattle. Trains from the West we cannot say are blocked up in snow-drifts, and will be along when they can be shoveled out; but even worse than any snow storm experienced for years,—a perfect flood, washing away bridges, demolishing high embankments, carrying away and entirely deluging the track for miles! If we see beeves from Albany before Saturday or Monday, it will be a lucky coincidence for the butcher. As most of the Eastern cattle were stores, we cannot fix upon any changed quotations.

Sheep and Lambs.—Only a few head of store sheep at market, which sold at $3.25 per head.

Boston Markets.

Wholesale Prices.

BOSTON, Monday evening, Oct. 11th, 1869.

Gold.—$1.30½.

Flour.—Superfine, from $5.50@$6.00; Extra, from $6½@$7.00; Michigan, $7.00@$8.50. St. Louis, from $8.00@$10.00.

Corn.—Mixed, $1.05@$1.10; Yellow, $1.12@$1.14. Oats, 55@67 cts. Old Rye, $1.25@$1.30.

Seeds.—Timothy Herds Grass, $4.75@5.25; Red Top, $3.50 to $4.25 per sack; R. I. Bent, $2.50 to $3.00 per bush.; Clover per lb., 14 to 15c.

Apples.—New per bbl., $4.50@7.00.

Pork.—$37@$38. Lard, 20½@21c. Hams, 19 cts.

Butter—40@42c. Cheese, Factory, 15 to 16½c. Dairy, 12 to 15½c.

Beans.—Extra Pea, $3.50@$3.75; Common, $2.50. Eggs, 33@36c. Dried Apples, 12½ to 14c. Hay, ton, $15@$24. Potatoes, new per bbl., $2.00@$2.25. Tomatoes, per bush., $1.25@$1.30.

Fresh Fruits.—Peaches. Natives, $3.00@$5.00 per crate. Apples per box, $1.75@$2.75. Pears per bbl., $10.00@$18.00. Grapes, 12½@15 cts. per lb. Wild Grapes, 6@7 cts. per lb. Quinces, $0.00 per bush.

REMARKS.—The general tone of the market throughout the city for nearly all kinds of produce is firm, and at advance prices, affected by the shortness of the supply. Flour remains unchanged, and decently active. Apples advanced $1 per bbl., and firm. Pork unchanged. Lard ½ cent higher,—only temporary. Beans very quiet. Butter and Eggs advanced. Tomatoes advanced a hundred per cent. Quinces not arrived.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Oct. 12th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	491	4,846	721
Last week	150	2,244	3,300

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.50@14.25; first quality, $12.50@13.00; second quality, $11.50@12.00; third quality, $10.00@11.00.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $65, $75, to $100@115; Yearlings, $17 to $26; Two years old, $28 to $40; Three years old, $45 to $62.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75 to $4.50, or from 3½ to 7½ cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $4.75; Veal Calves, $0.00@$0.00.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—This week is also broken up. Twenty-nine car loads of stock arrived Sunday noon, with as little noise as possible; the drovers considering it an act of kindness to forward the stock as soon as they conveniently could; and also this morning a train of thirty cars. The balance of the stock will arrive to-night and to-morrow morning. Butchers were not anxious to buy at over and above high prices. There is an advance since the first of last week of strong 1½ cts. per lb., that will probably decline by the last of the week certainly ½ ct.

Sheep.—Sheep dealers seemed loth to report sales of good sheep. Inferior grades as low as last week. Good lots strong one cent higher. Many lots there were not any particlar price agreed upon, but put into the hands of butchers and divided the profits.

The Berean's Casket and Repository.

This is a work just published, containing 492 pages with the tables of contents, in 358 sections, all in small type, embracing a great amount of matter. It is a SCRIPTURE MANUAL, to which is added much valuable history, showing the fulfillment of prophecy, signs of the times, and other important matter for every Bible reader, statistics, tables, and prophetic figures. Compiled by I. C. Wellcome.

Price, cloth, bevel boards, postpaid, $2.00. Leather bound, $2.50. For sale at this office.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. AN EXPOSITION OF THE SEVEN SEALS. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. THE LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

9. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

10. RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

For the World's Crisis.

THE GREAT PROCLAMATION.

TUNE.—"Greenland's icy mountains."

Lo! heralds of salvation
  Are crying through the land—
With Heaven's approbation—
  The judgment is at hand;
The signs are fast appearing
  In ocean, earth and sky,
And worldly men are fearing
  As wonders pass them by.

They've seen the sun all darkened,
  The moon refusing light;
The swords and spears well sharpened
  All ready for the fight;
The stars from heaven then falling,
  A grand and glorious sight
To those who then were calling
  On God for faith and light.

They've seen the bright borealis
  Loom up like smoke and flame,
And cried, "O heaven, preserve us!"
  As though from God it came:
But soon these lights of warning—
  So often now displayed—
Are only an adorning—
  We will not be afraid.

"All things are as created,
  And so they will remain;
To God we are related,
  And we are not to blame":
So thus the last-day scoffers
  Reject his holy word,
And mercy's loving offers
  Through Jesus' precious blood.

Through every land and ocean,
  From mountain-top and plain,
Let all with love's emotion
  Cry, "Jesus comes to reign":
And let the notes of warning
  Ring out both loud and clear,
Until that glorious morning
  In splendor shall appear.

When every tribe and nation—
  From north, south, east and west—
The "groaning" saved "creation,"
  Shall enter into rest;
We all will furl our banner,
  In loudest strains we'll sing,
"Salvation! O hosannah!
  Hosannah to our King.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE TIMES.

(Concluded.)

3. The lack of proper family government is another evidence of the indisposition of christians to perform their duty, and of the degeneracy of the times. It is a painful thing to witness the disobedience and disrepect manifested by children towards their parents, and their unwillingness to render assistance in any way that requires the slightest exertion. They seem to imagine that pleasure and amusement are the only objects in life for which they were created. We knew the time when children had quite a sufficiency of healthful enjoyment, and yet could be useful in proportion to their years. But now, the most tender and loving mother, if one can be called loving, who encourages wilfulness and self-indulgence to the last degree, cannot make the most reasonable or trivial request of her child, without eliciting the peevish and fretful complaints, and so glaring an exhibition of unwillingness to obey, that the humiliating contest is most frequently ended by her own performance of what she had demanded of the child.

And the sweet home life that once existed is but little known now. Parents have lost taste for domestic enjoyments and duties, and children naturally adopt their habits, aggravated by all the license that young persons now enjoy. Almost any spot seems more attractive to them than home. The streets are filled with rude and ungovernable boys, too often the children of professing christians, whose parents seem only concerned to be rid of the responsibility of their training, and their annoying presence at home. Did our hopes depend on human government, we might well have ominous apprehensions as to the future stability and success of a republic in the hands of the generation now coming forward. Sin and iniquity abound at present, but whosoever shall witness the maturity of the generation to come after, will confess the justice of these forebodings. Premonitions already warn of approaching calamity and ruin.

Girls, unfortunately, seem to be under no greater restraint than boys. They are no longer taught to be useful, modest, "keepers at home." They shrink not from bold publicity and seem to court, rather than shrink from, vulgar notoriety. There are exceptions; but the tendency of the times is as we state. The clamorous demand of women for political rights, is so obviously in opposition to 1 Tim. 2; 12, and kindred prohibitions and inculcations, that we wonder how any one with whom the authority of the Bible is paramount, can join with it. Nor is there any hope of making things better from that quarter.

4. Non-endurance of sound doctrine, and prevalence of infidelity and rationalism, presents another mark of our times. "The time will come, when they will not endure sound doctrine." "They shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (2 Tim. 4: 3, 4.) The evidence afforded by books, papers, etc., is all to the effect that this prediction is having a most striking fulfillment at this day; and daily developments are making the truth of this assertion still more conspicuous. But we wish to speak more particularly of testimony that comes under our own eyes. Not only is there a manifestation of extreme indifference on the subject of religion among professing christians, but there is very little distinct or positive belief of any kind; and in many, many instances downright skepticism on some of the most vital doctrines of christianity is entertained. We have heard members of orthodox churches express their belief in some kind of purgatorial process after death, by which sin will be effectually eradicated,—thus denying the sufficiency of our Lord's atonement. These same persons have self-complacently deplored the tendency towards Romanism in some other churches than those to which they belonged. We have heard others advocate prayer to the Virgin for intercession on our behalf, and produce the stale, ridiculous argument about the tenderness of a woman's heart in justification; as if a creature could have more feeling than the Author of it, and forgetfulness of His own declaration in Isaiah 49: 16. Still others have confessed to us their entire disbelief in the resurrection of the body, simply because they could not understand how widely disseminated particles could be re-collected and reformed, even by an omnipotent Being.

Much of the literature that is afloat is characterized by the same skepticism. One would think the curse should have been repealed long ago, by the various restoratives devised by human ingenuity for all the ills of life. Why should there be poverty and misfortune, when it is only necessary to be self-reliant, persevering and smart? Why should any one be idle in this land of over-abundance, when employment is just ready to his hands? Why should any one commit the folly of getting sick, when he need only observe the laws of hygiene? And so the fact of our being tainted, fallen beings, and that we must be subject to suffering and misfortune until the Deliverer comes to make all things new, is entirely ignored.

The special unbelief in regard to the premillennial coming of our blessed Lord, among the laity, is not so much to be wondered at, when we see how the doctrine is derided, condemned, or altogether disregarded by ministers. As they ignore the truth, they are "turned unto fables." These fables, for which they have not even weighty human foundation, they persistently preach. We need not wonder that they have dealt so summarily with prophecies incomprehensible to their carnal reason, or seemingly irreconcilable with each other, when we remember how lightly and irreverently they have treated other doctrines as well. They say God cannot expect a rational being to believe what he cannot understand—therefore it means thus. And what substance has their rationalizing left in some of the most essential doctrines of our holy religion? Thus it has gone on, until a very small part of the Bible is really believed.

Verily, if the Son of man should now come, would he find faith on the earth? Let us watch, lest we be found sleeping.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

"RICH BLESSINGS."

While the bountiful, beautiful rain is coming down in sheeted showers, I take my pen with gladness of heart to address so great a company as the readers of the Crisis. What a "rich blessing" is such a privilege. We are living in "the ages to come," the hope and the glory of which warmed the large, strong heart of Paul the "apostle to the Gentiles." While those of the first Christian century labored without ceasing to gather in the "first fruits," we of the nineteenth are not only laboring but largely receiving the increase and the accumulations of all previous labors; and to-day, how rich!

Rich blessings on every hand. Lift up your eyes toward the north, the south, the east, the west, and behold the fields everywhere teeming with richer blessings than the heart can conceive.

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof," and to-day is the anthem swelling earth and air and ocean—"Blessings and riches, and glory and honor, and dominion, be unto Him who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb forever." "In Him are all the families of the earth blessed."

It is true, that the nations are not yet become the nations of our Lord and his Christ, but the "times of restitution" are none the less blessed, though in prospect.

When I contemplate these blessings, so richly given to the ten times ten thousand homes, of not only our happy Columbia, but all nations, and to the isles of the ocean everywhere, how my heart sings for joy.

"Onward, onward, men of heaven,
Bear the gospel banner high,
Rest not till its light be given
Star of every pagan sky."

Out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, are gathering those who "work righteousness." Who can fail to rejoice? "Let not your heart be troubled. In my Father's house are many mansions." "He who hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God."

This glorious harvesting of the increase of the incorruptible seed, the "word of God," "the sons from afar and the daughters from the ends of the earth," is but a part of that "joy" set before him—the Prince of peace—while enduring the cross. Out of the unfailing wells of salvation are the waters of life drawn,—the wells of revealed truths and promises in the holy Word, the incorruptible fountain, and the creations so glorious of that same "Word made flesh." "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth," is the "city of God." "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

Oh, faint not, child of God, and heir of eternal life; the "goodly land" is yours. Give unto the King of kings praises unceasing. Keep his commandments. "Love one another, even as he hath loved you." Feed his lambs, and fear no evil, remembering that he who redeemed you is "Lord of all." Sing and rejoice. If pain be my portion, then will I sings songs in my night, songs for the "rich blessings" which are imperishable.

For the World's Crisis.

"TO BEG I AM ASHAMED."

A short time ago a writer for the Crisis, who is friendly to the Lord's poor, requested, or rather suggested, that the poor saint make his or her wants known through this paper.

Will you allow me to say, through the columns of the "World's Crisis," that I do not believe that the true child of God can become so loud a pauper as to publish his needs to the world, which he holds secret between himself and the Almighty. They know that they are poor in this world, but being rich in anticipation, they feel it beneath their dignity to beg, and may God forbid that I should hurt their sensitive nature.

A better way for every one who has the spirit of Jesus is, to pray that God would open the hearts and purses of those who have his money in their hands, to distribute to the necessity of saints, and at the same time also remember that you have got a heart to be enlarged, and a purse to be emptied. My experience has taught me that it is important to search out the poor contrite ones; yea, more, it is my duty; and all who have a heart in this good work know how blessed it is to give, or, rather, to pay out that which has been intrusted to us.

The Scriptures teach us plainly that all belongs to God, and comes to us by his love, and all should be returned to him by ours. We brought nothing into this world, and can carry nothing out of it. By grace we have been sustained, and by the same favor we will be faithful stewards of the money in our hands. I believe, to-day, if I was in need, I would starve before I could beg for myself; but it is right that my voice should be raised for the afflicted sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. What a dreadful thing it is to neglect this precious privilege, and have it said to us, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not."—Matt. 25: 41–43.

Job is one of the worthies, and is set forth for an example. He says, "I was a father to the poor; and the cause which I knew not I searched out."—Job 29: 16. Also hear what the wise king of Israel said: "The righteous considereth the cause of the poor."—Prov. 29: 7. And David said, "Blessed is he that considereth the poor."—Ps. 41: 1.

It is not necessary to quote more Scripture on this point; every one who is familiar with the Bible knows what God requires in this direction, and all may be sure that those who are so wrapped in their own selfishness as to neglect the distribution to the children of their Father's money, will have to answer for it at the time appointed. Some excuse themselves by saying,

"We have not got much; see Bro. A. with his $50,000, and Bro. B. with his $75,000 or $100,000; and if I was only worth as much, I would do good with it, I would make some of it fly."

Jesus said: "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much."—Luke 16: 10. The Lord has not called me to preside over those monied men, but he will call them and me to give an account of our own stewardship. When he makes a demand on any of us, we should pay his order with promptness and punctuality, always remembering that the great Sovereign is very exact.

I have seen the saint very thankful for a little, and the saucy beggar ungrateful for much. Dear friends, I pray you for Christ's sake to seek after the silent ones: and if you love God you cannot help but find some of them; there are some of them among the preachers' families. My mind now rests on a brother in the State of Mass. who has a feeble wife, a sick sister-in-law, and three children to be provided for. They are not unfrequently sufferers, who do not complain; they make no loud noise about their wants, but God knows them. Every member of this family knows what it is to call on the name of the Lord. They are blessed, but poor.

I frequently hear about this family, although I have not seen them. I am informed that he is a blunt, outspoken preacher, who has given up every opportunity to earn the many comforts of this life, to point men and women to Jesus, the Savior of sinners. This family have made a covenant by sacrifice. I sympathize with them. I know he must hurt the feelings of hypocrites and backsliders. Such men know what it is to trust in God, and also that lukewarm professors are not to be relied on.

Brethren and sisters, who have the love of God in you, double remember the plain preacher who does not respect persons. You may be sure that the smooth preacher will be fed by the rich worldling, who hates the man that reproves him for his sins.

Individuals sometimes tell me that they do not know where to send money to do good. (I must confess that I am not troubled in that way.) I point them to the many benevolent calls in the World's Crisis and Voice of the West. Another class say they never let the right hand know what the left hand does. If the left hand could speak, would it roar out, Nothing? If not, the Lord knows what is done secretly, and he will reward openly. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

Lincklaen, N. Y. F. CORKER.

THE TALMUD.

There are two Talmuds—the Jerusalem in two folio volumes, and the Babylonian in twelve folio volumes. The Mishna is the same in both, but the two Gemaras are quite different. The origin of these two Talmuds is historically as follows: Soon after the overthrow of the Jewish commonwealth by the destruction of Jerusalem, under the Roman Emperors Vespasian and Titus, Jewish schools were established for the study of the law at Jamnia and Tiberias,—the former a town in north-western Palestine, situated near the Mediterranean; and the latter a well known village on the lake of Genesareth.

But the Jews having become objects of intense hatred and suspicion to the Romans, especially after the second revolt in the reign of Hadrian, the Jewish literature could nowhere within the Roman empire have a full and free development. Hence the Jerusalem Talmud was circumscribed in its contents, and unsatisfactory in its teachings. But Babylonia was at this time a part of the Parthian Empire, and independent of the Romans; and here, therefore, the Rabbins established their most famous schools at Sura, at Nehardea, and at Pumbeditha, and pursued their studies with comparatively little molestation, and the result was the more copious and satisfactory Babylonian Talmud.

There is something wild and romantic in the idea of this immense body of literature existing in the world from generation to generation, in the aerial cloud-like form of tradition, like that pillar of cloud and fire which of old guided the wandering steps of the sacred nation. A superstitious reverence prevented these traditions from being written, lest, by being once fixed in writing, they should cease to grow and receive accessions from warm and vivid human thought.

But lest the definite and positive Anglo-Saxon mind should incline to conceive that nothing of any real permanent worth could have existed so long in a traditionary form, we will venture to remind our readers that we have a very similar instance in the common law of England, "the origin of which," says Lord Chief Justice Hale, "is as undiscoverable as the source of the Nile," and which for generations existed mainly in unwritten traditions and customs.

The work of reducing the Talmud to writing was never attempted till the third century of the Christian era. Even then, at first, great opposition was made to this innovation. It was said that to write the Gemara would fix it and make it unalterable, whereas it ought to be left open to improvements from the developments of successive generations.

We can see in this notice of the growth of the Talmud how it could be quite possible that Gamaliel, at whose feet Paul was instructed, and others like him, could have improved the Gemara by a judicious use of the instructions of Christ and the apostles. Though the oral traditions of the Mishna and portions of the Gemara were some of them doubtless antecedent to the time of Christ by many generations, yet it can not be proved in a single instance, where there is identity of sentiment between the Talmud and the New Testament, that the Talmud did not borrow from the New Testament, rather than the New Testament from the Talmud. It is not likely that an utterance as clear, condensed and cutting as the Sermon on the Mount, as given by the Evangelists, was passed over with inattention by the learned senate of Jewish Rabbins. These teachings passed into the community, and became an animating and forming force in society; and they must, in the very nature of the case, have acted powerfully on all the existing schools of ethical and intellectual science. We find in Christ's discourses frequent allusions to the teachings of these men, searching reviews and criticisms of their doctrines. Much of the Sermon on the Mount is a statement of the errors in their teachings and the establishment of a higher code of morals. . . .

The compilation of the Mishna took place in the third century, and that of the Gemara at the close of the fifth, or as some historians maintain, in the early part of the sixth century. Whatever the date of the completion of the New Testament canon may have been, this much is sure, that it was a good deal earlier than the reduction of the Mishna to writing. . . . That the New Testament as a whole was extensively known and read by the authors of the Talmud, is evident from the fact that the book is mentioned several times in the older Amsterdam editions of the Talmud. . . .

Surely, the time has come when that which the man Gabriel gave as the sign of the approaching end, is fulfilling before our eyes. "Many will run to and fro, and knowledge will increase." Never has the Bible been so thoroughly studied, so critically searched and compared with history, geology, etc., as in our days. If the great reformers, or those we call the early fathers of the church, were permitted to rise from their graves, they would consider themselves as mere school-boys in comparison with Bible students of our day. The Lord is at hand.—The Israelite Indeed.

For the World's Crisis.

CAUSING OTHERS TO STUMBLE.

"But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."—MATT. 18: 6.

There is something fearful in these words of our Savior. The man who causes others to stumble, had better have had a millstone hanged about his neck and been drowned in the sea. This would be an awful death, but it is no comparison to the death that awaits this class of sinners.

These are not meaningless words. Whatever Jesus has promised or threatened he will perform. If we would escape this awful doom we must avoid the sin, which is nothing less than the eternal ruin of those who otherwise might have been saved in the kingdom of God. Every one of us is in danger of falling into it, therefore we need to be on our guard.

We find many outside the ranks of professed christians who devote much of their time to this work of causing Christ's little ones to stumble. If all who are engaged in this work were outside, the church of Christ would be much more secure than now; but, alas! we find some of this class of foes in the very ranks themselves. They profess to be friends, secure confidence, and therefore cause a larger number to stumble. Some of them make high professions, and occupy positions of honor in the church. Instead of being actuated by the principle of supreme love to God, and loving their neighbor as themselves, they are filled with selfishness, and in order to carry out their own ends will injure the humble and crush the innocent.

Others of this class cause Christ's little ones to stumble, by failing to carry out in their dealings the principles which they advocate in their conversation. They will sell Christ, and endanger their own souls and the souls of others, for a few dollars in trade.

Some ministers of the gospel cause others to stumble by preaching smooth things. They do not boldly and fearlessly proclaim the plain truth of God, for fear of bringing upon their own heads the disapprobation of the people. So they permit those who are looking to them for instruction in the things of God, to pass carelessly on indulging in those things which will certainly sink them in perdition.

But those who occupy high positions are not the only ones who fall into this sin, and incur this woe. There are others, who profess to have been taken from the horrible pit and miry clay, who seem to live only to be stumbling-blocks to others. Their words are fair, but most of their acts are corrupt and sinful. Persons who feel disposed to do right lose confidence in them and the cause which they profess to represent. The consequence is, some who have set out in the good way turn back, and others remain away from Christ and are lost.

Besides those already named, we have a class of respectable backsliders, who cause the absolute ruin of many. They do not enter themselves, and are doing much to prevent others from entering. They say by their acts (and actions speak louder than words), that they have tested Christianity and are fully satisfied that it is not what the Bible represents it to be; therefore they do not wish to have anything more to do with it. They have a large circle of friends who are influenced by this course to remain away from Christ.

Now, brethren and sisters, before we begin to plead innocent of this terrible sin, let us examine ourselves in the light of God's word, and learn the truth in the matter. If we discover ourselves to be guilty, may we flee to God and pray for pardon at once, and then "show that we in earnest grieve, by doing so no more." C. H. SWEET.

SUNDAY SICKNESS.

Dr. ——, among other valuable papers, a few years ago, published one describing this remarkable disease, which has not yet been treated in books of pathology.

1. This disease is of the intermitting kind, attacking the patient with violent paroxysms, which return every seventh day. These paroxysms return only on the Lord's day, and hence it is called Sunday sickness; but by the faculty it is technically known by no other name than "Diei Dominici Morpheus."

2. It partakes somewhat of the nature of ague, especially as it is attended with a great degree of coldness. This coldness is first apparent early in the morning of the Lord's day, in many cases seizing the patient before he has left his bed. But it begins in the region of the heart, and is attended with dullness of the head, followed by yawning and lethargy.

3. The patient is sometimes deprived of the use of his limbs, especially the legs and feet; so that he is indisposed to walk to the house of God.

4. In some cases, this attack has come upon them after they have gone to the house of God, and has been attended with yawning and slumber.

5. In other cases, there has been great uneasiness in the house of God, and a disposition to complain of the length of the sermon, though they have been known to sit very contentedly in a play-house several hours at a time.

6. Persons affected with this disease never mourn on account of their confinement from public worship, as many afflicted with other diseases often do.

7. These persons often surprise their neighbors with great activity and health on Monday, however unfavorable the weather may be.

8. Most of the faculty agree that there is a low, feverish heat, technically called febris mundi, or fever of the world, which may be detected in these patients during the intervening days of the week.

9. There also seems to be a loss of appetite for savory food, and a want of relish for panis vitæ, bread of life, which, in this case, is the indispensable remedy for this disease.

10. Persons affected with this disease generally have a disrelish for private religious exercises of the closet, and the reading of the Scriptures.

11. This disease is also contagious; neighbors receive it from neighbors, and children from parents.

SENSIBLE TALK.

A correspondent of Zion's Herald, writing from Providence, R. I., under date of Sept. 30th, thus talks about the moral state of things in and around that city, and gives us another refreshing evidence that "facts are stubborn things," and so stubborn that they act like the old battering ram of the ancients against the old Whitbian fabric of the world's conversion. That writer is evidently not a believer in the aforesaid theory, and he talks rather pointedly about the "sheep-pen churches." L. C. M.

"And sooth there is need of christian work in this city. Sabbath witnesses numerous excursions down the river to the various places of resort and dissipation. The Press says two thousand went down yesterday, and there was only one murder, that of a man camping on the bank, who was terribly cut by some rowdies, and died this morning. But then, the owner of the boats, I am informed, was at church, and no doubt lost in godly dreams of gold and gain, and worldly vanity. Why does not the secular press of this city open fire on these ungodly practices and disreputable places? Perhaps because they are 'secular, pertaining to this present world,'—see Webster's Unabridged. Is the world, on the whole, growing better? Not in these 'plantations,' whatever progress it may be making around the 'Hub.' We are about ready for the final earthquake, the great upheaval of this mundane. Rum, rowdyism, and Sabbath-breaking run riot in this region, and the people of God weep and pray between the porch and the altar. While the few go to church, sit in their easy seats, lulled to soft repose by the drone of the pulpit bagpipes, the many rush down the river, pour down torrents of whiskey, and 'raise the wild devil withal' by their bacchanalian orgies, and perhaps the next day a Sabbath school excursion visits the same spot, and patronizes the same houses which have witnessed such scenes as make an angel blush. O consistency! Of course there are some honorable exceptions, but I do not know their locality. Now what we want in this locality is, instead of these fifty sheep-pen churches, fifty free houses of worship, with fifty John Knoxes raised from the dead or somewhere else; men who would not be afraid to use the hammer of the Word so as to produce an 'anvil chorus' that should fix the attention of these thoughtless multitudes, and bring them to fear God and respect the Sabbath. Shall we ever see the abolition of pewed churches, and the house of God become again the house of prayer for all people?' I doubt. Who can say Credo? (i. e., I believe. L. C. M.)

LUTHER ABOUT THE FUTURE INHERITANCE.

"Peter (1 Pet. 1: 4) speaks about the future inheritance, that it is reserved for you, though you do not see it with your mortal eyes, nor do you now possess it; for it is reserved and kept for you in a place where it is secure, namely, in heaven, where nobody can steal or rob it. And yet a little while, and you shall not only see it, but come into possession of it, and keep it for ever with unspeakable joy and happiness. When will that be? At the last time; i. e., when Christ shall appear in his glory and raise us from the dead. To us it seems yet a great while, but before God one thousand years are as one day, yea, as a night-watch. And, besides, when we shall have risen from the dead, and though we have slept more than a thousand years in the earth, it will seem but a very short time to us."—Translated by L. Reimer.

Gems.

— A preacher once said:—"If you know anything that will make a brother's heart glad, run quick and tell it; but if it is something that will cause a sigh, bottle it up—bottle it up."

— Aristotle, on being reproved for giving alms to a bad man, made the following noble reply: "I did not give it to the man, I gave it to humanity."

— Though earth be but a desert of arid sands, that scorch our pilgrim feet, yet there are sometimes beautiful groves and cool shades which are delightful to us.

Why does the robin warble near my window every morn?
Why do the rain drops patter on the great, wide blades of corn?
Why do the green leaves whisper in the hot and burning noon?
Why do the rills make music 'neath the shimmer of the moon?
  The spirit of love is in them all,
    And music is all their speech,
  And 'tis only by singing their songs that they call
    Men's souls within their reach.

— Amidst all disorders, God is ordering all wisely and justly, and to them that love him, graciously; therefore we ought not to be dismayed.

— To reprove small faults with undue vehemence is as absurd as to seek to remove a fly from a friend's forehead with a sledge-hammer.

— Christians are all cross-bearers. It is truly a family badge. Sometimes it is lighter, sometimes heavier; but they carry it with them wherever they go; no cross, no saint.

— No person can be so feeble or so poor that he has not a duty to perform; which, being performed, makes him one with the highest and greatest.

— I never knew how it was, but I always seemed to have the most come in when I gave the most away.

— A husband can readily foot the bills of a wife who is not afraid of being seen footing the stockings of her husband.

— Prayers and tears are the weapons with which the saints have obtained the most glorious victories.

— I know one thing—if I stand by the principles of truth and duty, nothing can inflict upon me any permanent harm.

— Calumny is like the brands flying from a large fire, which quickly go out if they do not blow them.

— If you want to find faults that are bad, be on the look-out; if you want to find those that are worse, be on the look-in.

— Uprightness in all our dealings with one another is a matter not of human convenience, but of divine requirement.

— The groundwork of all manly character is veracity, or the habit of truthfulness. That virtue lies at the foundation of everything said.

— Quarrels would never last long if the fault were on one side only.

REJECTED ARTICLES.

Not unfrequently we receive letters from persons who have sent us articles for publication, asking us to inform them by letter why their productions failed to appear. These persons have little idea of the delicate task they propose for us. Really, we should sometimes be hard put to for finding fitting and unoffending phrases, so as to make the matter satisfactorily plain, and yet retain the good wishes of our correspondents. It must needs be that, as in other professions and pursuits, there are found persons whose qualifications are rather limited for what they undertake, so among those who desire to enlighten the public through the newspapers, there are those whose forte lies in some other direction.

It is this class of persons who seem to meet with misfortune in their efforts at doing good in this matter. It is quite possible, however, that among these contributors there may be a good deal of real talent, but which we are too dull to appreciate. We are quite willing to concede that this may be the fact. Correspondents, therefore, who find their articles rejected, must not always suppose that they are destitute of merit, but may take the liberty of attributing their ill luck to editorial short-sightedness.—Telescope.

"HIMSELF HATH DONE IT."—Isa. 38: 15.

"Himself hath done it" all! O, how those words
  Should hush to silence every murmuring thought!
"Himself hath done it"—he who loves me best—
  He who my soul with his own blood hath bought.

"Himself hath done it." Can it then be aught
  Than full of wisdom—full of tenderest love?
Not one unneeded sorrow will he send,
  To teach this wandering heart no more to rove.

"Himself hath done it." Yes, although severe
  May seem the stroke, and bitter be the cup,
'Tis his own hand that holds it; and I know
  He'll give me grace to drink it meekly up.

"Himself hath done it." O, no arm but his
  Could e'er sustain beneath earth's dreary lot;
But while I know he doeth all things well,
  My heart his loving kindness questions not.

"Himself hath done it." He who searched me through Sees how I cling to earth's ensnaring ties,
And so he breaks each reed on which my soul
  Too much for happiness and joy relies.

"Himself hath done it." He would have me see
  What broken cisterns human friends must prove;
That I may turn and quench my burning thirst
  At his own fount of everlasting love.

"Himself hath done it." Then I fain would say—
  Thy will in all things ever more be done;
E'en though that will remove whom best I love,
  While Jesus lives I cannot be alone.

"Himself hath done it." Precious, precious words!
  Himself—my Father, Savior, Brother, Friend;
Whose faithfulness no variation knows—
  Who, having loved me, loves me to the end!

And when, in his eternal presence blest,
  I at his feet my crown immortal cast,
I'll gladly own, with all his ransomed saints,
  "Himself hath done it" all from first to last!

SHAKING HANDS AS A MEANS OF GRACE.

I maintain that shaking of hands, rightly administered, is a means of grace. You, my dear sir, are established, and every one knows you to be a solid man. There is a man beside you just fighting his battle and making his way. You know him, and nod to him. Take him by the hand, my dear sir. It will do him good; and if he was cast down a little as men will sometimes be, it may encourage him. "Our minister shook hands with me." What made that hulking fellow too big to be a boy, too raw to be a man, announce that fact so loudly when he went home? The truth is, for sensible effect on him it was more than the sermon. John Smith has been a hard drinker, but is trying fairly to get out of it. Going down the village street, he meets Mr. Brown, who is "boss" at "the works above." Mr. Brown shakes hands with "Mr. Smith," in sight of the entire village. Does that do Smith any good? I tell you it is as good to him as one of Mr. Gough's admirable lectures. It says as plainly as if Mr. Brown had written it: "Mr. Smith, you have only to take care of yourself, and you will be a respectable man in spite of all." That makes Smith stronger; and when he goes to church next Sabbath, and looks over at Mr. Brown, he will find it easier to believe God's most loving word: "Their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more." So "shake hands and be friends"—at market, on the street, and, above all, at church. I presume the apostle meant something when he said: "Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss."

Some people quit church for want of this means of grace. Everybody looks as if just returned from the north pole, and there had not been time to thaw, and the deacon, who runs the church (if anything so lifeless can be said to be run), had been in command of the party. I suspect the boys sometimes say: "Well, I guess I ought to be good, but if I ever do, it won't be 'long with the deacon." They wait, poor boys, till some one comes along with heart—getting no good in the meantime—whose genial, life-like ways make them "feel kind o'good," and they catch the inspiration and "run with gladness in the way of God's commandments."—Dr. John Hall.

GOOD MANNERS.—Every household should cultivate good manners. They are indispensable even to the young; a churlish, rude deportment bespeaks a low, unfeeling mind; no position, wealth or education, can make amends for it. Good manners are attractive and winning, and should be carefully observed in every family circle. Parents should never indulge themselves in careless manners or coarse language, much less to their children or domestics. The feelings of those in inferior stations should be regarded as well as those of the highest. The smile, the pleasant tone, and the courteous bow, is quite as highly appreciated at home as abroad. If we wish a free and easy code of manners, we must cultivate them at home, by being courteous and polite to those who surround us, and we will not only add to the happiness of those we love, but be at ease in society.

DARK STABLES.—Any person who has felt the pain and inconvenience of coming suddenly from a dark room into the full blaze of day will easily conceive the necessity of lighting a stable in a proper manner. This is too often neglected in confined stables, and the consequences are most distressing to a humane observer. The poor horse, led suddenly out to his work, shows his pain in unmistakable expressions, stumbles and runs against anything that may happen to be near, until the eye has in some degree accommodated itself to the new circumstances under which it is placed.

Nor is this all. By a continuance of this change from darkness to sudden daylight, the eye becomes seriously injured. The retina, or sensitive nerve, becomes dull and more or less useless; the horse's sight is injured; he starts and shies at objects which he sees imperfectly; and many a rider who has received a dangerous injury, has had to thank his inattention to this simple cause, rather than any vicious habit of the animal, to which it has been attributed.

HOW TO CLEAN LAMP CHIMNEYS.—Most people cleaning lamp chimneys, use either a brush made of bristles twisted into a wire, or a rag on the point of scissors. Both of these are bad; for without great care, the wire or scissors will scratch the glass as a diamond does, which under the expansive power of heat, soon breaks, as all scratched glass will. If you want a neat little thing that costs nothing, and will save half your glasses, tie a piece of soft sponge the size of your chimney to a pine stick.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—PAUL.

IS ALL ANIMAL FOOD UNHEALTHY?

By no manner of means. Still, there is no class of men that enjoys better health, or has a more vigorous body, than some who live wholly upon vegetable substances. This is especially the case with the Greek carriers or servants, who rarely taste meat. The late Dr. William A. Alcott, during the last thirty years of his life, informed the writer that he had not eaten any animal food, and yet enjoyed better health than he did before he adopted this course. His son, now professor in one of our colleges, whom I saw two years since, while preaching at Cohasset, told me he had never tasted meat; yet he was full grown, strong and healthy. Those of us who can look back thirty or forty years, will recollect how much was then said about living on a vegetable diet. I have now in my library two volumes of Sylvester Graham's Lectures against the use of meat. Yet most of his disciples went back to the use of meat, and poor Graham died of chagrin, because his book, which he verily thought would become a text-book in all our colleges, fell "still-born" from the press.

Still, some animal food taken in connection with vegetables, is better than a diet composed entirely of vegetables. We give this as our medical and personal experience. Many patients have improved upon more animal food than they had formerly taken, and personally we have eaten such food every day, and have not been sick for thirty years. We are aware that all this is no demonstrative proof of the truth of our general remark, because these patients might have been of that class whose cases peculiarly required meats, and we might not have been sick if we had lived on a vegetable diet. Still, in our opinion, some animal food is preferable for health, to a diet wholly vegetable. At the same time, we have not a doubt but more animal food is taken generally than redounds to the health of the community.

We are frank, also, to acknowledge that a diet wholly vegetable would be preferable to one wholly animal. No person should live on animal food alone, because it destroys his energy, renders him dull and heavy, produces too much blood, augments its circulation, and overstimulates the system. It lays a foundation for inflammatory diseases, tends to produce a putrid diathesis, and to bring on putrid diseases.

Then, the use of animal food depends much upon climate. In a cold climate, it is much more necessary than in a tropical one. An East India-man would give more for an orange, or an apple, than for a pound of flesh, while an Icelander would not touch the apple or the orange, but eat his sea-blubber, and drink his train oil, with the utmost zest. The colder the climate, and the more oxygen we breathe, the more animal food we require, just as the more fuel is consumed, the more fire we have. This accounts for the fact that we require more food and more meat in winter than we do in summer. The lungs consume more oxygen, and the furnace of digestion must have more fuel to support the flame.—Dr. Cornell's Ed. Good Health.

HOW TO TREAT SMALL BURNS.

Apply wet clay, cloths wet in cold water, or a potato grated to a pulp. Either of them are easy of application. The potato dressing and wet clay need changing less frequently than the wet cloths. They all produce their effect on the same principle, and are harmless unless the burn is of a character that requires their application for a long time, in which case the dry earth dressing will be found useful. The following case treated by dry earth is reported from the Boston City Hospital:

"The patient entered with an extensive but superficial burn covering the right ankle, the dorsum and outer side of the left foot, the ankle and leg for some four inches above, produced by boiling water four days before. The true skin was very much reddened and painful; there was considerable discharge; some blebs.

Dry earth, finely powdered, was dusted from a dredging-box over the entire burned surface; it was applied at frequent intervals, whenever a moist spot showed itself. In a week's time the earth had absorbed the discharge completely, and formed a nearly impervious coating, so that but two applications a day were required. The pain had quite disappeared. This treatment was continued for three weeks, at the end of which time the scab formed by the earth was washed off. A fine cicatrix beneath appeared. For three days more, castor oil was applied, when the patient left with ulcers nearly closed.—Herald of Health.

BEDS.

These are very necessary, as well as convenient and comfortable; but like all other things in this world there are good and bad beds. Feather-beds are injurious in every way to health, and should, therefore, be dispensed with. The way in which many manage them is also very absurd: they rise from them in the morning, make them up steaming hot, close the doors and windows, and leave all till bed-time. Then the scene is acted over again. All beds should be most thoroughly aired after being used, that the gases and odor imparted to them from the human body may be removed. The room, also, should be well ventilated. There are many materials that make much more healthful beds than feathers, among which may be enumerated hair, husks, straw, springs, etc.

Cotton will answer for some constitutions; but for most it is too heating. Many patients tell their physicians they cannot sleep on a bed made of cotton. It produces a restless, itching sensation, like that of insects crawling over the body. Hard beds are much to be preferred to soft ones, and that for more reasons than can here be stated.—Good Health.

THE WISH OF TO-DAY.

I ask not now for gold to gild
With mocking shine a weary frame;
The yearning of the mind is stilled,—
I ask not now for fame.

A rose-cloud, dimly seen above,
Melting in heaven's blue depths away—
O, sweet, fond dream of human Love!
For thee I may not pray.

But, bowed in lowliness of mind,
I make my humble wishes known,—
I only ask a will resigned,
O Father, to thine own!

To-day, beneath thy chastening eye,
I crave alone for peace and rest,
Submissive in thy hand to lie,
And feel that it is best.

A marvel seems the universe,
A miracle our life and death;
A mystery which I cannot pierce,
Around, above, beneath.

In vain I task my aching brain,
In vain the sage's thought I scan;
I only feel how weak and vain,
How poor and blind, is man.

And now my spirit sighs for home,
And longs for light whereby to see,
And, like a weary child, would come,
O Father, unto thee!

Though oft, like letters traced on sand,
My weak resolves have passed away,
In mercy lend thy helping hand
Unto my prayer to-day!

—John G. Whittier.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW WORDS OF ADVICE.

"And he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way."—GEN. 45: 24.

This is the advice Joseph gave to his brethren when he sent them away from Egypt, with Pharaoh's orders to bring back their father, Jacob, and all his family. Joseph had long ago discovered his brethren to be of a peevish, quarrelsome disposition, and the late very moving transaction of his making himself known unto them, he justly imagined would call to their minds what they had formerly done unto him, and very probably be the occasion of reviving their mutual contentions; and that which confirmed him in the suspicion was his overhearing his eldest brother upbraiding the rest on this head saying, "Spake I not unto you saying, Do not sin against the child, and ye would not hear? therefore behold, also his blood is required." Gen. 42: 22. Though at that time they knew not that he understood them, because he conferred with them by an interpreter. Upon so well grounded suspicion, then, no advice appeared to him more seasonable or necessary to be given them at parting, than this caution, "See that ye fall not out by the way."

Joseph still loved his brethren, and had forgiven them all, and therefore lays them all under the same obligation to love and forgive one another. The same charge our Lord Jesus Christ hath given to all his disciples, that they "love one another," that they "live in peace," and that they forgive as they hope to be forgiven.

In considering these words, we shall regard them as containing a very important exhortation, equally incumbent upon all who profess to be the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ.

1. This exhortation to avoid all uncharitable contentions does not oblige us to be of the same sentiments, or, in the strict sense of the phrase, to think the same thing. This in the very nature of things is simply impossible. I suppose there are no two individuals in the world that see and think exactly alike in all things. Whilst men are of a different make and complexion of mind, they must see things differently, and hold different opinions. And to compel men by acts of violence to be of the same opinion, is infinitely absurd. To use harsh means and torment men's bodies in order to enlighten their minds, is just as reasonable as to pretend to cure a wound by an argument; and they who are for informing men's judgments by breaking their bones, may as well attempt to set them again by a lecture on logic.

No; as men are accountable for their own conduct, they should think and judge for themselves, and not suffer their consciences to be domineered over, or their understanding dictated to, or their faith directed, by any man or any set of men, any further than their directions and instructions harmonize with the words of the great Teacher; for he is our Master, and to his teachings we are to give heed; for the words that he hath spoken shall judge us in the last day.

2. In order to live in peace very large and charitable allowances must be made for every one's natural temper, which, though it be not so much out of his power as his judgment, yet as it is natural and born with him, it is one of the most difficult things in the world, sometimes, to correct its faults, and though reason directs and religion obliges us to this, yet how often does nature rebel against reason, evade religion, and break through the restraints of both. Whatever abatements are due on this score, certain it is that as persons may be of different judgments, so they may be of different natural dispositions, and yet be united in the bonds of Christian love.

3. This exhortation does not require us to be insensible to the mistakes and failings of good men. All men are encompassed with infirmities, and are liable to mistakes. In the best of men we may see things that appear to us to be wrong, and we cannot help being displeased therewith, and the more in proportion as we ourselves are affected thereby. But, with all their faults we ought to love them for their virtues, at least the latter should prevent our falling out with them on account of the former. I know one great object of the old adversary in these days is, to get people to magnify the faults of others while they diminish their own. Backbiting, fault-finding, and evil-speaking, are prevailing sins among professers of religion at the present time. We can hardly go into any public place but we hear professors talking about the faults of some absent brother or sister.

Is this right? Can God approbate such conduct? Are we to treat an erring brother or sister as boys do a foot-ball; every one hit it a kick, and send it further as it passes along? Is this not one reason why so many little churches, that were once united, have been divided and split to pieces? I think it is. Brethren have allowed envy, malice, and hatred, to exist in their hearts; consequently there is "confusion, and every evil work." I know we are not to wink at sin and fellowship those who persist in doing wrong; but if a brother or sister is overtaken in a fault, are we to reject them, speak evil of them, and shun their company? What saith the Scripture? "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6: 1. O that those who profess to be followers of Him who was "meek and lowly in heart," would examine themselves, and see whether they be in the faith or not. How can men and women be so deceived, as to think they will be saved while they have envy, hatred and malice in their hearts towards their brethren and sisters?

Irreconcilable resentment is not allowed to Christians. The whole extent of the duty recommended in the language of Joseph to his brethren may be comprehended under the great Christian duty of love, so often inculcated and repeated in the New Testament. This is the very genius and spirit of the gospel, without which there can be nothing of the true Christian disposition. Of this the apostle Paul gives a most beautiful and animated description (1 Cor. 13,) under the name of "Charity."

The relation and circumstances which Joseph's brethren were in when he gave them this advice, and which were so many inducements to them to comply with it, are in a good degree common to us, and so far are equally proper to engage us to the same. For,

1. We are brethren. Like the patriarchs we have all one Father. We should therefore love as brethren. All believers were once children of wrath, walking in darkness, hateful and hating one another; but they have been redeemed from sin, and adopted into the family of God. Now they are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God. Among brethren there is oftentimes a great dissimilitude of condition and circumstances. Some are weak, others strong. Some excel in capacity, others in good temper; others in knowledge; but that which should unite all in affection is, that they have all one Father. As we are all children of our Father in heaven, and are taught to acknowledge and address him as such, this filial relation should remind us of the fraternal relation wherein we stand to one another, and the mutual love it requires. "Love as brethren;" "be kindly affectioned . . . with brotherly love;" "let brotherly love continue."

2. It was another considerable motive to the patriarchs to comply with this advice, that it was given them by their own dear exalted brother, who had not only the tenderest regard for their welfare and interest, by the ties of nature, but was able to support it by the power and dignity of his station. We have the same motive to influence us; for this commandment to "love one another" is given us by Jesus Christ himself, who is not ashamed to call us brethren, and "who was in all things made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. And as our exalted Brother, who having loved his own, he loved them unto the end; he hath given us this reasonable advice, that we "love one another, as he hath loved us;" and by this, says he, "shall all the world know that ye are my disciples; if ye have love one to another."

3. Another reason why Joseph's brethren should not fall out with one another was, because they were all guilty, not only in their behavior towards Joseph, but in all probability in their behavior toward one another. And is this our own case? However, most certain it is we are all no less guilty towards Christ, than Joseph's brethren were towards him. We stand infinitely more in need of his forgiveness than any of our offending brethren do of ours, and his readiness to forgive us all should strongly induce us to forgive one another. Therefore this duty may be further urged from this consideration, that we all hope to be forgiven of God. And our forgiving others is made one of the express conditions of our receiving forgiveness from him. We pray on no other terms, when we say, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us." And our Lord explains that petition of his prayer in this sense: "If," says he, "ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive you your trespasses." And to induce us to this forgiving temper, no consideration can have a greater force than this, that our greatest enemy cannot stand so much in need of our forgiveness as we do of God's. So Joseph's brethren knew when they came to their father's house, they should be all filled with self-remorse and shame, in unraveling to him the whole mystery of his son's story, and would all want his forgiveness, which consideration would be a strong argument to comply with their brother's advice—"Not to fall out by the way."

4. Like them we are all sojourners in a strange land. It has been observed that there is not here to be found a more sincere and disinterested friendship than among those of the same country in foreign lands, at a distance from their common home. Their being exposed to the same hazards, difficulties, and disasters, and having the same interests, views, and designs with regard to their journey, is that which knits their hearts together with a more than common tie of affection. Happy if the same observation could with equal force be made of all Christians who, in a religious view, are in the same circumstances,—pilgrims and strangers on the earth, having no continuing city here, but seeking one to come. It is something unnatural and unscriptural, then, for them to be alienated in their affections, and to increase the inconveniences of their journey by their "falling out by the way."

5. Another circumstance common to us with Joseph's brethren, and which should equally induce us to comply with the exhortation he gave them is, that we are all traveling to the same home; that whatever different subordinate views we may each entertain here, our main view is the same; we are all tending to the same place—our Father's house, where there are many mansions, the holy Jerusalem, the "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." What a glorious home that will be, where all the saints shall dwell. How beautifully the beloved John has described these things in the Revelations. Read chap. 21: 1-7.

Soon Christ will send forth his angels, and purge out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and then shall the righteous shine forth like the sun in the kingdom of their Father. This blessed hope of what we expect to enjoy when we arrive safely at home, should effectually prevent us from "falling out by the way."

The world to come will be a place that knows nothing of those jarring discords, feuds, and confusions, which infest this sinful world. That will be a peaceful country. The strifes and bickerings of time will be done, and the weary saints of God, who have been tossed and driven upon the boisterous sea of life, will then find rest and peace near the throne of God. Then the Prince of peace will reign, and those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Sin shall be banished from that peaceful clime. Sorrow and sighing shall flee away. The waves of trouble and affliction, that have been rolling over a fallen world for six thousand years, shall then be hushed in eternal silence. The curse shall be removed, Paradise restored, the earth renewed and glorified, and God's will done in earth as it is now in heaven. The angels will gather the elect from every land and clime, and they shall sit down in the kingdom, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and go no more out forever. Centuries, chiliads and ages, shall roll on, still nothing shall ever interrupt the enjoyment of those who sing the "new song." Peace shall flow, and joy shall swell, and love abide in every heart forever.

Let us, then, remember the home towards which we are rapidly hastening, and it will be a good incentive to prevent our "falling out by the way." J. W. THOMAS.

PURE RELIGION.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and keep himself unspotted from the world."

It appears by the reading of the above Scripture that the writer was conscious of a religion which was not pure. Hence he uses the term, "pure religion." This would lead us to inquire,

1. What is religion?
2. The various kinds of religion.
3. The importance of having the pure religion.

1. Religion is a system of faith, or worship, a pious practice. Webster. If religion is a system of faith, when an individual "gets religion,"—as the phrase goes,—such an one must have a system of faith. How many we see professing to be christians who in reality have no system of faith at all. Such people, according to Webster's definition, have no religion. You approach them, and ask them what they believe, and why they hope, and they have really nothing to tell you, and you are led to conjecture that they have no system of faith, consequently no religion.

Then to get religion is to get a system of faith. To have a pure religion is to have a pure faith; to have an impure religion is to have an impure faith. Hence, according to our system of faith will be our worship; and according to our system of faith will be our practices. If our system of faith is pure, our worship and practices will be pure. If our system of faith is impure, our worship and practices will be impure.

2. There are many kinds of religion in the world of which we might speak; suffice it to say, that every system of faith in the known world is a religion, but not the "pure religion" of which James speaks. The Jews have their religion, the Pagans theirs, and the Mohamedans theirs; but these are impure, for their faith is impure. Thus every sect, every people, and every nation which has not a system of pure faith, has not a pure religion; consequently ruinous in its nature, and dreadful will be the result.

Reader, I exhort you in the name of Israel's God to examine yourself to see if you be in the faith. I care not whether you are a Methodist, a Baptist, a Presbyterian, or an Adventist. I care not by what name you may be called; I entreat of you to examine yourself, and examine closely. Try your faith by the word of God; try it faithfully; search every chapter, every verse, every sentence; search earnestly, for by faith we stand; and if our faith is spurious, let us know it now; if our religion is vain, let us exchange for a better; yea, for the pure; for when our faith fails, our religion fails; when our religion fails, we fall. God help us to see the danger to which we are exposed.

This is an age of unbelief, and the last age of this world. O heaven, help us to see the change to which the church of God is exposed. Indifference stalks abroad in the hearts of men; even men who profess to be looking for the Lord from heaven; indifferent as to doctrine, time, and event. Nothing but the blast of Gabriel's trump will arouse them. O, indifference! thou weapon of Satan. Brother, beware, lest Satan take your crown from your head by the use of this almost last invented weapon. Division will follow indifference in the church, and destruction indifference; and this is what Satan would like to see.

3. It is important that our religion should be pure, as no other will answer in the day of judgment. We may have an impure religion here, and glide along through life smoothly; but, like the man who was falling from the peak of a building down the roof, his ride being quite pleasant had it not been for the thought of falling when he had reached the eaves. At the moment he reached the eaves, he exclaims, "Now comes the nip." So it will be with those who have a false religion when the judgment comes; then will be the trying time. Let us remember that God, the Father, will be our Inspector then, and will unmask all sins covered by the garb of a false religion. Let us remember that none but the pure in heart shall see God. O, can we not realize that "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God"? All will be well if we have the pure religion, and undefiled. The Lord grant it.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

71. Christ preached his first sermon on the mount.—"And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain; and when he was set, his disciples came unto him. And he opened his mouth and taught them, saying."—Matt. 5: 1.

Christ preached his first sermon in the plain. "And he came down with them and stood in the plain; and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people . . . came to hear him. And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said."—Luke 6: 7, 20.

This is another instance in which a direct falsehood has been ingeniously conveyed to the mind. What authority has the infidel for stating that the sermon which Christ delivered on the plain, as recorded in Luke 6: 17, 20, was his first sermon? What authority, indeed? What pretext or excuse can he have for this, when the very chapter preceding gives an account of Christ preaching a sermon from Simon's ship, in the edge of Gennesaret, while his audience thronged the shore. And in the chapter next preceding this we find the declaration, "And Jesus returned in the power of the spirit unto Galilee, and there went out the fame of him through all the regions round about, and he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all." Luke 4: 14, 15. Immediately after this follows an account of a sermon in the synagogue at Nazareth. Again in verse 31 of the same chapter we read, "And [he] came down to Capernaum. . . . and taught them on the Sabbath day," and when they urged him to stay with them, his reply, as recorded in verse 43, is, "I must preach the kingdom of God in other cities, for therefore am I sent; and he preached in the synagogues of Galilee."

Yet in the very face of all these declarations in the two preceding chapters, when we come to the next instance recorded in Luke 6, the skeptic very coolly calls it his first sermon! What beautiful consistency! Had the infidel taken the trouble to read the sermon delivered on the mount (Matt. 5), and the one delivered on the plain (Luke 6), he would also have discovered some difference in the discourses.

72. John was in prison when Jesus went into Galilee.—"Now, after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God."—Mark 1: 14.

John was not in prison when Jesus went into Galilee.—"The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee."—John 1: 43. "And after these things came Jesus with his disciples into the land of Judea. . . . And John was baptizing in Enon. . . . For John was not yet cast into prison."—John 3: 22-24.

This proposition is so arrayed as to convey to the mind the idea that Jesus never went into Galilee but once, whereas the Bible speaks of his being there some seventeen times. The green vales of Galilee were the witnesses of many of his noble deeds, and the clear waters of her beautiful lakes testify to his miracles and his love.

He went into Galilee many times before John was cast into prison, and many times afterward. Hence, the contradiction in the above proposition we fail to see.

73. Christ's disciples were commanded to go forth with a staff and sandals.—"And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no money in their purse; but be shod with sandals."—Mark 6: 8, 9.

Christ's disciples are commanded to go forth with neither staves nor sandals.—"Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses; nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves."—Matt. 10: 9, 10.

Mark represents Jesus as telling his apostles to take nothing for their journey save a staff only, while in Matthew they are forbidden to take staves; there is nothing contradictory here, the evident idea of both texts is that they were to take but one. Probably one apiece, simply as an aid in walking, and not to carry several as if they designed thereby to protect themselves from physical harm. As they trusted in Omnipotence for protection, they had no need to carry staves for weapons.

Also in Mark they are commanded to be shod with sandals, and in Matthew they are forbidden to provide themselves with shoes; but this is not inconsistent. The sandals were much lighter and more portable than shoes. The word sandal is purely Chaldee, and when translated means a light shoe. It is compounded of sin a shoe (see Targum, Deut. 25: 9, 10,) and dal, thin, light, slender, or mean, (see Martinus' Etymological Lexicon); they were much lighter than the hypodema or common shoe. Hence, in the commission, the preference was given to them. It is probable, however, that our Savior intended more particularly to convey the idea that they were to take no change of garments, and this idea is sustained by Wilson's version of Matt. 10: 9, 10, which reads thus, "Carry no traveling bag, no spare clothes, shoes, or staff." See Emphatic Diaglott.—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

DO WE BELIEVE IT?

Do we believe that Jesus is soon coming? Prophets and apostles have spoken of it, and of the signs whereby we may know He is near. Our blessed Savior has given us sign after sign, even down to the generation of his coming. Matt. 24. These signs this generation has seen. And shall we doubt the transaction for the admonition of which all these signs were sent? If God has fulfilled his word thus far, will he not to the end? But who believes these things? Bless the Lord, there are some that do. But who? Are they those who are building big houses, pulling down barns and building bigger; adding land to land and house to house; buying young, growing timber lots, which cannot be any profit for years to come; in short, laying up treasures on the earth? Can such be really expecting Jesus? What! believe that the time is at hand, even at the door, "when the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up," and still seek to own as much of those works as they can? Would you purchase houses in a city that you knew would be burned in a few hours? Actions speak louder than words.

Again we ask, Who believes it? Do not those who are willing to undergo any thing for the sake of Jesus; who sell large estates and take less ones; leave big mansions and live in cottages, or even camps; who are willing to deny themselves of all luxuries in food, and superfluities of dress, for the sake of publishing abroad the gospel of the kingdom?

A great door and effectual is opened to us in the South, and elsewhere, and but an inch of time to work. Dear brethren, you who have means, is it not best to use those things which have been entrusted to your care, and which must soon be destroyed, to the plucking of men and women as brands from the burning? May the Lord bless you in so doing. ELISHA JOHNSON.

LIGHT.

Why need we grope our way in darkness, when we might as well have light, if we would only receive light instead of darkness? "Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established." "The Lord hath made all things for himself; yea, even the wicked for the day of evil." "Every one that is proud is an abomination to the Lord." "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." The above passages may be found in the sixteenth chapter of Proverbs. Therefore let us see that our ways please the Lord, that we may walk in God's light while we are pilgrims and strangers. We must come out from the world and all worldly things, and be separate from all wickedness, as God's word commands.

My experience teaches me, if I will enjoy the blessings of God, I must deny myself of worldly things, and look to God, who is the author and finisher of our faith. Let us submit ourselves unto the requirements of God's word, and come to Christ by faith, who will help us by his grace to live as we ought. Let us try to avoid little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little follies, little indiscretions and imprudences, little indulgences of self and of the flesh, little bits of covetousness, or selfishness, or vanity. The avoidance of such little things as these goes far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life.

Therefore, let us try to so live that we may have right to the tree of life, and have our hope anchored to that within the vail. Let us study the word of God faithfully, that we may be able to give a satisfactory reason for the hope within us, without any of the fear of man before our eyes, or shame either; for Christ says that whoever shall be ashamed of him, of him will he be ashamed before the Father. Let us take God at his word, and trust him; and if we obey him, we have the promise of his grace. It stands us in hand to watch ourselves, and to bridle our tongues; and as that is an unruly member, it needs a guard over it continually.

"Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart."—Ps. 97: 11. "The wicked man travaileth with pain all his days; a dreadful sound is in his ears; he believeth not that he shall return out of darkness, and he is waited for of the sword. He knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at hand."—Job 15: 20, 23. Therefore let us look for light, that we may have it instead of darkness. H. B. DUNLAP.

BIBLE vs. THEORIES.—No. 5.

REVEALED ORDER OF THE RESURRECTION.

Now it is said by the apostle Paul concerning this Jesus (Acts 26: 23), "Witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles." Then it is affirmed (13: 32, 33), "that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee."

This agrees with his declaration in 1 Cor. 15: 20, "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead"; from which accomplished fact the apostle proceeds with his argument in favor of a general resurrection (ver. 22) thus: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive"; but pauses in his course of reasoning to introduce an explanatory clause, beginning with the twenty-third and ending with the twenty-eighth verse, in relation to the order of that general resurrection, of which he had repeatedly declared that Christ was the first born from the dead," or the beginning, i. e., of the resurrection. Col. 1: 18. Explanation. (1) "Every man in his own order; Christ the first-fruits"; and (2) "they that are Christ's [afterward] at his coming."

Now there is a question here of no small magnitude, which the writer has never seen mooted, which nevertheless demands consideration; viz., which "coming" is referred to in the twenty-third verse; the first or second? In Matt. 11: 2-6 we read thus: "Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another? Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me." And in John 1: 11-13 thus: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

Again we read in 5: 43, "I am come in my Father's name" (9: 36) "For judgment I am come into this world"; (16: 28), "I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and go to the Father." "In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And, behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow; and for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay."—Matt. 28: 1-5. "And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people. . . . Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen: to whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." . . . And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many."—Acts 13: 31; 1: 23; Matt. 27: 52, 53. "Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things. Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men." Eph. 3: 9, 10: 8. As in the margin, "led a multitude of captives."

Now the one pivotal point upon which the whole argument turns is this: Were those resurrected ones "who came out of their graves [previously opened by the rending of the rock-tombs] after his resurrection," the same class referred to by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 23, and denominated by him "they that are Christ's at his coming"? If so, then it unavoidably follows that "the end," and the "delivering up of the kingdom to God the Father," will transpire at and on his second coming; and it also follows that he is now reigning, subduing all things to himself, putting down all power, all authority, and all rule.

But if Matt. 27: 52, 53 does not refer to those named in 1 Cor. 15: 23 as "those that are Christ's [after the first fruiting] at his coming," then it is equally true that "the end" and the "delivering up" will not transpire at and on his coming; that he is not now reigning, nor subduing all things to himself; for the "afterward," at which point of time "they that are his" shall be raised, must first be reached, prior to "the end," and his coming must also precede the raising; and if it was not accomplished at the first coming, it must be at the second, for there are but these two comings of Christ any where named in Scripture.

Then, again, "the reigning" must precede "the giving up"; for it is under and during his reign that "all enemies are put under his feet"; otherwise the kingdom is delivered up in an imperfect condition. But as death is the last enemy to be destroyed, and the resurrection of those that are his at his coming" is the first work done by him when he comes, the "putting down all rule," etc., must be subsequent to the resurrection of the saints; for the saints themselves are to be associated with him in this work of subjugation when he reigns. Rev. 2: 26, 27.

It becomes us, then, brethren, as men who profess to have taken an advanced position upon the truth, to critically examine the "afterwards" of 1 Cor. 15: 23, in connection with those who "came out of their graves after his resurrection," in Matt. 27: 53; and with all due diligence and mutual forbearance perseveringly adduce all the Bible testimony we can on this point, and ascertain, if possible, whether the word "afterward" denotes "after the first fruiting" when he rose, or after that, at his second coming. For the World's Crisis.

A QUESTION.

Do the dead sojourn in heaven? So a certain class teach. This is by no means a popular belief. Only a few hold it. I would they were less. Be upon one side or the other. The most popular view as entertained, from Rome downward, is, that souls at death, if saved, go to heaven as their eternal place of abode. But a few tell us this is not so; that the earth redeemed, renewed, will be the place of final reward; but still they conceive, "see through a glass darkly," or imagine, what they sometimes call an "under world" upon Grecian authority, as witnessed by Josephus, I suppose, where the liberated tenants of clay (the good, we mean), will pass a sort of butterfly existence "out of the form," sublimated immaterials, strangers in a strange land (shall I say?) during a brief stay, a sojourn, to be called back to bodies and tangible realities, as the New Jerusalem, the new earth, etc.

And to this their intermediate state they dare apply Paul's language (Phil. 1: 23), "To be with Christ." Is Christ now in the under world? Nay, but in heaven. If saints at death go to be with Christ, they go to heaven itself, the real heaven, but only to sojourn there. And we think the last that start on the journey will hardly get there, and some will make but a short stay. How much better to believe Bible teaching on these points. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

Dr. Hutchinson tells a story that illustrates the force and directness of simple Bible testimony. He said in 1861:—

"When I was in England fifteen years since, I called upon the Rev. Mr. Brooks, Rector of St. Mary's, Nottingham, with whom I had a most agreeable interview on the faith of the Lord's speedy coming and kingdom. He told me how he was led to see that the earth renewed will be the abode of the redeemed. He said he was delivering a course of sermons on the beatitudes, and came to the text, 'Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth'; which he explained as meaning that the meek do now inherit it by having as much of it as is good for them, when his mind became impressed with the idea that he was not giving the true meaning of the passage; that the blessing is in the future. The impression had such an effect on him at the time that his hearers noticed it, and at the close of the service hastened to ask him if he was not taken unwell while in his sermon. He then begun to examine the subject, and was conducted to the conclusion that the earth restored will be the possession of the meek, and that this blessedness will be introduced at the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the just. He further said that soon afterwards he was in company with the late Rev. E. Bickersteth, Rector of Watton, on a missionary occasion, who, in conversation, was dwelling on the future triumphs of the church of Christ. Mr. Brooks gave it as his conviction that this could only take place at the Second Advent. Mr. Bickersteth, with his characteristic warmth, exclaimed, 'And is Brooks among the prophets!' The conversation which followed, however, led Mr. Bickersteth to examine the question; and he embraced the faith of the pre-millennial Advent, and wrote and preached on the subject."

Many others have had their attention arrested by the plain language of the Bible, whose teachings are not "yea and nay," but yea to every truth, in beautiful accord.

A literal, tangible man, "of the earth earthy," literal death, or termination of life, by a suspension of breathing, "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish," or mental operations cease. Ps. 146: 4. He is hid with Job in the grave; at God's call he awakes, lives again, breathes once more, is resurrected (Job 14: 1), and realizes the hope expressed by our beloved Bro. Paul also, who said when about to die, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure [from the ranks of the living to go to the dead] is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth [not immediately] there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me [when?] at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 6-8.

Remember what Jesus said to his disciples (John 14: 1), "I will come again, and receive you unto myself."

"Oh, may I triumph so,
When all my warfare's past;
And rising, find my latest foe
Under my feet at last."

Stanbridge, P. Q. CHAS. P. DOW.

SERMONS WITHOUT BLADES.—Passing along the road the other day, we thought we had found a very beautiful knife. On picking it up, it was found to be only a handle without a blade. So do we hear very beautiful sermons—well written and well read—but they are without a blade. They cut no cancers of sin, and carve out no models of piety. Sermons must have blades.

☞ TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

SPIRITUALISM AS IT IS.

We give the following facts relative to the phenomena of Spiritualism for the benefit of those who have no special documents on the subject. We are more and more satisfied that it is the worst enemy with which Christianity will have to contend between now and the end of this dispensation. We do not write as an enemy, but as a friend to those who are being deceived by the demons. We have taken special pains to become thoroughly informed in relation to the phenomena of Spiritualism, its cause, effects, and purposes.

From its commencement among the Fox girls, in Hydeville, near Rochester, N. Y., March 31st, 1848, to the present time, we have been carefully observing its operations, and its influence upon society; and have become most thoroughly convinced that its whole tendency is antichristian; and that the spirits of departed friends have no connection with it whatever. We would treat the subject with candor and kindness, but with plainness; meeting facts with facts, in a fair, open investigation. The time has come when every faithful watchman should sound the note of alarm, and every christian should gird on his armor for the coming conflict with the powers of darkness.

Every effect must have a cause adequate to produce that effect; and when the true cause of Spiritualism is found, it will unfold the whole mystery of its strange phenomena. It has been assumed that it is all the result of trickery practised by the mediums; but it is unreasonable to suppose that the thousands, and even millions of Spiritualists, among whom are many noted for intelligence, honesty, and truthfulness, are all playing tricks upon each other, and their dearest friends, husbands, wives, parents and children; and at the same time most positively affirming their sincerity, and fullest confidence in the manifestations.

Others have claimed that all the phenomena could be accounted for upon philosophical principles; but facts have spoiled their theories, and scattered them to the four winds. If the phenomena are not the result of trickery, do not proceed from departed human spirits, and cannot be accounted for upon philosophical principles; from whence, then, do they proceed? We answer, from demons. Who are they? "The angels that sinned," called also "evil angels," "unclean spirits," "devils," or, "demons." Who are the angels? A class of beings higher than men, and created before the human race. When addressing the Lord, in relation to man, the Psalmist says, "Thou madest him a little lower than the angels." Then it follows that angels existed before men, and are a little higher; consequently are not men. Man could not be made a little lower than the angels when there were none in existence.

The angels were on probation, as is evident from the fact that some of them "sinned." 2 Peter 2: 4. Those who "kept ..... their first estate" are called "holy angels," "the angels of God"; while the "evil angels" (Ps. 78; 49) are called the devil's "angels." These angels resemble men in their exterior form, and have sometimes been mistaken for men. Hence we read: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."—Heb. 16: 2. This proves that they are not disembodied human spirits, as claimed by some; because such could not eat and drink, and have their feet washed, as was the case with the angels who visited Lot and others. The angels are real, tangible persons, but not made of dust like men. Jesus settles this point when he says: "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have."—Luke 24: 39. The angels are often called "spirits"; yet they have personal organisms. It is said of Jesus: "He took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham" (Heb. 2: 16); consequently there is a difference between the nature of angels and Christ. The fact that angels are not made of "flesh and bones" does not prove they have no material forms. There are many substances of which they may be composed, and not be "flesh and bones." We find no proof in the Scriptures that an "angel," or "spirit," is an immaterial being.

The angels have power to render themselves visible or invisible at pleasure. This fact is clearly taught in the Bible. When Balaam was riding to a certain place for the purpose of cursing the children of Israel, "the angel of the Lord stood in the way for an adversary against him." The animal he was riding "saw the angel," and endeavored to go around him. Balaam was offended at the conduct of his beast, and smote it with "a staff." After that, "the eyes of Balaam were opened, and he saw the angel."—Num. 22. It is very evident, from the teachings of the Bible, that angels are a class of beings higher than men, resembling them in their exterior form; that they were on probation; some of them sinned, and were then called "evil angels," "unclean spirits," or "demons." The good angels have never claimed that they were the spirits of our friends, or that they ever lived on this earth. They have always come on important business, spoken in harmony with the Bible, appeared in their own persons, instead of speaking through mediums.

Some hold that "demons" are nothing more than human propensities. It is certain that the Scriptures do not teach thus. Says the apostle James, "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well; the devils also believe and tremble."—James 2: 19. It cannot be said of men's propensities that they "believe and tremble." It is said of these "unclean spirits": "They are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."—Rev. 16: 13–14. Many passages of Scripture might be quoted to prove that demons are personal beings; and, in the Bible, are always spoken of as being wicked. It would be as improper to speak of good demons, as it would of holy wickedness. Says the apostle Paul:—"Ye cannot drink of the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils."—1 Cor. 10: 21.

Having settled the point that there are two classes of angels—good and bad—the inquiry arises, Where are the bad ones—the demons? The good angels, who did not sin, are with God in heaven, and are often sent as messengers to his children. Of the "evil angels" it is said:—"God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment."—2nd Pet. 2: 4. Where is the hell in which they are "reserved unto judgment"? The word tartarosas, rendered "hell" in this passage, occurs nowhere else in the Bible. If we can find its locality, we shall find the place where the demons are reserved.

"Dr. Wm. Ramsey, an able and learned writer, says: 'The word Tartarus means, according to Greek writers, in a physical sense, the bounds or verge of this material system.' ... Dr. R. remarks, 'That place is, probably, at present, within the atmosphere of our earth.'

"The learned Ralph Cudworth, D. D., in his 'Intellectual System,' vol. 3, p. 363, while speaking of Peter's remark, says:—'And by Tartarus here, in all probability, is meant this lower caliginous (i. e. dark) air, or atmosphere of the earth, according to that of St. Austin concerning these angels, 'That after their sin, they were thrust down into the misty darkness of this lower air.' (De. Gen. ad Lit. lib. 3, cap. 10.)"

Dr. Parkhurst, the lexicographer, says:—"It appears from a passage in Lucian, that by Tartarus was meant, in a physical sense, the bounds of this material creation."

Empedocles says:—"Our dull, lack-lustre globe is the doomed haunt and dungeon of evil angels, envious and malignant demons."

Dr. Whately says:—The word used by Peter, which our translators render 'cast down to hell,' or 'Tartarus,' is to be understood of our dark, gloomy earth, with its dull clouds, foul vapors, and misty atmosphere. .... Socrates called the abyss, or sea, Tartarus, as does also Plato, who elsewhere calls our dim, lack-lustre earth itself also Tartarus. Plutarch says our air ... is called Tartarus, from being cold. Herein he is followed and supported by Lucian. And both Hesiod and Homer call it the 'aerial Tartarus.' In no other sense or way can St. Peter be understood and explained." Lucian says, "The great depth of the air is called Tartarus."

Grotius, an ancient and learned writer says: "That is called Tartarus which is lowest in anything; whether in the earth, or in the water, or, as here, in the air."

Having found the abode of the demons, or "the angels that sinned," the inquiry may arise, What are they doing, and how do they accomplish their work? It is believed the answer will give the true explanation of the phenomena of Spiritualism.

The apostle Paul says: "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." 1 Tim. 4: 1. Hence their special work will be to seduce people away from pure christianity, God and the Bible, and cause men to believe their hypocritical lies.

We will now proceed to show that these demons operate just like mesmerizers. The proof of this point will be given from the spirits themselves, and from standard writers on Spiritualism, confirmed by facts.

When a distinguished medium (Mrs. Cora Hatch) was lecturing in Boston, in a trance state, she was asked "to explain why it is necessary that the room should be darkened when wonderful phenomena are performed in the presence of certain mediums?" The answer returned by the spirit was as follows:—"The action of light agitates, dissipates, or in some way so disturbs the fluid, gas, magnetism, or whatever the instrumentality be called, which is employed by spirits in acting upon grosser matter, that they are unable to control and employ it."—The Spiritualist of Aug. 15th, 1857, edited and published by A. E. Newton.

In the Spiritual Age of April 3d, 1858, is found the following:—"What, then, is the distinction between Mesmerism and Spiritualism?" The following answer is given:—

"Mesmerism is something which a man does while he has his clothes on; Spiritualism is a similar act of his after his clothes have been put off. [By clothes, they mean body.] Suppose I magnetize you to-day; and that I, the mesmerizer, speak, write, act, through you, you being unconscious;—this is Mesmerism. Suppose, further, that I die to-night; and that, to-morrow, I, a spirit, come and magnetize you, and then speak, write, act, through you; this is Spiritualism."

In the Banner of Light, July 30th, 1857, is the following:—

"The correctness of communications from spirits, through trance mediums, depends upon the more or less perfect control the spirit has of the medium or subject. We have been able to discover little difference in the control a spirit takes of a trance medium, and that taken of a subject by a good mesmerizer, though undoubtedly the power of the spirit to control the medium's mind is stronger, and the will more effective in using the organs."

Having learned from the spirits, whoever they are, that they operate just as "a good mesmerizer" does, it remains to be shown how a mesmerizer performs his wonderful manifestations. It is well known that, in mesmerism, the objects seen by persons under mesmeric control are not real objects. For instance, a mesmerized person may be made to believe that he is amputating a limb, and go through with all the movements consequent upon such a work; while spectators know that the man is deceived by the mesmerizer. The mental picture formed in the operator's mind appears as a reality to the one under his control. While in the mesmeric state, he would testify that he was truly cutting off the limb, and could feel it while using, as he supposes, the lancet and the saw for cutting the muscle and bone, the needle and thread to take up the arteries, and the bandages to complete his work. But all this is but the result of being under the control of a mesmerizer.

Let it be kept in mind that all the spirits and their followers admit and affirm that the spirits operate just like "a good mesmerizer." If that is true, then it follows that the beautiful gardens, birds, trees, flowers, and friends, are not actually seen by the medium, but only mental pictures of them; and in this lies the deception. In the Banner of Light, of April 9th, 1864, are some questions proposed to the spirits, and their answers, as follows:—

"Q. Is the flower as tangible to the disembodied in spirit-life as it is to us?

A. Flowers in the spirit-land take the form of beautiful thoughts. Are they tangible? Yea, and far more tangible, far more real than the fleeting flowers of earth-life.

Q. Are there not real spirit-flowers, such as we are accustomed to seeing here?

A. No, there are not. Pardon us, if we have ruthlessly swept away the pleasant allusion, but some one must do this, sooner or later. Your own senses, mayhap, will do this.

Q. Will it not be with our spirit-friends as with flowers, when we get to the spirit-world—that we shall not know them?

A. You will recognize them, not by form and feature, surely, but by love."

From this testimony it is ascertained that the flowers and friends in the "spirit-land" exist only as "beautiful thoughts," just as we now see absent friends mentally.

Mr. A. E. Newton, formerly editor of the Spiritual Age, and a noted Spiritualist, says:—

"It is alleged to be possible and common for spirits of a certain class to assume the appearance and characteristics of other spirits, or of other persons still in the body, so completely that the disguise cannot be detected by ordinary spirit-seers. This may be so, and hence the common evidences of the identity of spirits are little to be relied on.

When two persons are closely in sympathetic or magnetic rapport with each other, the images that are in one mind may be perceived as objective realities by the other. This seems to be the case with the magnetizer and his subject, in the once common phenomenon of mesmerism. The operator forms an image, as of a person, a serpent, a fire, or any other object, in his own mind; when the subject, if well under control, instantly sees the same thing as an objective reality. So, positive minds in a circle, or positive spirits who are around, may present the image of any person with whom they are familiar, and it may appear as a reality to the impressible medium."

This is a truthful statement of facts in the case, and establishes the position that our departed friends are not really present by the side of the medium, any more than the subject under mesmeric control sees a real "person, a serpent, a fire, or any other object."

Perhaps no one is better prepared to speak on this subject than Andrew Jackson Davis. In the Herald of Progress, Oct. 27th, 1860, of which he was editor, he says:

"It is known that a wise and strong-minded person in the spirit-world has power to make visible to the eyes of mortals the exact appearance, or semblance of the body it wore before death.

This representation is elaborated sometimes to the minutest particular, even to the reproduction of the appearance of the habiliments, etc., by which the person was characterized and identified while a resident of the earth."

Again he says, in the Herald of Progress for Feb, 1st, 1862:—"All intelligent spirits are great artists. They can psychologize a medium to see them, and to describe them, in the style which would produce the deepest impression on the receiver ... They can easily represent themselves as being old or young, as in worldly dress or flowing robes, as is deemed best suited to accomplish the ends of the visitation."

Admitting these statements of the spirits and the Spiritualists, in connection with the facts relating to demons, as revealed in the Bible, and the whole secret and mystery of Spiritualism seems to be unveiled. The demons mesmerize their mediums, on the same principle as a mesmerizer does his subject, and then "speak, write, act" through them, and cause them to see whatever they please; and to the medium these objects appear as realities.

This matter may be easily tested. Suppose a stranger in this city should attend a circle to-night, and while there should be informed by the medium that a spirit is present who wishes to give him a communication. With a trembling heart he inquires for the name, when, to his surprise, that of his dear wife is written in her own hand-writing. He inquires for the date of her death, her age, and other incidents connected with her life, all of which are correctly stated; and yet he is sure that no one in the circle, or even in the city, is at all acquainted with him or ever knew any thing about himself or family. He is wonderfully astonished at the information received. But the medium does not stop here, he says, Your wife is standing now by my side; and then proceeds to describe her as perfectly as could the husband himself. By this time he is completely confounded and overwhelmed with the evidence that his wife is really present by the side of the medium; but if he would then request the medium to tell quite definitely where his wife stood, and put his hand about the place, he would find no more evidence that she was there, than he would have in the case where a person is under mesmeric control, that he was actually cutting off a limb, when every person in a normal state knew that the whole mrtter was the result of being under mesmeric influence; and that the operator had formed a mental picture, which appeared as a real object to the one under his control.

These demons are called "seducing spirits." A seducer first endeavors to gain the confidence of his victim by giving some good advice, or performing some kind deed, in order to remove all fear and distrust. So these demons, after gaining the confidence of the people, proceed to lead them away from God and the Bible. All of them deny that Jesus is our Savior any more than any other good man. The following are samples of their teachings:—

A spirit, claiming to be Rev. John Moore, says:—"My friend asks, 'Do you believe the Bible?' I answer, No, I do not. I cannot believe one word of it as the word of God."

Another, when speaking of the Bible, says:—"You may not place any confidence in that book. .... I can assure my friend that God had no more to do with writing that book than he had; ... and do not expect to create any light in the mental world, if you cling to your Bible."

A spirit, who claims to be Timothy M. Baker, says: "I've got folks in Montpelier, and ... I want them to get my sister where I can talk to her straight, as I do to you, and I'll knock her God and Bible all to nothing."

"The only true religion is a natural religion. .... You are your own Savior."

In answer to the question, "Did not Christ die, that through his death we might inherit eternal life?" a spirit answers, "No! Christ did not die, that through his death we might live. ... His death has no more to do with the remission of sins than the death of any of your martyrs."

Says a spirit, "No man should rely upon any Savior outside of himself .... Each and every one is a Savior, as he is a judge, a God."

Another says: "Jesus of Nazareth was a good man, but by no means infallible—no more divine than you are—no more the special child of God than you are."

In the "Educator," a book of 680 octavo pp., professedly coming from the spirits of some of the most noted men that ever lived on earth,—such as Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Robert Rantoul, Aristotle, Martin Luther, Socrates, Roger Williams, and Benjamin Franklin, we find the following:—

"God is man, and man is God. ... Tell us of God, ... they might as well say, Tell us of ourselves." "The being called God exists, organically, in the form of the being called man."—Educator, p. 303.

Says another spirit:—"Every one of you are Gods manifest in the flesh." "The divine existence is one grand universal man." "Man is God's embodiment—his highest, divinest, outer elaboration. God, then, is man, and man is God.—Educator, p. 526.

Can it be possible that these men, and our dear friends, have come back to teach us such blasphemous doctrines? But admitting it is the work of demons—seducing spirits—and all is plain. The Scriptures inform us that all who consult these spirits "are an abomination unto the Lord."—Deut. 18: 12.

CHICAGO.

Our meetings in Chicago are continually increasing in interest. We have never before seen the church in so good condition as at the present time. The brethren and sisters are really awake in the service of the Lord, and, as a result, they have great peace and joy. It is a feast to be in the prayer meetings. No time is lost. They work because they love the service of the Lord. To them christianity is a reality. They know that Jesus is precious, and have the abiding evidences that he accepts them. Last Sabbath, Oct. 10th, was a blessed day. Our love-feast at half-past nine o'clock in the morning was a feast indeed. We felt the presence of the Most High. Large audiences assembled during the day and evening. The truth found a welcome in many hearts, causing them to rejoice in the blessed hope.

At 5 P. M., eight were baptized in the pond in Union Park. It was the most pleasant place we ever had for baptism. Some two thousand spectators stood about the little pond, upon its banks and bridges, and watched the burial of the candidates with great interest. This was the first baptism in the Park. Gen. Mc Arther, Commissioner of Public Works, kindly granted us the privilege, remarking that he thought the moral effect would be good. We think he judged rightly. The scene will be long remembered by those who were present. On the banks of the pond are beds of beautiful flowers, and on its bosom were floating ducks and handsome swans, that seemed much interested in the proceedings. All the surroundings were specially delightful.

We are now holding meetings in Farwell Hall, and have between one and two thousand at each meeting. Very deep interest is manifested to hear on the nature of man and his final destiny. At the close of each sermon forty-five minutes are allowed for questions, and the time is eagerly improved. The Spiritualists are very much stirred up, and are doing all in their power to overturn the teachings of the Bible. Chicago is one of their strong holds. Several members of churches also ask questions; but unfortunately for them, they find themselves on common ground with the Spiritualists in presenting their objections. They begin to see that they have taken a wrong road, and are now honestly inquiring for "the old paths."

We have the best place for meetings in the city. The hall is large and beautiful. We do not know its equal. The regular price for it is $125 a night; but we get it for less, as our meetings are free, and for the public good. Some noble-hearted wealthy men stand ready to pay all expenses, and keep saying, Go on with the meetings, and do not worry about the expense, while so much good is being accomplished. When the people in Chicago take hold of anything, they do not like to act upon a small scale. They think if it is worthy of their attention, that it should be pressed with an earnest zeal, and carried to successful termimation. If such can once become interested in christianity they make the best of laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. The prospect here is brighter than ever before. Brethren, pray for us, that the work may go forward in power.

PERSONAL.

SISTER RAMSEY's health has not improved since our last notice of her sickness. Pray for our dear Bro. and Sr. R.

BRO. COUCH arrived in Chicago Thursday evening, Oct. 7th, and left for regions further west the next morning. We expect him back to labor in the city for some weeks, beginning Oct. 17th. His health is good, and his hope bright. He had a good time in Philadelphia, Oct. 3d, and reports an excellent campmeeting in Vermont, which closed Sept. 26th.

THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE.

In answer to inquiries regarding the sending of delegates to the National Conference in Rochester, we would say, each local conference is to choose its delegates from its own members, and they may be either of the ministry, or laity. Delegates are not confined to the preachers. But to represent any given conference, the delegate must be a member of said conference. Read notice on third page.

PERE HYACINTHE.—A meeting was held in the Meionaon, in this city, Monday the 18th, by the Evangelical pastors of this city and vicinity, to consider the propriety of welcoming Father Hyacinthe, the protesting Catholic friar, who is soon to land on our shores. A committee of five, one from each denomination, was chosen, to confer with him on his arrival, as follows: Revs. Gilbert Haven, E. B. Webb, J. D. Fulton, Dr. Nicholson, and J. B. Dunn.

☞ SR. L. M. STODDARD's appointments are withdrawn on account of sickness.

THE ADDRESS OF ELD. J. COUCH,

Delivered before the Advent Christian Association at its late meeting, published in tract form, is now ready, which the friends can procure free at the Crisis office. When ordered to be sent by mail, please enclose stamps to pay postage. AG'T.

WAR CLOUDS.

Things look very threatening in Europe at the present time. The spirit of revolution is taking strong hold of the people, and they feel determined to introduce a new order of things. It looks as though the pent-up war winds were about to blow a hurricane. "The end of all things is at hand." Let us watch and be sober; keep on "the whole armor of God," that we may be able to stand in the trying hour.

The following is from the Chicago Times, Oct. 12th, 1869:—

"NEW YORK, Oct. 11. The news from Europe is startling. Personal letters by the steamer to-day, as well as dispatches to bankers, agree in stating that the situation in western Europe is really alarming. It is apprehended that a red republican conspiracy exists which has its ramification in France, Spain, Italy, Germany, and even Russia. It will be remembered that last year Garibaldi left his place in the Congress, at Geneva, to conquer Rome from the Pope. Had he succeeded, the revolt of the "reds" would have broken out there; but he failed at Mertana, and now, following the peace congress at Lusanne, comes news by cable of a republican uprising in Spain, and riots in and around Paris. The most ominous sign in the last case is the refusal of the military to use the Chassepot rifles upon the people. There are rumors of troubles in Italy, and fears of a labor revolt in Germany, due to the stout refusal to permit the formation of trade unions. The result of the panic is coming more and more to light, showing the terrible agony it must have occasioned in some quarters."

☞ The Sunday Magazine, edited by Dr. Guthrie, (Eng.), has been received. This, the Oct. number, is the first edition of this valuable monthly issued in this country. The matter is choice, and commends itself to all intelligent christian readers. It professes to be of no sect or party, but religious in the truest sense. It is published in this country by J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia. Thirty cents, single No. $3.50, yearly subscription.

"A FEW WORDS OF ADVICE."—Our readers will be pleased with the article under the foregoing heading. We trust all will be profited by a careful perusal of what Bro. Thomas has said. The subject is a very important one, and deserves the attention of all who are waiting for the coming of Jesus.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute acording to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

MISSIONS.

Dear brethren:—You have seen the Report of the American Advent Mission Society for the last year. The cries of the poor colored freedmen are still heard; the wants and needs of many are pressing, and the question comes home to us who have the means, Shall they be helped? They can be. Shall they be immediately? The Board have constant calls for help, but they fail to do what they desire for lack of means.

And now, brethren, dearly beloved for Jesus' sake, "remember those in bonds as bound with them." Do not let the cries of this class of the poor and needy, which providentially have been brought within our reach, be heard in vain. Prejudice and hatred still bear heavily upon them; and if humanity and religion do not release them, they must suffer on and die like the beasts that perish. A very little sacrifice on the part of the benevolent and Christ-like would replenish the treasury, so that the calls could be responded to and their necessities relieved; besides, the gospel of a coming Lord be put within their reach.

Will you respond immediately to the call? Send to the Treasurer any sums you feel disposed to give. The call is urgent, and we shall expect an immediate response in the needful. Those whom the Lord has prospered will send from one hundred dollars to twenty-five cents. Come, let us hear from you forthwith. Those also who have pledged will send as early as possible, so the wheels of mercy may run the faster.

A good time, also, for all to look and see if they have not some clothing that they wish to keep from the moths. If so, barrel them up and send to Geo. T. Adams, Boston, for the Mission.

Now do be generous, for all given in this direction will receive a double reward. Firstly, you will get a blessing. Secondly, those helped will be blessed, made comfortable and happy. This is one way to lay up treasure in heaven.

L. BOUTELL, for the Board.

BRIDGTON TENT MEETING.

At the close of our meeting in Bethel, we went to Bryant's Pond campmeeting, because they were in special need of the Maine Mission Tent. It was a pleasant interview with brethren and friends, and we hope some good was accomplished by the meeting. It has been reported by Bro. Grant, and we need say no more.

Sept. 23d, the tent was pitched in Bridgton, and meetings commenced in the evening. I was obliged to be at home a few days, and gave the care of the tent work into the hands of Brn. E. M. Haggett and J. A. Libby. The work began well; many came out to hear. On the first Sunday, Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell came and preached one discourse. The weather had been good, and up to this point the interest good to hear; but Brn. Libby and Mitchell left for home, and Monday being rainy and windy, and Bro. Haggett left alone and too hoarse to preach, the people concluded the preachers had abandoned them; so the spirit of the meeting was broken.

We arrived on Tuesday, and began anew to rally the people; but it was cold, and but few came out. Our meetings continued through the week with a good interest on the part of a few who came to hear. Some became much interested in the word preached, and said they had learned more truth during the meeting than in all their lives before. Some were surprised that their preachers did not unite with us in the work; others, who saw the difference between our preaching and their views, complained that we preached "too much Scripture"; they did "not want to hear so much Bible preached."

We found a few in the outskirts of the town who believe in the soon coming of the Lord, and enjoy the gospel hope. With them we had sweet association; an interest was awakened in several other families of christians to look into the gospel hope and signs of Jesus' coming soon. Some unconverted ones became much interested, and we hope some gospel truth fell into good and honest hearts, to produce fruit unto eternal life.

Before our meetings closed, Bro. Haggett recovered his voice in part, and preached once; but Sr. Mary Griffin, daughter of our tent-master, who has been with us during the summer, and who is a faithful worker in the Lord, was taken violently ill, and for several days was unable to attend meeting.

Sunday, Oct. 3d, was very rainy, yet about one hundred came out to meeting. Monday the storm increased, and in thirty-six hours it rained twelve inches, causing a great freshet. Wednesday (6th) we got our tent dry, and packed it for the winter, closing our summer campaign, and separated to return home, thanking God for the abundant blessings bestowed upon us, the access he has given us to the multitudes the past season, and the great success we have had in publishing the gospel of peace and salvation to so great a number, many of whom have been blessed of God by conversion to Christ, or to greater knowledge of the gospel.

Our work will soon close and Jesus be here, to save his people, and gather them to everlasting rest. Shall we who have preached, and those who have worked, and worshiped, and heard, be gathered to that rest? I hope many of us will be permitted by grace to gain the eternal home in the kingdom of God.

I. C. WELLCOME.

MINNESOTA QUAR. MEETING.

The first quarterly meeting of the Winona District met at Utica, Sept 16, and the following officers were elected to serve the coming year: President, Job Brown; Secretary and Treasurer, Philip Ramer.

Preaching at 7.30 P. M. from Rom. 5, and after preaching a short social conference. Truly the Lord met with his children by his Spirit, and did abundantly bless with a heavenly sitting together with Christ at the commencement. Met again on the morrow at 10.30. Had love-feast, and preaching from 1. Cor. 13. A blessed season, both in the morning and evening. The Lord did bless abundantly his waiting ones. On the 18th met at 10 30 A. M. and 7.30 P. M. Preaching by Edwin T. Himes, who was heard with intense interest, and the Lord enabled him to deal out meat in due season to the attentive hearers; while God truly was glorified and the people edified. Met again on the first day of the week. At 9. 30 A. M. had love-feast of one hour. Then preaching by Sr. Ruth M. Rowell, from Jer. 8: 20.—"The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." The subject was timely, and very forcibly impressed upon the minds of the people; and we trust backed by the energy of the Holy Spirit, to do all that heard it good, as it doth the upright in heart. At 2 P. M. preaching by Eld. O. R. Fassett, from 1 Tim. 1: 11. And verily when the many gospels that are being preached were contrasted with the glorious gospel of God, all fell into the shade of darkness, by the light of the glorious gospel that bringeth life and immortality to light. A ray of this glorious light filled many hearts to overflowing, and hearty responses were heard from many.

After service a collection was taken up for the benefit of the tract fund, and $8.25 was received. After this Eld. Fassett led one happy young soul into the water and immersed her according to the command of the great Head of the church.

Owing to the rain storm in the evening, service was held in the house of our friend D. Cheatham. Preaching again by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and closing remarks by Edwin T. Himes. The subject, the thief on the cross, was clearly and interestingly presented to the listening audience; after this the table was spread with the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of Christ, and some thirty persons partook of the Lord's Supper.

Truly this was a day of feasting upon fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. Thus ended the services of the Conference and campmeeting at Utica, the whole of which was one continuous season of interest and blessedness, the unfavorable weather notwithstanding.

Conference adjourned to meet the second time in the city of Winona, Minn, Friday, Dec. 3d, at 7. 30 P. M. and continue over Sunday.

REPORT OF R. I. AND EAST CONN. CONFERENCE.

Wyoming, Oct., 1869.

All felt that this meeting was profitable and timely for the church with which it met. The treasurer reported fifty-five cents in treasury after paying for tracts already bought.

The report of churches was not so full nor so encouraging as we had hoped. Danielsonville by N. Shumway.—A drought is upon us, but some deep springs appear. Westerly by Bro. Peirce.—A few that work and bear burdens for Jesus. East Gloucester, R. I., by letter.—Some have wandered, some disheartened, and some keep up the prayer-meetings. North Scituate by N. Angell.—United, and steadily at work. Wyoming by Bro. Slocum.—Somewhat low; members few, but some striving for the kingdom.

Other churches were reported by preachers. The report of preachers seemed to indicate no weariness in well doing. Bro. Bellows had held a blessed tent meeting at West Greenwich, a hard place by report, but the meeting was orderly and peaceful, and deep conviction rested upon the people. Eight or ten had been converted. Bro. Kenyon, a Baptist preacher, had introduced the "Scriptural Question Book" into several Sunday Schools. It has led some into light and truth. One had said, "That if he could not get another, he would not sell his for for five dollars."

An interesting letter was read from Bro. J. W. Thomas and C. H. Sweet. The reports of other preachers cheered us, but we have no spare space.

A motion to send delegate to National Conference was lost. Moved, That the Charlestown church be invited to unite with this conference, and that Bro. Northrup be appointed to extend the invitation. Carried.

On motion, Brn. Durfee, Carpenter and Bellows were appointed to revise the list of membership of this conference. The following resolution was presented and adopted, viz.,

Whereas, Most of the clerks of the different churches are very negligent in representing the interest of their respective churches by letter, as requested by the Constitution; therefore,

Resolved, That this conference recommend to the churches to call their clerk's attention to this duty, and to enjoin more faithfulness in this matter, or give the office to another who will be more faithful.

On motion, the churches belonging to the conference were apportioned among the preachers present to exhort them to the duty of reporting their condition at each conference, either by letter or by delegate, or by both.

The preachers present were—A. Durfee, E. Bellows, J. J. Northrup, Peter Noka, H. L. Hastings, D. V. Corey, N. A. Angell, Eld. Kenyon, Sr. Crumb, and the clerk.

The attendance upon preaching was good, and the attention excellent. We shall not soon forget the solemnity resting upon us as Brn. Noka and Bellows, moved by God's eternal Spirit, exhorted the people. The seed sown will not be lost. Wyoming shall yet gather the fruit.

The conference adjourned to meet next January at the call of the moderator.

H. F. CARPENTER, Clerk.

— The Bible is a window in this prison of hope, through which we look into eternity.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. B. SPAULDING writes:—"I have been sick and nigh to death, but God has rebuked the disease, and I expect to recover. I said, 'Take me not away in the midst of my days; let me live to praise thee, and stand as a witness for thy truth.' A man must be alive to praise God, or talk of his truths. God heard and answered my prayer in my affliction. What shall I render to the Lord? I will praise him with my whole heart, with my tongue and my pen. This affliction has awakened my mind to more zeal and activity; age and infirmity had made me sluggish and stupid; but now the glorious, simple, wonderful truths of the plan of salvation through Jesus have been opened anew to my mind, and I want continually before me in great characters—JESUS, RESURRECTION, LIFE, IMMORTALITY. These are soul-cheering words, and they stand connected with others, such as restitution, new earth, the New Jerusalem, pearly gates, golden streets, jasper walls, pure river, angels, saints in company with King Jesus, with the new song and anthems of praise. Beloved in the Lord, write to me. Epistles long or short will be like cold water to a thirsty soul. My address is Chelmsford, Mass."

BRO. AND SR. L. SARGENT write from Malcolm, Iowa:—"We in the western world are still striving to serve the Lord, looking for his second appearing, with joy expecting then to be delivered from sin and sorrow, and receive a crown of glory. We have no Advent preaching here but the Crisis, which we prize very highly. We have seen but two Adventists since we left the East. The main object with the people here is to get rich. They have but little if any thought about the future. Brothers and sisters, be faithful; endure the trials, bear the scoffs of the wicked a little longer, then we shall be free from sin and reign on the new earth, which will more than pay for all troubles here."

SR. S. JENNINGS writes:—"I do not know how to do without the Crisis one week, as it is all the preaching I hear, and it so clearly points out the perils recorded in the Apocalypse, of the closing up of Gentile times, in which the church is admonished to watch and keep her garments. I feel the need of hourly watching and praying, while I see plainly from the blessed word the power of the two-horned beast at work among the nations.

I fear some are not awake to the perils that surround them. I pray that every lover of Jesus and his coming may awake, and gird on the whole armor of God, that they may be able to stand before the Son of man."

REMARKABLE MOVEMENT IN BOHEMIA.

The fact of an entire flock of Romanists, at some distance from Raudnitz, having invited the ministrations of a Protestant pastor, has been already brought under our readers' notice. The following more recent information respecting these adherents to Protestanism, addressed to the Vicar of Middleton, Tyas, will be read with interest:—

"PRAGUE, June 11, 1869. I told you in a former letter of a deputation from a distant part of the country, asking me to come and preach among them, and that, taking for granted that they were Protestants, I had promised to do so. When, however, I heard afterwards that they were Roman Catholics, I hesitated to go, upon which a number of them actually left the Romish Church. Now all this had, of course, caused a great stir in the place, and called forth the hostility of the priests. The owner of the hall which had been hired for the purpose was induced to break his contract, and every possible difficulty was raised to prevent the opening of Protestant worship there. Still, we were determined to effect the entrance of the gospel as we have been invited, and so Pastor Schubert undertook to go, and, in the absence of a suitable room, to preach in the open air. This, however, the local authorities would not permit, and so he had to use one of their houses for the purpose, where only some forty persons could find room; but, the windows having been opened, about one thousand persons stood outside, and joined in the service.

"Last Sunday, Pastor Schubert was there again, and in the afternoon, at three o'clock, conducted worship in the same manner as before, upwards of one thousand people standing and listening outside. But this time the priest himself appeared among the crowd, and tried by means of entreaties and of threatenings to drive the people away; but in this he only succeeded with about twenty. In the morning of that same day the priest had preached against us in the most abusive language, which caused some people, who had known nothing of us, to be greatly exasperated against us. But still they came in the afternoon, and wanted to hear for themselves, and after the conclusion of the service they remarked, 'If our priest had heard all this, he would certainly have been ashamed of the street-boys' language which he made use of this morning.' The number of those who have left the Church of Rome is increasing, and the people have resolved to buy a house in that place and fit it up for Protestant worship."—Evangelical Christendom.

Obituaries.

DAVIS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Greely, Delaware Co., Iowa, Sept. 12th, 1869, Sylvester Davis, father-in-law of Dr. Gildersleve, aged seventy-eight years, six months.

Father Davis was a soldier in the war of 1812, and a Universalist in sentiment, but he became satisfied he ought to obey the commandments, if all men were saved, and tried to do so. He united with the Disciple Christians. After this, he read Storrs' "Six Sermons," and became a firm believer in the "Life and Death Doctrine," and renounced his Universalism. He lived an exemplary christian life, and was esteemed by all who knew him. He was at our last year's campmeeting, and hoped to have lived to see Jesus come. Sermon by the writer, from Job 19: 25.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

BARKER. Died, in Woodbury, Conn., August 20th, 1869, Nattie, only son of Chas. C. and Eliza Grover Barker, aged four years, three and a half months.

Their only boy has been taken, but they sorrow not as those which have no hope; but await with desire the day that shall bring again from the land of the enemy their loved one. Words of hope were spoken by the writer. W. N. PILE.

CARSON. Died, in East Rochester, N. H., Oct. 11th, 1869, of typhoid fever, Charles H., son of Benjamin and Mary E. Carson, aged eighteen years and eleven months.

Henry was a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, a noble young man, highly respected by the community. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Rev. 21: 4. May the Lord bless those who mourn. D. M. LEAVITT.

WELLS. Fell asleep in Jesus, Oct. 10th, 1869, in the town of Barre, Orleans Co., of femoral hernia, Eber G. Wells, aged twenty-nine years, nine months, and twelve days.

Our brother has believed the doctrine of the Bible as taught by the Adventists nearly two years, but did not make a profession of religion. During his short but painful illness he was led to see his condition out of Christ, and experienced the Savior's pardoning love.

Words of comfort were spoken by a Methodist minister. Our brother left a wife and three children, brothers, father and sister, and a large circle of sympathizing friends. JAS. E. WELLS.

PLATT. Died, in Yalesville, Conn., Oct. 1st, Mazie, only child of Franklin and Mary P. Platt, aged four years, ten months, eleven days.

Our darling is gone; we are very sad; home is dreary; but we know that God's promises are sure, and that our child "shall come again from the land of the enemy." F. PLATT.

PERRY. Died, in Springfield, Mass., Oct. 2nd, 1869, Mary E., daughter of Wm. R. and Eliza E. Perry, aged twenty years and five months.

May this affliction be sanctified to the good of the bereaved. Funeral attended by the writer. WM. N. PILE.

CHASE. Died, in Lynn, Mass., Oct. 11th, my husband, H. Chase, aged seventy-one years and nine months.

We have laid him away to quietly rest in hope, to meet him when the Master makes up his jewels. JESSIE CHASE.

DALTON. Died, at Wyanet, Ills., Oct. 4th, 1869, the youngest son of J. M. and E. M. Dalton, aged seven months and one day.

Sermon by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22. J. W. BURROUGHS.

Married.

In Springfield, Mass., Oct. 3d, 1869, by Elder W. N. Pile, Mr. ELMER L. HALL and Miss EMILY E. DARLING, both of Worcester.

In Richmond, Me., Oct. 14th, 1869, by H. D. Reed, Mr. FRANK B. MOORE, of New York, and Mrs. EMMA I. HARMON, of Bowdoinham.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

VIENNY, Oct. 10. Emperor Francis Joseph will start on his journey to the East on the 24th of October. He will meet the Empress Eugenia at Conetantinople, and in company with Her Majesty and the Sultan will proceed by the way of Jaffa and Jerusalem to Suez to attend the opening of the canal. The French, Austrian and Turkish fleets will accompany the sovereigns on their voyage to the Isthmus.

BOMBAY, Oct 11, via London, Oct 14. Mr. Kirke, in a dispatch to the Government here, says: "A caravan has arrived at Zanzibar. It brings the welcome news that Dr. Livingstone had arrived at Niyi alive and well. He was on his way to the coast, the road to which was open and safe. Another caravan is expected here, which will bring later information of the Doctor's progress."

BOMBAY, Oct. 11. [Special to the New York Herald by French cable.] Mr. Kirke has received a letter from Dr. Livingstone, dated on the 8th of July, 1868, in which the doctor informs him that he believes he has discovered the source of the river Nile at a point situated between 10 deg. and 12 deg. south. Dr. Livingstone was in good health at the time of writing to Mr. Kirke. Intelligence of a still later date, to hand from Zanzibar, states that the trade caravan had arrived there, and reported that Dr. Livingstone had reached Ajije, on the road to the coast, in safety.

PARIS, Oct. 13. The Patrie denies that the Government intends to suspend the right of reunion, and adds: "The Government simply desires to give warning that it will act with energy should the public meeting degenerate into provocations of insurrection."

The Journals Official has the following: Several public reunions have been announced to take place here and disorders are threatened. The government, however, will enforce the law authorizing the suppression of all public meetings of a character calculated to disturb the public order.

PARIS, Oct. 14. The Siecle to-day has a general review of the policy of the Emperor of France. The article says he continues to guard the temporal power around the Council in which the Jesuits propose again to outrage modern society, and no explanations are offered. Of equal importance is the ignorance which is suffered to exist as to what counsels have been given to the present rulers of Spain, but we know that the suspension of constitutional liberties in that country coincides with Gen. Prim's return from Paris.

The Siecle asks the reasons for the appointment of General Fleury as ambassador to St. Petersburg, and continues: The moment has arrived when France wishes to know something about her foreign as well as her home policy; to know the end pursued—whether peace or war. At this crisis the adjournment of the Corps was an act of supreme impolicy. On these and other questions clear and precise explanations are required, which the government alone can give, since its foreign policy is still directed by the unhappy tradition of diplomatic mystery and State secrets.

ALEXANDRIA, 15th. The waters of the Nile are subsiding, and there is no longer any apprehension of serious damage to the cotton crop. The losses by the flood will not exceed in the aggregate five hundred bales.

A dam in the Suez Canal gave way, but did no great harm to the works, though a large quantity of material was destroyed. It is feared that the canal must be deepened before it can be of any practical use.

ROME, 15th. The Civalta Catolica says the Bishops have been summoned to the Council not to deliberate on and decide the questions by vote of the majority, but to ratify the decisions already resolved upon by the sovereign and infallible Pontiff.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct 14. The Empress Eugenie was received by the Sultan with the most imposing and magnificent ceremonies. The waters of the Bosphorus were covered with boats gaily decorated, and the banks were crowded with spectators.

MADRID, 15th. Rumors are abroad that the Emperor Napoleon intends to establish a corps of observation on the frontier, and was the cause of much excitement.

MADRID, Oct. 17. The insurgents at Valencia, after the battle of yesterday which lasted several hours, surrendered unconditionally. Their leaders have disappeared, but are believed to be secreted in the city or its vicinity. The government forces now occupy the city.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 17. A special Cable dispatch from London yesterday afternoon states that a numerously attended meeting of the Alliance Israelite Universal Society had been held in Berlin. The principal subject considered was the severe distress just now prevailing among Israelites in Western Russia, and the prospective emigration of the Jews from that part of the world to America. A resolution expressing the hope that their people in America would co-operate steadily and with their accustomed liberality with their brethren in Europe in relieving this distress was unanimously adopted.

EARTHQUAKE IN ST. THOMAS.—Washington, Oct. 10. A letter has been received in this city, stating that on September 30th the island of St. Thomas was visited by an earthquake, occurring at 2.50 P. M., which shook the city of St. Thomas to its foundations. The shocks were so severe as to materially injure many of the buildings, shattering the walls of the Spanish and Union Hotels, and other large structures. The earthquake caused a general panic among the inhabitants and the entire suspension of business. The day had been excessively hot, without the slightest breeze, the thermometer indicating ninety-two and the barometer thirty, indicating fair weather. In the interval between the first shock and eleven o'clock P. M., nine distinct shocks occurred, producing widespread terror and dismay. The writer concludes by saying, "I have experienced many severe shocks, but nothing to compare with those of yesterday. There has been nothing like it since the great earthquake of 1867."

AN EARTHQUAKE AT SEA.—The subjoined graphic description of the fearful earthquake shock experienced by the steamer Payta on her recent voyage from Panama to Valparaiso is given by the Purser of that vessel:—

On the 24th of August, at 1.25 P M., being then in latitude 19 deg. 17 min. south, and longitude 70 21 west, or what is the same thing, forty-nine miles south of the port of Africa, three from the main land and in seventy-five fathoms of water, we felt a violent shaking which lasted fifty seconds, causing a terrible panic among the passengers. Though the movement at first appeared unaccountable, immediately after it was, from its nature, discovered to be an earthquake stronger than any person on board had ever experienced. It was followed by a succession of others to the number of twenty, though all of them less severe, until 2.40 P. M., when the last was felt. At the same time it may be almost affirmed that after the first, every shock lasted from seven to eight minutes with only a few seconds' intermission.

The shocks having been of the vibratory kind, considerable damage was done to articles of a breakable nature on board the steamer, its inventory being reduced to less than one-third; for notwithstanding that all brittle articles are kept in compartments two or three inches high, the shaking jerked them up to a height of five inches. An iron chest, weighing from ten to twelve quintals, was moved four inches from its place, six-inch cast-iron plates were parted in two, the compasses were injured and one of them destroyed.

During the movement the sea boiled all around the vessel, and as far as the eye could reach, in bubbles from a foot and a half to two feet in height, producing the crepitating sound of a heavy rain falling upon water, accompanied by a strange creaking and dull, rumbling noise, while the coast, of a broken nature, and rising to a height of 1,800 to 2,000 feet became wrapped in a dense cloud of dust, caused by the detachment from its summit of large masses of friable matter, which, in its fall, mostly crumbled to powder.

The shaking was so violent as to prevent locomotion, obliging every one to seize hold of something in order to keep his feet, for the vibration threw us to a height of two inches above the deck.

All the people on board, among whom were a number of old seafaring men, unanimously testified that they had never experienced so protracted and violent a shock.

For sometime after the movement had ceased most of the persons on board experienced a general discomposure and uncomfortableness, the precise cause of which they could not assign.

SINGULAR AFFAIR.—The New Bedford Standard says that "on the farm of Jonathan Tobey, beyond the Head-of-the-River, in the gale of the 8th ult., a peach tree was uprooted and carried some distance over a wall. In the gale last week the same tree was blown back over the wall into its former position." A similar affair (only different) took place during the siege of a castle in Germany some century or more ago. A besieging chief ordered his trumpeter to mount a hill overlooking the castle and blow a challenge of defiance to the beleaguered garrison. One of the castle gunners pointed his petronel at the trumpeter, touched it off, and the ball hit the mouth of the trumpet; but the trumpeter, not relishing such treatment, blew back the ball and killed the gunner. Both these stories are founded on equally reliable authority.

NAPOLEON AND CUBAN AFFAIRS.—The Madrid correspondent of the New York Tribune says the interview between the Spanish General Prim and Louis Napoleon, concerning the affairs of Cuba, was uncommonly unsubstantial and inconclusive. Prim expressed curiosity as to whether France would assist Spain should there be difficulty with the United States, in consequence of the latter's recognition of Cubans as belligerents, to which the Emperor dryly replied that Spain left France alone in Mexico; adding, after a moment's silence, during which the Catalan General was allowed to draw the natural inferences from this answer to his question, that, in his opinion, Cuba would be inevitably lost to Spain.

CURIOUS PHENOMENA.—The tannery of Mr. Moulton, in North Weare, was destroyed by fire a few weeks since. Just across the road, in his front yard, was a row of apple trees. These were so badly scorched that the leaves all dried up. Now on the burnt side of two of the trees, new leaves, buds and blossoms have come forth. From the same cause also, a large rose bush, which shed its perfume long ago, is now in full blossom.—Concord, N. H., Monitor.

Passing Events.

☞ The Lausanne Congress has been accused of being rather more French than international. Although the condition of France at present was the main topic of discussion, nearly every nation, except the English, was well represented at the Congress, and the German and Italian element especially, had its full quota of representation.

☞ Minneapolis is now probably out of danger. The St. Paul Press says: "By the herculean efforts of the hundreds of stalwart men employed all day yesterday in choking up the maelstrom, which threatened to undermine Hennepin Island and the whole rock basis of the falls, such progress has been made as to afford a fair prospect of arresting further damage."

☞ A lady in San Francisco is having manufactured for the President an elegant watch-box of solid gold, bearing upon one side the coat of arms of the state of California, and upon the other, in enamel, the President's name.

☞ The Paris workingmen are forming a grand combination preparatory to a gigantic "strike." They are going to try to break down "all monopolies."

☞ Idolatry is reported to be on the wane in India. The people in the southern provinces have lately discarded the sacred monkeys.

☞ A severe shock of earthquake was felt at Curacoa on the 17th of Sept., which caused much terror.

☞ The Russian Government has confiscated the money of Peter's pence received by the Polish clergy.

☞ During the recent flood an engineer discovered a cow swimming in the Hartford meadows, near the railroad track. He fastened a rope to her horns, making the other end fast to his locomotive, and towed the beast ashore. She proved to be a valuable cow, which had come down the river from the up country somewhere, nobody knew from what State.

☞ Most of the Liberal French journals have recently shown how great is the appreciation of and desire for anything good that is American in France, by publishing voluminous correspondence on the political affairs of the United States, and also on its social topics. More has been learned by Frenchmen about us within the past six months than ever before.

☞ Empress Eugenie's voyage in Italy and to the Suez Canal will cost 750,000 francs. Her suite is fifteen persons, nearly all Spaniards of rank, and throughout she has maintained a strict incognito.

☞ The late storm was very severe in the White Mountain region. In the Notch it was fearful, and numerous avalanches from the mountain sides fill the roads. The carriage road up Mount Washington was badly damaged.

☞ Father Hyacinthe was very nearly driven to South America by poverty five years ago.

☞ The Paris Rothschilds have lately been losing much money by Russian speculations.

☞ The Governor and Council have appointed Thursday, Nov. 18th, as a day of Thanksgiving.

☞ A cable dispatch says Father Hyacinthe, the celebrated Catholic Protestant, has sailed from France for the United States, where he will remain for two months.

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

WHEREAS, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

WHEREAS, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

JOHN COUCH, New Hampshire; MILES GRANT, Massachusetts; S. G. MATHEWSON, Vermont; JOSHUA V. HIMES, Michigan; WM. SHELDON, Wisconsin; O. R. FASSETT, Minnesota; JOHN PORTER, Canada, National Conference Committee.

Notice.

A protracted meeting will commence in Weld, Me., Friday, Oct. 22d, holding over Sunday, and longer if thought best. J. T. JORDAN.

New Hampshire Conference.

At a meeting of the members of the Advent-Christian State Conference of New Hampshire, held at Alton Bay, Sept. 9th, 1869, called by the President, Eld. J. Couch, and formally opened with prayer by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, it was voted, that we proceed to choose delegates to attend the American Advent-Christian Convention to be held in Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 17th, 1869.

Voted, That Bro. D. M. Leavitt receive, assort, and count ballots for delegates and their substitutes.

Voted, That Bro. A. Ross be a delegate to attend said Convention, and that Bro. Geo. W. Brown be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. A. W. Sibley be the second delegate, and that Bro. C. S. Emerson be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. J. G. Smith be the third delegate, and that Bro. J. W. White be his substitute.

Adjourned. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Rochester Conference.

The delegates to the Advent Christian National Convention will report themselves at the New Arsenal Building, on Monroe street, where the committee will receive them for entertainment.

Brethren from the adjoining towns, who can with a cheerful heart aid us in supplying our table with roast meats, fowls, butter, cheese, fruits, or other necessaries, for entertaining our guests, or means to help furnish such necessaries, will confer a favor which we shall much need.

By request of Committee, H. PRATT.

Notice.

There will be a protracted meeting in Belgrade, at the Depot, Nov. 4th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday. There are but few brethren and sisters in the place, yet they give a general invitation for all to come and engage in the work of the Lord, as places will be kindly provided for all who come. Brethren will call on John T. Fifield. For the Brethren, H. B. SEVEY.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Tent will be pitched in South Berwick, near Gt. Works, and remain as long as it is duty. Brn. J. G. Smith, D. M. Leavitt, with others, will be present to preach the word of life. As it is a new field, will the dear ones remember us in their prayers, that the Lord will pour out his Spirit, that the people may see the truth, believe, and be saved?

J. C. SHOREY, Tent Master.

[No date with this.—ED.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.

S. W. THURBER, Pres. of Conf.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Brown Co., N. Y., will be held Nov. 27th and 28th. Bro. and Sr. Hitchcock, of Kirkwood, N. Y., will be there to assist. All are invited to attend. For the brethren,

J. W. TAYLOR.

Notice.

The First Second Advent Society of Cambridgeport hold their meetings in Washington Hall, 459, Main Street, three times Sunday. Seats free.

Preaching brethren will please correspond with W. H. KAHARL.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the Branch Mills, China, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 21st, to continue over the following Sabbath. We hope the brethren and sisters will come filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord. There are homes for all who will come.

S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Churches in Mass.

Will some brother in each church, or place where meetings are held, inform me by letter, giving the town, and number of believers in the town, as near as possible? In doing this you will confer a favor, and assist in doing something for the interest of the cause at large.

Brighton Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Oct. 14th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	3,113	5,362	2,850
Last week	337	325	100

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.50@14.00; first quality, $12.50@13.00; second quality, $11.00@12.00; third quality, $9.00@10.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, 50, 65, to 75-115; Yearlings, $17 to 26; two years old, $28 to 42; three years old, $45 to 60; Western Fat Swine, live, $10½ to 11 cts. per lb; Dressed, 12½ to 13 cts. per lb; Store Hogs, Wholesale, 10½ to 11 cts. per lb; Retail, 11 to 13 cts. per lb. Columbia Co., N. Y., Spring Pigs, 12 to 15 cts. per lb.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, each; Extra, $3.75@4.50, or from 3½ to 7½ cts. per lb; Spring Lambs, $3.00 to 4.75.

Prices of Hides, Tallow and Skins.

Brighton Hides, 9½ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7@7½ cts. per lb; Country Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb; Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each; Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—Eastern dealers, that were fortunate enough to arrive with their cattle last Saturday, received an advance of from 2 to 3 cts. per lb. Quite ordinary oxen were sold at $14 per cwt. But with 147 car loads of western cattle, some of which arrived, and the balance on Wednesday, changed the tone. We quote best cattle at $14 per cwt. The market on Tuesday and Wednesday was active; the cattle were needed, and the butchers were willing to pay fair prices. By the close of the week, it is expected to see prices as low, or even a shade lower, than two weeks ago. With an additional arrival of 90 cars over the Passumpsic and Montreal road, that were sold at Cambridge, the market is largely supplied.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts, 5362. A large portion came from Albany, commissioned to Brighton butchers. The most of the eastern were sent to Henry Goodenough to sell on commission

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.50@13.75; first quality, $12.50@13.00; second quality, $11.00@12.00; third quality, $8.50@10.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $65, $75, to $100@115; Yearlings, $17 to $26; Two years old, $28 to $40; Three years old, $42 to $62.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75 to $4.50, or from 3½ to 7½ cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $4.75.

Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—Cattle trains are again behind time, and railroad affairs will not probably be regulated before another week. We have arrivals of between 700 and 800 head of cattle of various grades; some very slim, that were driven in over the road. One dealer from Jefferson Co., N. Y., with 120 head, was five weeks on the road. There are more northern cattle expected; the exact time is a matter of uncertainty. Dealers are asking full as high for their stock as at the close of last week.

Sheep.—The supply of sheep and lambs is again full, and many lots are of good quality. Sheep butchers are prepared to receive, having disposed of stock on hand. Prices have generally fallen to the rates quoted two weeks ago.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

An Admonition to Christian Churches on Church Festivals, Fairs, etc.

BY I. K. LOMBARD.

A new edition, with additions and improvements. About twelve thousand of the above sheet have been scattered, and they are doing a practical service against these growing evils in the churches of our land. The picture of their proceedings is so faithfully drawn, that the guilty on reading it have several times furiously protested to those who offered them that it was written on purpose for them, with a full knowledge of the facts in their case. Price, postpaid, 15 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per hundred.

For sale at this office, or by I. K. Lombard, West Gardiner, Maine.

The Berean's Casket and Repository.

This is a work just published, containing 492 pages with the tables of contents, in 358 sections, all in small type, embracing a great amount of matter. It is a SCRIPTURE MANUAL, to which is added much valuable history, showing the fulfillment of prophecy signs of the times, and other important matter for every Bible reader, statistics, tables, and prophetic figures. Compiled by I. C. Wellcome. Price, cloth, bevel boards, postpaid, $2.00. Leather bound, $2.50. For sale at this office.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. AN EXPOSITION OF THE SEVEN SEALS. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, my mail, 10 cts.

4. A TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. THE LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.20; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

9. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

10. RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

LOOK AHEAD.

Though the world looks dark and drear,
  Never mind; look ahead!
And thine eyes shed many a tear,
  Never mind; look ahead!

Though pride and scorn point at thee now,
  Never mind; look ahead!
Sunshine yet shall light thy brow,
  Never mind; look ahead!

Though the world may laugh and sneer,
  Never mind; look ahead!
Truth and right have naught to fear;
  Never mind; look ahead!

Though the cross is hard to bear,
  Never mind; look ahead!
We at last the crown shall wear;
  Never mind; look ahead!

Though this world is filled with care,
  Never mind; look ahead!
Jesus will our burdens bear,
  Never mind; look ahead!

If you're on the Savior's side,
  Never mind; look ahead!
He to the end will safely guide,
  Never mind; look ahead!

Push the stumbling-blocks away;
  Never mind; look ahead!
Darkest night gives place to day,
  Never mind; look ahead!

If you're true in word and deed,
  Never mind; look ahead!
Jesus he will safely lead,
  Never mind; look ahead!

To the last you've naught to fear,
  Never mind; look ahead!
Righteous works shall bring thee cheer;
  Never mind; look ahead!

For the World's Crisis.

IS THE WORLD TO BE CONVERTED BEFORE THE SECOND ADVENT?

[Serial—No. Three.]

BY GEORGE W. GREEN.

Will the second appearing of Christ find the world converted to God through the proclamation of the gospel? It will not. The Scriptures are plain and positive upon this point; and we think that none need be mistaken.

The theory that would have the world converted before the coming of Christ is unreasonable. If the gospel, when proclaimed in its purity by inspired apostles, and demonstrated by miracles, failed to convert the city of Jerusalem, shall we conclude that an adulterated gospel, proclaimed by uninspired men, will convert the world to God? And when prophets and apostles failed to convert the world, shall we conclude that we are mightier than they? But we have no disposition to pursue this train of thought further; and we appeal to the Scriptures.

"In the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Tim. 3: 1. In this connection, Paul doubtless refers to the last days of the present dispensation, and his language certainly does not look as though he believed the last days of the present age would see the world converted to God. On the contrary, he informed us that "men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, ... , unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good." Surely this does not favor the idea of the world's conversion during the present dispensation. But this is not all. Hear Paul further: "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 2: 13. If they are to wax worse and worse, are they at the same time to become better? Preposterous!

Again, Paul exhorts Timothy to preach the word, to "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine." Why, Paul? "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine . . . ; and they shall turn . . . from the truth . . . unto fables." 2 Tim. 4: 2–4. When men turn from the truth to fables, are they becoming converted to God?

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their consciences seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry." 1 Tim. 4: 1, 2. Surely the conversion of the world during the present age is not indicated here, for this is to take place in the latter times; and it would seem that Paul here refers to modern Spiritualism; for Spiritualists are certainly giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils. And who that is familiar with Spiritualistic literature, does not know that many of the leading Spiritualists of the present day would abrogate marriage entirely did they possess the power?

And when men declare that "God is man, and man is God;" that "There is no such thing as sin;" and that "Whatever is, is right," as Spiritualists are doing; and in view of Paul's plain and positive declarations, how can we reasonably look for the world's conversion during the present age?

In Rev. 1: 7, we have the following: "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him . . . ; and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen." Now is it reasonable to suppose that all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of the coming of Christ, if all are to become christians before that time?

In the days of the apostles, the saints anxiously longed for the coming of Christ; but Peter tells us that "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" 2 Pet. 3: 3, 4. Now let it be borne in mind that this scoffing, as well as this walking after lust, is to take place in the last days. Are christians in the last days to walk after their own lusts, and scoff at the coming of Christ?

Were people all christians in the days of Noah? Was the earth then filled with righteousness? Certainly not. On the contrary, it was full of wickedness. But what has Noah to do with this question? Hear the Savior: "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24: 37. If there is any argument in analogy, and great wickedness existed in the days of Noah, great wickedness will exist also at the coming of the Son of man.

From foregoing remarks, it has been seen that the preaching of the gospel partially removes sin; but the fact that all are invited to become christians, by no means proves that all will be saved. Vast numbers will reject the offer of salvation; and now the question arises, What is to be done with the finally impenitent, that the sin of the world may be taken away? They will be destroyed, utterly and irrevocably; and by destruction is meant the extinction of life and conscious being, after the judgment, as we shall show hereafter.

The judgment scene opens with the coming of Christ, "who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 1. "Before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. . . Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 31–46.

With regard to the doom of the finally impenitent, the Savior here teaches two important facts. First: The wicked shall be punished. Second: That punishment is eternal. The nature of this punishment, however, is not clearly revealed in King James' Version; and this must be sought for in other passages. When describing the same scene, with regard to the doom of the ungodly, Paul uses the following language: "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."—2 Thess. 1: 9.

Here we have the nature of the punishment. It is destruction.

NOT CONFORMED.

"Be not conformed to the world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable, and perfect will of God, in Christ Jesus."

The subject before us and especially the first clause of the verse has for some time past pressed upon my mind, as one upon which I should pen a few lines for the Crisis. It seems to me the subject demands the serious consideration of every child of God in these perilous times, and especially of those who believe that we are so near the closing up of this dispensation; when having indulged an undue conformity to the world will be at the best but a source of remorse to the child of God, if, indeed, we may be a disobedient child; for Paul speaks of some who may be saved, yet so as by fire.

I do not want to be saved in that way, but want an abundant entrance into the kingdom of my Lord; his grace helping me, I am determined to have it.

"Be not conformed to the world." Do not turn from this, dear reader, as a subject unworthy of your attention, but rather let it lead to close self-examination; for some have found by so doing that they knew but little of themselves, and had no idea they were so far conformed to the world. Ah! that is just as the adversary would have it. He will tell you that you must do this and that, go here and there, and appear thus and so, in order that you may be respected, and exert an influence over those around you. Very plausible. True, you would thereby exert an influence, but it would be as blind leaders of the blind.

I see more and more the need of increasing watchfulness over the inner man, as well as the outward appearance. Let us not be unmindful of the admonition—"Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." We should watch and be sober, and have on the whole armor, that we may fight manfully the battles of the Lord; for the enemy is upon us, and a fierce one, too; therefore let us look steadfastly unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who tasted death for us. O, the length, and breadth, and height, and depth of Jesus' love to us! and shall we not be willing to forego any earthly, sensual pleasure, though innocent in itself, if conflicting with our eternal interest? Nay, more, may it be our constant aim and study to know by what means we may best glorify God, and advance the interest of his cause and the salvation of our fellow men.

For one, I desire to feel more sensibly the responsibility resting upon me; not only as a christian, but as one who professes to believe that what we do must be done quickly. The Savior will soon and forever cease pleading, and then all our efforts for the salvation of others will cease, whether we have done well or ill.

TALK.

It is well to talk; we thus impart to others our thoughts, give them our sympathy, bid them speed, or we may show them an error, and teach them a better way. As a general thing we are great talkers; almost weary ourselves in the family circle, at social gatherings, in the car, the street, the shop; we everywhere manifest a willingness to engage in active conversation, till we get into the prayer-meeting; there, it would seem it was a rare gift, bestowed only on "the few"; the silence becomes almost painful, the mind darkened, the thoughts gloomy, or are carried beyond and outside the object of a prayer-meeting.

Why is it? Many reasons are given. One says, "I can not add any thing to the meeting, or its interest." Another, "I have not confidence to rise and take the attention of a room full of people. It is impossible." Another, "I am so small, and feel so ashamed after I have talked, I think I will never try again." One says, "Bro. A. or Sister B. has said such and such things that are not right, and I can not feel right about it; neither can I work knowing that they feel thus." Another, "I can not work when people who do as Dea. A. has done go to the prayer-meeting and talk just as well as ever. I do not believe he is honest, and I can not be hypocritical enough to appear to fellowship such an one."

Again, it is often admitted by the church that a minister comes into a place finding them alive, and in working order; but he has this one fault,—he kills the life of the meeting by too much and too long talking. He begins by telling them their duty, how they should labor for the saving of souls, until he has taken up time enough for a sermon, before he learn whether they need the goading to make them work or not. It chills them at the first. They think he does not appreciate their merit of labor. A good brother, earnest to see the work go on, cheerfully says a few words, then sits down, hoping another may follow; but he dropped a good idea, and the minister takes it up, enlarges upon it, until it becomes less attractive than when it fell from the lips of the brother; and thus it follows on through a series of meetings, till the life and interest are killed or worn out; they feel poorer than when they commenced. Perhaps twenty-five or thirty in its commencement were willing to speak for Jesus, but not more than six or at the most seven at its close can get a chance to speak.

Thus we hear reason after reason, why there is so little interest manifested in prayer-meetings. How shall we remedy all these whys and wherefores? Go work in the vineyard. If you can not add to the interest of the meeting, do not take from it by holding back. If you or your brethren can not see that you add, they can feel that the meeting loses if you keep silent.

Another has not confidence. Well, you would not do the right service if you had the supply you desire; it would hurt you; but you need to have trust, faith in Christ that he will strengthen you, and through you speak to cheer another. If you are small, take hold of the Savior's hand; let him lead you, and no doubt you will grow. He will make you just large enough to fill the place he assigns you; and if you are ashamed, it is all right, it will make you cling the closer to your Leader, and try more earnestly to do just as he wishes.

If Bro. A. or Sister B. have said wrong of you, tell them kindly of it, and then go on with your duty; or others will think the evil said is true, making you a double loser,—a loser in christian strength, and in the confidence of the brethren. If Dea. A. is dishonest, the Lord will settle with him; he will find himself entangled in the snares of the adversary ere long; but do not let him entangle you, too; if you do, he will gain, while Christ will lose. Do not deceive yourself; while you think you act the hypocrite to do your work in the church, you may prove a greater one to yourself by neglecting it, and wake to find yourself far from Christ.

Does the minister kill the life of your meetings? The enemy saw you ready to work,—grain to be gathered. It was his only way to hinder you. Will you let him do it? Will you admit that he is smarter than you are, with Christ for your leader? No, certainly not. If he works hard to thwart your purpose, you must work harder to outdo him. Wrestle in prayer, that the Lord will give you just the word to say, and promptness to say it in season, before the enemy gets the ground.

And may the minister become wise as the serpent, and harmless as the dove; not too hasty, but wait a proper time for you to work if you will. Pray for him, that he may do the will of God in all things, at all times; that he may have knowledge to speak the word of warning at the proper time, and that he speak not too often or too long.

May the Lord be with all, give us more of his Spirit, more strength to labor, and make us willing to be humble, to speak for him, that he may own us as his children when Jesus comes.

SCIENCE AND REVELATION.

From the fact that La Verrier discovered a planet upon scientific principles, or that geology shows the world to be more than six thousand years old; and from the fact that false philosophers have tried to demonstrate the immortality of the soul, and thereby build up an immortality for wicked men as well as good;—from the above facts and many others, many good christians have been led to believe that science does not harmonize with divine revelation, and that the Bible tells us to beware of it and let it alone.

Now is this a fact? Paul in his charge to Timothy tells him to beware of false science, or "science falsely so called"; but nowhere do we find science censured or forbidden as a study, but we do find the apostle Paul more than once asserting the fact of a plurality of worlds, which many good people now deny. We also find him demonstrating the resurrection of the dead upon scientific principles. But I am sorry to say that many are apologizing to science, or ignoring it (which is worse), almost every day.

I will speak only for myself. If I should pretend to believe in a "revelation" which did not harmonize with known facts of science, I should at once become an unpardonable hypocrite. The very thing which made me an infidel (and an intelligent infidel can not be such without being an atheist) was, I had been educated that the Bible taught the immortality of the soul, and known facts of science showed me that man was mortal; and on that one point (and that is a great one) I gave up the Bible.

The cure of infidelity was not brought about by reading Paley, or Nelson, but by reading a little tract from the pen of Bro. Miles Grant which advocated the non-immortality of the soul, or the sleep of the dead. I returned to the good old Bible with a new pair of eyes.

Since then I have had no difficulty in harmonizing science and revelation. It does me good to see such a harmony existing; it makes me see "special providences" every day, whereas some can see but two or three during a lifetime.

The apostle Paul tells us to be always ready to give a reason for the hope that is in us; and it is evident that the more reason we have for believing a thing, the firmer we shall believe it. There are, however, false theories which are represented as being science. Of such theories we are to beware, but they are not worthy the name of science.

We should always accept the facts of true science. They will strengthen the truth of divine revelation, and

"Justify the ways of God to man."

INFLUENCE OF FLOWERS.

Some time ago we paid a visit to Shropshire, and in passing through the village of Lilleshall were much struck with the beautiful flowers in the cottage gardens. Many of these cottages were occupied by colliers, and we were interested in finding out how it was that among these sons of toil, accustomed to labor in the black bowels of the earth, such a love of flowers had been cultivated. On inquiry, we found that the worthy clergyman of the place, the Rev. Henry de Bunsen, had been accustomed to invite groups of the colliers to visit his gardens, and that he had there conversed with them on the wonders of God's creation as evidenced in the fruits and flowers around them. He would then go with them to his flower-beds, and explain the names and qualities of the various plants. To encourage the men to grow their own plants, he would then present them with seeds or cuttings, and send them home with a zest for gardening such as they had never previously known. In many cases the pot, the pipe, and the public-house were forsaken for the spade, the rake, and the garden. Little plots of barren land soon become fruitful, and many a huge apple-dumpling and berry-pie have gratified the appetite, and many a beautiful nosegay has gladdened the eyes of the colliers' families, as one result of the out-door labors of Mr. de Bunsen. The influence which he has gained over the working classes of Lilleshall is remarkable. We have great faith in the influence of flowers and decent cottage homes, and we commend the case of Lilleshall to the notice of the clergy and ministers of religion generally.—British Workman.

KEEP YOUR SHOES ON.

The other day, as I was coming up the street, I met quite a number of children. I expect they had agreed to play some kind of a play; they were all running, but my attention was called to one boy who had his shoes off, and carrying them in his arms, and just as he got to where I was, he tripped his toe, and down he went; and just at that moment he cries out at the top of his voice, "I wont play!"

I thought that was just like some who have started on this journey. For some little thing they had taken off or lost their shoes, and had tripped, and then they cry out, "I wont play!" The Lord help you one and all. If you think you can travel this road, or play this play, better barefooted than you can with shoes that the Lord wants you to wear, you are mistaken. So do not try it any longer. May we all be shod with the shoes of peace.

FATHER HYACINTHE'S LETTER.

The following is the letter which has caused such a stir in the religious world:

My Very Reverend Father.—During the five years of my ministry at Notre Dame de Paris, despite the open attacks and secret accusations of which I have been the object, your esteem and confidence have never failed me for a moment. I preserve numerous testimonials of them, written by your own hand, and which were addressed as much to my preaching as to myself. Whatever may happen, I shall hold them in grateful remembrance. To-day, however, by a sudden change, the cause of which I do not seek in your heart, but in the intrigues of a party all powerful at Rome, you arraign what you encouraged, you censure what you approved, and you require that I should speak a language or preserve a silence which would no longer be the entire and loyal expression of my conscience.

I do not hesitate an instant. With language perverted by a command, or mutilated by reticence, I shall not ascend the pulpit of Notre Dame. I express my regret for this to the intelligent and courageous Archbishop who has given his pulpit to me, and sustained me there against the bad will of men of whom I shall speak at the proper time. I express my regrets to the imposing auditory that surrounded me there with its attention, its sympathies—I was nearly going to say its friendship. I would not be worthy the auditory of the Archbishop, of my conscience, nor of God, if I would consent to act before them in such a role. I separate myself at the same time from the convention in which I have resided, and which under the new circumstances that have happened to me renders it for me a prison of the soul. In acting thus I am not unfaithful to my vows. I have promised monastic obedience, but limited by the honesty of conscience, the dignity of my person and my ministry, I have promised under the benefit of that superior law of justice and of royal liberty which is, according to the Apostle St. James, the proper law of the Christian.

It is for the more perfect practice of this holy liberty that I came to ask at the cloister, now more than ten years ago, in the elan of an enthusiasm free of all human calculation, I shall not venture to add, free of all the illusion of youth; if, in exchange for my sacrifices, I am to-day offered chains, I have not only the right but the duty to reject them. The present hour is solemn. The church passes through one of the most violent, dark and decisive crises of its existence here below. For the first time in three hundred years, an Ecumenical Council is not only convoked but declared necessary; such is the expression of the Holy Father. It is not in such a moment that a preacher of the gospel, were he the last of all, can consent to remain as the mute dogs of Israel, unfaithful guardian, whom the prophet reproaches as unable to bark. Canes muti, non valentes latrare.

The saints were never silent. I am not one of them, but nevertheless I belong to their race, filii sanctorum sumus, and I have always been ambitious to place my steps, my tears, and, if necessary my blood, in the tracks which they have left. I raise, therefore, before the Holy Father and the Council, my protestation as Christian and preacher against these doctrines and practices, calling themselves Roman, but which are not Christian, and which in their encroachments, always most audacious and most baneful, tend to change the constitution of the church, the basis as well as the form of her teaching, and even the spirit of her piety. I protest against the divorce, as impious as it is insane, which it is sought to accomplish between the church, who is our mother according to eternity, and the society of the nineteenth century, of whom we are the sons according to the times—and towards whom we have also some duties and attachments.

I protest against this more radical and dreadful opposition to human nature, which is attacked and made to revolt by these false doctrines in its most indestructible and holiest aspirations. I protest, above all, against the sacrilegious perversion of the Word of the Son of God himself, the spirit and the letter of which are equally trodden under foot by the pharisaism of the new law. It is my most profound conviction that if in France in particular, and the Latin races in general, are delivered over to social, moral and religious anarchy, the principal cause is without doubt, not in Catholicism itself, but in the manner which Catholicism has during a long time been understood and practiced. I appeal to the Council about to meet to seek for remedies for the excess of our evils, and to apply them with as much force as gentleness.

But if fears in which I do not wish to share come to be realized, if the august assembly has not more liberty in its deliberations than it has already in its preparation; if, in a word, it is deprived of the essential characters of an Ecumenical Council, I will cry to God and men to call another truly united in the Holy Spirit, not in the spirit of party, and representing really the Universal Church, not the silence of some men, the oppression of others. "For the heart of the daughter of the people am I hurt; I am black; astonishment hath taken hold on me. Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered."—Jeremiah viii. In fine, I appeal to your tribunal, O Lord Jesus! Ad tuum Domine Jesu tribunal Appello. It is in your presence that I write these lines; it is at your feet, after having prayed much, reflected, suffered, and waited much, that I sign them. I have confidence that if men condemn them on earth, you approve them in heaven. That is sufficient for me, living and dying.

FR. HYACINTHE.

Superior of the Barefooted Carmelites of Paris, second preacher of the order in the province of Avignon.

Paris-Passey, Sept. 20, 1869.

OLD HUNDRED.—The history of this old Psalm tune, which almost everybody has been accustomed to hear ever since he can remember, is the subject of a work recently written by an English clergyman. Luther has generally been reckoned the author of "Old Hundred," but it has been discovered that it was composed in the sixteenth century by William Franc, a German. In the course of time it has been considerably changed from the original; and it is said that, as it first appeared, it was of a more lively character than at present.

MULLER ON CONSECRATION.

It is of the deepest moment that we walk with a sincere, honest, upright heart before God. If evil be practiced, or labored and connived at, the channel of communication between our souls and God (for the time being) will be cut off. It is all important to remember this. Infirmities and weakness will cleave to us as long as we remain in the body; but this is a different thing from willingly allowing evil. I must be able, with a true, honest, upright heart, to look my heavenly Father in the face, and say, "Here I am, blessed Lord; do with me as thou wilt."

Then let us remember that we are his stewards. Our time, our wealth, our strength, our talents, our all, are his, and his alone. Let us seek to remember this; and then, what happy christians we shall be! It is a divine principle, "To him that hath shall be given," and as assuredly as we seek to make good use of that which is confided to us more will be imparted. We shall be used of the Lord, and shall become increasingly happy in his most blessed service.

Brethren, we have only one life—one brief life; let us seek with renewing purpose of heart to consecrate that one life to God, and to serve him with our body, soul, and spirit, which are his.

Let it be our unceasing prayer that as we grow older we may not grow colder in the ways of God; as we advance in years, let us not decline in spiritual power; but let us see to it that an increase of spiritual vigor and energy be found in us, that our last days be our best days.

Our holy faith does not consist in talking. Reality, reality, reality, is what we want. Let us have heart-work; let us be genuine. Oh, how rapidly is time hastening on! We should live in such a manner as that, if we were called hence, our dear brethren and sisters might feel our loss, and from their inmost soul exclaim, "Oh, that such a one were in our midst again!" We ought to be missed even by the world. Worldly persons should be constrained to say of us, "If ever there was a christian upon earth, that man was one."

LOANING TO THE LORD.

"How is it, Betty," said an elder of the church to a very poor woman who was always observed to contribute something whenever a collection was taken; "how is it that I always see you drop something in the plate? Where do you get it?"

"Oh, sir, I do not know," she replied; "the Lord knows my heart, and my good-will to his cause; and somehow or other, when a collection is to be made, I am sure to have my penny before me, and when it comes, I put it in the plate."

"Well," said he, "you have been faithful in a little, take this sovereign, and do what you will with it."

"A sovereign, sir," said she, "I never had so much money in my life as a sovereign; what shall I do with it?"

"I dare say you will find means of spending it," said he, "if your heart is devoted to the Lord's cause."

Soon after this, a man came round to solicit subscriptions for some benevolent object; he went to one of the elders, who gave him half a sovereign, and another gave him five shillings; both of which were regarded as very liberal donations. Not liking to pass by any member of the church, he asked this poor woman what she would do.

"Put my name down for a sovereign."

"A sovereign!" said he, "why, where did you get a sovereign?"

"Oh, sir, I got it honestly; put my name down for a sovereign."

She gave him the sovereign, and in about two weeks from that time she received a letter from a friend saying that one hundred pounds had been deposited with him for her.

THE PRAYING CHILDREN.—Melancthon, one of the early reformers, was once very much distressed and cast down about the cause of God; but one day, when taking a walk, he heard some children's voices, and listening, found they were engaged in prayer for the great work of God. He at once returned to his brethren, and entering the room exclaimed, "Brethren, take courage, for the children are praying for us."

A SUNNY HEART.—A gay, serene spirit is the source of all that is noble and good. Whatever is accomplished of the greatest and noblest sort flows from such a disposition. Petty, gloomy souls, that only mourn the past and dread the future, are not capable of seizing upon the holiest moments of life, of enjoying and making use of them as they should.—Schiller.

Gems.

— God's livery is a very plain one; but its wearers have good reason to be content. If it has not so much gold lace on it as Satan's, it keeps out the foul weather better, and besides, it is a great deal cheaper.

— An humble man is like a good tree; the more full of fruit the branches are, the lower they bend themselves. "Thro' much tribulation ye must enter into the kingdom of God."

— Despise not the little sins; they have ruined many a soul. Despise not the little duties; they have been to many an excellent discipline.

— Let every man be occupied in the highest employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best.

How good and how pleasant it is to behold
The union of brethren who dwell in one fold;
Like odors from ointment poured out on the head,
The fragrance of love all around them is spread.

Like the dripping of myrrh on the beard running down,
As the dew-drops that Zion and Hermon do crown,—
Where the Lord gave the blessing of life without end,
So sweet is the union of brother and friend.

— Holy fear is the door-keeper of the soul: As a nobleman's porter stands at the door and keeps out vagrants, so the fear of God stands and keeps all sinful temptations from entering.

— Guilt is that which quells the courage of the bold, ties the tongue of the eloquent, and makes greatness itself sneak and lurk and behave itself poorly.

— We should act with as much energy as those who expect everything for themselves; and we should pray with as much earnestness as those who expect everything from God.

— One of Rutherford's golden sentences gives us the secret of his unusual unction: "The cross gives us much to say."

— To trim between God and the world, is the sure way to be disappointed in both, and to have no rest either in the one or in the other.

— The merit of our actions consists not in doing extraordinary actions, but in doing ordinary actions well.

— Christians, if you be poor in this world you should be rich in faith; and if you be rich in this world, be poor in spirit.

— We often omit the good we might do, in consequence of thinking about that which it is out of our power to do.

— Selfishness is that detestable vice which no one will forgive in others, and which no one is without himself.

— Divine consolations are those nearest to us, when human assistances are farthest from us.

— The greatest pleasure I know, is to do a good action by stealth and have it found out by accident.

— We often lack nothing to be joyous but a little more simplicity in Christ.

— Whoever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred man in company.

A GOOD WIFE.

Archbishop Secker in his "Wedding Ring" has the following, which is worth reading twice: "Hast thou a soft heart?—it is of God's breaking. Hast thou a sweet wife?—she is of God's making. The Hebrews have a saying, "He is not a man that hath not a woman." Though man alone may be good, yet it is not good that man should be alone. 'Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above.' A wife, though she be not a perfect gift, is a good gift, a beam darted from the Sun of mercy. How happy are those marriages where Christ is at the wedding! Let none but those who have found favour in God's eyes find favour in yours. Husbands should spread a mantle of charity over their wives' infirmities. Do not put out the candle because of the snuff. Husbands and wives should provoke one another to love; and they should love one another, notwithstanding provocations. The tree of love should grow up in the midst of the family as the tree of life grew in the garden of Eden. Good servants are a great blessing, good children a greater blessing; but a good wife is the greatest blessing: and such a help let him seek for her that lacks one; let him sigh for her that hath lost one; let him delight in her that enjoys one."

USEFUL HINTS.

Wood ashes and common salt, wet with water, will soak the cracks of a stove and prevent the smoke from escaping.

Alum or vinegar is good to set colors of red, green, or yellow.

Sal soda will bleach very white; one spoonful is enough for a kettle of clothes.

Save your suds for garden plants, or for garden yards when sandy.

Wash your tea trays with cold suds, polish with a little flour, and rub with a dry cloth.

A hot shovel hung over varnished furniture will take out white spots.

A bit of glue dissolved in skim-milk and water will restore crape.

Ribbons of any kind should be washed in cold soap suds and not rinsed.

If your flat-irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

Oat straw is the best for filling beds. It should be changed once a year.

If you are buying carpets for durability, choose small figures.

Scotch snuff put in a hole where crickets come out, will destroy them.

A gallon of strong lye put in a barrel of hard water, will make it as soft as rain water.

Honey may be clarified by placing the vessels containing it in hot water, and continuing to skim as long as any scum arises.

A GRINDSTONE should not be exposed to the weather, as it not only injures the wood work, but the sun's rays harden the stone so much, as in time to render it almost useless. Neither should it stand in the water in which it runs, as the part remaining in the water softens so much that it wears unequally and "out of true."

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

THE TWO PITCHERS.

Two pitchers were standing one day on the parlor table, when, listening very attentively, I heard the following conversation:—

"What do you mean, Miss Brown Coat by standing so near me?"

"Oh," said Miss Brown Coat, "I don't mean any harm. I shall not hurt you, I hope, although I am not quite as handsome as you."

"As handsome as I am!" replied the other. "I guess you are not. Only look at my clear, beautiful lips, while yours are all crackad and scratched.

"Well, if I am not as beautiful as you are, Miss Beautiful lip, I think I am quite as useful."

"Useful, indeed; that is nothing. I am sure I should not like to be used as you are, and don't you know that you ought to be out in the kitchen or the woodshed?"

"Yes, I am used, and I can assure you I like it. As to my staying in the kitchen or woodshed, that does not trouble me, for there I am always doing something for somebody. When the mowers come in from the field, all tired and thirsty, I always offer them a nice drink of milk or water; and after, little Dicky fills me with milk, and carries me out with him to the old beech-tree."

"Dear me, I am glad I don't have to go out into the field, to be set down on the dirty grass."

"Ha, ha! how different you are from me; that is just what I like. I admire to sit on the soft, green grass, and watch the mowers as they swing their scythes to and fro, and am so pleased when they come and take me up and drink. It is so nice to hear them say, 'Bless you, dear old Brown Coat.'"

"I like to sit on the shelf, along side of the beautiful silver, in the closet, and look out of the window," said Miss Beautiful Lip.

"That may be; but I think I have often noticed, when I have been out watching the pretty squirrels, and hearing the birds sing, that the shutters of your nice closet, where you like to sit, are closed, and sometimes I have seen them so for weeks together."

"Well, I must confess that sometimes I do feel rather gloomy and low-spirited, and often wish it was not so dark, or that I had rather more to do."

"Now, I think," said Miss Brown Coat, "that there is nothing like being useful to make one happy. Dicky takes me to the spring; the mowers very often take me out early for a morning walk, and Kitty the maid often says, when she washes me, 'what a useful pitcher this is, I declare. I don't know what we should do without it.'"

"Oh my, I am glad Kitty don't put her dirty hands on me. I am always washed by my mistress, she is so afraid that I shall be hurt."

"Yes, you are so nice, you are afraid to do anything."

"Indeed, I do not wish to have my beautiful lip all spoiled and cracked, like yours. Then look at your hand; it is all scratched, and as rough as hard usage can make it."

"Well, well, Miss Beautiful Lip, I am quite contented with my life, and very happy. I would rather be loved and praised for being useful, than to hear all sorts of fine things said about my pretty looks; so good morning, for I see Dicky and Trip are coming to take me to the arbor in the garden."

Miss Beautiful Lip did not reply; but I believe she fell into a brown study on usefulness.

Boys and girls, which life do you think is the happiest,—one of industry, or idleness?—Children's Fireside.

GO TO SLEEP EARLY.

Many children, instead of being plump and fresh as a peach, are as withered and wrinkled as last year's apples, because they do not sleep enough. Some physicians think that the bones grow only during sleep. This I cannot say certainly; but I do know that those little folks who sit up late at night are usually nervous, weak, small, and sickly. The reason why you need more sleep than your parents is because you have to grow and they do not. They can use up the food they eat, in thinking, talking and working, while you should save some of yours for growing. You ought to sleep a great deal; if you do not, you will in activity consume all you eat, and have none, or not enough, to grow with.

Very few smart children seldom excel, or even equal other people when they grow up. Why is this? Because their heads, if not their bodies, are kept too busy, so they cannot sleep, rest and grow strong in body and brain. Now when your mother says, Susie, or Georgie or whatever your name may be, it is time to go to bed, do not worry her by begging to sit up "just a little longer." But hurry off to your chambers, remembering that you have a great deal of sleeping and growing to do to make you a healthy useful man or woman.—Rural New Yorker.

THE RED BREAST OF THE ROBIN.

Of all the merry little birds that live up in the tree,
And carol from the sycamore and chestnut,
The prettiest little gentleman that dearest is to me
Is the one in coat of brown and scarlet waistcoat.
It's cockit little Robin!
And his head he keeps a-bobbin'.
Of all the other pretty fowls I'd choose him;
For he sings so sweetly still,
Through his tiny slender bill,
With a little patch of red upon his bosom.

When the frost is in the air, and the snow upon the ground,
To other little birdies so bewilderin',
Picking up the crumbs near the window he is found,
Singing Christmas stories to the children:
Of how two tender babes
Were left in woodland glades,
By a cruel man who took them there to lose 'em;
But Bobby saw the crime,
(He was watching all the time,)
And he blushed a perfect crimson on his bosom.

When the changing leaves of autumn around us thickly fall,
And every thing seems sorrowful and saddening,
Robin may be heard on the corner of a wall,
Singing what is solacing and gladdening.
And sure, from what I've heard,
He's God's own little bird,
And sings to those in grief just to amuse 'em;
But once he sat forlorn
On a cruel crown of thorn,
And the blood it stained his pretty little bosom.

SOPHY'S RAG-BAG.

"Don't burn up those scraps of cloth Sophy," said aunt Alice. "Save them for the paper-makers. If all the rags that are wasted were saved for them, the high prices of books and paper would soon go down."

"Such a little as this, auntie, could not affect the market much," said Sophy smiling.

"A single snow-flake is not much," said her aunt, "but an army of snow-flakes can bury the whole surface of the ground, hiding the landmarks, and setting all the householders to work, to make paths to get about in. No one despises the great snow-storm, though it is made entirely of just those little flakes. Then, too, my child, it is sinful to waste even the smallest thing that may be of use. It is all God's property, and is only loaned to us. He will call us to an account for the way in which we spend even the fragments.

"You would hardly think of throwing a penny or a five cent piece into the fire, yet I presume that every week you waste what would amount to as much.

'Waste not, want not,' is a good motto. Come, Sophy, suppose you make a bag to put all the scraps and cuttings in; all the fragments of paper, too, about the house, and save the money you get for them until next Christmas. I dare say you will be surprised to see how many little gifts you could buy with them for the children's Christmas tree."

Sophy was pleased with the idea, and at once set about carrying it into effect. Of a sudden she had become exceedingly saving of all the bits of cloth and paper and a thorough investigation of the house, from the garret down, quite filled her bag at once. Not many days after, the old ragman's bell was heard in the streets and she was much delighted to receive from him a bright new twenty-five cent note, and four cents in addition.

"I'll try again, auntie," she said with a bright smile, as she slipped the money into her little iron bank. And she did try faithfully, and the lesson she learned in practical economy was worth even more than the money.

When Christmas came about, the little bank was unscrewed, and its contents added many a pretty toy to the Christmas tree, which called forth unbounded admiration from little brothers and sisters, and made Sophy happier than she had ever been upon a Christmas in her life.—Presbyterian.

FIXING IT.

Willie had just begun to go to school, but, strange to say, did not like it—for which reason I fear he can never become President of the United States. It was rather unfortunate, perhaps, that his first experience of school and of snow fell together. Temptation came to him in the shape of a sled, with red runners, and he fell an easy victim to it. So it was, that about school-time he became subject to an accession of headache, which made confinement impossible, but did not at all interfere with his going out to slide after an hour or two at home.

One glorious morning, in particular, he came to his mother with a "dreful" headache—school was not to be thought of under such circumstances.

"Very well, Willie," said she, "if you have a bad headache, you may stay at home: but remember, you must not come afterward and ask to go and slide."

Not half an hour afterward up came Willie—his "dreful" headache all gone—with the usual petition.

"No, Willie, you know I told you if you stayed at home I should not let you go out with your sled; and you would not have me tell a lie, would you?"

Willie turned away thoughtfully, but a moment afterwards his face brightened up as he saw a path out of the dilemma, and he sidled up to his mamma with a confidential whisper:

"I don't want you to tell a lie, mother, but couldn't you just fix it, you know, as you do when you put me to bed, and say you are not going out, and then go?"

SOME school-girls were whispering together in a corner of the room, when one of their companions entered. "Oh, Jane, do come here!" they cried. "We have a secret to tell you; but you must promise not to speak of it to anybody for the world."

"Well," said Jane, "Then I cannot hear it, for I never listen to anything that I cannot tell my mother."

HYMN OF BERNARD OF CLUGNA.

Here brief is the sighing—
And brief is the crying,
For brief is the life.
The life there, is endless,
The joy there, is endless,
And ended the strife.

What joys are in heaven?
To whom are they given?
Ah! what? and to whom?
The stars to the earth-born—
Best robes to the sin-worn—
The crown for the doom.

O, country the fairest—
O, country the dearest—
We press toward thee.
O, Zion the golden,
Our eyes are now holden
Thy light till we see.

Thy crystalline ocean
Unvexed by commotion,
Thy fountain of life;
Thy deep peace unspoken,
Pure, sinless, unbroken,
Thy peace beyond strife.

Thy meek saints all glorious,
Thy martyrs victorious,
Who suffer no more;
Thy halls full of singing,
Thy hymns ever ringing
Along thy safe shore.

Like the lily for whiteness,
Like the jewel for brightness,
Thy vestments, O Bride;
The Lamb ever with thee,
The Bridegroom is with thee,
With thee to abide.

We know not, we know not,
All human words show not
The joys we may reach—
The mansions preparing,
The joys for our sharing,
The welcome for each.

O Zion the golden,
My eyes are still holden
Thy light till I see;
And deep in thy glory,
Unveiled then before me,
My King, look on thee.

ARGUMENTS, ASSUMPTIONS, AND VAIN REASONINGS OF OUR OPPONENTS.

Bro. Grant:—The following are some of the many to which I have replied the last year publicly, and as advocated by two Presiding Elders of the M. E. church, and two Rev'nd gentlemen, pastors of churches here in the West. I give them, that your readers may know with what weapons we have to deal in our defense of the truth.

I would be glad to give the arguments made use of in reply, but I have not time, nor space, in your columns. O. R. Fassett.

Scriptures illustrated in these efforts to subvert the truth.

"Oppositions of science falsely so called." 1 Tim. 6: 20. "Beware, lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ."—Col. 2: 8. "Which corrupt the word of God."—2 Cor. 2: 17. "Handling the word of God deceitfully."—2 Cor. 4: 2. "Wrest the Scriptures." 2 Pet. 3: 16. "Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men"; making "the commandment of God" and "word of God of none effect by . . . tradition."—Matt. 15: 3, 6, 9. "Received not the love of the truth."—2 Thess. 2: 10. O. R. F.

1. Adventists believe man is to be destroyed like brutes, and that there is no difference between them. 2. The argument of our opponents is, that the mind of man is not superior to the brute. 3. Man has an intellect which can expand; the brute has not. 4. Adventists believe that sinners are to be annihilated.

5. Death never means extinction of matter. What is the body? Is it not a material substance? Can that be annihilated? 6. Hobbs and Voltaire taught the annihilation doctrine, like our opponents. 7. To affirm that "the breath of life" of man, is all that goes back to God, is the boldest blasphemy. 8. Adventists do not discern the true idea or meaning of the word soul—the God-given part of man. 9. Soul is not a function of matter.

10. Divine revelation affirms the immortality of the soul. The existence of God is no more clearly affirmed in the Bible than the immortality of the soul. 11. The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is from divine revelation; of the non-immortality of the soul is from heathen philosophy. 12. Epicurius and Seneca taught the soul material. 13. Man has a soul distinct from the body. 14. The soul was breathed into man, and was in the image of God. 15. Where did you get the idea of the extinction of the soul?

16. In this text [John 6: 4], Christ overlooked all that was material. 17. The life here promised is everlasting life, and can never end. 18. Has everlasting life now. You may turn and twist this text as much as you please—put it in the indicative or imperative mood, in past or future tense, and you can only make it to teach that he has everlasting life now. 19. God uses the words life and death to express spiritual existence or decline. God cannot get words to express his meaning to man, so that man can understand his ideas. 20. The soul spiritually dies—is dead in trespasses and in sins. The soul spiritually lives; "and you hath he quickened." 21. "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die": i. e., he shall never see the time when he shall backslide so as not to be conscious of the abiding love of God—while he remains in a state of grace. 22. "The wages of sin is death": i. e., spiritual death—now. "The gift of God is eternal life"—now, and in the future. 23. Death is endless suffering in eternal woe. 24. "Thou shalt surely die" means, The wrath of God abideth on him. 25. To be struck out of existence is no punishment.

26. Adventists make no degrees in punishment. 27. Death does not destroy conscious existence. 28. The devil did tell the truth when he said, etc.—Gen. 3: 4. 29. The curse—"thorns and thistles," is a blessing. 30. The annihilationists of this age are not the first who preached the doctrine. 31. Adventists throw the future life wholly upon the resurrection. 32. The body of man changes every seven years; but the mind does not change.

33. Adventism makes infidels, skeptics, and hardens men in their sins. 34. They make Universalists. 35. They publish their doctrines to tear down churches. 36. To believe their doctrines you must throw away your Bibles. 37. Adventists are cynics—dogs. 38. Those who believe their doctrines have more of the animal than mind; their brains run to water. 39. Adventists pretend to know more than Christ in his day. 40. The soul is totally independent of the body, and is immortal. 41. Brain does not think, or take cognizance of things material—it's the soul.

50. Adventists make soul material. 60. When a man dies, his soul crosses the River Styx. Shakes hands with angels. 70. No one believes this doctrine but those who have some secret sins they did not wish to meet. 80. Immortality comprehends the idea of eternal existence. 90. The soul possesses immortality and immutability. 91. The philosophical argument is necessary, in order to rightly interpret and understand the Scriptures. 92. All matter is necessarily immortal, so long as it is let alone. This belief is acknowledged by all scholars. 93. We hold that matter is eternally immortal. This is not true of organized matter. Whatever therefore is organized, is not immortal.

94. The soul of man cannot cease to exist by being destroyed or annihilated. 95. God could annihilate every thing. He could blot out the universe. 96. The immortality of the soul is substantiated by history. The Persians, Assyrians, Druids, and even the American Indians, believed in it. 97. We also find the doctrine of the transmigration of souls substantiated by history. 98. The Jews were all believers in the immortality of the soul. 99. On the opposite side in faith we find among the Jews the Sadducees, Atheists, and Pantheists, who have a soul made out of nature; and these die and go back to nature. 100. In the present age of the world we have a sprinkling of Adventists who deny the separate existence of the soul; it is nothing new. 101. It is Sadduceeism, Atheism, Pantheism, all combined. "I am making no false statements."

102. Philosophy teaches that mind possesses properties that do not belong to matter. It possesses power to think; matter does not. It can reason; matter can not. It has will, and is capable of loving, hating, fearing, etc. 103. How can matter possess inertia and will? How can this book move of itself? or a stone? Can a stone think or reason? I will give twenty-five cents to any Adventist who will bring me a stone as big as my fist that will think. I will give a dime to any one who will bring me a stone of this description to put in Barnum's Museum. 104. Man has a spirit, and I will prove from the Bible that man has a spirit. 105. "God is a spirit." Is God matter? Does his body fill heaven and earth?

106. I have been told by an Adventist that spirit means breath. I pressed him to know if it had any other meaning, and he said it meant life sometimes. I admit that is the original meaning of the word; but does the Bible always mean life or breath? [He now endeavors to show the absurdity by a most singular classification of scriptures, following Dr. Mattison, in which he substitutes soul for spirit, and spirit for soul, and confounds the two words, which in the original Hebrew and Greek are never used interchangeably nor thus confounded.] "I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up." I will say to my breath, Breath, etc., etc. "Let him know that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a breath," etc. No! this means, Shall save his immortal soul from death.

107. The dogma we are refuting is this: when a man dies his soul dies. 108. The Sadducees maintained there was no spirit. 109. The Pharisees maintained there was a spirit. "If an angel or spirit hath spoken unto him." 110. The Bible shows man was made of the dust of the ground. The ground embraces more than earth. Was the ground dry or wet? If dry, he must have been a dry old stick. He had carbon, oxygen, lime, stone, in his constitution. 111. I find matter in air. He made man's body of matter, and it was inactive until it was possessed of a spirit. 112. After he had done with matter, he made him a spirit.

113. The text [Gen. 2: 7] shows man is a compound of different elements; there is a spirit in him—a soul distinct from the body. 114. The Scriptures teach that the body and soul are capable of being separated. "Then shall the dust return," etc. Eccl. 12: 7. 115. "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast?" Eccl. 3: 21. Well, you say then, beasts have souls. Well, I would rather they would have two, than I one. 116. Paul's "desire to depart" [Phil. 1]. Having a desire to be blowed out of existence. Jesus is blowed out, and I want to be blowed out with him. I make no false statements. 117. Paul went to the third heaven—to Paradise; God took his soul out of him, and yet left the body conscious and active. 118. The Bible teaches the soul cannot be killed by man. Matt. 10: 28. The soul is distinct from the body, and you cannot kill it.

119. The Bible teaches the soul to be alive after the death of the body. "I am the God of Abraham," etc. Matt. 22: 32. He is God of their living souls. Rich man and Lazarus. 120. The Bible teaches the soul shall never die. John 11: 26. 121. The scriptural view of death does not imply extinction. Adam died spiritually, to be spiritually minded in life; to be carnally minded in death. 122. Death means separation from God. It does not mean extinction only where it is qualified as in the text: "Then shall the dust," etc.

123. The Bible teaches the eternal existence of saint and sinner. Matt. 25: 46. 124. Materialists will say, eternal execution, not eternal pain. 125. On the same mode of reasoning, brethren, you don't know how long you will have eternal life; heaven may last eternally, but you may not. 126. If that Bible is true, God has made you a soul and body, and your soul will live eternally; and when you die you will not be asleep, but awake. 127. You will not go down to the grave and die; brethren, when you die your spirits will go to greet the loved ones gone before.

128. I feel I have immortality within me. 129. The doctrine of the immortality of the soul is based upon the powers and faculties of the soul. 130. All the powers that are manifest in the human soul are in the soul; every thing the soul does, the power is in the soul. 131. How much I perceive in an instant. My soul looks through these windows [eyes], and sees all my congregation. I make a distinction between youth, and middle age, and old age. I can look over twice as many and not tire me. Just give me light enough, and an eye, and my soul can see all immensity. My soul is capable of looking round the world. Suppose I could have a magnifying glass that I could see a fly at a million of miles off; then hold this glass up and look up to the heavens. O what beauties I should behold, and the soul would be capable of seeing it all at once. All I want is material aid.

132. The capacity of the soul is unlike the capacity of any thing else in the universe. When you teach him science and art, do you fill him up?

133. The brutes learn so much and no more. 134. Schools are so plenty now, first you know your child would be full and could not hold any more. 135. Suppose I hold in my hand an elastic rubber cup that will hold a pint. I fill it, and increase its capacity to a quart, then a barrel, then a hogshead, then take in Minnehaha, then Niagara. Just so is the human soul in its capacity.

136. Now why all these wonderful powers of the soul? for what purpose were they made? That he may live a little while, and then be blotted out? This power is a waste, and man is a brute, if he does not possess an immortal soul. Like a man building a great ship and launching it, and then burning it up. You say he is not a wise man, but a fool,—a great wise fool. 137. Memory is a faculty of the human soul; which proves the soul to be immortal. 138. God has made man incapable of forgetting anything he has learned. It is impressed on immortality.

139. If things can be blotted out of memory and reproduced, you make a God of man. The simple truth is, the human soul can not forget anything. 140. The body is a clog to the human soul. 141. How does the soul see landscapes? Says one, The eye takes them in and writes them on the mind. But how do I get those I have never seen, and only read of? I see in my mind Palestine. Have been reading and studying all my days history and geography, etc. Mr. Materialist, where is this written? The Adventists are compelled to say it is written on the brain. Ah! no; it is written in the soul; then it is separate from the body and brain; it is therefore immortal.

142. Physiologists tell us that the whole man changes once in seven years. I have not got the same hair, or skin, or nails, I had seven years ago. I have eaten potatoes enough for a dozen men [a Presiding Elder]. I have breathed thousands of pounds of oxygen. Where is it? Only think how large I should be if I retained it all. If all the eye sees, and all the ear hears, is written on the brain, there must be sacks to hold it; and if it changes once in seven years, it has all got to be re-written. I should think folks would get things on top of each other, and they would be piled up any way and any how. How do they get out of this? The Adventists are compelled to tell another lie to get out of this fix. The truth is, all this knowledge is written on the soul, which is immortal. 142. There have been men who have not had an inch of brain but what has been torn and injured by balls; but the soul has remained intact and unharmed!

144. A minister died suddenly who had preached a few days before his death, and on examination one half of his brain was gone, yet his soul remained intact. Now if mind is written on matter, how could he have preached? 145. A boy falls from a tree with a basket he dropped, and after eighteen years of unconsciousness he had a second fall which restored his consciousness, and he immediately called for the basket he dropped. How did memory retain this? 146. The soul, abstractly, is capable of suffering. [His illustrations all drawn from persons yet in the body.] 147. The soul capable of more suffering than the body. [Illustrations ditto.]

148. The human body is no more to the soul, than a paper scabbard is to a silver-tipped steel sword. 149. Sinners, you are in possession of such a soul. You shall live forever, and the guilt of your sin will follow you throughout the never ending ages of eternity. 150. Adventists constantly changing their theories and views, reminds me of the Irishman's flea; when you attempt to put your finger on him he is gone. 151. Adventists believe that when infant children die they are lost forever. They don't believe in regeneration.

152. The immortality of the soul is seen in the difference between the creation of man and beasts. Beasts, fishes and birds, and all animals, were spontaneously generated from the earth and waters, while man was made by God, as described in Gen. 2: 7. 153. Man was created in the image of God. And God is a spirit. John 4: 24. To be in the image of God, man must have a spirit. 154. God being a spirit, his breath (Gen. 2: 7) must be spirit. 155. The essence of Adventism is materialism. It is infidelity. 156. Any system which makes God to be a material being is anti-christian. 157. God has a soul. 158. If the soul of man dies with the body, the resurrection would be a re-creation.

159. There is something in man that does not die, which is immortal. I shall never consent to be put down on a level with the brutes. 160. The connection of the immortal soul with the body, makes it of more value than without it. 161. What gives man value in the sight of God over the beast, is his immortal soul in him. 162. The connection of the divinity with humanity, in the person of Jesus Christ, is a truth upon which your eternal salvation depends. The connection of your immortal soul with the body makes it immortal. 163. These Adventists are going to raise their dead, and give them immortality.

164. There are more than one hundred texts in the Bible to prove man has an immortal soul. 165. A building burned is not annihilated. There is no such thing as annihilation. 166. When the body is raised, it is raised to immortality, and there is no difference between the saint and the sinner in this respect. 167. The wicked cannot be destroyed by fire. The soul is immortal and immaterial, and the fires cannot harm it; and the bodies of the wicked are to be raised immortal, and hence the fires cannot burn them; they shall be salted by fire, and preserved in it. 168. You may search creation over, and you cannot find a brigade of Adventists. [The Presiding Elder forgot that once there was not a corporal's guard of Methodists.] 169. The wicked will not become extinct further than that their probation will cease. 170. The burning of the soul must be a spiritual burning, which cannot burn up. 171. "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," means that the gospel dispensation was at hand 172. The twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew's gospel was all fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem. Also Mal. 4.

173. The doctrine of the duality of man—that man has an immortal soul or spirit, is a doctrine which underlies the whole system of revealed truth; the rock upon which is built the hope of future existence. 174. There are two forms of argument; (1) The moral or philosophical; (2) The scriptural. 175. Scientific materialism maintains that thought or mind is the secretion of the brain, as bile is of the liver, etc. 176. The material organization may be perfect, yet the mind may be gone. There should be mental power where there is perfect physical development. 177. Mind may exist without physical organization.

178. Will is evidence of the soul's immortality. Had seen persons of great physical strength with no will, and others with weak physical development with very strong will. 179. The union of mind and body is a mystery. 180. Science does not prove the immortality of the soul, neither does it disprove it. Spirit existence is beyond science—out of the reach of vision, microscope, telescope, etc. 181. Presumptive evidence—the universal belief and general assent in any one doctrine, is evidence of its truth. This doctrine has been disputed, discussed, tested, yet the race has stubbornly persisted in the belief that man does not die—the soul does not die, both among those who have, and have not divine revelation.

182. This belief in the soul's immortality is strongest where men know the most. 183. The intelligent Grecian philosophers, Socrates and Plato, died in the faith. 184. The belief among the most virtuous, and not among the most vicious: this is strong presumptive evidence. 185. If mind is dependent on physical organization, its capacity ought to be in proportion to the growth of the human body. Hercules should have a Hercules' mind. On the contrary, the mightiest minds are found in the feeblest bodies,—Wesley, Watts, etc. 186. Mind does not attain maturity with maturity of body, which is at forty years of age. Humboldt and Wesley did not attain maturity in intellect till eighty. 187. It is true mind loses power with failing body. 188. Mind or soul needed not human organism. It needed not eyes to see, ears to hear, etc. Milton saw and knew more than those who had eyes.

189. The power of memory is evidence of the immortality of the soul. 190. Man has a high pre-eminence above the brutes; and there is no place in the Bible which speaks of the future existence of beasts. 191. How foolish it would be for God to create out of the dust, or call out of their graves our dead bodies, and make them alive again to judge them for the sins committed six thousand years ago. Or, for sins committed now, to judge them twenty thousand years hence.

192. The Old Testament is very dim on the subject of man's immortality. 193. It is a glorious thing for christian philanthropists to strive to save and bring into Christ's kingdom the immortal and deathless souls—who are lost. 194. Sinners, to secure immortality, should see that they make a personal acquaintance with Jesus Christ.

I have transcribed these arguments, statements, and opinions of three Presiding Elders and two clergymen, to whom I have replied, for the purpose of furnishing others of our opponents the same materials with which to combat the truth if they deem fit; and to show our brethren with what opinions and vain reasonings they may meet in sustaining the faith and doctrine of the word of God. My answers to these several premises assumed, and declarations made, I withhold for want of time to write them, and room in the columns of your paper to give them, and the fact that our brethren are posted in the Scriptures of truth to meet them at any time.

It will be observed that the theology here advanced is one endless system of contradictions—"oppositions of science"—oppositions of Scriptures—oppositions of reasonings, etc. And a theology opposed by true science, reason, common sense, and Scripture, must be hard to sustain. If Luther could say: "I have overcome the Pope because my doctrine is the doctrine of God, and his is the doctrine of the devil," we may well determine the issue when comparing Gen. 2: 17 and 3: 4.

"Thou shalt surely die."
"Ye shall not surely die."

PEACE AND SAFETY.

"For when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them."—Paul.

In the history of God's dealings with mankind, he has always been just. Whenever it became necessary, in consequence of abounding iniquity, to bring a judgment upon man, whether of a local or general character, the event has never taken place unheralded; the notes of warning have ever preceded the judgment, as the word of inspiration has declared, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."

Thus a Noah was sent to preach righteousness and warn the wicked antediluvians of a coming wo; the angels and Lot to expostulate with the iniquitous Sodomites; an Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and other prophets, to admonish backslidden Israel for their sins, and warn them of coming wrath; and last of all he has sent his own Son, with his apostles and their true successors, to proclaim to a guilty world its coming crisis and doom.

There is another fact noticeable in connection with those referred to; namely, there has always been a counter cry. It is not only possible, but quite probable, that there were religious teachers in the days of Noah; for it is evident, from the result, that all the powerful and eloquent appeals of the old patriarch and prophet of God availed not in convincing any but his own family; for we are told that he was a preacher of righteousness. It is very evident, then, that while working on the ark he proclaimed the coming doom; and it is more than probable that the religious teachers of his day contradicted the message, and vindicated the messenger. When Lot expostulated with the wicked Sodomites, he was to them as one that mocked. So at different times in the days of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and others of the prophets, when God would by the mouths of those holy men warn his people of coming judgments and calamities, because of their sins and backslidings, false prophets would arise crying, "Peace, peace"; and one would build a wall (margin, a slight wall), and, lo, others would daub it with untempered mortar. Ezek. 13: 10.

Another corresponding feature of those times was, that the majority of the people were in sympathy with the peace cry. Thus in the days of Jeremiah, God was compelled in holy indignation to exclaim—"A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so." And in the days of Isaiah, the people presented this petition to their religious teacher: "Prophesy not unto us smooth things." It will invariably follow that where this is the disposition of the people, the majority of their teachers will scratch their "itching ears."

One of the most striking illustrations of the fact that God's true prophets are ever in the minority, is to be found in the history of Ahab, king of Israel, as recorded in 1 Kings 22. Ahab, king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, had formed an alliance for the purpose of warring with the Syrians. Before going up to Ramoth-gilead, the proposed scene of conflict, Jehoshaphat suggested that Ahab inquire of the Lord concerning the matter. So the king of Israel gathered together the prophets, about four hundred in number, and inquired of them, "Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they [the four hundred] said, Go up, for the Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king." If the voice of the prophets was the voice of God, what more could the king desire? He had an unanimous approbation of his scheme, and assurance of success; but for some unexplained reason, Jehoshaphat was not satisfied, and wished to know if there was not another prophet, in addition to the four hundred, of whom they might inquire.

Now does it not seem that Jehoshaphat was a little unreasonable, rather hard to please? How could he question the orthodoxy of the four hundred? Were they not all in perfect unison? Were they not honorable, yea, learned men? How preposterous in the king of Judah to suspect their orthodoxy. But some men will be singular in such things, and will not believe everything simply because it is popular. Well, there is "one man by whom we may inquire of the Lord,—one Micaiah, the son of Imlah. But I hate him." Why, Ahab, what has he done? "Because he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil." Ah! there's the secret; humanity, however inhuman, wants to be commended.

However, to please the king of Judah, a messenger is dispatched to bring Micaiah, the discarded prophet; and while he is gone, the two kings, in royal robes arrayed, ascend their thrones, and all the prophets (the four hundred) prophesied before them. Of course it was all eulogistic, all good to the king: Go up to battle, and prosper. You shall be successful. Who shall be able to stand before the great king Ahab?

The messenger which was sent for Micaiah began to reason with him something after this style: Now all the prophets, the whole four hundred, have spoken good to the king, yea, all with one mouth; not a lurking element of discord among them; perfectly harmonious. Now, I pray thee, let your word be the same; speak that which is good to the king. What's the use of your differing from the rest? Why be so singular, so fanatical? Do you not suppose those four hundred prophets know more than you? Why, only think, they are four hundred, and you are only one! and, besides all this, you are risking your bread and butter. You might get a good living from the king's table.

But, somehow or other, Micaiah was so obtuse that he could not see the point, and his reply is characteristic of his class in all ages,—"As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak."

Thus we see those principles ever exist, but become more fully developed and marked as we approach the great crisis in human affairs. Inspiration tells of a time "when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Are we not living in that time? Does not every thing in the aerial, physical, moral and religious world, indicate that we are in the very last days?

The most important, sublime, and glorious truths ever published to the world, are now being proclaimed; truths which should challenge the admiration of every christian believer, and the ambition of every christian teacher to proclaim. But how is it? How many of the more than fifty thousand religious teachers in these United States alone, are proclaiming the coming doom? Perhaps one thousand would be an outside estimate. One in fifty! and yet all profess to be standing on the walls of Zion. One, telling the people that a fearful doom is impending, fearful to the unprepared; forty-nine standing on the watch-tower, crying "Peace! Peace!" rocking the cradle of christianity, and singing the sweet lullaby—Peace! Peace! One, with all the impassioned earnestness, pathos, and eloquence of a man pleading for his brother, holding forth to a squad of listeners in a country school-house, or some secluded upper chamber; forty-nine kid-gloved, and rose-scented, smooth-tongued, and manner faultless, deliver their polished essays to their polished thousands of hearers, in their fashionable and commodious palaces. Yes, polished is the word. That which is polished is smooth. "Speak unto us smooth things."

And so the thunder-blasts of the gospel trumpet have degenerated into a gentle whisper of Peace! Peace! But, hark! "When they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." Thank God. Geo. Thomson.

MAN.

"What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?"—Ps. 8: 4.

All christians admit that our Bible gives the account of man's origin. Here we all agree. Where is it written? The first intimations of intention to make such a being is Gen. 1: 26. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. So he created man in his image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." And in verse 27 he shows how he formed him, out of what he made him, and how he caused him to live—by breathing into his nostrils the breath of life. Then he became a living (man) soul.

Here is a diverging point; not in fact, but men have so used it. Some say this made or constituted the man proper a living, immortal, or spiritual being. And it has become a question to be decided by some authority. I know of no other authority than the Scriptures; that says expressly that what was made a living soul was not spiritual, but natural. 1 Cor. 15: 46. Then man is a natural, living soul.

Does that agree with the saying, Fear not him that can kill the body, and after that can do no more? Yes, because He who made man a living soul can destroy both soul and body in hell. Matt. 10: 28.

But if that is so, and man is only a natural being, how then can man have any ground of hope that when he dies he will go right to glory? I am sure I do not know. And how is it that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are now in heaven, and all the prophets? I can not tell you. If Abraham is there, and wide awake, he has waked up since Isaiah wrote the forty-third chapter of his prophecy.

But does this agree with the voice of Inspiration generally? I think so; for if man was of the dust, he must have depended on some foreign power to give him life, or power to act; that was given him; but not power to keep it. In the day of death (Eccl. 8: 8) "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4.

Man is a creature of hope naturally, and that causes him to look forward for better things. This is seen in all men. But man is a subject of hope, based first, partly on the condemnation of the devil, then by promise of God to Abraham. But how does he hope to realize the fulfillment of this promise? By resurrection from the dead, according to the exhibition of our Savior. And for this very reason God was mindful of him, as he was at the flood, at Sodom, and in calling Abraham, remembering him in Egypt, bringing him out in power; gave the law, incorporated the covenant of promise, and established the sacrifices and blood of atonements. But in due time he was mindful of the fulness of the time when his Son should come, made of a woman, like the children who partook of flesh and blood, that he might die the same kind of death that came by the first Adam, and raise his posterity from that death, and give eternal life to all, except those whose names will not be found in the Lamb's book of life.

— If my God cast me into the furnace to melt and dry me, yet I shall not be consumed there; for he will sit by the furnace himself all the while that I am in it observing when it has done its work, and he will presently withdraw the fire. O my soul, bless and adore this God of wisdom, who himself will see the ordering of all thine afflictions, and not trust thee in the hands of men or angels.—Flavel.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, Oct. 27, 1869.

Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

H. F. CARPENTER—The money is duly credited.

ISRAEL BUZZELL—A. Lamphrey's credit is on the yellow slip on her paper.

GEORGE WRIGHT, JR.—We cannot supply the "Rules" with the "Harp" or separately. Can furnish "Harp." See advertisement.

L. F. COLE—Too late for this week.

M. R. PHETTEPLACE'S P. O. address is West Gloucester, R. I.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

We hope all our readers will make a special effort to obtain new subscribers to our family paper. A large number have been led to see the truth and embrace it in consequence of having the paper lent to them, or sent by some friend. We think a great amount of good might be accomplished if each one, who is able, would subscribe for the Crisis to be sent to some friend or relative, who has never seen it. One brother has just ordered it sent to ten of his friends, for a year, and paid for it himself. If we wish to spread the light, and get people interested in the coming of Christ, we must make earnest efforts, and not be sparing of sacrifice. What we do for the benefit of our fellow men, is not lost labor, nor money wasted. It is time to be in earnest.

CHICAGO.

The results of the meetings in Chicago have been highly gratifying, even beyond our expectation. The audiences have been large, intelligent, and attentive. Many are now rejoicing in the light and truth, who a few weeks since were in darkness when compared with their present condition. They are astonished at the simplicity of the true Bible doctrine. What they had supposed was abstruse, blind, and even incomprehensible, by all except the learned theologians, is now perfectly plain to them. They wonder how they could have been so blinded as to believe popular theology, when they had read the Bible for themselves. But they read it without a thought that they had been taught fables instead of truth. They had taken it for granted that man had an immortal soul, and whenever they came across the word, with few exceptions, they did not suppose it meant anything else; but they now see their sad mistake, and are satisfied that immortality can be obtained only "by patient continuance in well doing." This truth has inspired them with new zeal in the service of the Lord. It was heart-cheering to hear their joyful testimonies, and behold their cheerful countenances, after receiving the blessed hope. It was a common remark—"I have learned more about the doctrine of the Bible during the last two or three weeks, than in all my former life. Now I can read the Bible and understand it; it is no longer a sealed book."

After it became chilly in the tent, we had the large and beautiful Farwell Hall eight evenings and one Sabbath. At the close of each evening sermon, forty-five minutes were spent in asking questions. The time was eagerly improved by a number of intelligent gentlemen, including some ministers, doctors, and lawyers. The Spiritualists were not backward in improving the opportunity. One said Jesus was only an "insane Jew." When people consent to follow the demons, instead of Christ, they are led to do and say very strong and wicked things. Nothing is too blasphemous for them to utter. They are just as far removed from a pure christianity as it is possible for the devil to lead them. It is shocking to hear them ridicule the plan of salvation, and the holy Scriptures, which they respect no more than a last year's almanac.

Our last day in Chicago (Oct. 17th) was a blessed one. The church is in the best condition we have ever seen it, ready to work for the Lord. They have got hold of the root of the matter. The last evening, between twenty and thirty came forward for prayers, most of whom were blest. It was a heavenly season—the best we have had in Chicago. The Spirit of the Lord was present in power to cheer the saints and convict and convert sinners and backsliders. It was a free place in Christ. Three were baptized in Union Park at 5 P. M.; making eleven in all. Thousands of spectators were present, and observed good order. It was an impressive scene. We trust others will soon be buried with Christ in baptism, and, like those, go on their way rejoicing.

There are some noble-hearted men in Chicago, who give liberally to sustain the meetings. They love the pure christian religion, but have no sympathy with any other. They are tired and disgusted with a religion of mere forms and ceremonies, conducted by human policy. They say, Let us have the genuine or none. The city is full of backsliders, and has but few real, devoted disciples of Jesus. Pride and fashion hold the chief sway over the majority of professors of religion. Some are waking up to the true state of things, especially Bro. D. L. Moody, who is the leading man in the Young Men's Christian Association. He has appointed a ten-days' prayer-meeting, commencing Friday, Oct. 22nd, to be held from 12 o'clock to 12.45, M., each day; when the special object to be sought from the Lord shall be a knowledge of their own hearts, and the reason why he cannot bless them as in former days. Bro. Moody remarked, The churches in Chicago are in midnight darkness, and something should be done at once to arouse them. Bro. M. has some noble souls associated with him, who love the pure christian religion, and do not intend to be satisfied with any other.

We formed some very pleasant acquaintances with those who attend the daily noon prayer-meetings. One important feature of those meetings is their unsectarian nature. Any one who is a christian is welcome, and is invited to take a part in the exercises. This is as it should be. Sectarianism chills and cramps the work of the Lord, where it is manifested. Would that every sectarian name was lost in the waves of oblivion, to rise no more for ever. Christian is the only proper title for a follower of Christ. Let us live so as to be worthy of the name. If we follow any one else than him, or any other party, or church, then, of course, it would be proper for such to assume the name of the particular man, party, or church, which they follow and support; but if they are the true followers of Christ, the anointed One, then CHRISTIAN is their only appropriate title. We are rejoiced to know that many devoted ones in all evangelical churches are beginning to see and feel that it is high time to throw away sectarian names and unite under the one name Christian. All such have our warmest sympathies.

We left Chicago Monday, Oct. 18th. Bro. J. Couch arrived the same day, and will continue the meetings, in company with Bro. Ramsey. Pray for them.

TIDAL WAVES.

When Jesus was asked how his disciples would know when his second coming was near, he informed them that in the last generation before his appearing, there would "be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth. For the powers of heaven shall be shaken; and then shall they see the Son of man coming." Luke 21: 25-27. We believe these signs are literal. In relation to the roaring of the seas, it is certain, we think, that he refers to some unusual movement in the waters of the ocean. The late tidal waves, seen and heard last year and this, appear to be a literal fulfillment. Men have stood aghast at these mighty waves and their terrible roarings.

FATHER HYACINTHE.

Father Hyacinthe has produced quite a wake in the Catholic waters, in consequence of having protested against the Pope's authority. He has been a prominent Catholic priest in Paris, but has come to a dead halt, and turned his steps in quite another direction. This has caused much agitation in the Catholic world, because of his prominent position in the church. Some speak of him as a "new Luther." We shall watch his movements with some interest. His step is rather significant, taking place, as it does, so near the Ecumenical Council at Rome. It may be a signal gun for others to commence their march away from Babylon before she falls.

THE THIRD ANGEL'S MESSAGE.

Some weeks since, we heard a sermon on the third angel's message, referred to in Rev. 14: 9, in which it was claimed that the message is from those who are proclaiming that we must keep Saturday as the Sabbath; otherwise we "worship the beast and his image," and must experience the awful judgments pronounced upon the beast-worshipers. We must confess that the sermon produced no alarm in our mind, although it placed us among those who "worship the beast and his image." We could see no reason for believing that the third angel's message is being fulfilled by those who teach that we must keep the Jewish Sabbath.

One reason why we do not believe that the third angel's message is being fulfilled by those who are preaching that we must keep the seventh-day Sabbath is this: we do not believe the second angel's proclamation has been given yet. That can not be given till after mystical Babylon has fallen; and she is standing now, or was when the last telegram came from Rome. The proclamation of the second angel is as follows: "Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication."—Rev. 14: 8. Babylon is the name applied to the woman upon the scarlet-colored beast (Rev. 17: 5), which represents "that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth."—Rev. 17: 18. This city is on "seven hills," or "mountains" (Rev. 17: 9), and without doubt is Rome. "That great city" is still standing, and the Pope expects to hold the approaching Ecumenical Council there the coming winter.

It was claimed by the preacher, to whom we have referred, that the fall of Babylon was accomplished some twenty-five years ago, when the churches refused to let those like himself occupy their pulpits; but we could see no force in his points; even admitting that they did wrong in closing their doors. The second angel does not say it is a fall into Babylon, but it is the fall of Babylon itself. There is a wide difference between falling into a hogshead of boiling water, and the falling of the hogshead containing the water. The fall of Babylon can apply only to that which is symbolized by the woman upon the scarlet-colored beast, which is Rome; and as that has not yet fallen, it follows that the second angel's proclamation has not yet been made. The third must come after the second; therefore we can see no reason for believing that the third angel's message is being fulfilled by those who are preaching that we must keep Saturday as the Sabbath, or else we have the mark of the beast upon us, and must "be tormented with fire and brimstone."

We learn from Bro. Hook that a good work of grace is going on at South Berwick (Great Works), under the labors of Brn. J. G. Smith and D. M. Leavitt. Eleven manifested their desire for salvation last Sunday evening. They are holding the meeting under the N. H. Mission Tent, and are to continue over next Lord's day.

SPIRITS.

The following appeared in the Chicago Times, Thursday, Oct. 7th. It should read Monday evening, instead of Tuesday:—

"An individual, named Grant, lectured in Chicago on Tuesday evening, on spirits. There is another man of the same name who could give us a lecture on the same subject, which would be of very great interest."

The following report of the lecture was published in the Times:—

SPIRITUALISM AND DEMONOLOGY.

Elder Grant's Lecture in Farwell Hall.

The well known Elder Grant, of Boston, the apostle of the Second Adventists, delivered a lecture on Monday evening, in Farwell hall, on the subject of Spiritualism. He has been a self-elected missionary, and has pursued his crusade for many years, taking the ground that the assumed spirits whom the Spiritualists claim to be shades of their departed friends are simply the demons of hell. In the beginning of his discourse, he attempted an elaborate analysis of the essential character of angels and demons. Demons became such by their own free wills, in a manner analagous to the gradual formation of character among men. So also with the holy angels, it is a question of mere choice, neither one or the other being such of organic necessity.

Both classes of spirits have the power of making themselves visible at pleasure to those among men with whom they are in thorough sympathy. But the good spirits, when they come, come in their own names, and not as the spirits of dead human beings.

Nearly all Spiritualists have been at some time professors of religion, and it is on the latter class that the devils can work their deceit the most effectually, when they are once led astray. Demons can work miracles. Take, for example, Mr. Home, who is carried from one house to another in the air, as if he had wings. Demons are spoken of in the Bible, without exception, as bad spirits. Mr. Grant illustrated his argument profusely at this point with scriptural quotations, and anecdotes of prominent Spiritualists.

The next question is, Where are these demons? The Bible tells us in hell—Where is that hell?

The word translated 'hell' in this connection, is not the gehenna of the Hebrews, but the Greek tartarus.

According to the most acute modern commentaries on classic lore and mythology, the word tartarus means simply the outmost confines of the physical system. It is used in this sense by Socrates, Plato, Plutarch, and Lucian. It is clear, then, that this location must be the air. Diabolus, the chief of demons, is called the prince of the power of air. The phenomena of Spiritualism are in all cases the work of these demons. In ancient times they communicated with men to deceive them, and represented themselves as the spirits of great men. Hence arose hero worship; and oracles. In modern times, too, they caused the Salem witchcraft. The devils tried to get into the church, but the righteous men burnt their familiars, and stopped it short. The difference between Spiritualism and mesmerism consists not in the manner of operation, but the agent of operations. Here the worthy elder quoted at length from the Banner of Light, and other papers of the same kind, to verify his statement. Andrew Jackson Davis says: "It is known that a wise and strong-minded man in the spirit world has the power to produce the semblance of a person in the style and habiliments of real life." Just as the mesmerist prints on the mind of his subject, with all the vivid sense of realization, anything he pleases, so the demons cause the minds of their mediums to be filled with empty illusions. Scripture calls these lying, deceiving spirits. They seduce men by getting into their confidence, adapting themselves to their opinions, that they may gradually undermine them.

Elder Grant closed his discourse by quite a lengthy peroration on the evil done by these foul demons, who were now threatening to undermine the truth and stability of all true religion, and substitute therefor a blind and fatal deism.

STRONG LANGUAGE.

We have received a note from Mr. Hull, a Spiritualist, in which he says:—"The Bible is immoral in its teachings, mischievous in its tendencies, and is written entirely in the interest of the priesthood. The doctrine of a vicarious atonement, or the remission of sins by the blood of Jesus, is unphilosophical, unreasonable, blasphemous, and untrue."

Such is the result following and believing the teachings of the demons, who are the conductors of the spiritual manifestations. If all would submit to them, as has Mr. Hull, they would be led by the lying spirits to the same conclusion as himself. They never lead any one to Jesus as a Savior. One great purpose of the spirits is to destroy confidence in the Bible, the God of the Bible, Christ, and Christianity. They have already accomplished much in this direction. Spiritualism is as deadly in its influence upon christianity, as the bite of the rattlesnake to the physical constitution.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

In the London Times of Sept. 14th, we find a very interesting and able article of nearly two columns, on the approaching Ecumenical Council at Rome. At the last council of the kind, which was held at Trent, and closed Dec. 4th, 1563, it is said "a sermon was preached in which it was likened to the last council, wherein Christ and the apostles would sit in judgment over the living and the dead. And the learned and pious have ever since considered this a prophetic sermon."

Ecumenical councils are called only on very special business. The Pope gives the following reasons for calling this last one:—

"It is well known by how horrible a tempest the church is now shaken. . . . By the most bitter enemies of God and men has the Catholic church, and its salutary doctrine and venerable power, and the highest authority of this apostolic See been assailed and trodden under foot; all sacred things have been despised, ecclesiastical goods have been plundered, the bishops and highest ecclesiastical dignitaries and Catholic men harrassed in all manners, religious orders extinguished, and all kinds of impious books and pestilential journals . . . have been spread abroad. . . . In this Ecumenical Council shall all things be most accurately examined and determined, which, in these particularly hard times, have particular reference to the greater glory of God, the integrity of the faith, the worthy celebration of divine worship, and the everlasting salvation of men, and the discipline and the salutary and solid instruction of the clergy, and the observance of the ecclesiastical laws, the improvement of morals, the christian education of youth, and the common peace and concord of all. And with the most intense eagerness we must strive, with God's good help, to remove all evils, both from the church and civil society."

TERTULLIAN ON HAIR-DRESSING.

It will be seen from the following, that primitive christians were opposed to things which are now in common practice among professors of religion:—

"I see some turn the color of their hair with saffron. They are ashamed even of their own nation, ashamed that their birth did not assign them to Germany and to Gaul; thus, as it were, they transfer their hair thither. Ill, aye, most ill do they augur for themselves with their flame-colored head, and think that graceful which they are polluting. Nay, moreover, the force of the cosmetics burns ruin into the hair. . . .

God saith, 'Which of you can make a hair white, or black?' And so they refute the Lord! 'Behold,' say they, 'instead of white or black, we make it yellow—more winning in grace.' And such as repent of having lived to old age do attempt to change it even from white to black! O temerity! . . . .

What service does all the labor spent in arranging the hair render to salvation? Why is no rest allowed to your hair, which must now be bound, now loose, now cultivated, now thinned out? Some are anxious to force their hair into curls, some to let it hang loose and flying, not with good simplicity; beside which you affix I know not what enormities of subtle and textile perukes; now after the manner of a helmet of undressed hide, as if it were a sheath for the head and a covering for the crown; now a mass drawn backward toward the neck. . . . .

It has been pronounced that no one can add to his own stature; you, however, add to your weight some kind of rolls, or shield-bosses to be piled upon your necks! If you feel no shame at the enormity, feel some at the pollution, for fear you may be fitting on a holy christian head the slough of some one else's head, unclean perchance, guilty perchance, and destined to hell. . . . . God bids you 'be veiled.' I believe he does so for fear the heads of some should be seen!"

THE ADDRESS OF ELD. J. COUCH,

Delivered before the Advent Christian Association at its late meeting, published in tract form, is now ready, which the friends can procure free at the Crisis office. When ordered to be sent by mail, please enclose stamps to pay postage. AG'T.

"THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH."

By Henry Dana Ward.

A most eloquent, interesting, and profitable work. A history of the doctrine of the Millennium. Price 25 cts. By mail, 30 cts.

"ADVENTISM.—Its Relation to Theology."

By William Sheldon.

This considers the relation of Adventism to Theology, omitting the portion of the original work treating on prophecy. Price 25 cents. By mail, 30 cents.

The above works are published by the W. A. C. P. Association. For sale at this office. AG'T.

NEW TRACTS.

"THE NATURE OF MAN."

It has been urged that we put into a tract Eld. A. A. Phelps' "Queries and Objections," and the answers by the Editor, as published in the Crisis some time since. This we have done, and added to it an article on "Materialism," by Eld. O. R. Fassett, and some other articles from Eld. C. Colegrove on the nature of the soul. The whole makes a tract of 132 pages. Price 25 cents single copy, postage two cents. $2.25 per dozen; $17.00 per hundred, by express.

This is just what is needed to put into the hands of those who are inquiring after the truth. It should have a wide circulation. It is just the thing for the times.

"WILL THE WICKED BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD."—By Eld. J. S. White.

This is the title of a most valuable tract of 24 pages, in which the Scriptures brought forward by the negative side of this question are examined, and shown to teach no such doctrine, but the affirmative proved to be in accordance with "the form of sound words"—the true Scriptural doctrine. Price, single copy, 5 cents; postage, 2 cents; 40 cents per dozen, postpaid. Edition without covers, $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

"MY CREED."

This is the title of another valuable tract, written by Bro. S. L. Manley, showing the true Bible doctrine in relation to the nature of man, and his final destiny. Let every one get a quantity to scatter among their friends and neighbors. It contains eight pages. Price 5 cts. single copy; 20 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per one hundred, postpaid.

The above tracts are published and for sale at this office. AG'T.

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

WM. B. HERRON, Sec. Adv. Chr. Pub. Soc'y.

Remittances should be sent to the Treasurer, GEO. T. ADAMS, Boston, Mass., or they may be enclosed with remittances to the Crisis office.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF THE SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING, 1869.

EXPENDITURES.

Excess of expenditures over receipts in last year's account, as per last report		$203.29
Paid for lumber, fuel, straw, hay, and enlarging the boarding department	546.38
" Rent of ground, insurance on camp property, railroad fares, and expenses of committee, printing, etc.	109.60
" For tin ware, crockery, rope, etc.	91.42
" For labor on ground, watering ground, keeping order, tents hired, etc.	226.14
" For services rendered by persons in the boarding department, and at the various stands	819.88
" For groceries, provisions, and the various articles used and sold at the boarding house, and at the refreshment stands	3022.74
" H. Munger, for services before the meeting, and for two days after, in attending to camp property, also including team hire, etc.	36.80
Total expenditures		$5056.25

RECEIPTS.

Pledges paid before meeting, as reported in Crisis	$55.00
Pledges of 1868 paid at last meeting	50.00
Cash received by collections and subscriptions at meeting	558.97
" For lumber, straw, hay, etc.	295.76
" Rent of book stands and barber's shop	40.00
Pledge of S. French, paid	10.00
" " J. B. Morgan	10.00
Cash for board, and sales at the boarding house, oyster, cake, and fruit stands	3343.75
Total receipts		$4363.48
Excess of expenditures over receipts		$692.77

There are $110.00 subscribed at the meeting as yet unpaid, which we expect to receive soon. This will leave the deficit $582.77, which the committee are responsible for; and we would here say, that although it was recommended at the meeting of 1868, that the Campmeeting Committee receive some compensation for services during the meeting, not a dollar has been paid to any member of the committee for their services during the meeting, and to only one for services at any time throughout the year, the Treasurer not even paying one cent for help at the ticket office, or making any charge for any services during the year. Another member of the committee devoted several days of hard work before meeting, and all had their hands full during the meeting; all without pay.

From the above report the friends will see that the committee, after receiving the $110.00, will still be short $582.77, which they must bear, unless the friends forward funds to relieve them. We regret very much that we are compelled to report so large a deficiency; but the low price charged for board, the large number of free boarders, the additions to the boarding department, the care of the ground, together with various other items, all conspire to this result. We also shut off the sale of confectionery, ice creams, beer, etc., which make our receipts somewhat less; yet we were very glad we did so.

Our brethren and sisters will please do their duty in this matter. The committee will be grateful for any remittances that may be sent to them. Please forward to the Treasurer, who will acknowledge in the Crisis.

Bro. Hitchcock, from the Committee appointed by the A. C. Association to nominate the committee for the coming year, reported to the brethren and sisters assembled at the preacher's stand the following names for said committee:—

S. G. MATHEWSON.
GEO. T. ADAMS.
H. MUNGER.
J. HEMENWAY.
MILES GRANT.
D. MATHEWSON.
W. B. DODGE.

Which report was accepted and adopted.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—We are enabled still to report progress in Rochester. While our numbers have been reduced by removals and other causes, we have good congregations, and new ones join to fill up the ranks. The following is a specimen:—

"Rochester, Sept. 27th.

BRO. PRATT, Dear Sir:—Allow me to write a few words to you expressing my great satisfaction and thankfulness for the very great instructions I have received in listening to your discourses on Bible subjects. Believe me when I say I would not part with the knowledge you have imparted to me for worlds. Two points in your faith, however, I can never fully coincide with. I shall attend all your lectures. Yours, etc., MRS. ——"

A gentleman remarks, "The Bible is undergoing a fiery ordeal, and if your interpretation fails, it must go by the board. I attend your meetings."

A deeper sense of responsibility seems to rest upon us as a people. The triumphs of the Red Sea are passed, and though meeting the more stern realities of the pilgrim life, still the flinty rock is made to pour forth sweet waters, and the frosty earth to yield the heavenly manna. Tokens of our Canaan at hand are refreshing our weariness, and the waiting benediction, "Well done," urges us forward to the work. Yes, work! May we "work while the day lasts," for the night cometh in which no man can work. May we be able to say, "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do." Yours in hope, H. PRATT.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM SR. C. TULLER.

Dear brethren and sisters:—I want your sympathy and co-operation. Give to my story christian consideration.

I returned home in June, having spent eight months and a half among the freed people of Louisville, Ky., as missionary and teacher. I felt great encouragement to labor for them, but in that city they have a good many schools and churches, and much sectarianism, and my heart was continually drawn to the destitute places where no light was perceptible and ignorance reigned supreme. I asked the Lord to give me such a field of labor, that I might occupy in his name till he called for the reckoning.

I was soon invited to visit a little place called West Point, twenty miles below Louisville, on the Ohio river. I went, and found quite a company, earnestly asking for instruction, but no house for school or meetings, and too poor to get one. I thought I had here found my corner, where I might freely labor for Jesus and his poor. I told them I would do what I could to get them a house, and come and teach them. Their gratitude was unbounded.

After making one or two private applications without success, I thought best to apply to the Freedmen's Bureau. The officer told me if I could get a lot, and deed it to the colored people, for school and church purposes, they would erect a suitable building. So I came home, and by the sale of Smith's Bible Dictionary, and gifts from friends, I soon raised one hundred dollars. About the first of Sept., I went down to secure a lot and have the building erected. Much to my disappointment, I was told that orders had just been received from Gen. Howard to retrench their expenditures, and that with the appropriation that had been given for the State, it would be impossible to start any new schools.

Here was exercise for trust. On going to the place, I found I could buy a house and lot, much cheaper than to build. A good house, painted outside, and well plastered within, and in a good location, was offered me for three hundred dollars. By removing partitions so as to throw the rooms into one, which can easily be done, it will answer all purposes, is large enough, and is really good and worth double the price asked for it. A friend has pledged me one hundred, so that I have two hundred dollars.

Now, brethren and sisters, shall I abandon this important point for the want of one hundred dollars? Nothing has been done for them at this place, and they earnestly ask me to come and instruct them. There is also a wide field for labor among the whites, and it seems to me an Evangelist ought to be supported in Kentucky the coming winter.

And now, how many of my brethren and sisters will give me twenty-five cents each? How many children, who would like to have me gather those dusky forms, whose very eyes express mind capable of receiving light, into Sabbath and day schools, and teach them to read the blessed Bible, and tell them the old, old story of the Cross and the coming glory, will send me ten cents each? You see in this way it will not be hard to raise one hundred dollars; for no one will miss ten or twenty-five cents. True, we have calls for help on every hand, but "here a little and there a little" will accomplish wonders. If some brother or sister in each church will make the cause their own and gather the mites, it can so easily be done. I have often done similar work and been blessed. I feel called to this work, and my spirit cannot rest till I have done all I can. I know it is our duty to seek to enlighten those poor colored people, and there is no class we can so easily reach as them.

Help me, brethren and sisters, a little with your quarters, and much with your prayers, that this Mission may prove one more light amid the darkness. I have been sick for three weeks, which has delayed me, and I now must hasten. To old and tried friends of former years, who will see this communication, I would send love and greeting. God grant that ere long we may meet, with the pure and loved of all ages, 'neath Eden's bowers, to be driven thence no more forever.

Your sister in Christ, CAROLINE TULLER.
Townsend Station, Ohio.

P. S.—Should more be received than necessary to complete the establishment of the Mission at West Point, I will send the remainder to the Treasurer of the A. M. A., to be used for other missions. C. T.

PITTSFIELD, ME.

The campmeeting held in Pittsfield, Me., commencing Aug. 23d, considering the surroundings and circumstances, was thought by the brethren to be one of the best for order and spirit that we have enjoyed for years. The attendance was good. The preaching brethren were of one mind to have an old-fashioned campmeeting. A gospel, hearty feeling was enjoyed. Each one shared in his brother's hospitality. Truth and love did abound. Sinners felt the heavenly influence. Hardly a disagreeable word was heard on the ground. Although there were differences of faith, all were swallowed up in the love of God, so that all could speak the same things. "Behold, how good . . . it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

The great theme was the soon coming of Jesus, and a direct preparation. All were made as comfortable as possible on the ground; what was lacking was made up by the liberal-hearted ones living in the vicinity. Souls were blest, and a healthy influence left in the community, and our debts all paid. Brn. H. L. Hastings, N. G. Reed, Allen Damon, A. H. Walker, I. K. Lombard, and — Patterson, were in attendance to preach the word of life. May that means of grace prove effectual in saving souls from death.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

THE ART OF LIVING.—Drs. Wood & Holbrook, 15 Laight Street, New York, are about to issue a new work, entitled, "Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Culture; or, The True Art of Living." The work is by Prof. F. G. Welch, Superintendent of Physical Culture in Yale College. The work will contain about 400 pp., neatly bound. Price $2.25.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Hannah Champlin.

BRO. GRANT:—I take the liberty to return my most sincere thanks to you and the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, for their liberal donations I have received. My tongue is too short to tell how much good they have done me. Help came to me in a time when it was much needed, and it was not laid out foolishly, for I am very anxious to be clear in the judgment, and owe no man anything. Little did I think once that I should have to call upon the flock of God to help me, but we know not what a day may bring forth. We were once in good circumstances, and were then prepared to help such as could not help themselves, and delighted in doing it; but men have dealt with us treacherously.

I am left alone, a widow, and in very poor health, and am deprived of seeing even the beautiful light of the sun; but, thank the Lord, I am not deprived of trust in God. The hope of the christian is mine. Glory be to God, I look forward to the time when this body will be made immortal, just like Jesus'. I expect then to clasp the hand of my companion, where death can no more divide. Pray for me, dear ones of my Father's family, and in the morning I with you expect to inherit the eternal weight of glory.

As I have to employ some one to write for me, I thought I would write to the brethren and sisters through the Crisis, and by this medium express my thanks, and acknowledge what I have received from all but a few, who wished me to make no mention of their donations. Bro. Grant, $3. A sister of South Reading, $1. Paper from Pa., 25 cts. Bro. or Sr. L. W. Spaulding, Gayville, Vt., 50 cts. Bro. Simon Emery, $1. A sister, Newark, N. J., $1. Bro. Wilson Thomas and family, $2.25. Sr. Henrietta Ingalls, Cayuga, $1. From Worcester, $1. Bro. O. D. Woodruff, $2. Sr. Bartlett, Worcester, $1. Bro. Chs. Swift, So. Boston, $3,—just received, letter was mislaid. Bro. Daniel Hull, Worcester, shawl, and $5. H. J. B., Canton, 25 cts.

May the blessing of the Lord rest upon you all, and I beg a humble interest in your prayers; also remember my sons, that they be kept, through faith, unto the end. Their health is poor, but my youngest has taken his dear father's place at Pond St., and God is blessing his labors. The Lord reward you all for your kindness, is my prayer. My address is 89 Dexter St., Providence, R. I. Yours in hope of life,, HANNAH CHAMPLIN.

From Bro. B. Waterhouse.

Dear Brn:—Well might it be expressed, "In the midst of life we are in death." Sixty-one years of my life are gone—forever gone. How complicated have been the years that are past. But time, our constant attendant, waits for more. The journey of life we must pursue, be our concerns or wishes what they may. Time urges us onward to the tomb. I feel my stay on earth is short. It matters not how long or how short, if I am ready when Jesus comes. He wishes us to be always ready. "For in such an hour as we think not, the Son of man cometh." Jesus Christ says in one place, that we must be "like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he shall return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh they may open unto him immediately." "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." But if we are living in open sin and disobedience to God's commandments, the wrath of God is upon us.

Are we obeying all his commands? Are there no unkind tempers among us, no returning evil for evil? When offended, or injured, do we forgive like Jesus Christ? and is the truth always on our lips? Because God is the God of truth. Remember, if we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his. And if we are not his, when we stand before his judgment-seat he will say, "I never knew you."

We should strive to begin each day with the Lord, and to spend it as if we knew we were to give up our account to him at its close; and then whether life or death may be in our path, we may be found like the wise virgins, with our lamps full of oil, ready to go forth and meet the Bridegroom. "And now, little children, abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming."

Mechanic Falls, Me. B. WATERHOUSE.

From Sr. M. J. Warner.

BRO. GRANT:—Did Jesus mean what he said when he said, "But I say unto you, Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you; and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you"? I believe Jesus did not talk at random—say one thing and mean another—as a great many do who profess to be his disciples. He meant just what he said—"Love your enemies."

Reader, do you do it? If you do not, you have no right to reckon yourself a child of God. "For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them." "And if ye do good to those which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same."

Human nature may say, I can not love them, they have used me so; but the Divine nature says, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." How directly opposite the two natures. How beautiful and divine the one; how selfish and depraved the other.

We cannot love our enemies except we have the spirit of Christ. "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." If we are indeed his children we shall follow in his steps, who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to Him that judgeth righteously." "His commandments are not grievous," but if we love God we shall keep them.

It makes me sad-hearted to see so many who even profess to be the followers of Jesus at enmity with each other! Christians quarreling! What is the reason they do not follow the gospel rule—"Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way: first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift"?

In how much more prosperous condition the church of God would be at the present time, if they would only take this word as the "man of their counsel," square their lives by it, and be consistent Bible christians. Can we expect God to forgive us our trespasses, if we forgive not those who trespass against us? It is of great importance that we look into this matter, and see to it that we forgive our enemies, and love them as Jesus gave us commandment.

The wise man says, "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." If we love God and keep his commandments, our ways will please him, and our enemies will be at peace with us. "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." "Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Your sister in the blessed hope, MARY J. WARNER.

Newfane, Vt.

From Sr. C. C. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had some trials of late, but the promises of Jesus are so good, what have I to fear? He says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee"; what a precious promise is this. How good it is to know that Jesus is our friend, and always stands ready to plead our cause. I am glad that the signs of the times tell us that Jesus is soon coming. The language of my heart is, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." O that we, who profess to believe in the soon coming of Jesus, may be all ready, with our lamps trimmed and burning, showing to the world by our faithful living that we are truly looking for his glorious appearance.

Dear sisters, you, I mean, who are following foolish fashions, loading your garments with all the expense you can reach, will you not stop and reflect? Look around you, and see how many poor there are who are starving for the messages of life. I beseech you to remember what Christ has told us. When I see my sisters, who profess to be loving God with all their hearts, but their ears and fingers adorned with jewels, I awfully fear should Jesus come he would say, "I know you not."

My dear sisters, some of us have such rebellious spirits, we need more chastisement to bring us into entire subjection to the will of our Father, but we cannot exemplify the religion of Jesus fully by outward works of righteousness, but by internal holiness; we must have Christ not only as a casual visitor, but must have his kingdom, which is not meat and drink, but righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, firmly established in the soul, and be rooted and grounded in love.

How sweet it will be, after a long night of toiling on the ocean of life, to see Jesus coming to take us into that glorious city God has promised to bring down out of heaven for all those that love him and keep his commandments. But even here the gates of the city are not shut, and we are permitted to enter into and enjoy the fruits of Jesus' toil and sufferings. Let us come out then from the world, and be separate, take up our cross, and always wear it; if we lay it down, we look at it as being very heavy; but if we always carry it, will be light.

South Hadley Falls. C. C. SMITH.

BRO. GEO. WRIGHT, JR., writes:—"I am now giving my whole time to the work in this new field, Lexington, Mich. Organized two churches within the past three months, preaching on an average once a day. The good Lord is blessing our labors abundantly. Praise his dear name. Accept my gratitude for your kindness in sending the Crisis to me."

BRO. C. RICHARDSON writes:—"I did not meet my appointments because I was sick. I was taken sick Oct. 10th, with lung fever and congestion. Fever has left me, but the spitting of blood continues. I am prostrate. Will the church of Christ pray for me, that I may be raised up?"

Obituaries.

PERKINS. Died, in Yalesville, Conn., Oct. 15th, 1869, Bro. Stiles Perkins, aged forty-six years.

Bro. Perkins was converted twenty-four years ago. He became a firm believer in the speedy coming and kingdom of Christ, and died in the blessed hope of a future life through Christ by a resurrection from the dead. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and kind father, but who are sustained by the assurance of a future happy reunion. Sister Perkins sustains, also, the loss of a kind father, who died the same day. May the Lord comfort the bereaved. The funeral sermon was preached by the writer to a large congregation in the Advent Chapel. WM. N. PILE.

STITES. Died, in Jonesville, Hillsdale Co., Mich., Oct. 8th, 1869, Sr. Cynthia M. Stites, aged forty-seven years, two months, and three days.

Our dear sister for whom we mourn, but not as those that have no hope, was one of our oldest citizens. In her early days she was very skeptical; but when our dear Bro. and Sr. Mansfield came here to break to us the bread of life, and tell us that the Savior was soon coming to raise the dead, change the living, and bring in everlasting righteousness, our sister saw at once the beauty of God's arrangement, became convicted of sin, and at once gave her heart to the Savior, and has ever since lived a consistent christian life, showing to all around that she believed the truths she had embraced.

At the time of her death she was deeply interested in the temperance cause, and was with others in this place engaged in suppressing the traffic, greatly to the joy of the unfortunate, and a terror to those engaged in drunkard-making.

She leaves a husband, one son, and two daughters to mourn her loss; but they have no doubt she will be among those to awake, saying, Lo, this is my God; I have waited for him. The church has lost an earnest worker and a true friend; the cause a faithful worker; the poor and despised a true friend; and the community a worthy and valued citizen. Though dead, yet by her example she speaketh.

Words of comfort by Bro. D. R. Mansfield, from 1 Thess. 4; 14. A. E. BABCOCK.—Times.

ST. CLAIR. Died, Sept. 20th, our adopted daughter, Nettie St. Clair, aged twelve years and nine months.

Her name is written in the Book. Said she, when told that she must die, "Tell Bro. Grant," who baptized her, "I was all ready."

DAVIS. Died, in Warner, N. H., Sept. 9th, Nellie F., only child of George E. and Mary E. Davis, aged four years and one month.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 2 Tim. 1: 10. D. W. DAVIS.

BRYANT. Died, in Northwood, Sept. 20th, Lydia Bryant, daughter of Bro. A. and Sr. H. Bryant, aged six years and seven months.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

VIENNA, Oct. 21. The crown Prince of Prussia has arrived here, and is well received by the Emperor. Peace now seems to be assured between Prussia and Austria.

MADRID, Oct. 21. It is reported that Captain General DeRodas has informed the Home Government that the rebels in Cuba have all along had active relations with the Republican insurgents in Spain, and that arrangements have been made between them for mutual encouragement and assistance. Reinforcements for Cuba, to the number of three thousand men, sailed yesterday for Havana. Additional troops will be sent early in November. The defeat of the Republicans here places a large number of men at the disposal of the Government, which proposes to take advantage of the opportunity, and act vigorously for the complete suppression of the belligerents in Cuba.

All Republican leaders captured with arms in their hands, and at the head of armed bodies, are to be shot. Some executions have already taken place.

The Duke Montpensier has interceded with the Regent for the life of a leader of the attempted revolt at Seville.

In the Cortes, to-day, Gen. Prim ie referring to the rumors current in regard to his political faith, declared that he was a monarchist, and as such was opposed to the establishment of a republic in Spain.

TRIESTE, Oct. 22. The insurrection at Cattara, in Dalmatia, has been suppressed, but not without bloodshed. A conflict took place on the arrival of the troops. The insurgents made a desperate resistance, but were totally defeated. Order is now completely restored.

PARIS, Oct. 2. It is asserted that a number of Deputies propose to introduce a law at the next session of the Corps Legislatif to annul the decree of 1852, confiscating the property of Orleans princes.

The Patrie reports that the ultra Radicals are visiting the workshops and urging the men to take part in the demonstration of the 26th inst.

The Presse says the Revolutionary Committee in Paris have warned the workmen in the provinces that on the 26th of the present month there will be a general uprising in the city.

The Radical journals do not approve of the proposed demonstration.

It is rumored that Ledru Rolin, Felix Pyal, Victor Hugo, Louis Blanc and other extreme Radicals will come forward as candidates for the Corps Legislatif, in the supplementary elections soon to be held in Paris.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. A special meeting of the chamber of commerce will be held Wednesday, to appoint a delegate to attend the apening of the Suez Canal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The Times' Paris correspondent says: "I have just heard through a source, usually well informed as to the movements of the ex-Queen of Spain and her family, that at a family council, held on Sunday last, the abdication of Isabella in favor of the Prince of Asturias was definitely decided upon.

The Queen has been reluctantly induced to take this step by the advice of the Emperor. He considers the present conjuncture of affairs favorable to the restoration of the dynasty in the person of her son; but not otherwise. The whole affair was arranged during Gen. Prim's recent visit to St. Cloud. The candidature of the Duke of Genoa is a sham, and is merely intended to prepare the restoration scheme. The Republicans have been driven into insurrections as a part of the plan.

BATH, Me., Oct. 22. The earthquake this morning was severely felt in this region. Our advices are to the effect that the shock lasted from one to two minutes, and was felt in Kendall's Mills, Augusta, Hallowell, Gardiner, Vassalboro', Pittston, Waldoboro' and this city. In most of these places it had a vibratory motion, ringing door bells and rattling window sashes. In Waldoboro' the earth opened a small seam from eight to ten feet in length, causing great alarm to the citizens of the village. The weather was overcast at the time, and scarcely a breath of air was stirring.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 23. At 5.44 yesterday morning a severe shock of earthquake was felt here. It was preceded by a rumbling noise and the vibrations lasted about twenty seconds. Houses shook violently, everybody was awakened and many rushed from their houses in alarm, but no material damage was done. In other parts of New Brunswick—Fredericton, Woodstock, Miramichi and St. Andrews—the shocks appear to have been more severe, throwing down chimneys and cracking the walls of houses. Slighter shocks were felt in Halifax, Annapolis and Kentville, N. S.

EASTPORT, Me., Oct. 22. The earthquake here at 5.30 this morning was the most severe ever felt in this vicinity.

HARTFORD, Oct. 22. A shock of earthquake was distinctly felt in different parts of this city about 5 o'clock this morning. It was also felt in Windsor and other parts of the State.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. The Internal Revenue Department has information of a perfect reign of terror in Jackson and Washington Counties, Florida. Supervisor Krysanowski of this District reports that the Counties named are under control of an armed mob organized to resist the revenue laws. The leader of the mob is Jas. P. Coker, a wealthy citizen, who threatens such violence that the assessors only attend to their duties at the risk of their lives.

The Collector of Customs at Jacksonville, Fla., also writes that the State Tax Collector of Washington county and his wife have been brutally murdered.

Supervisor Krysanowski has made a call upon the Government for troops.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 23: The ceremonies on the occasion of the successful completion of the Suez Canal will be interesting. The following is the programme:—The fete will begin at Port Said on the 16th of November; the vessels forming the fleet will proceed to Ismailia on the next day, and remain there until the 18th, and will go through to Suez on the 19th, where the proceedings will be ended on the following day.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. Father Hyacinthe, early yesterday morning, attended the French Catholic church on 23d street, without being recognized by any one, attended by Mr. Darling and Mr. Tilden. He afterwards proceded to Plymouth church, where he also escaped recognition until after the congregation began to disperse, when he was cordially met and welcomed by Mr. Beecher, with whom he passed the greater part of the afternoon.

FATHER HYACINTHE.—This distinguished Monk is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. At present he is inclined to be very quiet. Attempts have been made by the newspapers to lionize him, but he keeps very much to himself. Like Luther, Wickliff and Wesley, he thinks to hold a medium place between the Ultramontane Catholics and Protestants. A great deal here is made of the fact that his Superior is foremost among the most liberal Prelates of France, and as he has condemned his course, he has little sympathy to expect from any within the church. During the Lental season of the present year I saw Father Hyacinthe at Notre Dame, in Paris. He was the sensation of the city at that time. The two great parties, the Liberal party, of which he was the representative, and the Ultramontane party, were running a rivalry, and were about equally dividing the Catholic public. Hyacinthe, in the prime of life, with a fine presence, sonorous voice and impassioned eloquence, crowded the old Cathedral. Father Felix, a small, spare Frenchman, lithe and wiry, full seventy, apostolic head, covered with flowing silver hair, filled the pulpit of the Madeline, while the élite of France crowded the house. I was struck with the appearance of Father Hyacinthe. His speeches and writings had attracted more attention than his sermons. There was nothing specially offensive to the Pope in his preaching, unless interpreted by his writings. But there was something very peculiar about his appearance. He evidently demanded all the state and ceremony that belonged to his position as Superior for the Barefooted Carmelites of Paris. His seat in the Cathedral was prominent. Before going into the sacristy to prepare for the pulpit he was especially incensed. Officials preceded him with staffs of office; processions attended him to his position. Unlike other ecclesiastics who kept their eyes on the ground and seemed lost in devotion, Father Hyacinthe put his eye on every one of the crowd in the vast Cathedral. He held up his head, and his clear penetrating eye seemed to read groups of strangers in whom he seemed specially interested. He looked out with a bold, free glance. There is nothing ascetic in his look. His features are sharp cut and of a refined type. He is no longer young, yet his hair is untinged with gray. He is thin and his face is pale. He wore the tonsure, an under robe of brown serge, with loose hanging sleeves, and over it the white woolen habit of the Carmelites. Turning from Father Hyacinthe, the contrast that Father Felix presented was remarkable. Hyacinthe spoke to the masses. Father Felix to the élite of Paris. The refined eloquence of the Madeline contrasted with the rough grandeur of Notre Dame. Father Felix, quite as eloquent, but more refined, held his vast audience in breathless attention while he defended the temporal power of the Pope, and sustained the Pontiff in the movements which mark his reign. Without a scrap of paper and with a singing voice that reached even to the pavement, the old man eloquent preached through all the days of Lent to audiences that crowded every part of the great edifice. Father Hyacinthe does not talk English—converses through an interpreter, and avows his determination to abstain from all public receptions.—Cor. Journal, 22nd inst.

EARTHQUAKE IN NEW ENGLAND.—The slight shock of an earthquake experienced this morning is sufficient to remind us that we are not exempt from disturbances of this nature, which, though supposed to be confined to more tropical climes, have left no portion of the earth's surface exempt from a visitation. We have had several evidences of this formidable phenomena of nature before, and not unfrequently we have intelligence from localities in this section of the country of very marked shocks. On the first of June, 1638, an earthquake took place in the New England States, in the afternoon, and it was sufficiently violent to shake movable articles. On the 29th of October, 1727, a shock, which was of two minutes' duration, took place, and was felt all along the coast. February 6, 1736, another shock took place, and November 18, 1755, the earthquake extended from New England to the West Indies, damaging towns throughout the whole extent of the coast. On the 12th of March, 1761, there was a violent shock in this and adjoining States at half-past two o'clock in the morning, and others of note are recorded. We have happily been spared any disastrous earthquake and the accompanying tidal wave which in modern times have proved so destructive, and which in years gone by proved so fatal. The great earthquake in 1755 almost destroyed the city of Lisbon. It continued only six minutes but sixty thousand persons perished. In 1811 violent earthquakes shook the valley of the Mississippi and lakes disappeared and new ones were formed.—Journal 22d.

EARTHQUAKE EXCITEMENT IN SOUTH AMERICA.—At last accounts from the west coast of South America, the excitement regarding the expected terrible earthquakes, predicted by Prof. Falb, still continued, more especially in Peru, where great alarm prevailed. A letter from Lima, to the New York Herald, dated Sept. 28, says the panic was increasing. In southern Peru shocks of earthquake were felt every ten or twenty minutes, and in the north sea had attained a hight never before witnessed.

RELIGIOUS PROGRESS IN MEXICO—A letter from the city of Mexico says that for years there has been a steady growth of religious sentiment and observance, based on the Bible as the rule of faith. They have eight congregations in the city, and in the entire valley as many as eighteen or twenty, with stated places of worship, and pastors represented as men of pure life, several of them formerly priests of the Catholic Church. The work being strictly Mexican, is the more remarkable and interesting.

Passing Events.

☞ While Father Hyacinthe is strangling the Pope, and Catholicism generally is getting shaky, great preparations are making in Paris for the opening of an exhibition of sacred relics, gathered from the principal churches and saints rookeries on the continent. The exhibition will be one of some magnitude, and will be made an occasion to awaken enthusiasm.

☞ Intelligence from California states that lately Roman Catholic priests have forbidden parents to send their children to the public schools, under penalty of the anger of the church authorities.

☞ Several ripe strawberries have been picked from a garden at Nahant during the past week. In another garden, at the same place, a pear tree is now in full bloom.

☞ The new Catholic Cathedral which is being built at Brooklyn N. Y., will cost $2,000,000, and will seat about fifteen thousand persons.

☞ Napoleon has ordered the travelling expenses of the French Bishops of Quebec in going to and from the Ecumenical Council to be defrayed from the Imperial exchequer.

☞ Accounts of the earthquake on Friday morning state that the lower animals were greatly excited by the movement of the earth, as was seen in their efforts to break loose, and in some instances, by their cries of terror.

☞ Mr. C. P. Bancroft has on his place in Brookline a pear tree which has borne a full crop of pears for two years, and is now in full bloom and looks like a beautiful boquet.

☞ A temperance lecturer has started from Kansas, with the declared intention of walking to Augusta, Me., and delivering a lecture on temperance every evening while on his way.

☞ France takes kindly to Father Hyacinthe, and he received more than 1,000 congratulatory letters daily before he left for America.

☞ It is ascertained that there were ten lives lost by the recent flood in Windham and Windsor counties Vermont.

☞ Mrs. Van Cott, the only female licensed preacher among the Methodists, is preaching with success in Chicopee Falls, Mass.

☞ The strike which originated with the merchants' clerks of Paris is rapidly spreading among all classes of workmen.

☞ A French savant predicts that the approaching winter will be a remarkably severe one.

☞ Liberty of the press is to be established in Prussia.

☞ George Muller has received over $2,150,000 for his voluntary Orphan Home.

☞ Mrs. Ellen G. Gustin was ordained pastor of the Christian Church in West Mansfield on Thursday.

☞ The book trade of Chicago amounts to about $3,000,000 per year.

☞ Mrs. Andrew Johnson is not expected to live through the winter.

☞ A dispatch from Cairo announces the arrival of the Empress Eugenie at that city.

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

"WHEREAS, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

WHEREAS, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

JOHN COUCH, New Hampshire; MILES GRANT, Massachusetts; S. G. MATHEWSON, Vermont; JOSHUA V. HIMES, Michigan; WM. SHELDON, Wisconsin; O. R. FASSETT, Minnesota; JOHN PORTER, Canada, National Conference Committee.

New Hampshire Conference.

At a meeting of the members of the Advent-Christian State Conference of New Hampshire, held at Alton Bay, Sept. 9th, 1869, called by the President, Eld. J. Couch, and formally opened with prayer by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, it was voted, that we proceed to choose delegates to attend the American Advent-Christian Convention to be held in Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 17th, 1869.

Voted, That Bro. D. M. Leavitt receive, assort, and count ballots for delegates and their substitutes.

Voted, That Bro. A. Ross be a delegate to attend said Convention, and that Bro. Geo. W. Brown be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. A. W. Sibley be the second delegate, and that Bro. C. S. Emerson be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. J. G. Smith be the third delegate, and that Bro. J. W. White be his substitute.

Adjourned. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Rochester Conference.

The delegates to the Advent Christian National Convention will report themselves at the New Arsenal Building, on Monroe street, where the committee will receive them for entertainment.

Brethren from the adjoining towns, who can with a cheerful heart aid us in supplying our table with roast meats, fowls, butter, cheese, fruits, or other necessaries, for entertaining our guests, or means to help furnish such necessaries, will confer a favor which we shall much need.

By request of Committee, H. PRATT.

Notice.

There will be a protracted meeting in Belgrade, at the Depot, Nov. 4th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday. There are but few brethren and sisters in the place, yet they give a general invitation for all to come and engage in the work of the Lord, as places will be kindly provided for all who come. Brethren will call on John T. Fifield. For the Brethren, H. B. SEVEY.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, the New Hampshire Tent will be pitched in South Berwick, near Gt. Works, and remain as long as it is duty. Brn. J. G. Smith, D. M. Leavitt, with others, will be present to preach the word of life. As it is a new field, will the dear ones remember us in their prayers, that the Lord will pour out his Spirit, that the people may see the truth, believe, and be saved?

J. C. SHOREY, Tent Master.

[No date with this.—ED.

Notice.

We hope those brethren who have made pledges of money to the Mass. Conference, to carry forward the protracted meetings, will forward the amount to the Treasurer before the next meeting of the conference, if it is possible. We want to hold protracted meetings through the fall and winter, as the Lord may open the way.

S. W. THURBER, Pres. of Conf.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Brown Co., N. Y., will be held Nov. 27th and 28th. Bro. and Sr. Hitchcock, of Kirkwood, N. Y., will be there to assist. All are invited to attend. For the brethren,

J. W. TAYLOR.

To the Churches in Connecticut.

Having been elected to the office of President of Conference, I would be happy to learn the wants of churches within this jurisdiction, and to this end would be glad to hear from the brethren and sisters. H. H. DICKINSON.

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 1869.

Meetings in Cambridgeport.

Change of place of worship, from Buckley's Hall to Washington Hall, No. 459 Main Street, a few doors distant, opposite Pearl Street. Meetings will continue as usual on Sundays, at 10½ A. M., and 3 and 7½ P. M. W. H. KAHARL, Sec.

Notice.

The First Second Advent Society of Cambridgeport hold their meetings in Washington Hall, 459, Main Street, three times Sunday. Seats free.

Preaching brethren will please correspond with W. H. KAHARL.

Churches in Mass.

Will some brother in each church, or place where meetings are held, inform me by letter, giving the town, and number of believers in the town, as near as possible? In doing this you will confer a favor, and assist in doing something for the interest of the cause at large.

J. HEMENWAY, Athol Depot, Mass.

Brighton Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Oct. 21st, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	3,177	3,216	4,200
Last week	3,113	5,362	2,850

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.25@13.50; first quality, $12.00@13.00; second quality, $11.00@11.50; third quality, $8.50@10.00.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $200@250 to $@300 350; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, 50, 65, 75, to 85–100–115; Yearlings, $17 to 26; two years old, $28 to 42; three years old, $45 to 65; Western Fat Swine, live, $10⅛ to 11⅛ cts. per lb; Dressed, 12⅛ to 13¼ cts. per lb; Store Hogs, Wholesale, 11¼ to 12 cts. per lb; Retail, 13 to 15 cts. per lb. Columbia Co., N. Y., Spring Pigs, 12½ to 15 cts. per lb.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, each; Extra, $3.75@4.50, or from 3½ to 7½ cts. per lb; Spring Lambs, $3.00 to 4.50.

Prices of Hides, Tallow and Skins.

Brighton Hides, 9¾ to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7@7½ cts. per lb; Country Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb; Pelts, 00 to 80 cts. each; Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—The supply of cattle nearly as large as last week, being even more than the demand really requires. At the first of market trade was very active, and fine steers changed freely. The quality would hardly compare in goodness with last week. Between 300 and 400 Cherokee cattle of ordinary grade. Prices range from ¼ to ½ ct. lower than last week. The late trains at Cambridge yesterday, finding but few buyers, started their cattle (some 300 head) for this market, with a desire to obtain last week's prices. Their expectations came short of realization.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts 3216, mostly western, handled by Brighton butchers on commission.

Boston Markets.

Wholesale Prices.

Corn.—Mixed, $1.05@$1.10; Yellow, $1.10@$1.15. Oats, 55@67 cts. Old Rye, $1.25@$1.30.

Seeds.—Timothy Herds Grass, $4.75@5.25; Red Top, $3.50 to $4.25 per sack; R. I. Bent, $2.50 to $3.00 per bush.; Clover per lb., 14 to 15c.

Apples.—New per bbl., $4 00@6.00. Onions, $4.00 per bbl.

Pork.—$36@$37. Lard, 19@20c. Hams, 18½ cts. Butter.—40@42c. Cheese, Factory, 17½ to 18½c. Dairy, 15½ to 17c.

Beans.—Extra Pea, $3.50@$3.75; Common, $2.50. Eggs.—34@36c. Dried Apples (southern), 8½ to 10c. Hay, per ton, $17@$25. Potatoes, new per bbl., $2.00@$2.25. Sweet potatoes, per bbl., $3.50@$4.00. Fresh Fruits.—Apples per box, $1.75@$3.50. Pears per bbl., $10.00@$18.00. Grapes, 15@20 cts. per lb. Quinces, $13.00@14.00 per bbl. Cranberries, $11.00@12.00 per bbl.

REMARKS.—There is not any change to note in the flour market. Prices quoted are held firm. Corn.—The slight advance last week was only temporary; receipts plenty. Old Rye and Oats unchanged. Apples lower; a full supply in market, of good quality. Butter lower by 3 cts. per lb.; supply large. Pork and Lard unchanged; market firm. Fruits in demand. Grapes higher by 2 cts. per lb.

Cambridge Cattle Market.

Reported for the World's Crisis by GEO. J. FOX, for the week ending Oct. 26th, 1869.

Amount of Live Stock at Market.

	Cattle.	Sheep and Lambs.	Swine.
This week	973	9,151	3,807
Last week	1,776	14,083	1,726

Prices of Market Beef.

Extra, $13.00@13.50; first quality, $12.00@13.50; second quality, $10.00@11.00; third quality, $8.00@9.50.

Prices of Store Cattle.

Working Oxen, per pair, from $150@200 to $250@300; Milch Cows and Calves, from $35, $50, $75, to $100@115; Yearlings, $17 to $28; Two years old, $28 to $43; Three years old, $45 to $62.

Prices of Sheep and Lambs.

In lots, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00@$3.50 each; Extra, $3.75 to $4.25, or from 3½ to 7 cts. per lb. Spring Lambs, $3.00 to $4.50.

Prices of Hides, Tallow, and Skins.

Hides, 9 to 9½ cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 7½ cts. per lb. Pelts, 80 cts. each. Calf Skins, 22 to 23 cts. per lb.

REMARKS. Cattle.—Dealers held cattle firm, claiming as much price as last week. Best grades ranged from $13.00 to $13.50 per cwt. The market was not especially active; buyers were inclined to wait and not hurry bargains, expecting dealers to yield a fraction from asking prices. The quality ranged a fair supply of good, and many small cattle.

Sheep and Lambs.—The trains were heavy with sheep and lambs. Some very fine lots of Canada lambs. A fair quality changed hands at $3.50 per head. Prices generally lower, full 50 cts. per head.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. AN EXPOSITION OF THE SEVEN SEALS. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. THE LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—its immoral and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest Ripe, The end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

8. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars; meteorological wonders, fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc., etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30; single, by mail, 23 cts.

9. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

10. RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. New edition, with covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 9 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25.

An Admonition to Christian Churches on Church Festivals, Fairs, etc.

BY I. K. LOMBARD.

A new edition, with additions and improvements. About twelve thousand of the above sheet have been scattered, and they are doing a practical service against these growing evils in the churches of our land. The picture of their proceedings is so faithfully drawn, that the guilty on reading it have several times furiously protested to those who offered them that it was written on purpose for them, with a full knowledge of the facts in their case. Price, postpaid, 15 cts. per dozen; 75 cts. per hundred.

BIRD OF JOY.

Bird of joy! why art thou lingering here,
  In the place of weeping?
Bird of morn! why rings thy carol clear
  Where the dead are sleeping?
Bird of summer! cannot winter's cold
  Chill thy bosom's gladness?
Cannot mourners' tears, that wet the mould,
  Touch thy heart with sadness?

Thus I wondered in myself to see
  Mirth and sorrow meeting,
As a lark arose, and carolled free,
  Bleak November greeting,
Where a widowed husband, silent tears
  In fresh sorrow pouring,
Wept the while his loss of other years,
  A sweet child deploring.

Hither when we brought the sleeping dust
  Of that gentle maiden,
Ev'n while earth received her solemn trust,
  And from hearts o'erladen
Broke the stifled sob,—lo! from the side
  Of the grave, upspringing,
Rose a lark, and soared, and far and wide
  Filled the air with singing.

Bird of joy! and thou art true to-day
  To the blessed token;
Mother with the child to rest we lay,
  Sad, but not heart-broken;
Out of drear November we have heard
  Promise more than vernal;
Visions thou hast brought us, happy bird,
  Of the Day Eternal!

—Sunday Magazine.

"THE MORNING COMETH."

Let me call your attention to yet another parable; a third testimony from the Son of man himself; "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened." In eleven different passages we meet with the mention of leaven, as expressive of evil, St. Paul, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, who was conversant with all the usages of the Jews, writes to the Corinthians of notorious scandalous sinners, who infect a whole church with their corrupting influence: 'Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out, therefore, the whole leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us [this sacrifice was to be eaten with pure, unleavened bread;] therefore let us keep the feast, not with old, sour leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." Our blessed Lord himself also warns his disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. He bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrines of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees; even of their corrupting doctrines, the traditions of the elders.

Such may be among the doctrines that are to "leaven the whole lump until the whole be leavened" in these times of the end. Shall we bring forward a fourth parable in attestation of this truth? "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a grain of mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field; which indeed is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown it is tne grertest among herbs, and becometh a tree; so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." We have been so accustomed to dwell upon the marvelous growth of this tree, that we have utterly lost sight of the unclean, ravening birds polluting the tree—types of evil which shall infest the church in the time of the end. Yes, the whole tenor of Bible revealings is to the effect that iniquity is to abound; that the love of many is to wax cold. What is the full meaning of our Lord's inquiry, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Who does not anticipate the mournful answer? No! The silence of the Savior is eloquence indeed, and most touchingly tender.

Yet, another parable will we allude to in confirmation of this point; the well-remembered parable of the ten virgins.

They are all virgins, each has her lamp, and each has some degree of expectancy of the heavenly Bridegroom. But fully half of these were foolish; they had lamps, but they lacked oil. They had the lamp of profession, but lacked the oil of preparedness; the light that was in them was darkness. These are they who "having the form of godliness, deny the power thereof;" upon these the day of the Lord, the end of the world, shall come in a time when they are not aware, even as in the days that were before the flood. These shall cry unto the heavenly Bridegroom, "Lord! Lord, open unto us; have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? Then will he profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye workers of iniquity." We have referred to the days of Noah, as in those days there were chambering and wantonness; surfeiting and drunkenness; marrying and giving in marriage; utter indifference, utter unconcern; notwithstanding many a warning voice; in spite of the watchman's cry; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. God forbid that the degeneracy should be as extreme and universal, as in those days, wherein only eight persons were saved; but yet the analogy points to few, comparatively, relatively few, who shall be faithful unto death, striving against sin!

This fearful roll of iniquities shall not be fully illustrated until the incarnation of the son of perdition—until the manifestation of the Antichrist of evil, until the brief space of the time of the end. Then shall sin rage its final hour; then shall be the reign of terror, of blasphemy, of woe. Listen to the warning of the last of the epistles: "Beloved, remember the words which were spoken before by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ; how that they told you there should be mockers in the last times, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts." Nay, it would appear that in these coming times of prodigies and marvels of judgment, as prediction after prediction is bursting into terrible fulfillment, mankind shall be willingly ignorant, wilfully blinded. We say not that these floods of swelling wickedness have as yet begun to rise; it is rather the lull of apathy, the lethargy of piety, the lukewarmness of christian zeal, the ominous calm that precedes the impending storm!

The Savior knocking at the door of his slumbering church, as though he would awake her from her supineness: "I would thou wert either cold or hot!" In the times of the ancient Levite-service, it was the duty of one of the priests to go the nightly rounds of the temple, and if he observed any delinquent Levite asleep at his post of sacred trust, he was ordered to set fire to the robe of the unwatchful one; and either the smell of fire, or the stifling smoke, or the scorching flame soon awoke the sleeper. As a penalty for this unwatchfulness, the delinquent was compelled to serve the temple in this singed or charred robe throughout the next day. Jesus is walking amidst his golden candlesticks, and as he sees his slumbering church, weary with his protracted delay, he exclaims, "Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and men see his shame. What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Nay, as though the garment of the slumberer had been burnt away in the deep sleep of unwatchfulness, the Savior cries, "I counsel thee to buy of me white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear." The morning cometh; the darker the night the nearer the dawning!

But if there is to be a lack of real wisdom, that of the wise and understanding heart, there is to be no dearth of secular knowledge. "Knowledge is to run to and fro in the earth." Even the most superficial thinker, the most cursory observer must admit this to be the prominent feature of these times of the end. Truly marvelous would be the statistics of our literature should any curious compiler give them forth to the world. Think of the millions of copies of our daily journals, catering for some new thing, wherewith to sate the greedy thirst of inquiring multitudes. Add to these the thousands of quarterly, monthly, and weekly serials administering to the intellectual tastes of thousands on thousands of every language in the range of civilization. Add to these the abounding literature, which panders to the mere morbid taste for that which is sensational, sentimental, humorous or profane. Let there be enrolled upon the swelling catalogue those tracts and pamphlets, which christianity is pouring forth from its press. Above all, let the numbers be told of the precious Book Divine. Four copies per minute issue forth from the grand emporium at Blackfriars! Truly, "the knowledge of the glory of the Lord is being sent to and fro in the earth;" thus enhancing the guiltiness of these times of the end.

Each science, too, has its silent emissaries, unfolding its peculiar secrets to each inquiring mind. And this supply tells us of demand for some new thing in knowledge. It tells us that a spirit of inquiry is abroad, agitating multitudes, arousing them to think, and reason, and invent. A republic of mind is being set up. Millions are asserting their prerogative to think for themselves, no longer tamely submitting to the authoritative dictates of the select few, who have usurped the oligarchy of mind. This freeborn spirit of inquiry is awakening, arousing busy thought, bracing it for daring explorations. Education is polishing many a shaft for the coming onslaught upon the fastnesses of indifference and ignorance. Nay, in its half enlightenment, reason is daring to be sceptical on truths of God's revealing. Not brooking mystery, spurning to walk as yet by faith, it would test the truthfulness of God—with too self-reliant reasonings it would determine for itself. Hence the grim phenomena of rationalism, ritualism, spiritualism, mormonism—types of the half-enlightened mind struggling to be free.

Fresh pathways of progress are continually opening. Man boldly ventures on, no longer taken by surprise by any fresh discovery. Wearied with the commonplaces of the past, he is panting after the loftier sphere of action, for ampler range of thought. It is the spirit of man awaking from a dream, starting into self-consciousness. Man is at length aroused to the fact, the day is far spent; yea, to the dread that his sun may go down while it is yet day. He hath a presentiment that "the time is short" for thought, inquiry, or enterprise. Yes! if our sluggard world hath slept far into the day, it is now girding up its loins, as though it would in very deed "buy back the time."

That amiable optimist, Dr. Channing, thus confirmed our view:—"History and philosophy plainly show to me, in human nature, the principles and foundations of a new state of things; and christianity concurs in these."

The late Dr. Arnold, whose powerful, far-seeing mind has moulded some of the best thinkers of this age, used to say with deep emotion: "My sense of the evils of these times that are coming, and of the prospects to which I am bringing up my children, is overwhelming. Times are coming in which the devil will fight his best and in good earnest." The sober Edinburg Review thus records its verdict: "Never was there a time when events developed themselves with such rapidity. As the world moves on it seems to accelerate its speed, and to precipitatate itself with headlong haste. Events seem to ripen before their time, The crisis comes almost as soon as we are aware of the commencement. Speed, whirlwind speed, is the order of the day." The late Sir Robert Peel uttered many weighty and calmly reasoned words. He used to say, "Every aspect of this present age, viewed in the light of the past, warrants the belief that we are on the eve of a universal change."

To meet the demands of these stirring times, nature is exerting the mightiness of her power; or, rather, man is laying hold of her mightiness, and hence art is displaying exhautless combinations of wonders. These in their turn give place to still grander marvels. Intelligence is speeding round each continent across many a sea, yea, through the ocean itself; not merely in the swift ship, but in the "winged words" of heaven's lightning; soon to girdle this our planet, as with the zone of some fabled magician. In these days of marvelous locomotion, are we not gazing on the visions vouchsafed to prophets of the long, long ago? When ancient Rome was still governed by the Tarquins, the wondering prophet of Galilee beheld "the cars with flaming torches, and the fir trees terribly shaken; the cars raging in the ways, their show like torches, their speed like lightning." Think of our vast steam navies, our appliances of steam "on the broad ways," yea, jostling one another. Who shall say that the terrific steam war, with its marvelous projectiles, shall not fill in these dim etchings of prophecy, even "the day of Jehovah's preparation" in the time of the end?

Stupendous marvels mark the present age. The heated axles of time are moving round with sevenfold speed. Event follows event with terrific swiftness, and surprise flashes upon surprise. Startling are the discoveries, mighty are creations, that the swift-rushing progress of modern civilization is ever and anon throwing to the surface. Think upon the wondrous fact that the same mysterious power, ethereal, impalpable, that circulates through all the organs of plants and animals, that directs the silent course of the magnetic needle, and that ever and anon illuminates the the whole horizon, is now made the obedient message-bearer of man; his swift-winged courier, subtle as the light-beam, and as fleet; space and time are vanquished, peoples and regions that have been severed by formidable barriers, are now brought into immediate proximity. A nation is converted into a neighborhood, and man achieves a sort of universality of speech and action. Yea, ere these lines shall reach the eyes of the readers of the Rainbow, this wondrous appliance shall have entered each village, to be pressed into the uses of our daily life.

Philosophy is refining its subtleties to the utmost nicety, to satisfy the educated tastes of an advanced age. Reason, with sacrilegious intrusion, is venturing into the holy place, where it ought not, preparing the way for the mystery of lawlessness. Reason is profanely submitting to the testing of its crucible, the hallowed truths which heavenly wisdom hath hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed to the simple faith of babes. Reason is moulding after its own likeness articles of new creeds; and even now are appearing those "false teachers of the time of the end, bringing in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them." Let us beware lest our liberalism degenerate into licentiousness or a criminal apathy tolerating deceits, which shall too soon become rife indeed, and shall be the precursors of still more iniquitous deceivableness in the last reign of terror, of blasphemy, of woe. Surely the morning cometh. The darker the night, the nearer the dawning.—"Rainbow."

For the World's Crisis.

"THEY THAT TRUST IN THE LORD."

They that trust in the Lord, like old Zion shall be
  Environed with mountains around;
The armed hosts of heaven the trusting shall see,
  Who their enemies hurl to the ground.

They believe all the promises, "yea and amen,"
  Though the wicked may laugh them to scorn;
They expect their reward when the dead live again,
  When beams the bright, radiant morn.

They confess themselves pilgrims and strangers below,
  Their eyes are upturned with delight;
For the Savior is coming, and then, they well know,
  Will be ended earth's dark, stormy night.

So they press on their way, though the fierce tempests blow,
  And the thick clouds hover around,
And they sing all the while, as onward they go,
  Of the time when their King shall be crowned.

Their songs are pathetic, so trusting, yet sad,
  So tender, so touching, and sweet;
They seem to be lonely, yet faith makes them glad,
  Their absent Christ soon they will meet.

If ever were pilgrims found seeking a shrine,
  Their rich gifts to offer with prayer,
Then these, sure, are pilgrims, their shrine is divine,
  They'll reach it! yes, soon they'll be there.

Then their faith will be lost, 'twill be merged into sight,
  And their prayer will be turned into praise;
All buoyant with rapture, ecstatic delight,
  That they've ended their pilgrimage days.

L. C. McKinstry.

For the World's Crisis.

COME TO JESUS.

O, sinner, I would invite you to come to Jesus. He has died to redeem you from the curse of the law. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be damned." Sinner, repent and believe on Jesus. I would point you to the cross of Christ, to the bleeding Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. Read your Bible. It is an epistle of love. It unfolds the way of salvation. It proclaims a crucified and risen Savior. It points you to the bleeding Lamb. May this precious treasure be yours and mine, to guide us through this dark world of sin and sorrow to that land where it will be one eternal day, where we shall be forever with the Savior, and enjoy the untold glories that awaits the immortal saints. Come, come to Jesus, and come without delay, and throw yourself into his everlasting arms of love. He is the "chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely." Hear his own words: "Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out." Then seek the Savior, and attend to his gracious calls. May the sweet influences of Christ's redeeming love constrain you to come and partake of the joys of salvation. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." To-morrow may be too late. To-morrow's sun may set upon your grave.

Oh, the boundless love of Christ, that he should shed his own precious blood for guilty sinners. "Ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your Spirit, which are God's." What a price was paid for our redemption! the precious blood of Jesus, the lovely Lamb of God. Come to Jesus! Come to Jesus! E. G. Emmons.

WORLDLINESS.

Watch against it. There is danger of its stealing upon us unawares. You may love the world, without being rich. No matter how poor you are, you will drink in the spirit of the world unless you absolutely guard against it. Remember that, respectable as worldliness is, even in the church, it is nevertheless a damning sin. The Bible says, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." This is plain. Again it is affirmed, that "No covetous man who is an idolater hath eternal life abiding him." But no one can doubt but that the love of the world is common among professors. We are liable to be carried away by the current. How may we know whether we love the world or not?

If worldly motives exert a stronger influence over us than love for God and his cause does, it is a sure sign that we love the world. Why will the invalid leave family and friends, and at a great expense visit some famous physician, and submit to take unpleasant remedies, and endure great self-denial? It is because life and health are prized more than ease or money. So, if one will give money for the rent of a pew which he would not give to have the gospel preached freely to all, it is because he loves social distinction more than he does the souls of his fellow-men. So, church festivals are justified, on the ground that more money can be raised in that way than in any other. What is this but an acknowledgment that professed christians love their own appetites more than they do the cause of God?

We always seek most earnestly for that which we love most. So, if you find yourself seeking after gain more intensely than you do after God, you may rest assured that you love the world. If you are ready to make sacrifices of ease and convenience to promote worldly interests, which you would not make to promote the cause of God, without doubt you love the world. If you will take risks and assume responsibilities for the prospect of gain, which you would not take in the cause of God, it is because you love the world. God is a sure paymaster; but the worldling, whether in the church or out of it, does not trust him.

Again you may know whether you love the world, by the gratification which you feel at its possession. If worldly prosperity elates you, and adversity depresses you,—if your religious enjoyments fluctuate with your outward circumstances,—you are evidently a stranger to the joys of salvation. If you grieve more over the loss of property than you do over the withdrawal of the favor of God, it is of no use for you longer to profess religion. You need convicting.

Examine yourselves carefully, then, at this point. It is a point likely to be overlooked. But it is, nevertheless, of the utmost importance. You cannot afford to lose your soul for the baubles of earth, which endure but for a season. Remember, then, that Jesus says, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Earnest Christian.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

74. A woman of Canaan besought Jesus.—"And behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." Matt. 15: 22.

It was a Greek woman who besought him.—The woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation, and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter." Mark 7: 26.

Syrophenicia was in the time of our Savior a province of the Greek government, and was inhabited by the descendants of Canaan. The woman referred to in the above proposition, lived in Syrophenicia, hence she was a Greek, and as she was descended from Canaan, she was also "a woman of Canaan." Thus we may speak of a negro who was born in Kentucky, and say of him with equal propriety, that he is a "man of Africa," an "American" and a Kentuckian." Hence we see that the Bible is in perfect harmony on this, as well as all other points.

75. Two blind men besought Jesus.—"And behold, two blind men sitting by the wayside, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David."—Matt. 20: 30.

Only ONE blind man besought him.—"A certain blind man sat by the way-side begging. . . . And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me."—Luke 18: 35, 38.

Had the infidel quoted the context in the above, his proposition would have beautifully explained itself. We give the sense entire. Luke says, "And it came to pass as they came nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the wayside begging. And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant. And they told him Jesus of Nazareth passeth by. And he cried saying, "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me.'

And Matt. says, "And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. And behold two blind men sitting by the wayside, and when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out saying, Have mercy upon us, O Lord, thou Son of David." Hence it is clear that Luke and Matthew refer to two distinct and separate instances, one of which took place before Jesus and his disciples arrived at Jericho, and the other after they departed from thence.

76. Christ was crucified at the third hour.—"And it was the third hour, and they crucified him."—Mark 15: 25.

Christ was not crucified until the sixth hour. "And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour; and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your king. . . Shall I crucify your king?"—John 19: 14, 15.

It is supposed that the true reading of John 19: 14 should be trite, the third, instead of exte, the sixth. A mistake which might readily have occurred in ancient times when the character gamma, which was used to denote trite three, might be mistaken for episima or sigma tau, which signifies six.

The two characters above alluded to are very much alike, hence the mistake was easy. Thus we see that which the critic supposed to be a mistake on the part of the author of the Bible was simply a mistake made by a few of those who copied the work, we say a few, because trite third (instead of exte six) is the reading of some very eminent manuscripts. See Dr. Clarke, Bengel, Newcome, McKnight, Lightfoot, Rosenmuller etc., on this point.

77. The two thieves reviled Christ.—"The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth."—Matt. 27: 44. "And they that were crucified reviled him." Mark 15: 32.

Only ONE of the thieves reviled Christ.—"And one of the malefactors which hanged railed on him. . . . But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost thou not fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?"—Luke 23: 39, 40.

It is plain, from the three texts above quoted, that at first (according to Matthew and Mark) both of the thieves reviled the Messiah, and afterward (according to Luke,) one had not only ceased to revile him, but reproved the other for so doing. Hence the infidel argues with great complacency, "the Bible contradicts itself." Surely this is a very weak argument for a man to offer, and that too, in the very face of the fact that they hung over six hours upon the cross. Saul of Tarsus and many others were converted in much less time than this.—Mrs. H. V. Reed.

SUNDAY RAIN.

A week-day rain has no power to keep a single man from attending to his business. The exposure required, the distance to go in the storm may be twenty times as great, yet it never occurs to an active business man that the rain in this case furnishes any reasonable ground for neglect.

So glaring is the contrast between the effects of the Sunday and the week-day rain, that one might almost suppose that the former contained some peculiarly subtle and injurious qualities that were wanting in the latter—that it was laden with some peculiarly deleterious influences, capable of endangering health and constitution.

A Sunday rain! What is there of all the phenomena of nature so potent? It need come in no blaze and furious torrent, with the sound of thunder and the lurid glare of lightnings. Let it but drop from heaven in the gentlest distillations, and hundreds of people stop in their purpose to go to the house of worship; the seats are empty; the songs of praise are feeble, and instead of the inspiration and power of a full congregation, there is presented the uninspiring spectacle of a meager band of worshipers struggling to carry on the service, to keep alive the dying devotion and languishing hymns of praise.

A GREAT MAN is affable in his conversation, generous in his temper, and immovable in what he has naturally resolved upon. And as prosperity does not make him haughty and imperious, so neither does adversity sink him into meanness and dejection; for if ever he shows more spirit than ordinary, it is when he is ill-used, and the world is frowning upon him. In short, he is equally removed from the extremes of servility and pride, and scorns either to trample on a worm, or cringe to an emperor.

— A man who wilfully fails to keep his word, or easily consents to the failure, is a man that will not do to trust with another's money.

LOVE.

Love is a divine element, a prominent characteristic of God, whose philanthropy is evinced in all his dealings with man. He "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Therefore by faith in the promises of God, and obedience to his commands, we shall be made partakers of the divine nature. This, however, cannot be accomplished except we love God, love his people, love our enemies, and our neighbor as ourself.

He that loveth is God-like, he that hateth is Satan-like; for the Word says, "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" Hence it is our imperative duty to love God supremely, and to "know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

Methinks there are but few professors of religion that realize the importance of cherishing the principle of love, and eschewing envy, hatred, and malice. Many times has my heart been pained, when declaring the whole counsel of God, to be met with anathemas, and made the object of opprobious epithets by those who profess to love God.

But we have felt to pity rather than to treat them with contempt, knowing "that all things work together for good to them that love God." Perhaps many of these persecutors are ignorant of Satan's devices. May be they have yet to learn that this arrant deceiver is laboring mightily in these last days to decoy the children of God into the whirlpool of sectarian bigotry. O may the sleeping church awake to righteousness, and sin no more in this direction. May she put on the garments of love and charity, lest she be "like sounding brass" or a "tinkling cymbal."

Brethren, let us who stand as watchmen upon the walls of Zion, present our message in love, that we may win souls to Christ, instead of driving them away from Christ. O Lord, keep me humble and childlike, and remit all my sins, for the sake of thy beloved Son, in whom thou art well pleased, is the prayer of one waiting for redemption.

C. H. Williams.

Gems.

— The ruin of most men dates from some vacant hour. Occupation is the armor of the soul. There is a satirical poem, in which the devil is represented as fishing for men, and fitting his bait to the taste and business of his prey; but the idler, he said, gave him no trouble, as he bit the naked hook.

— Be courteous of jesture, and affable to all men, with diversity of reverence according to the dignity of the person. There is nothing that winneth so much with so little cost. He who endeavors to please must appear pleased; and he who would not provoke rudeness must not practice it.

— Cease, sinner, cease to steer madly thy barque over life's stormy waters; take for thy helmsman the pilot of Galilee, else you will never reach the wished-for haven, but will be shipwrecked on the sands of eternity, and that eternity—how awful!

— The moment a man gives away to inordinate desires, disquietude and torment take possession of his heart. The proud and the covetous are never at rest; but the poor and the humble possess their souls in the plenitude of peace.

— It is a comfort to christians apart to think that their prayers meet before a throne of grace, and their persons will meet before a throne of glory.

— If you have a fault to cure, or a bad habit to be broken off, it cannot be done by merely trying a little. You must fight it, and not give up fighting until it is got rid of.

— Nature is a book of sweet and glowing purity, and on every illuminated page the excellence and goodness of God are divinely portrayed.

— He that hath the ear has the hand of God; and prayer moves the hand that moves the world.

— We are always complaining that our days are few, but acting as though we thought there would be no end to them.

— Aim to do some permanent good, that your existence may be crowned with usefulness.

— Gratitude is the music of the heart when its chords are swept by the gentle breeze of kindness.

— You cannot dream yourself into a character; you must hammer and forge yourself into one.

— God writes the gospel, not in the Bible alone but on trees, and flowers, and clouds, and stars.

— A soul without prayer is like a solitary sheep without a shepherd. The tempter sees it and lures it away into his snare.

— The best way for parents to train up their children in the way they should go, is to travel that way occasionally themselves.

— The sin you now tremble at, if left to yourself you will commit; therefore, be humble, prayerful and watchful.

— The christian is not ruined by living in the world, which he must needs do while he remains in it, but by the world living in him.

— Truth is violated by falsehood, and it may be equally outraged by silence.

— The best consolers of human hearts may bear broken hearts in their own bosoms.

— A calm hour with God is worth a whole lifetime with man.

— We do not want precepts so much as patterns.

— He who never gives advice, and he who never takes it, are alike unworthy of friendship.

— Our reputation depends greatly on the choice of our companions.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

Professors McChesney and Andrews, from Chicago, both visit the Tiber for the same purpose. The former arrives at the conclusion that the drift-beds containing bones of extinct animals, covered with peat twenty-five feet thick, must have required ages to accomplish.

The latter finds bones and flint implements of men in the same drift-beds, and thereby shows they lived cotemporaneously with those animals. He shows that the Tiber has been many times larger than now, and that boulders of ice and frozen ground of tons weight have been buried in the sand before the ice had chance to thaw, making the drift-beds rapid instead of gradual. The peat beds above supposed to require one hundred years to form an inch, are proved to have been formed much more rapidly, as there are stumps of trees three and four feet high in these beds, requiring a deposit of more than four feet in a century, or the stumps of any tree would have rotted by exposure.

Hence the geological argument that is going the rounds, that there was an age of birds and another of beasts before the creation of man, is disproved by the fact that man's bones are intermingled with the bones of these extinct species.

Again, while it is supposed that these drift-beds and peat-beds were ages in forming, facts come to the rescue; and "facts are adduced to prove that six thousand years is ample time for the accomplishment of all that has taken place since the creation of man."

Thus the Bible still stands the ordeal of geology, without the smell af fire. H. Pratt.

WORMS ON FRUIT TREES.—An experienced fruit-grower, who possesses a beautiful orchard near Niagara river, Western New York, has used one simple method with success. He takes lye from leached ashes, mixes a little grease with it, heats it quite warm, and with a syringe throws it up into all parts of the trees, branches and trunk. He says it will effectually kill all caterpillars, and all kinds of worms that are either infesting the tree in nests, or running over the bark.—Trees treated in this manner were exceedingly healthy, beautiful, vigorous in appearance, possessed a smooth, glossy bark, and bore the best apples of the country. The remedy is easy and cheap.

NOT WIDE OF THE MARK.—An old Scottish preacher is reported to have said, in one of his sermons at Aberdeen: "Ye people of Aberdeen get your fashions from Glasgow, and Glasgow from Edinburgh, and Edinburgh from London, and London from Paris, and Paris from the Devil."

PREVENTIVE FROM PITTING.

Bro. Grant:—Allow me to give your readers a preventive from pitting in small pox on the face. When the fever is at its height, and just before the eruption takes place, apply Croton oil to the breast, and rub thoroughly; have at the same time an ointment made of two ounces of lard, and twenty grains of tartar emetic; this thoroughly rubbed in, causes the eruption wholly to appear on that part, instead of the face; it also secures a full eruption, and prevents any inflammation from attacking the internal organs, and also produces less inclination to itch.

LUXURIES FOR THE POOR.

WHY WILL THEY DENY THEMSELVES OF THEM?

A good large tub, and two gallons or more of hot water, and plenty of soap, with which to wash the whole body well. If you have a cold, do it at bed-time. The best thing in the world for a cold. Another. Get all the sunlight you can, and all the fresh air.

HEALTH REFORM THE BASIS OF ALL REFORM.

Health reform reduces all reforms to one, since it underlies the whole perfection of man. A sanitary condition of things regulates the whole machinery of the universe. Men cannot breathe nor act without obeying or violating a law of nature. Hence no condition of things is right unless based on the laws of health. Humanity stands first, and above all other considerations. All arts and sciences should have reference to health, development, and the perfection of the human race, irrespective of sex, color, or country. Slavery, mental or physical, is incompatible with the perfect health of body and mind. All must be physically, morally, intellectually, religiously, and spiritually free, to have the power to conform to the laws of health in every department of nature. Cities, villages, and isolated dwellings, barns, stables, etc., must be constructed on sanitary con ditions, else they hinder, rather than assist, prosperity and happiness. Man's relation to air, water, food, rest, sleep, exercise, etc., must be scientifically adapted to his health, or he perishes prematurely.

Intemperance in no form can exist where health is the uppermost aim. Wickedness and debauchery, dens of infamy of every name and nature, cannot exist in the light of health reform. Passional excess, improper dress, filthy habits, impure air, water, food, and nuisances of all kinds, must cease through the progress of health reform. Church and State, and all falsehood and crime, would be reformed by observing the laws of health. Drugs, rum, tobacco, kingcraft, priestcraft, idleness, and meanness of all kinds, would pass away under health reform. Ignorance, superstition, and filth, would be superseded by intelligence, liberality, and cleanliness by health reform. All the rights of women, children, and men, would be vouchsafed under health reform, and the world would be redeemed from its follies and injustice. All legislation, teaching, manufacturing farming traveling, propagating in every department, etc., should have reference to health, long life, prosperity and happiness. Then truth would be sought before gold, and the happiness of every creature, before selfish aggrandizement at the expense of the misery of millions.

"If men cared less for wealth and fame,
  And less for battle-fields and glory;
If writ in human hearts a name
  Seemed better than in song and story;
If men, instead of nursing pride,
  Would learn to hate it and abhor it;
    If more relied
    On love to guide,
  The world would be the better for it."

DEFINITION OF HEALTH.

The word health has been defined in many ways, all of which definitions, however, mean about the same thing. Webster defines it to be, "soundness, wholeness in body, mind, and soul;" Dunglison, "A state in which all the functions are exerted with regularity and harmony." Dr. Burges, in a recent Royal Institution lecture, gives a new definition, to wit: "Being able to do a good day's work easily." This definition he regards as a simple one, easily comprehended, but elsewhere he gives a more complex one, as follows: "The greatest energy of each part compatible with the energy of the whole." Every one of these definitions, however, contemplate man only as an animal, or as a machine, and not as a creature of instinct, taste, likes and dislikes. A healthy man is one who can do a good day's work easily, and something more.

He is a man of energy.

His passions are easily kept under the dominion of reason and conscience.

His appetites choose what is best rather than what is harmful. A perfectly healthy man would not smoke, drink, or chew.

A healthy man is a happy man. He sleeps soundly, eats heartily, and digests his food easily.

A healthy man thinks, loves, hates, enjoys. Life to him is one round of sunshine.

A healthy man is moral, religious, brave, kind, thoughtful of others, thoughtful of himself and his instincts. In short, health has reference to every organ of the body and faculty of the mind, and where the functions are performed well and vigorously there is health; but where these are performed tamely or viciously there is disease. From this point of view, it will be seen, that the question of health is a broad one, and that few or none are so healthy but that they may be more so.—Herald of Health.

FAINT, YET PURSUING.

Bound for the better land,
Why should we slumber,
Or in the vineyard stand,
Only to cumber?
Sands of life are running fast,
Let us be doing;
Be like heroes of the past—
"Faint, yet pursuing."

Steep is the road we go,
Narrow and dreary;
Yet must we never grow
Sluggish nor weary.
We must war a warfare brave,
Strong foes subduing;
Battling to the open grave—
"Faint, yet pursuing."

What though we wander here,
Midst doubt and dangers?
Soon shall the shore appear
Where these are strangers;
Where the pilgrim's broken staff
Needs no renewing;
Wine for wormwood shall we quaff—
"Faint, yet pursuing."

Then for the better land
Let us be straining;
Stout hearts and ready hands,
Ground still are gaining.
Let us conquer; all the way
With trophies strewing;
What though we win the day—
"Faint, yet pursuing?"

For the World's Crisis.

A REPLY, ETC.

The following discourse was occasioned by a week's preaching by Rev. J. H. A. Ritzmiller, Lutheran minister of the Wellersburg charge, when and where he undertook to prove endless life in misery, and that those who hold that the wicked will be destroyed, not to live, preach false doctrine. B. K.

The object of the discourses last week had two points in view, viz.,

1. To prove endless life in misery for the wicked.

2. That some one should stand convicted of teaching error, or, be heterodox.

Whether the one or the other has been accomplished, each one of you has a right to decide after I am through.

The point of difference is about the final state of the wicked. That the final state of the wicked is endless life in misery, was undertaken to be proved last week. That it is death, and not life, is the point we undertake to prove this evening, which we base on

ROM. 6: 23.

"The wages of sin is death."

Words have meaning; at least the words "endless life in misery" were intended to have meaning, as well as the assertion that it would be possible for God to put the wicked into a fire and keep them there for ever without consuming them. We all know what these words mean, but in our present case it depends entirely on where they are found, for it is about what is in the Bible, or not, upon which the point at issue turns.

Between life and death a dying must take place; and between death and life a resurrection must take place. Keep this in mind, for this is incontrovertible, except we would contend that death is not real, which would be an absurdity. Now that there is no life after the second death, remains a settled fact until a resurrection from it will be proved, which must also be done before endless life in misery can be substantiated.

Several points have been brought to bear upon the subject, enough to stagger my belief if they had been found in the Bible. For, once it was said that the punishment of the wicked consists of endless life in misery. If the Bible would say so, I would believe it. But if the Bible had said, "The punishment of the wicked is endless life in misery," I suppose I should have found it, without some one else telling me; for I have read the Bible forty years, in order to know what it teaches. In it I find that he that lacketh wisdom shall ask of God, and that he will give liberally and upbraid not. I did so, and now I ask, Is it likely, or consistent with the promise, that God would lead me into heterodoxy, for which, immediately after death, I had to go into a furnace of fire?

You have heard it acknowledged that the doctrine that declares death the wages of sin, has started out from a Christian people. This is some consolation, for I am not so much afraid of a doctrine which christians, after praying to God for wisdom, find in the Bible, as I am of a doctrine first advocated by Plato, a heathen philosopher (as is the case with the doctrine of the immortality of the soul). See Bibliotheca Classica, by J. Lampriere.

To prove that sinners would be punished, it was said, "All governments have their transgressors punished." True. And they punish with a death from which there is no redemption. The greatest punishment that can be inflicted is, to take life from the transgressor. The Bible threatens death and destruction. See Ps. 37: 38; Isa. 1: 28; Rom. 6: 21, 23; 2 Thess. 1: 9. The barren fig-tree will be cut down at last, which will prove death and destruction to him. It was said, The wages of sin is death. So I say, and so the Bible says; but then, how to make endless life in misery out of it, is a point I can not see. The words "endless life in misery" are not found in the Bible. The word "endless" is found in 1 Tim. 1: 4, and Heb. 7: 16, and has no reference to punishment; and the word "misery" is found seven times, always applied to the time of probation.

But, again, it was asserted the wicked must live in misery. The Bible says, "The wicked shall be cut off"; "be as though they had not been"; "burned up root and branch"; "burned in fire like tares." Ps. 37: 22; Obd. 16; Mal. 3: 12; Matt. 13: 40. It was said: "The rich man in hell cannot get away from his place." Then I wonder how he is to appear at judgment; for we were also informed that the judgment would take place at the end of the world, when Christ comes, which is Bible doctrine. Again, if living in hell, then he has to come alive to his reward; but the Bible speaks of giving up the dead, not the living. Rev. 20: 13.

It was said: "All things are possible with God; therefore he can keep sinners forever in fire without consuming them." What does the Bible say? "They shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." "I will surely consume them, saith the Lord." "They that forsake the Lord shall be consumed." Ps. 37: 20; Jer. 8: 13; Isa. 1: 28. Isa. 5: 24 tells plainly how the wicked shall be consumed; viz., "As the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff." See 2 Thess. 2: 8; Heb. 10: 27.

Further, the conclusion was drawn that as the wicked are to be destroyed forever, therefore they must suffer endless misery. What is destruction? Let the Bible tell us. "Thou turnest man to destruction."—Ps. 90: 3. Here the first death destroys, until he as "the last enemy" is destroyed (1 Cor. 15: 26), and a resurrection from the dead takes place. After judgment, when in the seven vials as the seven last plagues, the wrath of God is filled up, a destruction is to follow by the second death. Rev. 15: 1; 18: 21; 20: 9, 14.

How long does the second death destroy? Like the first; until a resurrection shall take place. When is that? I know not, because the Bible tells us of none. This death to take life away is inflicted as punishment. How long will this punishment last? Until life, which was taken away as punishment, is restored. When is that? Never; and consequently the punishment, the check, the restraint, or lopping off, as the Greek term kolasin might be translated, which in Matt. 25: 46 is translated "punishment," must last forever.

I will now prove

(1.) That men must die. I think all agree that the statement (Eccl. 9: 5) is true, that "the living know that they must die."

(2.) I will prove that death is the opposite of life. Whilst we live we have knowledge (Eccl. 5: 9); but dead we have none.

(3.) I will show that a time comes when the dead shall have life and knowledge again. I will raise them in "the last day." Hence this life and knowledge is through a resurrection from the dead of the just and the unjust. Acts 24: 15; John 5: 29.

(4.) I will prove a judgment. Acts 17: 31; 2 Cor. 5: 10.

(5.) I will prove a reward to unbelievers. "He that believeth not shall be damned," and not see life. Matt. 16: 16; John 3: 36.

(6.) I will show that this reward results in the second death, the consequences of the destruction threatened to the wicked. The end of sin is death, saith Paul. Now the first death is not the end of sin, for after death comes the judgment. Heb. 9: 27. "The fearful . . . shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone"; and what is this? Is it endless life in misery? No; at least the Bible does not say so, but says, "This is the second death." Now prove resurrection from this second death unto life, and then, but not until then, talk more about endless life in misery,—words found only outside of the Bible.

Now if it were necessary, I would prove that there is no resurrection from the second death, for the Bible surely is not so inconsistent, as to say in one place that the righteous shall rise, and in another that they should not rise. Observe Isaiah speaks about the wicked and their destruction (14: 5–18). Then thus destroyed, as the punishment for their iniquity (vers. 14: 21), is declared by the Lord a death after which there is no resurrection. Here, then, is a death, a decease, life departed, or cut off, proved by the Bible, if Bible proof will satisfy us. Now apply it to what you will. If you apply it to the natural death of the wicked, it says, "They shall not rise"; and what will you do with the resurrection unto condemnation? John 5: 29. If you apply it unto the death of the righteous, then what would you do with the resurrection unto life? John 5: 29. If, in order to get out of the difficulty, you should apply it to spiritual death, I would ask, What would you do with this passage—"Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shall give thee light"? Eph. 5: 14.

But now apply it to the second death,—the only case to which it does apply,—and the words, as clear as the Bible can make them, will stare you in the face, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise"; and where is endless life in misery? I ask, Where? "There are the workers of iniquity fallen; they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise," says David. Ps. 36: 12.

Here we must leave the wicked, under the power of the second death, deceased, not to rise; and even Dr. Bartlett cannot contradict it with the Bible, because the Bible does not contradict itself.

By searching a little further, we find the reason given why the Lord will thus deal with the wicked; viz., "to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." Mark the expression, "The inhabitants of the earth." Now turn to Revelation, the sixth chapter, and see Christ coming conquering, and to conquer death, "the last enemy which is to be destroyed" (1 Cor. 15: 26); then, according to 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17,—the dead in Christ raised, and the living christians changed,—then (Rev. 6: 8) see the balance of the wicked, yet living on earth, cut off by death and gathered up by hell, or hades, the state of the dead, following death. Then in Rev. 7 we have besides the 144,000, which represent the Jews according to their twelve tribes—a great number before the throne of God.

At this time, hell—the state of the dead, has the wicked yet in its silent embrace, until (Rev. 8: 5) the silence of death will be broken by voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and earthquakes, at which the wicked will be raised, because there is a resurrection of the unjust as well as of the just. This is the resurrection unto damnation; hence the voice of the angel crying, "Wo, wo, wo, to the inhabitants of the earth." Rev. 8: 13. Now trace this punishment of the inhabitants of the earth until the wrath of God is filled up in the last plagues (see Rev. 15: 1), and the declaration made, "It is done," which dissolves itself in the second death.

What is the state of the wicken now? Let the Bible answer. "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." Isa. 26: 14. Thus we find (1.) Unrighteousness in the wicked. (2.) That they shall be devoured by fire; consequently, as Paul declares (Rom. 6: 21) the fruit of sin to be shame, and the end thereof death; and hence (3.) find them dead—not to live any more, because, therefore, they are destroyed and their memory perished; and then at the end declared, that all this shall be "the punishment for their iniquity."

This plain declaration of the Lord should forever settle the question, whether the punishment of the wicked is endless life in misery, or destruction and death from which there is no redemption.

As the Lord speaks of a certain class of deceased beings in such plain language, and says "they are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise," and says, "this is because they are destroyed," I cannot see how any one can make out that destruction does not mean really destroyed. A few more questions on this point:

1. When the wicked are devoured, or burned up, not leaving them root nor branch, and consumed into smoke, as the Bible declares, are they then living in endless misery?

2. When the Lord declares concerning the wicked, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise," are they then in a state in which they can not die?

3. When they are destroyed, and their memory perished, are they still indestructible, in a state of sin and suffering?

In John 3: 36, we read that the unbeliever "shall not see life"; and in John 8: 51, we read that the believer "shall not see death." Now make the contrast, and see whether it is not plain that the two passages speak of the final state of all men, and then see whether it is life in happiness in one case, and life in misery in the other; although the Bible says it is life in one case, and death in the other, precisely what the Lord has laid before men, after they had forfeited their right to immortality. See Deut. 30; 15, 19.

Of course we could prove endless life in misery, by changing some passages of Scripture, and thus settle the question in a hurry. For instance, read in Rom. 6: 23: For the wages of sin is eternal life in misery, and you have it in this one place; but still keep in mind that the Bible has it, "For the wages of sin is death." Then in 2 Thess. 1: 9 we could change it and read: Who shall be punished with everlasting life in misery, and it would not make the sentence any longer; however, if we do not change it, it reads—"Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction." But I am afraid this would make too much changing. To convert a sinner, the Bible says, is to "save a soul from death," not from endless life in misery.

Now let us read Jas. 1: 15,—"Then when lust has conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Why, then, does the apostle not say, When sin is finished, it bringeth forth endless life in misery? I have a question to ask here, that any one has the privilege of answering, after I am done. It is this. Why did the apostles not say what they meant, if they meant what they did not say?

In one of the discourses last week, in order to prove that those in the Bible termed dead are still in being, a figure was used, and we were told, that two trees may stand side by side, one a live or green tree, the other a dead one, but both are in being, or existence. However, I knew that too, and it is correct. But now pull up a tree by its roots, put it into the fire, burn it up, until it is consumed away, leaving it "neither root nor branch" (which is what the Bible says of the wicked); and then make it plain to me that that tree is in being or existence, as well as the tree which is alive; for that I honestly confess is a thing that I cannot understand. The terms "burned up," "consumed," "destroyed," "devoured," are figures used in the Bible in regard to the final state of the wicked. Are they figures of life in misery? or of death and destruction?

I know that destruction named is not destruction completed. Destruction may be figurative, imaginary, real, or completed. To describe destruction completed, I will also take a case in present life, as that of the two trees. There was a little bird that used to come in front of our kitchen door and pick up all the little crumbs it could find, and ate them. One day a cat bounced upon the bird and devoured it, and it never came afterwards. Now the bird is dead, for the cat was seen eating it up. How did the bird die? Why, he was destroyed. How was he destroyed? The cat devoured it. Now the question comes up, Where is the bird? He is put out of being, or existence, as a bird. Now does not this prove that destruction can put out of being, like those of whom it is said (Obad. 16), "And they shall be as though they had not been"?

But it may be said, Is not that preaching annihilation? If any one thinks so, what of it? But I have not used the word annihilation, but the plain words which the Bible uses to describe the final state of the wicked. But if annihilation of the wicked is such a dreadful thing, after all, I would ask in all candor, Why did Dr. Luther, in his translation, make the German Bible teach annihilation, extermination, and obliteration of the wicked, in using the words zu nicht machen oder vernichten, ausgetulyt, and ausgewttch, as in Isa. 26: 14; 13: 9; Ps. 9: 6; 37: 38; and a number of other places?

Thus, destruction by the second death is the final doom of the wicked (and the very same thing in substance was preached unto us last week); and this brings them into a state void of light and knowledge, until they are raised into a new life, which nothing but the infinite power of God can do, but never said that he would, but declared (Isa. 26: 14), "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise."

The rich man and Lazarus deserve another notice here, as this portion of Scripture is often taken to be so plain to teach endless life in misery, commencing immediately after death. Suppose I admit, or even take it for granted, that this passage does teach endless life in misery, commencing immediately after death; then I ask, What shall I make out of Matt. 16: 27; Rev. 22: 12; and Luke 14: 14? for I cannot make them harmonize with the idea of immediate reward after death. Of course I could remedy the case by making some changes, reading in Matt. 16: 27, "The Son of man shall come"—but immediately after death all were rewarded according to their works. You see this way it would harmonize. But it reads, "And then," that is, when I come, I will reward. Rev. 22: 12 I could change to read, "Behold, I come"—after I had sent my reward thousands of years ahead. This would harmonize with the doctrine of immediate reward after death (or do we pretend to say that to live in Abraham's bosom, or in the torments of hell, for at least two thousand years, is no reward); but the way the above passage stands in the Bible it reads, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me." He brings it with him.

The passage in Lk. 14: 14 we could easily change to make it harmonize with the case of the rich man and Lazarus, in this way: "Ye shall be recompensed," or rewarded, as soon as you die. It won't harmonize, as it reads in the Bible. There it stands: "Ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Another passage must be changed to harmonize with the passage under consideration. Rev. 20: 13 must be made to read: And hell shall give up the living that are therein, instead of reading, "And hell delivered up the dead."

Now do we not see that all we can get to prove immediate reward after death, and endless life in misery, from the rich man we must get by inference, for the wicked are not mentioned; and a number of other passages prove the inference wrong, for we showed that without changing them they teach a different doctrine. Thus I think it can easily be seen that the case of the rich man and Lazarus is ideal, or imaginary, and not real.

In ideas we can (and that is what the Jews had done) make two men of one; but, I ask, can we do it in reality? Can we in reality of one man make two, with all the parts and members of a human body, and have him as the same man in one place, and at the same time also in some other place? Now let us look at the case before us in this way: Here is the rich man, including all that he ever was as a man. But, again, here is the rich man in hell. Who is in hell? Why, the rich man, in all his parts; at least with eyes and tongue, and organs of speech, and desires for the welfare of his brethren, not dead like himself. Now if we take this to be real, we must prove at least the two following passages to be wrong; viz., that "the dead know not anything" (Eccl. 9: 5), and that "hell delivered up the dead which were in it." David's declaration must also be false, that in the very day in which the breath of man goeth forth, or leaves the body, "his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4.

But I think we had better take the plain Scripture, and not build too much on the ideal. With Lutherans we get along better, because we have him represented as only one. Lazarus died, and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. But, then, here comes in the difficulty. No burial of Lazarus took place. It is contended that, as yet, only the soul is in heaven, and the body in the grave. From the above we draw the conclusion, that if the case of the rich man and Lazarus is real, then the Bible contradicts itself, and hence it must be ideal, and all comes right.

Again (Phil. 1: 23), where Paul expressed his desire to be with Christ, and similar passages, were commented on, to show that Paul had expected to be with Christ immediately after death. I ask, Does Paul's own statement (2 Tim. 4: 7, 8) agree with the above statement? He says, "I have fought a good fight." Did he say to the Colossians, I go immediately after death to Christ; but you must wait until Christ your life appears? Did he expect salvation for himself before Christ would appear "unto them that look for him . . . unto salvation"? Heb. 9: 28.

There is another passage that deserves our notice. Let us look at Heb. 9: 43, and let Isaiah (66: 24) explain it. Suppose we take it for granted that Mark 9: 43 teaches endless life in misery (for this is taken as the stronghold of that doctrine). But it does not say that any one shall live where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched; does it? Well, but that is taken for granted, that men, cast into hell where the fire is not quenched, must live. This looks very plausible, and you might all be satisfied with it, for it agrees precisely with what we heard last week.

But there are some difficulties in the way, too, and it would also require some changes to make it harmonize with other portions of the Bible, because in Isa. 66: 24 we read of carcasses of men to be where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. This, of course, we would have to change, and make it read, "They shall go forth and look upon the living men, or the immortal souls, where their worm dieth not. But as it stands in God's holy word, "And they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of men that have transgressed against me." This is plain Bible language, and explains Mark 9: 43, which teaches that by obedience or faith we save life, and by disobedience or unbelief we lose it, and when lost go to destruction, of which fire and worms are the very strongest figures. Thus you see, the Bible decides the question whether these bodies cast into hell, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched, are alive or not, and it declares them to be carcasses of men that have transgressed against the Lord. Of such transgressors David says, "There are the workers of iniquity fallen; they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise." Ps. 36: 12. The term "hell" in this passage is gehenna, the valley of Hinnom, near Jerusalem; and not hades, as in a number of other passages.

Is there no punishment then for the wicked? Yes, all that God ever has threatened in the Bible will come upon them, after they are raised to condemnation, whilst they live under the three Apocalyptic woes, the three trumpets, and seven vials, in which the wrath of God is declared to be filled up; when they, the wicked, in a mighty overthrow shall fall by the second death, as an everlasting destruction for which there is no remedy any more; for they are now where the Lord declared that all who are destroyed for their iniquity shall be when he says, "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise." Rev. 18: 21; Isa. 26: 14.

Here the Bible puts them, and here we are bound to leave them,—dead, not to live; and deceased, not to rise; destroyed for their iniquity, and their memory perished. Isa. 26: 14. Then, as the Lord says (Deut. 30: 19), "Behold, I set before you life and death." Let us be careful to choose life, that we may live. B. KNEPPER.

OUR HOME.

Not far distant is our home.

We have been journeying a long, long, weary way, and the end seemed very far in the future; but now, by many indications, we know that the journey is almost ended; that the weary feet will soon enter the "Gates wide open," and we shall take possession of our beloved city; and it is all ours, for our Father told us that he had been preparing it for our reception, and said we all should have mansions there.

I wonder what mine will be, a turreted castle or a dear little cot; but it matters not what the style of architecture will be, and probably our ideas and conceptions of the same are infinitely small and meager in comparison to the grandeur of the reality. We only know that the mansions will be fair, all radiant with dazzling gems, and filled with the glory of God, and we cannot but believe that objects of beauty and adornment will surround us in abundant profusion. Beautiful flowers and fruit, beautiful light, delicious perfumes, and graceful creatures of God's re-construction that have made man happy; instruments of heavenly manufacture filled with divine harmonies; music from voice of bird and man, from God and angel. All will be ours to enjoy,—when we get home.

The talents that here have been warped and crushed by circumstances will spring forth with divine energy, and we shall grow to be what God designed us to be, i.e., perfect men and women. There we shall work and never weary; hearts will never faint, eyes never grow dim, tears never fall, loved ones never part, death shall never enter this our home.

Our way has been through the darkness and mist of years; and as we look back through the long vista, we shudder, and our hearts are pained to see how many times we have well nigh given up. Satan, at times, has lured us into by and forbidden paths, we have sinned and then we have been punished, and by our chastisement we have been humbled, and flying, we have retraced our steps to the narrow, rugged way, and again commenced our journey with humbled, saddened hearts. The sun would again shine upon us, showing that the Father still loved us; then we would take courage, and think we never should fall again; but human nature was weak—oh, so weak—and before we knew it we had fallen, and the same old steps had to be taken again before we could gain the light.

The feet have grown weary, the heart faint, and we have longed to go home where we could rest. Will our Father forgive, and take us again to his love? Will he be merciful, and may we hope that he will save us? Through our blinding tears, we look up and see the hand, the "Guiding Hand" of our lives, and 'tis pointing to a lovely vision, but our tears dim the sight.

What is it? We dash away our tears, and lo! we behold our home just yonder; it is a glorious sight. We know that it is worth a few more struggles, and, taking courage, we bravely take up our cross and follow on with renewed strength; and God grant that we nevermore may falter till at the portals of our Home. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT.

78. Satan entered into Judas while at the supper.—"And after the sop Satan entered him."—John 13: 27.

Satan entered into him before the supper.—"Then entered Satan into Judas, . . . and he went his way and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him. . . . Then came the day of unleavened bread when the passover must be killed."—Luke 22: 3, 4, 7.

We are weary of correcting propositions which are so transparent as to need no solution. From the above it is evident that Satan entered into Judas twice. Once when he consented to betray his Lord for money, and again "after the supper," to strengthen him in his purpose to deliver up his master to those who thirsted for his blood.

79. Judas committed suicide by hanging.—"And he cast down the pieces of silver into the temple, and departed, and went out and hanged himself."—Matt. 27: 5.

Judas did not hang himself, but died another way.—"And falling headlong he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out."—Acts 1: 18.

It is written in Matt. 27: 5 that Judas went and hanged himself. Luke in Acts 1: 18 relates these circumstances only which followed after he had hanged himself; viz: that "falling headlong" (perhaps by the rope breaking, or that to which he had fastened it giving way), "he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out." There is no knowing how long (perhaps weeks, or even months) he might have remained suspended (for it is probable that he hung himself in some unfrequented part of the neighboring woods), even until decomposition of his body had far advanced, and then falling from a very low height indeed would be quite sufficient to cause a rupture or bursting of the parietes of the abdomen, and the consequent gushing out of his intestines or bowels.

80. The potter's field was purchased by Judas.—"Now, this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity."—Acts 1: 19.

The potter's field was purchased by the chief priests.—"And the chief priests took the silver pieces . . . and bought with them the potter's field."—Matt. 27: 6, 7.

"Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity." Upon examination we find that this text, and also the one recorded in Matthew are literally true, for the reward of iniquity (i. e. of Judas' iniquity) bought the potter's field; consequently it was Judas, who, by his iniquity in betraying his Lord and master, actually bought this property, although it was the priests who handed over the money for the field to its owners; they were the agents, he was the principal. As it may be said of any rich man, he purchased such a piece of ground, although he may never have seen either the land nor its owners, yet it may be truthfully said of him, that he bought the property, if it was done with his money, while another person in speaking of the same transaction could also say with truth, that the land was purchased by the agent who transacted the business.

81. But one woman came to the sepulchre.—"The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene, early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre."—John 20: 1.

Two women came to the sepulchre.—"In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to the sepulchre."—Matt. 28: 1.

John simply mentions Mary Magdelene as coming early unto the sepulchre; he does not say that she came alone, (as he would be obliged to do in order to sustain the skeptic's position.) There might have been other women with her, without invalidating in the least John's statement that she came.

Matthew corroborates John's testimony that Mary Magdalene came to the sepulchre, and adds that the other Mary was with her. Hence, instead of contradicting John, he bears witness that his record is true.

RULES FOR CHURCH MEMBERS.

1. To remember that we are all subject to failings and infirmities of one kind or another.

2. To bear with, and not magnify each others' infirmities.

3. To pray for one another in our social meeting, and particularly in private.

4. Always to turn a deaf ear to any slanderous report, and to lay no charge brought against any person till well founded.

5. If a member be in fault, to tell him of it in private before it is mentioned to others.

6. To watch against a shyness of each other, and put the best construction on any action that has the appearance of opposition or resentment.

7. To observe the just rule of Solomon, that is to leave off contention before it is meddled with. Prov. 17: 14.

8. If a member has offended to consider how glorious, how God-like it is to forgive, and how unlike a christian it is to revenge. Eph. 4: 2.

9. Remember that it is always a grand artifice of the devil to promote distance and animosity among members of churches, and we should therefore watch against everything that furthers this end.

10. To consider how much more good we can do in the world at large, when we are united in love, than we should do when acting alone, and indulging a contrary spirit.

11. Lastly, to consider the express injunction of Scripture and the beautiful example of Christ as to these important things.

12. Above all, remember to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and thy neighbor as thyself.—Christian Observer.

ON THE NEW TESTAMENT.

"The credibility of the New Testament Scriptures is established not alone by external evidence, but by internal marks of truth—by those peculiarities which distinguish the Christian revelation, alike from natural religion and all pretended revelations. Some few of these internal evidences, derived from the characteristics of the Scriptures themselves, may be thus summed up:

"I. Not one of the books of the New Testament is ascribed to Jesus himself; had there been any forgery, the forged books, or at least the principal of them, would naturally have been put forth as written by the very founder of the new religion, laying down the principles and precepts of that religion, and answering to the books of the law written by Moses.

"II. The omission of the title of Christians, as applied by the earliest Christians to themselves, proving the antiquity of the books. The term, which was manifestly of Roman origin, occurs but three times in the New Testament; and in each case, manifestly, as employed by those who were not Christians. This fact, (however it may be accounted for, or whether we can account for it at all or not,) is one that would alone be a sufficient disapproval of the notion of some daring speculators, that the New Testament writings were composed in the second, third, or fourth century, from some vague floating traditions, and then fathered upon the apostles and evangelists by fraud, carelessness, and ignorance. Had this been the case, the title of 'Christians,' which was then in as common use as it is now, would undoubtedly have been found in the books of the New Testament, in its present application by Christians to each other. This omission then alone furnishes, even to a plain unlearned reader, a complete proof of their antiquity. And the anxiety of infidels to disprove that antiquity, shows plainly how they despair of contending in any other way against their truth. Such books could never possibly, if false, have been circulated without detection, at the very time when the wonderful events related in them are described as occurring.

"III. The character of Jesus himself, as drawn by the Evangelists. It is quite unlike all that had ever before appeared, or been described or imagined; and the picture is evidently an unstudied one. There is nothing in it of the nature of eulogium and panegyric.

"IV. The brief, calm, unadorned style, in which the miracles and sufferings of Jesus and his apostles are narrated; and the candid and frank simplicity with which the weakness and faults of the disciples are described.

"V. The clear revelation of a future state, and the promise of eternal life through the resurrection of the body.

"VI. The different nature of that kingdom of heaven, proclaimed by our Lord and his apostles, from that glorious worldly empire which the Jews expected; and the total absence of all attempt to accommodate the doctrines to the prejudices, or to flatter the pride of the Jews, by holding out hopes of national or spiritual supremacy.

"VII. The absolute requisition of a morality stricter and superior in kind to any hitherto practised, or even approved; and by this opposition, not merely to men's natural inclinations, but also in some points to their ideas of what is praiseworthy, proving the utter incredulity of mere ordinary human beings contriving a religion which condemns not only men's conduct but their principles.

"VIII. The mode by which that morality is inculcated, so peculiar, 1st, in the motives supplied; 2d, in the examples proposed; 3d, in the precepts delivered.

"IX. The ommission, not merely, but the exclusion, of any sacrifice save that offered up by the founder of the religion in his own person; of any sacrificing priest (Hiereus or Sacerdos) except Him, the great and true High Priest, and consequently the exclusion of any priest, in that sense on earth; except so far as every one of the worshipers was required to present himself as a living sacrifice holy, acceptable unto God; and the exclusion of any temple except the collected congregation of the worshipers themselves. When it is remembered that the gospel religion was introduced by men among men, whether Jews or Pagans, that had never heard of, or conceived such a thing as a religion without priest, sacrifice, altar or temple, is it credible that Christianity should have been without them, if it had been invented by men?

"X. The practical character of the revelation, and the careful avoidance of all that could serve mere speculative knowledge or the gratification of curiosity, however natural or excusable, the ministering to which is a marked characteristic of all other religious systems.

"These characteristics, and many others that might be pointed out, would be very remarkable if met with in any one book; but it is still more so when it is considered that they run through all the books of the New Testament, which are no less than twenty-seven distinct compositions, of several different kinds, written apparently at considerable intervals of time from each other, and which have come down to us as the works of no less than eight different authors. Infidels may reasonably be called upon to explain how, if Christianity be the invention of man, the Christian Scriptures the production of uninspired men, it comes to pass that they differ so materially from all other religions invented by man, and all pretended revelations put forward by man. And when they ask, is it likely that Christianity came from God? they may be fairly met with the question, Is it likely that Christianity came from man? And the latter is much the fairer and more rational kind of inquiry; because we are much better able to judge what might reasonably be expected from man, than to argue that it did not come from God because it seems to us not such in all respects as the Deity would be likely to deliver us."—Archbishop Whately.

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

Money Orders.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us your NAME and POST OFFICE ADDRESS. AG'T.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

Since the adoption of our present system of mailing the Crisis, we do not, as formerly, send out bills of indebtedness to those of our subscribers in arrears; as with our present arrangement, every subscriber has his or her name, with the date of the month and year to which they have paid, printed on a yellow slip of paper, which is attached to each Crisis—either on the margin of the same, or on the outside wrapper.

Now there are a large number of subscribers who have failed, or neglected, to keep their subscriptions paid up as they should. We earnestly request all to examine the yellow slips, and see just how their account stands, and then remit to the office accordingly as soon as they can. AG'T.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We cannot discontinue or send your orders, unless you give us the POST OFFICE and STATE in PLAIN LETTERS.

P. A. SMITH—The money was received and the books sent.

DR. McLEOD—Your money was received. The date is 8 Dec. '69.

MRS. S. BASSETT—Your account stands now 18 Nov. '69. Let us know how much you have sent that has not been credited by the date being changed.

LEWIS BEAN—Yes.

BRO. J. W. TAYLOR—We are not able to give any new light on the subject named. It is to be supposed that the Lord has given us as clear light in the language used as we can get from any source.

Thanks to SR. ACKERMAN for the gems selected.

DISCUSSIONS.

Monday evening, Nov. 1st, we began a discussion with Prof. Lummis, in Natic, Mass., to be continued several evenings. Subject, Future Punishment. Nov. 8th, we are to begin a discussion with Eld. M. E. Cornell, at Library Hall, Chelsea, Mass., to be continued four evenings. Subject for debate:—"Resolved, That the seventh-day Sabbath is binding only on the Jews, and their servants, after they came out of Egyptian bondage."

END OF THE WICKED.

"What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?"—1 PET. 4: 17.

(1) Will the wicked be punished? (2) Where will they be punished? (3) When will they be punished? (4) How will they be punished?

To the first inquiry, there is but one answer. All admit they will be punished in this life or the one to come. On this point the Scriptures are very plain. "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished." Prov. 11: 21.

In answer to the second inquiry, the Bible very clearly states that they will be punished upon the earth, and mentions no other place. "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; much more the wicked and the sinner." Prov. 11: 31.

The answer to the third question is very plainly given in the sacred oracles, which uniformly state that the punishment of the wicked is not till after the judgment, consequently the unrighteous who have died are not now receiving their punishment. Says the apostle Peter:—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." It does not look reasonable that men should be punished before they are judged. The judgment will not take place till the second coming of Christ. Says Paul:—"I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1. Again it is said:—"It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment. Heb. 9: 27. This point may be considered settled by the harmonious teaching of the Scriptures.

The next inquiry is, How will the wicked be punished? There are four views in relation to punishment. (1.) That wicked men receive all their punishment in this life. (2.) That they are punished for awhile in the world to come, and then restored to the favor of God. This is known as "the doctrine of restoration." (3.) Others believe that the wicked will be punished with eternal torment. (4.) There are others who reject these three views as unscriptural, and hold that the Bible teaches that the finally impenitent will be destroyed, and cease to exist as conscious, suffering beings.

Those who hold that the punishment is all in this life, claim that it consists in remorse of conscience; yet the Bible does not advance any such doctrine. But if this were true, then the punishment would be inversely as the crime; for the most wicked have the least remorse of conscience for their crimes. After Mr. Hicks had murdered all on board the sloop E. A. Johnson, he said in his confession: "I had too often dyed my murderous hands in blood in days gone by, to feel the slightest compunctions or qualms of conscience then . . . I did not feel the slightest regret for what I had done." While the christian man, who may have spoken some hasty word, or allowed an evil thought in his mind, may be stung with deep remorse for half the night; Mr. Hicks, after murdering a whole ship's crew, lay down, as he said: "and slept as soundly as ever I slept in my life," having not "the slightest compunctions or qualms of conscience." The Bible does not intimate that conscience is the punisher in this life, or in the one to come.

(2.) In relation to the second view, the doctrine of restoration, it may be said that the whole Scripture stands opposed; hence it cannot be a Bible doctrine.

The inquiry now comes, Will the wicked be tormented eternally, or will they die and cease to exist as conscious beings? In Ps. 145: 20, it is said: "The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy." Mr. Webster defines destruction as follows:—"Destruction consists in the annihilation of the form of any thing; that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." In Gen. 6: 7 we read: "And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created, from the face of the earth." In Gen. 7: 23, we read:—"And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man and cattle, and the creeping things, . . . and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark." Would it be correct to say after their destruction, that they were still alive? Only those in the ark were alive. The apostle Paul says, those who "obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, . . . shall be punished with everlasting destruction." 2 Thess 1: 8, 9. Says Jesus:—"Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction." Matt. 7: 13. When speaking of the punishment of the wicked, the Psalmist says:—"The wicked . . . shall be destroyed for ever." Ps. 92: 7. The Hebrew word gad, here rendered "for ever," is defined by Gesenius as follows:—"perpetual time, eternity." Parkhurst defines it: "Time onward, futurity, eternity to come." The word "eternity" occurs but once in the Bible, and is then translated from the same Hebrew word, as follows:—"Thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity." Isa. 57: 15. As the wicked are to be destroyed for eternity, it follows that the doctrine of restoration cannot be true.

The punishment of the wicked will be eternal. It will continue as long as the eternal life of the righteous. In what will that punishment consist? Not in eternal life in torment, but in eternal destruction—death. Says the prophet David: "Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more." Ps. 104: 35. Says Jesus:—"Fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Matt. 10: 28. When speaking of Christ, John the Baptist says:—"He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Matt. 3: 12. If the fire is "unquenchable," it must of necessity burn up all combustible things that are brought within its reach. The Temple at Jerusalem was burnt up with an unquenchable fire. The prophet Jeremiah was instructed by the Lord to say to the Jews:—"If ye will not hearken unto me, . . . then will I kindle a fire in the . . . palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched." Jer. 17: 27. This was accomplished in A. D. 70, when Titus burnt Jerusalem. The fire is not burning now, and yet it was unquenchable. Bloomfield remarks: "The pur asbeston—[unquenchable fire]—completes the awful image of TOTAL DESTRUCTION." Wetstein says: "The pur asbeston denotes such a fire as cannot be extinguished before it has consumed and destroyed all." Libanius, an eloquent writer of the fourth century, when speaking of the burning of ancient Troy, and the result, says:—"It lies an example of the calamity of an eternal fire." It is not burning now. If a house takes fire, and it is said to be unquenchable, no one would understand by the remark that the building would burn eternally, and not be consumed at all.

The Scriptures affirm as follows: "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6: 23. Death is the end of dying. The word rendered death is thanatos, and is defined, "extinction of life." Eternal life is the highest possible reward, and the loss of it, or eternal death, is the highest possible punishment. The sinner loses all that the christian gains. The love, mercy and justice of God all unite in the destruction of the wicked. Justice requires the death of the sinner; love and mercy plead for his destruction in order that his agony may be ended. If we should find a group of men in some foreign land tormenting a man in their midst, and learn that they had been doing it for several days, we should say at once, They are heathen; for no civilized people would be so cruel. It should be remembered that Jesus said: "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father is also merciful." John 6: 36. It is thought that the most wicked heathen man would not desire to keep his worst enemy in torment more than a year before he would be willing to let him die, and end his sufferings.

The Scriptures inform us that Sodom and Gomorrha are set forth as "a ensample unto those that after should live ungodly." 2 Pet. 2: 6. The people of Sodom were destroyed by fire and brimstone. The fire is not burning now; neither are the Sodomites now writhing in the flames that burnt them up. The last mention of punishment in the Bible is in Rev. 21: 8, where we are told that the wicked are cast into the "lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." This is the death which is "the wages of sin." From this "second death" there is no resurrection; hence it is eternal death, or eternal punishment with death. Says the apostle James: "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." James 1: 15. If men will not repent and thus have their sins forgiven, there is but one way left to end sin, and that is, to end the sinner. Why should God immortalize the sinner, and thus perpetuate sin eternally?

The gift of eternal life is only to the righteous. The sinner must die "the second death," and, as the prophet Obadiah says, "be as though they had not been." Oba. 16. The strongest terms in the English, Greek, and Hebrew languages, which are used to express the utter destruction of things, are employed to represent the fact that the time will come when "the wicked shall not be." Ps. 37: 10;) when sin will be "finished" (James 1: 15;) when there will not be a sinner living in the whole universe; but the time will have come, as seen in vision by John the Revelator, when "every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them," will say, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever." Rev. 5: 13. When that song is sung the wicked are "no more." Admitting that they are to be destroyed, how could it be more plainly expressed than it is now; and if the Lord does not mean what he says, who can guess what he does mean?

The doctrine of eternal torment is calculated to make infidels, and lead men to hate God, as a cruel tyrant; while, on the other hand, the correct view of future punishment produces a salutary and effective alarm, leads men to repentance, and produces an increased love for God in the hearts of his children.

EUROPEAN CONFEDERATION.

Those best informtd tell us there is a very decided movement among the common people in the different nations of Europe in favor of one grand confederation, under Napoleon III., as the embodiment of the principles which they wish to establish. He is a well-known Spiritualist.

An "International Peace Congress" has just been held in Switzerland for the purpose of taking steps to form a grand confederation. The following is the announcement of the congress:—

"1. That the only way of founding peace in Europe is in the formation of a federation of nations, under the name of the 'United States of Europe.' 2. That the government of that nation is to be republican and federative; that is to say, to repose on the principle of the people's sovereignty, and to respect the autonomy and independence of each of the members of the federation. 3. That the constitution of that government must be perfectible. 4. That the European federation is to guarantee to each of the nations of which it will be comprised, sovereignty and autonomy; individual liberty; the freedom of suffrage; the liberty of the press; the liberty of meeting and of association; the liberty of conscience; the liberty of work without exploitation; the efficient and individual responsibility of all the executive functionaries. 5. No nation to enter the European confederation if not in the full enjoyment of universal suffrage; of the right of granting of refusing taxation; of the right to conclude or ratify political alliances and treaties of commerce; of the right of improving itself its constitution."

DELEGATES.—At a meeting of the churches in Canada, P. Q., the following Brn. were chosen to attend the National Conference at Rochester:—C. P. Dow, Stanbridge; substitute, T. Buckingham, Montreal. D. Lawson, Quebec; substitute, —— Davidson. John Daniels, Danville; substitute, John Wilson, Montreal.

A GOOD RESOLUTION.—At a meeting of the Christian Association in Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 7th, 1869, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That in the judgment of this convention, females should be admitted as active members of Christian associations, to take their full share of duties and responsibilities."

This is a step in the right direction.

PHYSICAL LUXURY.—Those who have not tried it, are not aware of the luxury afforded in a Turkish Bath. We were glad to find one established in Chicago, by Dr. Gleason, 32 Washington Street. The effect of the bath is very pleasant and profitable. It is excellent for colds and rheumatic difficulties.

THE WAY WE DO.

BRO. GRANT:—I was much interested in your article on health, which was published in the Crisis of Sept. 1st, and would like to adopt your system of living, if I could carry it out; but I am away from home most of the time, and can very seldom get your articles of food. Now as you probably meet with the same difficulty in traveling, and have learned how to obviate the trouble, if you will inform me how you manage, I shall be very much obliged. Fraternally yours,

C. H. WILLIAMS.

Dear Bro. Williams:—It will afford us pleasure to answer your inquiries, as we have very little trouble in securing our hygienic diet for every meal in the year. We have already traveled between twelve and thirteen thousand miles this year, and have had our special food every meal, and at the regular hour, especially when traveling. We have not eaten a meal for several years without having the unleavened Graham bread, or "gems," as they are often called.

We will now tell you how we "manage." Suppose we are to start from Boston to Chicago. We first inquire how many meals will be required; when that is ascertained, we know just how much food we shall need. If we are to be three days on the way, we shall need one dozen "gems," or unleavened cakes, as we eat two at a meal. We have the one dozen made, or a dozen and a half, in case we should be delayed; and also to have some for the first day after our arrival, so that we can have time to make arrangements to prepare more before they are gone. We carry with us one dozen tin cups, that hold just a gill apiece, shaped some like a small tea-cup; that is, considerably larger at the top than the bottom, so that the cakes will come out easily when baked. These are put together like a tin pail without sodder, in order that they may endure the heat of a very hot oven. They set into each other and take up but little room in the traveling bag.

After our arrival at the end of our journey, we look out for some Graham meal. If we were going where it could not be found, we would carry some with us; but such places are not common at the present time. Eight ounces of meal is an abundance for a day. So that if we were to stay four days, we would get two pounds of Graham meal, and as much more as would be necessary to make bread sufficient to take us to the next stopping place. We usually prepare the bread, as it is a very simple thing to make. It will not take over five minutes to grease the tins with a little butter, or suet, wet up the bread, and put it in the oven. The process is as follows:—Take sufficient meal for the dozen "gems," wet it with cold water, about thin enough for griddle cakes, then fill the cups and bake thoroughly in a hot oven.

It is said by eminent physicians, that there is no other article of diet that will sustain life so long as these "gems," or on which a man can perform so much mental and physical labor without being tired or hungry. Our experience fully corroborates this statement. Thus far for the bread.

Next in importance is the oatmeal mush, porridge, or pudding. The oatmeal is now for sale in most towns. People are beginning to find out its value as an article of diet. It gives animation as well as extra nourishment. The oats are baked and hulled before they are ground. Most of the oatmeal in market is prepared in Canada. We are acquainted with no one article of diet that will sustain life so long for a given sum of money, as oatmeal.

We now come back to our journey from Boston to Chicago. The oatmeal mush is prepared just like an Indian hasty pudding, that is, by stirring the oatmeal into boiling water, taking special care not to make it too thick. In consequence of its swelling, one ounce of oatmeal will make as much mush as two ounces of Graham meal. When done, it should be thin enough to be turned out of the kettle. One ounce and a half of oatmeal makes enough for one meal. We have a tin, self-sealing can, that holds a little over a quart, that we fill with mush. This is sufficient for four meals, or for two days. In real hot weather, it will not keep more than a day and a half; in such a case, we should go without mush during the last part of the journey, and take bread and fruit in its place. We have also one of Mason's patent, self-sealing jars, holding one pint, that we fill with milk for each day. We use no other seasoning on any food. When the milk jar is empty, it is rinsed out and filled again at some depot. We carry also a half-pint cup for the use of milk and mush, or sometimes rusk and milk. The rusk is made by drying pieces of unleavened bread, and then grinding it in a coffee mill. In addition to these articles we carry a teaspoon to be used in eating the mush and rusk and milk. We take a supply of sweet apples, or purchase such as we can find on the way, when needed. We sometimes carry figs, or dates, when apples are scarce.

If we are going where we do not expect to find oatmeal, we take some with us. A pound will last five days, and only costs about six cents. In case we cannot get wheat or oatmeal, we would use Indian meal.

We eat pears, peaches, grapes, sweet potatoes, strawberries, blackberries, blueberries, etc., in their season.

FRENCH SOCIETY.

The following is from the London Correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, Oct. 6th, 1869. It shows the moral progress in France:—

"A vague apprehension exists among official people of some great change in France. What it is, and when it is to come, no one is able to define, but there is uneasiness in high places. Perhaps the immediate fear is due to Earl Clarendon. When a fashionable Foreign Minister of the old school, and an easy, indifferent, pleasure-loving old man, who has thought more of the favors of the fair than of popular aspirations, rubs his hands and declares that everything is smooth and happy, and that Europe had never so many reasons for being tranquil, then look out for hurricanes, for confusion, for revolution. Earl Clarendon is about the last man to see where things tend. The question so difficult to get at is, are the French people astir? The Emperor's power is evidently going. He has lost confidence in himself, and the people have lost their fear of him. But it is not so certain that because they cease to be Imperialists they want to hurry on a republic. Time will show. One thing, at all events, is apparent. If France is in revolution the remainder of Europe will be disturbed. They will call out for Rome. Spain will exclaim more loudly than ever against a monarchy. I am not sure that some of the "ancient institutions" still standing, of the British Isles, would long resist the storm. Belgium is loyal enough to her King, but he has some of the worst characteristics of a decaying State. The scenes last week at Liege, on the occasion of the visit of the French and English volunteers, were so bad that the newspaper correspondents dare not do more than allude to them. Men and women gave themselves up to orgies of the most scandalous description, and in broad daylight the streets exhibited displays of the coarsest animalism. A friend who was there, and who knows the conduct well, assures me that there was no restraint. Mothers and daughters, husbands and boys, abandoned themselves to the free run of every passion or fancy."

$3000 TRACT FUND.

At a meeting of the Advent Christian Publication Society, September 2nd, at the National Campmeeting, it was

Resolved, That we raise THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the Tract Fund the ensuing year.

It is proposed to raise this amount during the year for the publication and free distribution of tracts. The value of these little preachers in the work of enlightening and saving men from darkness and death can hardly be overestimated; and the generous and liberal stewards of the Lord's money are earnestly invited to contribute according to their ability in aid of the good work. Send on your dimes and dollars, brethren, with a liberal hand, and receive, by and by, the reward of the liberal giver.

For the World's Crisis.

TO OUR FRIENDS NORTH.

We once more acknowledge our Father's hand in leading us safely back into our field of labor.

Bro. Leslie remained with us one week, and then took his departure amid many tears. He has worked long and faithfully, with opposition on every hand, to bring the Mission up to its present flourishing condition. The fruit of his labors can only be known at the great Assize. Those whom he has instructed are to be numbered by thousands, as his books show a record of upwards of twenty-five hundred different names of scholars that have attended his school since he first came into this part of the vineyard. Nor is this mighty work all that has been done. Clothing has been distributed to the naked, food dealt out to the hungry, and medicine has been administered with prayer and a physician's skill to the sick and afflicted.

Words fail to convey a true idea of the work here, with its trials, cares and sorrows, as well as its joys and sunny spots; all the brighter from the gross darkness through which we are often called to pass. May the ever blessed Lord be with and sustain Bro. L. wherever he goes.

And now the work is before us. O for wisdom, that we may do just right. The field is large, and indeed ready for harvest; doors are open on every hand, and the cry is still—"Come over and help us!"

What shall we do? Night and day we cease not striving as God gives us understanding, yet we see so little accomplished of the great work before us, that we often cry from our hearts, Lord, strengthen thy unprofitable servants.

We would say to those dear friends in Maine, who are intending to send us the clothing promised, that we shall need it much in the course of two or three weeks, or as soon as the cold, fall rains set in. There is a hard winter before many of these poor people, and if we do any thing for them, it must be when they need it, be it earlier or later.

We would really like to have all the clothing that we could distribute in three weeks' time. We know we could gladden many, many hearts. May the Lord provide.

The health of myself and wife continues good. Pray for us. In hope of salvation by grace, LEWIS F. COLE.

CONDENSED REPORT OF THE CT. A. C. CONFERENCE.

The Conn. A. C. Conference held its usual session at the Beers Street Christian Chapel, New Haven, commencing Thursday, Oct. 14th, at 2 o'clock P. M. The committee on credentials reported one visitor, and fourteen delegates. The delegates reported churches as in a good condition, with a mind for extra effort in the cause of God. Preachers reported an interest to hear, and expressed a desire to be more consecrated to the work. There had been some conversions. Tent-meetings had been thus far self-sustaining, and successful in the work. Sinners had been converted, and backsliders reclaimed.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: H. H. Dickinson, President; A. H. Steele, Vice President; G. L. Teeple, Secretary; B. St. John, Treasurer; S. Hall, B. Hitchcock, and G. W. Denny, Board of Trustees. Report of Sabbath Schools showed a need of more schools, as there had been great good accomplished by Sabbath Schools; whereupon the following resolution was offered by G. L. Teeple, and was adopted:

Whereas, There is a great neglect in Sabbath School interest among us as a church, therefore,

Resolved, That this conference recommend that the churches connected with us do all in their power to establish and sustain Sabbath Schools among them, as an instrumentality in the hands of God of advancing the cause for which Christ died.

The following by-laws were offered by H. H. Dickinson, and were adopted:

1. Any brother feeling aggrieved by the action of his church, may appeal to the conference for a hearing of his case, after which the conference may take such action as may be deemed necessary.

2. Any difficulties arising between preachers, members of this conference, may be referred to a committee, to be appointed by the conference, or during recess of conference, by the President, Vice President, and Secretary, jointly; and their first inquiry shall be, Has the scriptural rule been complied with? after which, they shall proceed to investigate and report the result to the conference at the earliest practicable time.

3. Every regularly organized church of eight or more members, in connection with this conference, may send a delegate; but brethren in sympathy with us are entitled to seats, and may take part in all matters except voting.

The following by-law was offered by Bro. Denny, and was adopted: The President and Vice President shall not be eligible to the same office two years in succession.

The following by-law was offered by Bro. Rockwell, and was adopted: No church connected with this conference shall be allowed to send a preacher as a delegate, as long as there is one male lay member able to attend the conference.

The following resolution was offered by Bro. H. H. Dickinson: Whereas, There seems to be a necessity of a system in the recognition of our assistants in the work of the ministry, therefore,

Resolved, That the President of the conference, on approval of the Vice President and Secretary, may, on the recommendation of any church in connection with this conference, issue to a brother so recommended a license, authorizing him to officiate as a lay preacher within the bounds of this conference; and such brother shall, by virtue of the above, be recognized as a preacher within the meaning of the constitution.

Bro. L. F. Moore offered the following resolution, which was adopted: Whereas, it being in the opinion of some unnecessary to prepare ourselves by study, before entering the pulpit to preach, therefore,

Resolved, That it is our duty, before entering the pulpit to preach, to fully prepare ourselves by the assistance of the Holy Spirit, both by study and prayer; and endeavor, as far as lieth in our power, to show ourselves approved of God, workmen that need not be ashamed.

The following resolutions were offered by Bro. W. S. Campbell, and were adopted:

Resolved, That we receive the church at Pawling, N. Y., on its own application, as one of the churches of this conference.

Resolved, That we regard the region comprising Sandisfield and Otis, Mass., as embraced in the territory of this conference, and that we define the western boundary of the Conn. A. C. Conference to be the Hudson river, south of the line, running west from the town of Otis, Mass., including that portion of the State of N. Y. lying between the southerly part of the State of Conn. and the city of New York.

Voted, That this conference defray the expenses of its delegates to the National Convention, and that the delegates be instructed to take up a special collection in their respective churches for this purpose, and forward the same to the Treasurer. Adjourned with a vote of thanks to the New Haven church for their hospitality. There was good interest and harmony of feeling, and we trust that good will result from our conference.

RELIGIOUS INTEREST.

There is a good degree of religious interest at present existing in the vicinity of Province Pond, in Effingham. N. H. A dear brother living in that region, isolated from those of like precious faith, conceived the happy idea a few weeks since of having some prayer-meetings in the place, which have been held once and twice a week up to the present time. Some Baptists, and others living in the vicinity, have come in and taken an active part in the meetings, and the Lord has remembered mercy and blessed the efforts of the faithful. Quite a number have been reclaimed, and four hopefully converted; others are deeply interested and almost persuaded to be christians. The people come out to the meetings in large numbers, and it would seem to be quite a promising field for good to be done, notwithstanding it has borne the name of being a very hard place. Some are already believing and confessing the "blessed hope"; others are believing in their heart, but have not yet confessed with their mouth. CHAS. H. HURD.

WONDERFUL PHENOMENON.

Your paper having recently taken quite an interest in all that pertains to the growth of the agricultural and mineral resources of Wyoming, will not, I presume, refuse a little space to the feeble description of a meteorological phenomenon that is now transpiring each evening in the skies above the Rocky Mountains in that romantic territory.

Since the recent solar eclipse they have, upon the summit of the Rocky Mountain chain, what the inhabitants call a "second twilight," so brilliant with colors of mist, shade and fire-lights, as to pain the eye in its steady gaze upon them, and to leave an impression on the mind that will never be obliterated.

Just as the sun is about to set a heavy mist gathers on the mountain, and growing denser and denser it shuts out entirely the last expiring ray of that luminous body; then all is darkness, or nearly so, for almost thirty minutes, when all at once the heavens become lit up from the horizon all around, far up to a small circle in the centre, with a livid glare of the most dazzling chromatic colors, seeming as though a tremendous bonfire was ablaze below, throwing its glare in clear and steady flame above.

This gorgeous and fearfully beautiful scene for nearly an hour, then steals quietly away; and the moon therefore dimmed by its fiery lustre regains its ascendency and lights up the balance of the night in pale shadows as it is wont to do in every other clime.

Now, what causes these cromatic twilights? They were never before witnessed by any of the oldest mountaineers. I was in that section at this season last year, and I have never seen so grand and so thrilling twilights and these have only occurred since the great solar eclipse of the 7th. What does it mean? What does it portend? How does it originate?

Old Sarshay—the learned Ute chief—stands in silence each night gazing at this wonderful phenomenon, and when asked what he thinks about it, replies slowly and sadly: Ugh, the Great Spirit is mad! He blows fire! His wigwam is in trouble! White man and red man better feel afraid for the Great Spirit is mad—he is heap angry!"

French Pete, the old trapper and miner, says:

It is now twenty-five years since I have seen the states. I have been eleven years in these mountains and I never saw such fiery nights. The winds are damper; they blow milder and the air grows heavier. I don't know how to account for it. It has all happened since the eclipse of the sun. Something dreadful is going to happen. There will be a dreadful fire some of these days that all the water in the world will never drown out, and those days are coming rapidly.

If it be true, as one of the professors of the Cincinnati Observatory says, that immense volumes of hydrogen gas were thrown out from the centre of the sun to the surface, during the recent solar eclipse how long will it be before the oxygen will be thrown out, and the carbon become the ruling and destroying element?

I give these particulars by request, and there are numbers of people in this city who on last Sabbath and Monday nights, witnessed, with me, this wonderful phenomenon on the summit of the Rocky Mountain chain, eight thousand two hundred and sixty-two feet above the level of the sea. The Cheyenne and Laramie papers will indorse the description.—Correspondence of Omaha Herald.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. K. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—Nearly two weeks ago I left Camden, N. J., for my home in Mass. The meetings continue interesting, both in Philadelphia and Camden. The brethren and sisters go over from Philadelphia and assist what they can to keep up the interest in Camden. One week ago last Sabbath, I preached the word to the 24th street church, in New York, morning and evening; and at the church Cor. of Grand and Clinton Sts. in the afternoon. There was a good interest manifest throughout the day.

I was sorry to find Bro. J. K. Bellows very feeble in health. I have been acquainted with him a long time, and I expected to meet with him at the Grand and Clinton street church; but I learned for the first time, that he has not been able to leave home for ministerial labor for months. Bro. Bellows has many kind friends throughout New England. An epistle of sympathy and regard from any of them, cannot fail of giving comfort to the worn and weary heart of one who has labored hard in our Master's vineyard so many years.

After the evening sermon at the 24th street church, Bro. Harvey C. Smith, of Harlem, N. Y., was ordained for the gospel ministry. After the ordination prayer, and laying on of hands, the charge was given by Eld. H. A. King, and the right hand of fellowship by Eld. T. J. Cox.

I expect to remain at Savoy perhaps two or three weeks, when I expect, the Lord willing, to return through my present field of labor. I am looking for great events to transpire soon throughout the world. Your Bro. in the blessed hope, H. K. FLAGG.

Plainville, Ct., Oct. 27th, 1869.

From Bro. O. Bendixon.

BRO. GRANT:—As the Lord has been pleased to preserve me across the water. I will let you know that I have arrived with my family, after a six weeks' tedious journey. I have had a great struggle about what I should do, since I arrived here; but now have decided that I shall go on in the battle of the Lord. I am ready, through the help of God, to do any thing that God wants me to do. We are in very small circumstances at present, as we arrived here almost penniless. If any of the churches should want me, they will be pleased to write me. The bodily health of my family is tolerably good, but they are downcast in heart, being in such poor circumstances; but my trust is in the Lord, and he will not let me be confounded.

Yours in hope of life in Christ, when he comes, O. BENDIXON.

P. S.—My address at present is W. Bowling Green, New York. O. B.

BRO. W. K. EVERSON, Chicago, Oct. 23d. writes:—"The meetings are being kept up with interest. The night after you left, the first that Bro. Couch preached, there were a good number up for prayers. I see by this morning's papers, that the earth is full of violence, fraud, and corruption, not only of people, but judges; forebodings of evil, strife, fearful looking for serious events in France and elsewhere; precautions, disasters, storms; and that the earth is quaking in Massachusetts, Maine, and New Hampshire. 'Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.' This prophecy Paul places at the end of this age; and Haggai, whom he quotes, adds: 'And I will shake all nations, and the Desire of all nations shall come.' This shaking of the heavens and earth seems to be a sign, or signal of the very near or immediate approach of the Messiah. There has been the most perturbed state of the 'heavens this year known in history; so said the N. Y. Journal of Commerce in a long article on the subject, in which it recounted a long series of siderial phenomena, and storms resulting in great disasters by sea and land; and ended his article by saying that he gave but a small portion of the long catalogue, calling it 'the most perturbed state of the heavens ever known in one year.' This was published about three months since. Now, instead of growing better, it has steadily been growing worse, and the most terribly destructive storms have continued almost without abatement ever since; sweeping the continent in almost every direction. Many lives have been lost, very great destitution and privation produced, and from statistics given, not less than $100,000,000 worth of property has been destroyed. It has been observed that every eleven years, we have a cycle of electrical storms and phenomena, and if I mistake not each cycle becomes more prominent in its charactertstic disturbance than the last; and next year is the completion of another cycle, when we may expect more of these extraordinary siderial phenomena: more of this 'perturbed state of the heavens,' this shaking;' and from the philosophy given of its effects upon the nations in exasperating men and producing disturbance, viewing the question from the present stand-point; seeing the position of the nations, their armaments and perplexities, choosing between revolution and destruction, the political volcanoes scarce pent up, and ready to burst forth on the slightest provocation; may we not reasonably look to see in this 'little while,' even the coming year, to see the 'shaking of the nations?' Are they not even shaking now, preparatory to the coming of 'the Desire of the nations?' Blessed be God, I want to see him. We shall soon be called upon to say, 'Come out of her, my people,' and then, in a 'little while,' we shall realize the 19th chap. of Rev., joining in the shout 'Alleluia; salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God. Read what follows. Oh! how glorious. May the Lord keep us all 'till he come.' Amen."

"P. S.—24th evening. This day's Tribune brings us further confirmation of the above views in the increased extent of the earthquake East, and the report of that of Peru, and all South America again, and the immense tidal wave. Surely the sea and the dry land is shaking everywhere, and I expect it to continue till the Lord comes. The God of the Bible and the God of nature seem to be acting in concert now. Singular that they should so act just now as to confirm all that a few 'fanatical followers of Jesus' are vainly telling the world was and is to be."

SR. M. M. POST, Hinesburg, Vt., writes: "Dear friends of the Crisis, and more especially those who attended the gathering at Camp Brook, Bethel, Vt.:—Being a weekly reader of the Crisis, my general rule is to first turn to the editorial, and then to the letters of the dear ones. And just here let me say to the readers of the Crisis, those of us who feast upon its contents, do we realize the weight of responsibility that rests upon its editor; his need of strength, of wisdom, of humility, of patience, of long-suffering? I must confess, for one, I felt admonished in reading his request of last week. Let us not forget to pray for him.

Now a few words relative to our Bethel meeting. Yes, Bethel it was. Those blessed words that fall from the lips of Bro. J. C.

and S. G. Mathewson were truly food for us hungry children, who have been so long isolated from such feasts. May God bless them and their faithful labors.

One word for the tent for Vt. Let all cast in their mites. All will like to feel that they own a little right in it."

For the World's Crisis.

"The Living Questions of the Age," is the title of a new book, written by J. B. Walker. It is a well-written review of modern liberalism, under the names of "Unitarianism" and "Liberal Christianity," "Universalism," "Woman's Rights," "Anti-Capital Punishment," etc. The chief points of the writer are well made. His style is clear, direct and courteous; his arguments generally forcible and easy. The work is well calculated to arouse the stupor of many who are being captivated by the sophistry of skeptics, and lead them to Christ and the Bible. It is worthy of general patronage and a careful reading by all. Published by J. N. Clarke, Chicago.

WADE. Died in North Adams, Oct. 23d, 1869, George R. Wade, aged twenty years, one month, and fourteen days.

Bro. Wade was converted some two years ago, under the labors of Bro. W. Teft; and although he sometimes got discouraged under the trials of these last days, yet, when he came to grapple with death, he triumphed, and fell calmly asleep, to await the morning of the resurrection, when we hope he will rise to immortality to die no more. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Job 14: 14,—"If a man die shall he live again?"

WM. J. BLANCHARD.

DEARING. Died in Bethel, Vt., October 12th, Mark S. Dearing, aged about forty-two.

The brethren and sisters at our late campmeeting will remember him, as the individual who came forward for prayers, and so earnestly entreated his companion to go with him. He lived but about two weeks from the time he was taken sick.

GEO. U. LEWIS.

LUCAS. Died in Brookfield, N. H., Oct. 12th, 1869, of consumption, Frank, youngest son of William and Mary Lucas, aged seventeen years, four months and two days.

During his illness he experienced a hope in Jesus, and died with a full assurance that soon he should be redeemed from the power of the grave.

C. COLBURN.

BENHAM. Died in Canisto, Steuben Co., N. Y., Aug. 31st, 1869, of diphtheria, Olive M., daughter of John S. and Mary Benham, aged three years, four months and twelve days.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

MADRID, Oct. 24. In the Cortes yesterday General Prim said that if the Ecumenical Council should adopt decisions hostile in their operation to the Spanish Constitution, they would be treated by the Government as null and void.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 24. The ceremonies on the occasion of the successful completion of the Suez Canal will be interesting. The following is the programme: The fete will begin at Port Said on the 16th of November; the vessels forming the fleet will proceed to Ismailia on the next day, and remain there until the 18th, and will go through to Suez on the 19th, where the proceedings will be ended the following day.

FLORENCE, Oct. 31. The Italian government reserves the right to reject the decisions of the Ecumenical Council which are opposed to the laws of the country and the spirit of the age.

PARIS, Oct. 31. Le Public newspaper says the report that the Emperor is suffering from a relapse of his former illness is false.

FLORENCE, Oct. 31. The Italian Government reserves the right to reject the decisions of the Ecumenical Council which are opposed to the laws of the country and the spirit of the age.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Oct. 23. A Lima letter of September 27th states that there was great trepidation throughout South America, on account of the prevalent tidal waves and earthquakes. People were leaving their dwellings near the coast and camping in the mountains. A terrific earthquake is reported to have occurred in the Arequipas District, completely destroying the town of Chachas.

Toronto, Oct. 26. About four inches of snow fell here this morning. At Walkertown, Port Elkton and at other points north and west, about two feet of snow has fallen, and it is still snowing. Along the lines of the Great Western and Grand Trunk railways the fall of snow is very light and railway communication uninterrupted.

New York, Oct. 18. The Rev. Dr. Hubbell yesterday preached a sermon against the present Romish crusade against the public schools. He said they demand the unconditional surrender of the present system of education. If we give up this, they will then ask that the press be delivered into their hands; and, after that, all the privileges that Americans possess under the government; and then, one by one, will thrift, happiness and virtue be among the things that were, and this land become one of misery and poverty, similar to the nations where Papacy has ruled supreme. The issue must be met, or it may at some time culminate in one of the worst wars the world ever knew.

Augusta, Me., Oct. 30. The storm has not yet ceased in Skowhegan and Bingham. A foot of snow has fallen there, and sleighing is excellent. Here some six inches have fallen. Many sleighs are out, but the sleighing in this city is not good.

Cincinnati, Oct. 18. The National Convention of the M. E. local preachers to-day passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That whenever from any cause except old age or protracted sickness, any local preacher ceases to be an evangelist, his license and parchments should be taken away.

Resolved, That if it prove necessary to carry into execution the sentiment of the foregoing resolution we respectfully ask such a change of the discipline as will enforce the active labors of local preachers or withhold their licenses.

Resolved, That we will use our influence and example to discountenance the reading of manuscript sermons.

FATHER HYACINTHE.—The Roman Catholic papers are endeavoring to turn their Roman Catholic readers bitterly against Father Hyacinthe. The Tablet contains a bitter article against him, attributing his action to "vain pride and self-conceit," and pronouncing his position "illogical and untenable." It also stigmatizes him as "a revolutionary madman." The Freeman's Journal contents itself by pronouncing the learned and eloquent Carmelite "a fool." Contrast these utterances with the mild, yet inculpatory expostulations of the Bishop of Orleans. Father Hyacinthe has hoped for some support from the American Bishops, but in this, we apprehend, he relies upon a broken reed. Is it not remarkable that one who so recently stood first among Roman prelates for learning, eloquence and piety, should so soon have become an ignorant and vain babbler, without piety and without position?—Detroit Tribune.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS IN RUSSIA.—The "woman movement," says a correspondent, is making progress in Russia. Mr. Mill's work on "The Subjection of Women," is enjoying a wide circulation in that country, and three extended reviews of it, all highly approving its sentiments, have recently appeared in the journals of Moscow and St. Petersburg. In a domestic drama now having a run at the Moscow Theatre, a studious young lady says sharply to her old-fashioned mother, "You ought to know that everybody is now saying that woman ought to be free," the sentiment, it is said, never failing to elicit loud applause. It is proposed to hold a grand Woman's Rights Convention at St. Petersburg, to which Mr. Mill is to be invited.

IMPORTANT IF TRUE. The London Weekly Register (Roman Catholic) publishes a statement to the effect that a petition, signed by "a very large body" of clergymen of the Church of England, will be presented to the Council of the Vatican, praying that in the event of the Council deciding against the validity of Anglican orders, the petitioners "should be received into the Catholic Church, ordained as priests, employed as such, and allowed, if married, to continue so until the death of their wives—those married, not to be employed as confessors." Many of the English Catholic bishops are said to be favorable to the petition; and the weekly Register assumes that a favorable decision on the part of the Council would be followed by a secession of "an immense body of the very best men amongst the Anglican clergy."

The same journal publishes a letter relative to the coming Council from "as high an authority as could be named, always excepting the Holy Father himself." It seems to have been written for the special enlightenment of "the good people of England, Catholics as well as others," and its object is to allay any apprehensions which may be felt as to the probable character and decrees of the Council. The writer "thinks he may safely say" that the question of the infallibility of the Pope when speaking ex cathedra "will neither be raised nor discussed," but will be left, as at present, one of those matters in which Catholics will be free to hold with one side or the other. He is further "quite certain" that "ultra doctrines or ultra opinians will not be mooted, or pushed, or agitated in any way."—Boston Herald.

THE SECRETS OF SPIRIT RAPPING.—The London Standard publishes a letter from Mr. W. G. Faulkner, philosophical instrument maker, in which he states that for many years he has had a large sale for spirit-rapping magnets and batteries expressly made for concealment under the floor, in cupboards, under tables, and even for the interior of the centre support of large round tables and boxes. He has supplied also quantities of prepared wire to be placed under the carpets and oilcloth, or under the wainscot and gilt beading around ceilings and rooms. All these, he says, were obviously used for spirit-rapping; and the connection to each rapper and batttery was to be made by means of a small button, like those used for telegraphic bell-ringing purposes, or by means of a brass-headed or other nail under the carpet of particular patterns known to the Spiritualist. These rappers, he adds, when carefully placed, are calculated to mislead the most wary. Then there are spirit-rapping magnets and batteries constructed expressly for the pocket; and these, he tells us, will of course rap at any part of the room. He also made drums and bells which will beat and ring at command.—Journal.

THANKSGIVING DAY.—A number of clergymen in Massachusetts are signing a petition for presentation to Governor Claflin, praying him not to issue a proclamation for thanksgiving unless he can initiate measures which will command a better observance of the day as a season of fasting, humiliation and prayer. They say "that they are convinced, by long and close observation, that the annual appointment of a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer by the Governor of the Commonwealth—once, doubtless, a usage which met the convictions and desires of the people of the State at large—has gradually been perverted from its original design and professed intent, until it has ceased to command attention and respect; that the day set apart by proclamation has fallen into general neglect as a day of religious observance, and come to be a day of much license, disorder, and excess; that they believe it to have become a source of demoralization rather than of religious or moral impression, and that the discontinuance of the custom of appointing an annual Fast would be for the public good."—Boston Journal.

DISAPPEARANCE OF THE DOG STAR.—A most startling astronomical fact—the explosion, or rather the conflagration, of Tau Coronæ—occurred some time since. It appears now that another and much more important star is slowly taking itself out of our system. By calculattions of extraordinary minuteness and delicacy, Mr. Muggins and Father Secchi have demonstrated that Sirius and our sun are mutually receding from one another at the rate of 29.4 miles per second. In the end, therefore, though the distance of time strains the imagination, we lose sight of Sirius—that is to say, provided we have not by that time gained the capacity of watching the more distant universe toward which he must be receding—an improbability. Nothing seems so near its final limit as the power of astronomical telescopes, while the power of the human eye, if it alters at all, probably decreases.

FATHER HYACINTHE'S CREED.—Father Hyacinthe yesterday made the following statement: I believe that it is impossible to enjoy freedom of thought and exercise it, and yet belong to the communion of the Catholic Church. I still consider myself a Carmelite monk, and am as devoted as I ever was, to the Holy Mother Church; but I maintain that I exercise my priestly functions by the authority of God alone, and that the Church has no right to change the faith as handed down by the fathers—to add to or take from it in any way whatever. I believe the Protestants to belong to the great brotherhood of the faith, but do not intend to ally myself to their peculiar views."

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S MALADY.—If we are to credit recent statements put forth by leading medical men in Paris, the Emperor's bodily situation is grave indeed. He suffers from a complication of disorders, among the least of which is rheumatism. The foundation of his internal complaints he inherited from his mother, and they began to trouble him at an early age. Before the coup d'etat of 1851, they had taken the form of occasional fits and neuralgia, more or less violent in their visitation. The neuralgiac attacks sometimes benumbed his limbs, and could only be dispelled by blister and cauterization. On one memorable occasion he himself burned along the affected nerve with a wax candle, and thus restored the power of movement. Hydropathy afforded him substantial relief for severrl years, or until 1860. Then aggravated symptoms set in, and he has not been a well man since. The main source of the difficulty is in the bladder. It is stated that one of the consequences of such diseases, when long continued, is their injury to the brain, inducing unsteadiness of mental operations, and imparting an enervated, sombre tone to the whole disposition. It cannot be affirmed that these results have yet been developed in Louis Napoleon's case, for, whatever loss of activity he may have shown, it has been no more than what might have been expected from advancing years. If, however, the correct diagnosis of his malady has been given, the tenure of his life—a life fraught with vast consequences to France and to Europe—cannot be regarded as very strong or even hopeful.—Journal.

Passing Events.

☞ The proposed Ecumenical Council has produced, says the Leader, a curious movement among the Russian clergy. They propose to get up a counter demonstration to that preparing at Rome by [illegible] another council at St. Petersburg, attended by bishops of the Greek Church and presided over by the Emperor. It is said that the Pope has made great efforts to induce the Government at St. Petersburg to send Russian bishops to Rome, but without success. Upon this the "orthodox" clergy came forward with their plan for the Government holding a council of its own, but they were informed in reply that this could not be done, as it would offend the Roman Catholics in the Empire.—Advance.

☞ A correspondent of the Boston Journal, writing from Calais, Maine, says of the great storm of the 8th inst., in that section:—"Out of 108 vessels out on the coast between Calais and Campabello, a distance of twenty-five miles, only eighteen were uninjured, and a large portion of those disabled were badly injured. Eighty barns and twenty houses were destroyed within four miles distance in St. Stephens, opposite Calais. Only one wharf remains at Eastport. At Lubec, opposite Eastport, four churches were very badly wrecked, and an immense amount of other property destroyed."

☞ A petrified man of extraordinary size was found on the 16th inst., about twelve miles south of Syracuse, N. Y., in digging for a well. The body is ten feet five and a half inches long, two and a half feet across the shoulders and twenty-two inches from the chin to the top of the head. One or more similar giants have been exhumed on the Pacific coast. The body, in this case, rested on a clay bed, and was covered and packed around with sandy loam.

☞ Richard Weaver, of London, the famous lay-preacher to the poor, is becoming almost as famous in England as Whitefield was a hundred and thirty years ago. He lately made a preaching tour in the country, and preached, among other places, at Ascott, where people in large numbers came from all the surrounding country to hear him, some coming sixteen and twenty miles. "The whole congregation listened with great attention, many standing with streaming eyes, as he spoke of what he himself had witnessed of the power of the gospel."

☞ The sleeping girl in Kentucky is not dead, as reported, but still continues her long nap, although we are told by a Kentucky paper that the unnatural state into which she sinks cannot be sleep, but a deep, intense and inexplicable insensibility and unconsciousness, from which the most terrible shocks of an earthquake or the loudest thunders of heaven could not arouse her.

☞ A revival at Richmond, Ind., has been in progress for about six months; it is one of the most remarkable on record. About nine hundred persons have been added to the various churches. Out-door meetings have been held twice a week, and a noon-day saloon prayer-meeting has become a nearly permanent institution. Sometimes as many as fifteen prayer-meetings in private houses have been simultaneously held in different parts of the city.

☞ In the Friendly Islands, where, fifty years ago, there was not one native christian, but gross and unbroken darkness, the regular attendants on public worship now exceed thirty thousand, and contributions to religious objects are over fifteen thousand dollars a year: two hundred and fifty day-schools contain ten thousand pupils.

☞ An old trapper who crossed the Western plains thirty-five years ago says there was no grass at all, but only a few sage bushes and cacti. Now there is a thin soil formed over the sand and gravel, and grass covers the entire surface. It appears that this enriching process goes on faster and faster every year.

☞ Franklin Pierce was the fourteenth President of the United States. There are fourteen letters in his name, and the first letters of the christian and surnames being F. and P., stand for fourteenth President.

☞ At a late meeting of the Peace Society in Paris, Father Hyacinthe made the following declaration, remarkable for a Romish Priest: "There are three religious in this world—the Jewish, the Catholic, and the Protestant—and all three are equal in the eyes of God." It was received with shouts of applause.

☞ Among other causes of depopulation devastating Polynesia, and threatening the early extermination of the natives is the great spread of leprosy. It is now infesting Maui, in the Hawaian group, and the Marquesas Islands, and there is fear of its being propagated among the crews of American and other trading vessels; so that it may spread among other populations.

☞ The scientific French weather prophets predict a winter of unusual severity. The signs in this country point in the same direction. Corn has an unusually heavy coat of husks, and the birds are moulting earlier than usual.

☞ Gold has been found in Coos county, N. H., at Pittsburg, and there is considerable excitement over the matter. Across the line in Canada, fifteen miles distant, a man named Pope employs thirteen men in washing gold bearing sand. It is the field he works which has been traced into New Hampshire.

☞ An order was sent to a Chicago bookseller which, among other things, enumerated "Six Primitive Christianity." It was sent back with the response penciled opposite that item and not at all in jest: "No Primitive Christianity to be found in Chicago."

☞ The announcement that a vein of coal, eight feet in thickness, has been discovered in Colorado, seventy-five miles east of Denver, is more important than all the announcements that were ever made of gold discoveries in that territory.

☞ Father Hickey lately announced in the cathedral at Pittsburg, Pa., that Roman Catholic parents would be required to withdraw their children from the public schools. The work has already commenced; one hundred scholars have been taken from the First Ward School.

☞ Notwithstanding the efforts of Romish priests to prevent the circulation of the Bible, and a papal bull forbidding the people to read it, over 220,000 copies of the Scriptures have been sold in Italy in a little over eight years.

☞ The Jewish quarter of Prague and of some other European cities, is separated from the rest by wire partitions, and a movement is on foot to abolish such a ridiculous barbarism.

☞ The whole of Eastern Kentucky is reported to be overrun with horse thieves, whose operations are on such a bold and extensive scale that hardly any citizen dares attempt to own or keep a horse.

☞ Pere Hyacinthe, not having returned to his convent as ordered by his Superior, has been dispossessed of all his charges.

☞ A canal is to be built between Rome and Ancona, connecting the eternal city with the Adriatic.

☞ The American Bible society, during the fifty-three years of its existence, has distributed over 25,000,000 volumes.

☞ Emigration to the West is largely on the increase from New England.

☞ The Sultan has placed a letter-box at his front door for the deposit of petitions.

☞ Brigham Young is said to be the richest man in America.

☞ The Prussian press is to be free.

National Conference.

The First National Advent-Christian Conference will assemble in the city of Rochester, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 17th, in the hall of the Advent Christian church of that city, at ten o'clock A. M.

This conference will be composed of delegates from the several Advent Christian Conferences of the various States and Canada, in accordance with the terms of the following call, issued by the Advent Convention, held at Buchanan, Mich., in November, 1868, which has been approved by most of the Conferences:

"A PROPOSITION TO THE ADVENT-CHRISTIANS OF NORTH AMERICA.

WHEREAS, The Advent-Christian body of this Continent, which has been called out of the world and the various sects, should be one in faith, hope, and work; and

WHEREAS, Unity of action is essential to the proper accomplishment of their great work for the present generation; therefore,

Resolved, That a General Conference of Advent-Christians be called, to be composed of representatives from all the States and Territories of the United States, and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

Resolved, That this Conference shall consist of delegates from the several Advent-Christian Conferences of the United States and Canada, each Conference being entitled to three delegates. Provided, that in States, Territories, or Provinces where there are no Conferences, and isolated Advent-Christian Churches exist, such churches may unite and send one delegate.

Resolved, That a committee of seven be appointed: three from the East, three from the West, and one from the dominion of Canada, who shall make arrangements for the time and place of meeting of said General Conference. Provided, that the place of meeting be as central as possible. We suggest Rochester, N. Y., or Buchanan, Mich.

The above action in reference to this proposed General Conference is subject to the approval of the several Advent-Christian Conferences."

This Conference will meet in Rochester, by the special request of the church in that city, who will extend their hearty hospitalities to the delegates, and others who may attend in convention. Their invitation is to all who love and cherish, and desire to proclaim more successfully and widely, the great truths generally held by Advent christians.

The Conference will consider the condition, prospects, and wants of the cause it is to represent, and take action as it may deem wise in the premises, for such Scriptural organization of the body as shall tend to add to its effectiveness in the promulgation of the great Biblical truths which God has called us to proclaim in the last days.

We trust this important meeting will be made the subject of earnest prayer by all who love "the present truth."

JOHN COUCH, New Hampshire; MILES GRANT, Massachusetts; S. G. MATHEWSON, Vermont; JOSHUA V. HIMES, Michigan; WM. SHELDON, Wisconsin; O. R. FASSETT, Minnesota; JOHN PORTER, Canada, National Conference Committee.

New Hampshire Conference.

At a meeting of the members of the Advent-Christian State Conference of New Hampshire, held at Alton Bay, Sept. 9th, 1869, called by the President, Eld. J. Couch, and formally opened with prayer by Bro. D. M. Leavitt, it was voted, that we proceed to choose delegates to attend the American Advent-Christian Convention to be held in Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 17th, 1869.

Voted, That Bro. D. M. Leavitt receive, assort, and count ballots for delegates and their substitutes.

Voted, That Bro. A. Ross be a delegate to attend said Convention, and that Bro. Geo. W. Brown be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. A. W. Sibley be the second delegate, and that Bro. C. S. Emerson be his substitute.

Voted, That Bro. J. G. Smith be the third delegate, and that Bro. J. W. White be his substitute. Adjourned.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Rochester Conference.

The delegates to the Advent Christian National Convention will report themselves at the New Arsenal Building, on Monroe street, where the committee will receive them for entertainment.

Brethren from the adjoining towns, who can with a cheerful heart aid us in supplying our table with roast meats, fowls, butter, cheese, fruits, or other necessaries, for entertaining our guests, or means to help furnish such necessaries, will confer a favor which we shall much need.

By request of Committee, H. PRATT.

Notice.

Brethren and sisters of like precious faith, greeting: As I have been made the custodian of the Philadelphia Tent, which has been dedicated to the service of God, as a house in which to proclaim the truth we so much love; I would say to all who want to do good through this channel, to begin at once to lay plans for a tent-meeting next season, in some central place. Talk this matter over with the friends around you, and pray for direction and the spirit of sacrifice, and write to me at your earliest convenience if you think it best to have a meeting of that kind at your place. Write as early as the 20th of March, so that I can make proper arrangements for equalizing the expenses. If there should be any who may want a meeting at their place, or some village near by, and yet not able to determine what is best under the circumstances, let them give us all the favorable and also all the unfavorable circumstances, and we will decide about the matter ourselves.

P. W. HOUGH, Clerk.

A Call for Help.

Brethren of Vermont, the conference formed at our excellent campmeeting voted to send delegates to the National Advent Christian Conference, but made no provision to defray their expenses. Brn., is it right for them to bear their own expenses? I say No, and I think I hear a No from all over the State. Now sit right down, before you forget it, and write to ELD. J. A. CLEAVELAND, Marshfield, Vt., and inclose your contributions. The three delegates will need fifty or sixty dollars; so don't be afraid you shall do too much. If they should happen to get a little more than enough, it won't hurt them.

GEO. U. LEWIS.

Notice.

Dear brethren and sisters, we are holding a protracted meeting at East Boston, Mass., in Chase's Hall, No. 154 Meridian Street. We commenced Oct. 24th. We think some twenty or more have started to seek the Lord. They were mostly backsliders. We are going to continue the meetings until Nov. 7th. We would invite the brethren in Boston and vicinity to come and labor with us. Come with your hearts all warmed up with the love of God, and labor in this glorious work.

E. COTTON. S. C. HANCOCK.

Discussion.

If the Lord will, the following question will be discussed at New Durham Ridge, N. H., commencing Monday, Nov. 15th, at ten o'clock A. M.:

"Resolved, that trine immersion, as taught in a book by W. C. Thurman, entitled 'The doctrine of baptism,' is the legitimate mode of christian baptism."

Affir., W. C. Thurman. Neg., J. H. F. Varney.

Statistics Called For.

If any brother in any place within the bounds of the A. C. Conf. of the State of Conn., will furnish information, by letter or otherwise, as to date of commencement of Advent meetings, numbers in fellowship, means, expenditures, places of worship, etc., he will confer a favor. For this purpose, please address Elder A. H. Steele, 20 Franklin Street, New Haven, Ct.; B. Hitchcock, same No.; or, up to Nov. 13th, W. S. Campbell, 354 Pearl Street, New York City.

Notice.

There will be a protracted meeting in Belgrade, at the Depot, Nov. 4th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue over Sunday. There are but few brethren and sisters in the place, yet they give a general invitation for all to come and engage in the work of the Lord, as places will be kindly provided for all who come. Brethren will call on John T. Fifield. For the Brethren, H. B. SEVEY.

Notice.

The next quarterly meeting with the church at Wilmot Settlement, Broom Co., N. Y., will be held Nov. 27th and 28th. Bro. and Sr. Hitchcock, of Kirkwood, N. Y., will be there to assist. All are invited to attend. For the brethren,

J. W. TAYLOR.

To the Churches in Connecticut.

Having been elected to the office of President of Conference, I would be happy to learn the wants of churches within this jurisdiction, and to this end would be glad to hear from the brethren and sisters.

H. H. DICKINSON.

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 1869.

Notice.

Elder T. T. Farwell has moved from Manchester, N. H., to 23 Elliott Street, Boston, and is keeping a boarding house and eating saloon. The friends will do well to give him a call, as they will save the high prices charged at public houses. He will preach where a door opens on Sabbaths in the vicinity of Boston.

REMARKS. Cattle.—The supply of cattle last week was not entirely disposed of. Some 400 head of western left over. Receipts this week from Albany, 2103, with 464 Eastern; and we find quite a number of Northern cattle, that were not sold at Cambridge, offered here to-day. It was a very hard market—not any life to trade. Many of the butchers were urged to take more cattle last week than they wanted. It is feared there will be from 700 to 900 head unsold at the close of the market. Prices have dropped from ½ to 1 ct. per lb. Very fine bunches of steers were sold at $12 to $12.50 per cwt. A very few premium steers, especially fine and rich, were sold at $13 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.—Receipts 3163, mostly western, handled by Brighton butchers on commission.

Hides, 9 to 00 cts. per lb; Tallow, 7 to 00 cts. per lb. Pelts, 75 cts. each. Calf Skins, 20 to 00 cts. per lb.

REMARKS.—Receipts of nearly 1400 head of Northern cattle have arrived. The trains are again behind time; hindrances in the way, detaining some 400 to 500 head that will arrive some time to-day. The market seems almost at a stand still; a few cattle are changing hands, but with large receipts the sales are generally slow. We quote prices 50 cts. per cwt. lower than last week.

Sheep and Lambs.—J. M. Morse this week arrived with 1030 fine Canada sheep and lambs. With last receipts the market held firm at last quotations; that we certainly at very low figures, some lots scarcely bringing more than the price of their skins. Such lots are quite slim sheep. Butchers were overstocked last week, but made disposal of arrivals as best they could. The weather has opened favorably this week.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.

BY S. S. BREWER.

For sale at the Crisis Office, 167 Hanover Street.

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.06; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. AN EXPOSITION OF THE SEVEN SEALS. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of this chain of symbols, and the proximity of the judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 90 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII., in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Papacy during the forty-two prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Popedom to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.80; single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the kingdom of God (Matt. 21: 43); what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the new covenant, signs of the times, nearness of the great day of the Lord, etc., etc. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25; single, by mail, 25 cts.

6. THE LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts.; single, by mail, 8 cts.

7. LAST DAY TOKENS. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

O JESUS, COME!

O Jesus, Savior, long have I been waiting
To see thee, whom my soul delights to love,
With strong affection, constant, unabating—
I fain would see thee coming from above.

Thus all thy children, sad and weary-hearted,
Sighing beneath a weight of heavy care,
And weeping oft because from thee they've parted,
Would joy to see thee coming through the air.

'Twould be a great joy, springing like a fountain
In hearts now sad, cheering each "waiting one,"
Till like a young hart springing o'er the mountain,
With faces radiant, like the rising sun.

They with a bound would leave old earth to meet thee,
"Caught up" 'mid pearly clouds by angel bands,
And with a song, exultantly would greet thee,
With palms of victory waving in their hands.

Then, Jesus, come, I pray; make no delaying;
Come to thy waiting ones and give them rest;
Here, on this old sad earth, we still are praying,
"Thy kingdom come!" oh, give the promised rest.

Not long shall we thus wait before the morning
Of that glad day, when thou shalt glorious come;
Now is the heavy darkness which precedes the morning—
Lo! day is breaking; soon we'll reach our home.

EQUALITY OF THE REWARD.

The subject of degrees of happiness to the the saint and misery to to the lost, is one that has long been in dispute. This subject has been examined by men of ability and giant minds. Much has been said and written upon it, and perhaps it will be useless for us to say any thing about it. But with the permission of Bro. Grant we will make a few remarks on the subject before us.

We know that the greater part of the professed church are believers in degrees of reward and punishment; but we beg leave to differ from this idea. To us, the idea would be, that one portion of Christ's mystic body—the church—is, by defense of this theory, trying to show that they will occupy a higher seat in the kingdom than another portion; or, that some of those for whom Jesus died, are superior to others whom Christ is willing to call brethren; some like the degrees in the Masonic brotherhood, or the Mohammedan theory of seven heavens and seven hells; and by a comparison of these two theories there is but a slight difference between them.

It may be said that the Bible teaches the doctrine; but we think not. It is our intention to examine those passages that are claimed as teaching this theory, and also those that teach equality of rewards. One of the passages taken to prove degrees of reward, may be found in Luke 19: 12.—"A certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come." Then the fifteenth verse reads, "It came to pass . . . . he commanded these servants to be called unto him, . . . that he might know how much every man had gained by trading." And when they had come, the first said, "Thy pound hath gained ten pounds," and the nobleman said, "have thou authority over ten cities." To the second, who had gained two, he gave authority over two cities, (an also the one with five), while the slothful servant who had hid his pound, was cast into outer darkness.

I have heard people say, (alluding undoubtedly to this parable) that, when they got into the kingdom, they wanted to be something more than a subject; as though some of the saints would be such, while others of the human family would rule over them as monarchs; as though lording it over God's heritage in time was not enough, but it must be extended into eternity.

I remember hearing a sermon upon this subject, in which it was said, that in the new earth there would be some who would rule over two cities, others over five, and others over ten cities. But it will be noticed that no servant is received into the kingdom, but those who have two or more pounds, while those with less than two, are to be cast out. Therefore, if the thing is to be literally fulfilled in the kingdom of God, there must, of course, be from two to ten times as many cities as saints to rule over them.

We think the text, in its application, is intended to teach, that those who are faithful here in the works of God will be rewarded hereafter, in the day of reckoning, in the kingdom of God.

Again, the words of Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 41, "One star differeth from another star in glory." It will be seen that the apostle is speaking of the resurrection of the dead. "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." Therefore the language has no reference to degrees of reward. But Paul would have us understand that "one star [our bodies of mortality] differeth from another star [our immortal bodies] in glory." Then the declaration of Paul, that man shall "receive . . . . according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." It is claimed that this proves degrees of reward, inasmuch as some men do more than others, and that some men are greater sinners than others. But the apostle makes only two classes of deeds, good and bad. Those whose deeds are "bad," will meet a sad reward; while those whose deeds are "good," will meet a reward of joy.

These and some other passages are taken to prove this side of the question; and now we will give some of the proof on the other side.

When the Sadducees tried to entrap Christ concerning the resurrection, he replied as follows: "The children of this world marry and are given in marriage; but they who are accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage. Neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Now Jesus said they, the saints, were equal unto the angels. And it is an axiom in mathematics that two numbers, each equal to a third, are equal to each other. Therefore, if the saints are equal to the angels, they are equal to them individually, and of course, at the same time, are equal to each other. Therefore they will receive the same reward.

Again, Christ spoke unto the people the parable of the laborers, in which it is said that some entered into the vineyard in the morning, others at the third, sixth, and ninth hours, and also some at the eleventh hour; and they wrought until even. And at even, when all received a penny, some "murmured against the good man of the house," and found fault because they had all received the same. But the good man set them all right, and justified himself.

Now, Christ compared the kingdom of heaven to this householder, and as they who wrought received the same, so will those who do the works of God receive every man the same, the "penny," even eternal life, without respect to what they have done, or how long they have worked.

Again, the apostle says the saints are heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. To be joint heirs, or owners, is to be equal heirs. Thus if a man has two sons only, and they are joint heirs to his estate, they will each receive one-half. Thus it will be with the saints; they will all get the same inheritance.

The apostle says, (Rom. 6: 23), "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life." There can be no degrees in the punishment of the wicked. It is simply death, and nothing else. And sinners will not receive the punishment due their sins, until death takes place.

It may be maintained that some have more sins to answer for than others. But the apostle says, "He that offends in one point is guilty of all." If a man kills another, he will be hung; perhaps he may have killed twenty; he cannot be hung but once. One sin unpardoned will cause a man to lose his soul, twenty will do no more. To me it seems strange that those who believe in destruction, can believe in degrees of punishment.

It is said some men do more in the cause of God than others, and ought therefore to receive more reward. But is a man to be blamed because he has one talent? Ought men to take to themselves glory for labor done? The Bible says it is "not of works, lest any man should boast." And "by grace are ye saved, and not of yourselves; it is the gift of God" Every man has his peculiar gift, or talent, and we must do what we can, with God's help, and so in the end all will receive the same reward.

Let no one get discouraged on this account; though small here, we soon shall reach that land where inequalities are done away; where the aristocrat will be brought low, and the rejected of earth will shine in glory. May we all receive the "penny" in eternity. May we labor here, and be rewarded hereafter. The reckoning time is coming; prepare to meet it in peace.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

HOW GO THE TIMES?

As this question is so often asked, I have been taking observations, watching the clouds since the commencement of our Springfield campmeeting, and find a few little whirlwinds kicking up a dust in different directions; but as they do not all whirl in one direction, are not likely to consolidate and make much of a tornado.

We are in the time of prophetic perplexity, and have need of patience after we have done the will of God in coming out on dispensational truth. We have certainly gained an identity that the world feel and recognize, and it is necessary to keep together in effort.

We must keep on the main track, pursue a steady, prudent course, and those little refractory elements will gradually see their folly, and die out. We see this. There was more union in feeling and effort at the Springfield meeting than formerly, more praying in the camp, which always removes the morbid matter.

If we as a people will keep to work on the same plan as when God called us out to do the work of warning the world of its doom, he will stand by us. Suppose some do get puffed up, and feel ashamed of their father's and mother's name, and kick out of the traces; thank God, there are enough true ones left to draw the load.

I saw the same united spirit prevailing at the Alton Bay meeting. We felt more like watching the elements and wind squalls, than to get located in a tent and shut our eyes to every thing else, which we must do to work effectually in that direction. But some must be on duty, watching, while others pray. I never felt so much like watching the elements as this year, for my own benefit, and for others who are asking—"How are the times, generally, where you go?"

Well, I can say, understandingly, all goes well. I was not idle, although I did not preach, did not want to, was not asked to, and enjoyed my position first rate. There is generally more that want to preach than is profitable to the meeting, which often taxes the wisdom of the committee to know what to do in this unpleasant duty of selecting preachers. I have had my part to do in that direction, and would say to my friends that wondered I was not asked to preach, it was not out of disrespect to me. I think the committee had so many applications, they passed by those that cared the least about it, and I was one.

After leaving the camp, I felt more like strengthening the weak of the flock than ever. Went to Portland, and had a blessed good time and a full house, although many stayed on the camp-ground over the Sabbath. The church at Portland is doing well, although, as in many places, light whirlwinds have passed over them, but left the family unhurt; and patience and duty will heal the wounded.

In Bath I found them as usual, united, and in the work in good earnest. They hold together, and let no roots of bitterness grow, and no distracting elements come among them to divide. In Brunswick, I had a full house and the best attention. The truth took effect, and God blessed the people.

In Richmond, I found the divided elements had somewhat broken up their union, and some few had fallen from grace and gone back under the law of Moses, as Paul declared; but we had a full house and good attention. The old main stock stand firm, and the whirlwinds affected only a few of the outer branches. A steady and judicious course, with patience, will soon heal up the breach. We had the old Read meeting-house. It was crowded all day Sunday, and the best attention. Some, who belonged to other churches, confessed the truth for the first time. There were seven preachers, and all worked in harmony. There was such an interest to hear more, that we had a meeting Monday evening, and about two hundred came out, and God's word took effect. It will take the Devil quite a while to right things up and get them back where they were before; but his agents are out in the wheat fields, and they will need to watch and pray, be patient, and keep to work for God, and God will fill the vacancy, and their number will increase. Amen.

At the Village, also, we had the hall crowded three evenings, and the good Spirit was there. They are coming up.

In Pittsfield, I had a good, full meeting. They are young, poor, but we had two good meetings together. In Bangor, I had a hard time to find any Adventists. Went to five different places to inquire, traveled three miles, with a heavy valise and overcoat, and at last was conveyed by a boy to Bro. Philbrick's house. I thanked God. On the Sabbath found one of the best churches I have seen in Maine, a large congregation, and good attention. The wolves in former years have destroyed this flock, but a new class have come up, and on their ground; yet they have lost some by those who make it their business to decoy other's children away, being barren themselves.

In Hermon and Levant, I found some good, sound timber, that will stand the storms. We had full meetings, assisted by Brn. Damman and Baker, who stand firm.

THE CHRISTIAN'S TRIALS.

We often hear christians tell of their trials. They say they are so hard to bear, it seems as if they must give up trying to serve the Lord. O it seems if we had the Spirit of God reigning in our hearts, and lived as it is our privilege to live, we should think less of our trials, and more of the blessings God, in great mercy, showers's down on our unworthy heads. How little faith we see manifested in these last days. Never, since the remembrance of this generation, was there such a fearful time as now. It seems almost as if the whole world went hand in hand with Satan. What manner of people are we, that should expect to live in this sinful world, without being tempted, or tried? Jesus was tempted. If God suffered his beloved Son to be tempted, will he not surely suffer us to be tempted also, "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If we endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons, for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" What are our trials? Is it possible that we cannot bear such trials as we have to bear, for the sake of one who has spilled his precious blood for us? Let us cast our cares on Jesus, and pray without ceasing. Don't get discouraged; but rather rejoice when we have these trials. "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Let us be willing to let God work through us, and we shall get blessed ourselves, and be a blessing to those around us. Let us deem it an honor, instead of a disgrace, to be laughed at and called crazy, only keep our eye fixed on the prize Christ Jesus.

Oh, what sweet peace we christians find in worshiping the true and living God. There is not one of us that ever felt the love of God shed abroad in our hearts, but can testify of the great goodness of God. If it affords us so much pleasure here to meet with christians, how truly blessed it will be to meet on the new earth, where there will be no more sorrow, nor parting. Oh, christian friends, let us be faithful; live good every day, so as to hail Jesus with joy and not grief. Let our light so shine here, that the world may see and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Whatever we do, let us do it with our might, and in the fear of God. We shall certainly reap the reward of the just, if we faint not. Resist the Devil, and he will flee from us.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE IMPENITENT.

"He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them, shall find mercy."—Prov. 28: 13.

Dear reader, remember, if you cover your sins, or attempt to hide them by your own reasonings, or in any other way, you are adding sin unto sin, and shall not prosper; and be sure your sins will find you out. Therefore confess and forsake your sins, and return unto God, and he will have mercy and abundantly pardon.

"God is not slack concerning his promises." He has spoken and he will perform all the good that he has promised to those who diligently seek him. He says in Isaiah 1: 18—"Come now, and let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow: though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." You know that it is impossible for God to lie, for he has confirmed his threatenings and promises with an oath—"As I live, saith the Lord."

God has threatenened terrible destruction on all those who shut their eyes and stop their ears against his warnings and entreaties. He says, "He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy." Would you have your sins blotted out, that they be not made known in the day of judgment? then remember that every secret thought of the heart shall be revealed, if you do not confess your sins to God, and repent while the door of mercy is open. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "But he that believeth not, shall be damned."

We have God's word, which is truth, which says that the wicked shall be "destroyed." "To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." We have promise only of to-day; now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation; to-morrow the Spirit may be grieved and take its everlasting flight.

"The Spirit calls to-day,
Yield to its power;
O grieve him not away,
'Tis mercy's hour."

God is calling you to prepare to meet him in peace, when he shall come in clouds, and every eye shall see him; that you may stand before him justified through faith in Christ. That day will soon be here. It will come as a thief. The world will be dreaming in security of years of wealth and pleasures yet to come, "as in the days that were before the flood;" when suddeny, like the lightning's flash, the Judge shall be revealed from heaven, with fire and flaming sword, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not his word. Then it will be too late for repentance. The day of mercy will be past forever, and the cry will go up from thousands of lost sinners, "The harvest is past, the summer ended, and my soul is not saved!" O, what a wail of despair will be that cry, wrung from hearts in deepest anguish,—"too late! too late!" What comfort can they find? None. The earth in mocking accents echoes back "too late!" The sun, the moon, and all the worlds around, laugh at their agony. God laughs now when their fear cometh, and their destruction as a whirlwind.

Reader, think on the coming judgment. Think on the awful sentence that the Judge will pronounce when you shall be weighed in the balance and found wanting. Call upon God from the depths of the heart, that he will be merciful to you a sinner; lying low in the dust of humiliation, pray that God for Christ's sake, would wash away your sins in that fountain that is open for sin and uncleanness, and have faith in Him whose promises are yea and amen; who is faithful and true; and he will surely take you into his favor, and you will be adopted into his family, an heir of God and joint-heir with Christ, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away. Then God will be your father, and you will be his child. Christ has shed his blood for you, and is able and willing to save you.

Remember how the Son of God suffered in the garden of Gethsemane, and in the agony of his heart prayed that if it were possible, the cup of death might pass from him; but it was not possible, and there in his agony he sweat, as it were, great drops of blood. Remember how with meekness he suffered the buffitings of wicked men; the crown of thorns to be placed upon his brow; the scourgings; the insults; the deep disgrace; the toiling up Calvary's rugged hill, bearing his own heavy cross on his weary shoulders; the piercing of the rough nails in his quivering flesh, cutting through cords and nerves; the straining of every nerve as he hangs on the shameful tree, his side pierced by a Roman spear. The agony and pain that rent his tender heart is beyond the power of tongue or pen to portray; and yet while his persecutors were insulting him, he prayed for them, saying, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." O! was ever love like his? Remember how in the agony of his spirit he cried, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

"The scourge, the thorns, the deep disgrace,
These thou could'st bear, nor once repine;
But when Jehovah veiled his face,
Unutterable pangs were thine."

He died that we might have eternal life in the world to come; and if we obey his commands, we shall receive immortality when death has been vanquished.

O come to him and be saved. God invites you to come. Christ says, "He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." Come to-day. Put it not off, saying to-morrow shall be as to-day, for you "know not what a day may bring forth." Delay not till death, thinking that you can repent when you are dying; you may not be in possession of your reason, or you may be stricken suddenly, without a moment's warning.

Come to the fountain, and drink of the waters of life, without money and without price. Come, for eternity is long, and it is a short journey there. Break off your sins by righteousness, and fight manfully the battles of the Lord. Be faithful unto death, and Christ will give to thee a crown of life.

"The Spirit and the Bride say come; and let him that is athirst, come, and partake of the waters of life freely."

THE JUDGMENT IS COMING!

AND WHAT ARE WE DOING?

I am aware that I have chosen solemn questions for our consideration; and I feel sensibly my inability to treat them as their importance demands. But I am equally persuaded that the subject demands the solemn attention of all, however incapable most of us may be of doing justice to it. If one cannot say everything that is due, he can probably say some things which ought to be said; and others contributing such as they have, we may thus get some idea of our duties amidst our dangers.

When we consider the calling of a preacher of the gospel—to proclaim the good news of mercy offered to guilty man, and life to dying man; and that men every where are stupid, and need to be aroused to a sense of their lost condition; are earthly and groveling in their natural desires and affections, and need to be renewed by the grace of God, in order that that they may love and desire the right; and finally, when we realize that all men naturally would rather hear and believe a pleasant lie than an unpleasant truth; we get some, although but a faint idea of the great responsibility of those whom God has entrusted with his counsels to wayward man.

If men could see themselves lost without help by instruction from others, there would be less need of the service of a preacher. Or if, seeing their lost condition, they would take the alarm, and "flee from the wrath to come," without the need of persistent warnings, counsels, and entreaties, faithful preachers would be far less needful than they are. But the sad truth is that men are lost, and know it not; are sporting on the brink of eternal ruin, unconscious of their danger, and are hastening to the solemn judgment as thoughtless as cattle to the slaughter.
